Small bags were sent out among the congregation of the Methodist church Monday for the birthday sociable to be held Thursday evening, May 14th.

MT. PLEASANT.

Great preparations are being made for the opening of the new chapel on Thursday and Friday evenings, May 21st and 22d. The new chapel has been erected close beside the old one, but is much larger and more pretentious. It has a stone foundation and is a frame building covered with shingles. A grand fair and entertainment is being prepared for the opening, and all the young people of the chapel are kept busy planning and acting on their plans for this affair. A pleasing programme will be given. The affair is in charge of Mr. De-Forrest.

NEW MARKET.

Rev. Mr. Peterson now rides a new Crescent wheel.

Fred and Charles Ward have opened a grocery store in the Coriell building.

Mr. White, who has been visiting Mr. Coriell and family, has returned home to Red Bank.

Mrs. Reed, who has been visiting her son, Fred Reed, has returned home to New York.

Mrs. Clawson has returned home from a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell, of Fairmount.

TIMELY TRUTHS.

There are no sweeter girls in the world than our own.

There are no truer hearts than our friendships have proven.

There is no brighter skies than our countrymen see.

There is no grander land than this land of the free.

And there's no better coal, wherever you may go,

Than that which is purchased of Stevens & Co.

Young mothers dread the Summer months on account of the great mortality among children caused by bowel troubles. Perfect safety may be assured those who keep on hand De Witt's Colic and Cholera cure, and administer it promptly. For cramps, bilious colic, dysentery and diarrhoea, it affords instant relief. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

DIED.

FLATLEY—In this city May 8th, 1896, Willie Flatley, aged 8 months and 28 days.

Funeral services from the residence 334 West 4th st., Thursday, May 7th, at 3 o'clock at the house. Friends and relatives are respectfully invited to attend. Interment at St. Mary's Cemetery.

SALVATIONISTS ACTIVE.

A Number of Special Features for the Meetings This Week.

Six special meetings are to be held at the Salvation Army this week. Tomorrow evening, the officers from Bound Brook will be present to lead the meeting. Wednesday evening, Brigadier Evans, Staff-Captain Dunham, Ensigns Taylor and Marsh and Cadet Hargreaves will be the visitors. A "swearing in" is to be held and a baby dedicated. Thursday evening, a brass band from New York will be present and render a musical programme. For a small sum, coffee and cake will be served to all present just after the meeting. Friday evening, Staff-Captain Milsaps, editor of the War Cry is expected, and Sunday afternoon and evening, Adjutant Agnew and her sister, Captain Agnew, will be present. A grand and stirring time is expected.

To Celebrate Their Anniversary.

Next Sunday evening the Ladies' Christian Work Society of the Trinity Reformed church will celebrate its fifteenth anniversary, and a native of Arabia, Rev. Mr. Cantine, will be present and deliver an address, and the annual reports of the society will also be read.

A shipment of 22 Cleveland and Crescent wheels were received by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company Monday. Fourteen more were received Thursday.

To Offer a Reward of 100 Dollars

for a case of catarrh that cannot be cured, creates the suspicion that the article so advertised is a humbug. Do you know of any such reward being paid? Ely Bros. do not promise rewards in order to sell their well-known "Cream Balm." They offer the most effective medicants, prepared in convenient form to use, and at the lowest possible price, 50 cents per bottle. An honest and effective remedy, which is absolutely free from mercurials or other harmful drugs.

One swallow does not make Spring, but one swallow of One Minute Cough Cure brings relief. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

AN EASTERN FACTORY.

H. A. LOZIER & CO., MAY LOCATE IN THIS VICINITY.

They Are Manufacturers of the Cleveland Swell Special Wheel, and Find It Necessary to Increase Their Facilities.

Another large industry is likely to be located along the line of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, either at Garwood or Dunellen. For some time, H. A. Lozier & Co. manufacturers of the well-known Cleveland bicycles, have been contemplating the establishing of an eastern factory. The factory is now located at Toledo, O., and although of immense size, it is not large enough to suit the requirements. Representatives of H. A. Lozier & Company, have been examining sites for the new factory and have visited Orange, Dunellen and Garwood. The last named place seems the most likely, as among the other advantages, there is to be a seamless tube factory at the same place. Those in charge of the tube factory, which will be built this summer, as was told in The Press recently, are very anxious to have the bicycle factory located there.

This bicycle firm would employ in its new factory from 800 to 1,000 people of whom a great number will be skilled workmen. The location of such a factory in either Dunellen or Garwood would be of great benefit to Plainfield as a trading center.

EPISCOPAL MISSIONS.

An Address by a Worker in Japan—Appeal for United Prayer.

Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock a meeting of the Plainfield Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary in the diocese of New Jersey was held in St. Stephen's church. The evening prayer, with the special prayers for Rogation-days, for missions, and for the unity of the church, were said by the pastor, Rev. S. P. Simpson. He made an address of welcome to the representatives of the various parishes, and dwelt briefly on the practical blessings resulting from devout mission work.

Miss Sybil Carter, missionary to the Indians, presented her experiences in her special sphere, which were listened to with great interest. She pointed out vividly the patient, lonely life of the Indian women, and exhibited samples of exquisite lace work done by them.

Mrs. Perry, the secretary and treasurer of the Branch, followed with an earnest appeal for united prayer on behalf of all missionary work, and related a wonderful instance of answer to prayer which had come under her own observation in connection with missions in Japan.

After the service the meeting was entertained, in a hospitable manner by the ladies of the parish. Mrs. S. P. Simpson, Mrs. G. S. Guion, Mrs. N. T. T. Finch, Mrs. Beal and others dispensed refreshments and kindly greetings.

COUNTRY CLUB ELECTION.

Regular Nominations by the Governors Meet With No Opposition.

The annual meeting of the Union County Country Club was held last Monday at the clubhouse. The reports of the old officers showed that the financial condition of the club had improved during the last year.

The regular nominations for the Board of Governors were unanimously elected. They were Charles J. Fisk, T. N. Erickson, J. T. Baker, H. M. Stockton, C. C. Burnet and H. W. Beebe. They hold office for two years.

A Case of Debt.

Justice Crosley issued summons Tuesday in the case of Anton Stebor against R. F. M. Chase. The case is one for debt and Mr. Stebor who is coachman for Mr. Chase is suing for the amount. Lawyer S. S. Swackhamer will represent the plaintiff and Judge DeMeza the defendant. A hearing will be given next Monday afternoon at two o'clock.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. To this we would add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by T. S Armstrong, druggist.

BENNER-HEDGES SUIT NOW ON.

The Evidence of the Prosecution Finished and the Defense Being Given.

The attention of Justice VanSyckel and the Supreme Court at Elizabeth has been devoted since Monday afternoon to the trying of the case of John Benner against Drs. E. W. and B. VanD. Hedges. The suit is for $10,000, and is brought on the charge of malpractice.

Mr. Benner is proprietor of the Fanwood Road House, and broke his ankle some months ago by jumping from a moving wagon near his home. He called the Drs. Hedges and both brothers treated the injured member, and Benner claims that their treatment was wrong and that the bones were not set properly, so that he will be a cripple for life.

S. S. Swackhamer and Assemblyman W. R. Codington were the attorneys for Benner and presented his case Monday afternoon and Tuesday morning. Tuesday afternoon Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh opened the case for the defense and it is being continued today.

The defense claim that they can prove that most of Benner's statements were false, and witnesses to that effect were brought up.

POINTED REMARKS.

A Correspondent Expects No Good Streets Until the Court Intercedes.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Your announcement last evening that our street committee intended to improve our streets at once, is too extraordinary to be true. I have resided in this locality for four years, and have been tempted to remove to a place where at least occasionally an honest dollar was spent in levelling mounds and removing stones. In all that period I never saw any debris taken off the streets; but, on the contrary, have seen them made dangerous every month. Every time the water company lays a pipe, or a cross-walk is repaired, up come the stones as big as apples or even cocoanuts, to stay on top, and nature is expected to wear down the bump.

I prophecy nothing good and thoroughly will be done until a Grand Jury indicts the powers that be for maintaining a public nuisance.

THE AUDSLEYS DEFEATED.

Plainfield Men Who Drew Plans for the New New York City Hall.

George A. and William J. Audsley, of this city, were among the architects who entered the competition to furnish plans for the proposed new City Hall of New York. Their plans were not accepted and they brought suit in the United States Circuit Court for services. By the provisions of the competition the makers of the six plans to which the committee awarded superiority were each to receive $2,000. In the United States Circuit Court the Audsleys were defeated. They appealed, and yesterday the United States Circuit Court of Appeals rendered a decision affirming the judgment in the Circuit Court. The higher Court holds that the Audsleys introduced no evidence to show that they were among the six for whom the $2,000 was provided.

A Charming Luncheon.

A charming pink and green luncheon was given Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. Lemuel William Serrell, of Crescent avenue, to a few out of town friends. Later in the after afternoon the hostess gave a card party to her guests, and an informal dinner was given in the evening. Those present were Mrs. Francis Knowles, of Orange; Miss Jessie Purlee, of Bergen Point; Miss Wilkinson, Miss Williams, Miss Jane Scott, Miss Jennie Toffy, Miss Grace Toffy, Miss May Shafer and Mrs. Herbert Scott, of Jersey City.

HONOR FOR PLAINFIELD.

FIELD DAY OF NEW JERSEY COMMANDERY TO BE HELD HERE.

Two Members of Trinity Commandery, Knights Templar, Also Made Grand Officers—W. H. Sebring One of Those Chosen

That famous division of Masonry, the Knights Templar, have highly honored Plainfield by selecting this city as the place to hold the field day of the New Jersey Commandery and by placing two of her citizens among the grand officers of the State. The Grand Commandery of New Jersey met in Trenton Tuesday. W. H. Sebring, Dr. D. C. Adams, Jacob Kirkner and Walter A. Freeman were present from this city. The election of officers resulted particularly well for Plainfield. W. H. Sebring was advanced to Grand Generalissimo, next to the highest of the grand officers. Dr. D. C. Adams was elected Grand Swordbearer. For the last few years the annual field day has almost always been held at Asbury Park, but it was decided that Trinity Commandery, of this city, should have a chance to entertain the other commanderies of the State. The field day will be held during the last week in October.

GIRLS THE DISTURBERS.

Residents of the West End Unable to Get Rest Until Morning.

Residents of the West End in the vicinity of Monroe avenue and Manson place are complaining of the spirit of rowdyism which exhibits itself every night. One resident says that it is nearly 2 o'clock in the morning before he is able to obtain any rest, after doing a hard day's work. He is authority for the statement that a large portion of the disturbers are girls who reside in the neighborhood. There are no electric lights on the street on which he resides, and also no police protection. Other residents of the streets give substantially the same testimony in regard to these nightly rackets.

Anniversary Arranged For.

At the regular meeting of Minerva Temple, Rathbone Sisters, last night, the following committee was appointed to arrange for an entertainment to mark the second anniversary of the lodge, which will occur next month: Mesdames Boehm, Bowman, Wakefield, Bellis, Moore, Haberle, Lines, Thatcher, Stephens and Pope. The Temple also received with pleasure the announcement of the profits of the recent entertainment given for the benefit of the officers capes fund. Two applications for membership were received. After the business was transacted refreshments were served in the banquet room, and in her usual cheerful manner Mrs. Cox attended to the wants of all.

Elect Officers and Arrange a Picnic.

The Epworth League of the Monroe Avenue chapel held a business meeting last Monday, which was well attended. Walter J. McGee was elected third vice-president, and Mr. Broaard and Miss Bowman were chosen as delegates to attend the annual convention to be held at Trenton. The members donated $25 to the library fund, which is growing rapidly. A committee, of which Charles Hayes, is chairman, was appointed to arrange for a picnic to be held on Decoration Day. After the election of several new members a social time was enjoyed and refreshments were served.

Entertained at Whist.

Miss Sadie Line, of Duer street, entertained the East Sixth Street Whist Club last Monday in a most pleasant manner. The forepart of the evening was passed in playing whist, the first prizes being won by Miss Bessie Giles and Ernest Millard. This was followed with dancing and at a late hour refreshments were served.

A Letter From a Missionary.

An unusually interesting meeting of the Plainfield Branch of the Christian Alliance may be looked for next Tuesday evening. This organization has just received a very interesting letter from their missionary at Jerusalem, Miss Mary T. Maxwell Ford, which will be read at the meeting.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. We believe, however, that no better use could be made of one of these quarters than to exchange it for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, a medicine that every family should be provided with For sale by T. OF HONOR AND ENERGY.

THE PRINCIPAL CHARACTERISTICS OF ITALY'S GREATEST STATESMEN.

Dr. Riggs Gives an Interesting Lecture on Italy's Part in the World's History—Bright Record of Cavour and Garibaldi.

It was with intense interest that the appreciative audience at the Park Avenue Baptist church last Tuesday listened to Prof. James F. Riggs' lecture on "Cavour and Garibaldi," and Italy's part in the world's history was never more clearly defined. The speaker was introduced by Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the church, after which he spoke in part as follows:

My subject, "Cavour and Garibaldi," or in other words the reorganization of Italy is a strange story. Did you ever notice a mother with a large family of children. How she would grow thin and the children would become fleshy? How she would become poor in learning and the children rich in knowledge? This was the case with Italy. She was poor in almost every sense while Europe was abundantly rich. While nations naturally drifted into national life she was troubled with wars, confusion and papal display. She, however, developed in other respects. The Papacy was built up grandly, but it was felt everywhere except in Italy. All of Italy's work was done at arm's length. There was terrible misrule in all quarters. The Austrain government was very much in evidence to the displeasure and hatred of the Italians. The latter people were unable to stand the Austrians who held the sceptre of power.

Finally Italy became a united kingdom through the efforts of Cavour and Garibaldi. Cavour was a remarkable man. He was thoroughly educated, bright, smart and possessed a strong will. He had the love of his people and country at heart and when he was sent to the Alps to build bridges, he soon returned to fight for his people. He was an earnest patriot and hated the Pope and Austria. His ardent zeal was the cause of his being banished, but during that period he was not idle. He studied English history and institutions and established a bank, steamship line and an agricultural society. His people finally called him back to power, but he met with obstacles. At this time Austria was great in power, but Cavour was resolute and yet it was strange that he should persevere in the face of such adverse circumstnces. Matters grew worse. There was no unity in Germany and Italy wanted to fight and accordingly on March 23d, 1848, the declaration of war was signed. In Italy there was a mere handful of men to contest against the strong Austrian Empire, and though Italy was defeated, she was still persistent. For awhile everything went along smoothly but there was work to be done in reorganizing Italy. Later 17,000 people were sent from Italy to the Crimean war.

The idea was conceived by Cavour that should his people win with the other great powers, Italy would also be a great factor, and when she did come out ahead Cavour stood for the rights of his people and they became a great Empire. Their personal prestige rose mightily. Cavour then continued to organize troops, and when told to stop, replied "that he would when he got ready." This angered the Austrians, but their great leader was gone and Cavour was still living. The French Army came to Italy's rescue and then the "War of Four Battles" was fought. Each battle followed closely in succession, and as a result the Austrians were defeated. This fact amazed and stirred Europe who had never heard of such a thing. However, the leaders of the other forces ignored Cavour, which thing they had no right to do, and Italy was organized with the Pope as president. At this time Garibaldi appeared. He offered himself to his country and secured enthusiasm among his people, and after another conflict Italy was organized as an Italian power. Cavour died in 1861 of nervous prostration. His life was a noble, pure and clean one, and he was a modern statesman. Italy triumphed, much to the dislike of the Pope, but it was an accomplished fact and Italy with her 27,000,000 people were under one government. Garibaldi was not a great general, but he had dash and enthusiasm. In his old age he took to politics and his method resulted in great injury to himself. Cavour was a man of the first rank, and could stand side by side with Frederick the Great. He was a man that was not only willing and able to die for his country, but he was able and willing to live for it.

LAST CHORAL CONCERT.

A Rare Musical Treat for Plainfield People Tomorrow Night.

This evening the patrons of the Choral Society will attend the last concert of the season. The other two concerts have been noteworthy achievements in the rendition of high-class music and they were all that was claimed for them, and more too.

The programme for tomorrow night includes "The Swan and the Skylark," which is the principal event of the Cincinnati May Festival. The rendition of "The Transfiguration" will be a notable event. It was composed for the Gloucester Festival, England, in September last and has not been sung in this country before this spring. Those engaged for the solo parts are all first-class artists. W. H. Rieger is the best oratorio tenor appearing before the public and his work tomorrow evening will undoubtedly be a treat. Heinrich Meyn, baritone, is an artist of unquestionable superiority, while Maname Eleanor Meredith Mechling, soprano, and Miss Mary Louise Clary, contralto, are sufficiently well-known as soloists. The society is doing first-class work and so nothing remains now but the production of a programme which cannot be excelled.

EGG WITHIN AN EGG.

Remarkable Product of One of J. W. VanSickle's Poultry Subjects.

Everybody has heard of double-jointed legs and two-headed calves, but who ever heard of an egg within an egg? That is just what J. W. VanSickle brought to The Press office this afternoon. Yesterday afternoon an enormous egg was found in his chicken-house. It was heavier proportion than an egg of medium size, and there seemed to be a movable object on the inside of the shell. An opening was made in each end and the yolk and white removed. After this was done another perfect egg was to be seen on the inside of the big shell. The phenomena of this is quite remarkable. The inside egg is of the ordinary size. Mr. VanSickle does not know which of the poultry-house subjects laid the egg, but he is thinking of getting an X-ray machine and making an examination of his whole brood. There is a fortune in the hen who will lay this variety every day. The egg can be seen at The Press office.

STILL MAKING FAST TIME.

The Central Railroad Contracting For Two Bicycle Engines.

The two new engines, one for freight and the other for passenger service, which the Central has recently had constructed, are being given trial trips over the road, and it is understood that they fully meet the expectations of the officials. No. 425, of the hog pattern, will be used to haul fast freight trains, and it is understood that the officials of the company wish to make the fastest freight time of any road in this section of the country. It is said that the recent excellent results obtained from the bicycle engines by the P. and R. road has greatly influenced the officials and that they have given contracts for the construction of two bicycle engines. The Central is still making the fast time between New York and Philadelphia, one hour and forty-five minutes, despite the threats of the Pennsylvania road to cut rates if it was kept up.

Tarried by the Wayside.

A Frenchman giving the name of Emil Thomas landed in Plainfield last evening on the 11 23 train from New York. He could not speak good English and was hardly able to make known his destination. It was finally learned that he was looking for Chapot, the glove maker, at Washington-ville, and he was started on his way rejoicing. When Thomas reached the Manhattan hotel he learned that there was a large celebratino going on. He was tempted to stop and he yielded. Consequently he became intoxicated and disorderly. Marshal Hansen arrested him and this morning Justice Crosley gave him his choice between $5 or 10 days. He took the latter.

Crop Conditions.

Weather Observer John Neagle has the following report in this week's issue of the weekly crop bulletin of the New Jersey weather service: "A week of sunshine with very little rain. Average temperature, 62 degrees. Rainfall, two days, 0.49 inch. Plowing for corn being pushed and much planting will be done this week. Grass needs rain. Potatoes above ground. Peas, asparagus, sweet corn and garden truck looking well."

THE FRESH AIR CAMP.

DISCUSSING WHAT PLAINFIELD WILL DO FOR THE CAUSE.

From the Hot and Dusty Streets of the Metropolis Many Little Ones Come to Get Ideas of What a Healthful Life Is.

Many Plainfielders visited the Fresh-Air Camp which was established at Westfield last summer, and were deeply interested in the noble work done there. Mothers with their little children were brought out from the hot and dusty New York streets, to spend a week in the pleasant country, with plenty of fresh air and good food, and kind friends to look after every want and care for the spiritual as well as the temporal needs of the visitors. Many sick ones were restored to health, babies grew round and rosy, and, best of all, many were led to enter upon a true Christian life. Many homes have been made brighter through the winter, by lessons learned at the Camp.

The Camp will be re-opened on July 1st, and the work will be continued there until September. It is hoped that some improvements will be added, partitions in the dormitory and some sort of a bathing establishment. Almost all the furnishings used last year were stolen, since the Camp was closed, so that it has been necessary to buy almost everything new. Miss Curry, the devoted worker who was in charge at the Camp last summer, will be there again this year. Pleasant devotional exercises will be held in the evenings, conducted by Christian workers of Westfield and the surrounding towns. Plainfielders assisted in this work last year, and it is hoped that they will do so to a still larger extent this summer. The Camp is situated in a pleasant grove, at comfortable walking distance from the Westfield station, and the good roads offer strong inducements to cyclists to take an enjoyable evening ride in that direction. It is specially desired that many will come and help with the singing; music appeals very strongly to people of the class who will gather at the Camp.

Last night a party of Plainfielders gathered for an informal talk with Arthur N. Pierson, one of the Westfield workers, to discuss what part Plainfield should take in the work this summer. It was decided to talk up the work as much as possible among the people of the churches, and that later a meeting should be held at which all interested could learn the details of this beautiful missionary endeavor which is being carried on so near us, and would be given an opportunity to help in it, in whatever ways they might choose.

A Disastrous Runaway.

Henry Kline, of Coontown, left his horse and wagon in front of Lederer's dry goods store Tuesday about 12:15, while he went on an errand. In the meantime the animal ran away. His course was down Somerset street as far as Pearl street where the rig collided with a telephone pole and was stopped. En route the wagon struck a buggy belonging to Thomas Bird, of Mt. Bethel, and wrecked one wheel. The horse was badly cut and the wagon was a wreck. It was taken to Stewart's wheelwright shop where the owner came and took charge.

Laid at Rest.

The funeral of Mrs. Nelson Peterson took place from her late residence on West Second street Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Rev. R. Grove officiating. The services were attended with relatives and friends. The pall bearers were Robert Randolph, James Scott, Manning Fields, Reuben Jones, Frank Jackson and John Woolston. There was a profuse display of flowers. The interment was in Evergreen Cemetery. A husband, three daughters and two sons survive her. She was a life-long resident of this city and was 55 years of age.

The New Jersey A. C. team were beaten Saturday afternoon last by the famous Woodbridge Browns.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. THAT ASTOUNDING SUSAN

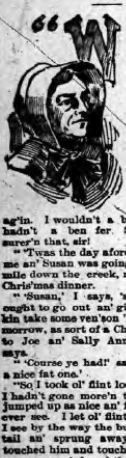
Hermit Miles' Christmas Hunt on Skates.

He Got Some Venison and Then Two Wolves Interfered—Seems a Widow If She Had Not Been a Remarkable Woman.



"WOLVES was wuth twenty-five dollars apiece time me an' Susan lived on our clearin'," said old Cuthbert Miles, the Indian Run hermit, "an' wunst I was so hot foot to git a couple, 'count o' the bounty on 'em, that I come pooty nigh never bein' heerd on ag'in. I wouldn't a ben, nuther, if it hadn't a ben fer Susan. Nothin' surer'n that, sir!

"'Twas the day afore Chris'mas, an' me an' Susan was going to Parks', five mile down the creek, nex' day to eat Chris'mas dinner.

"'Susan,' I says, 'seems to me I ought to go out an' git a deer, so's we kin take some ven'son along with us tomorrow, as sort of a Chris'mas present to Joe an' Sally Ann. Hadn't I?' I says.

"'Course ye had!' says Susan. 'Git a nice fat one.'

"So I took ol' flint lock an' went out. I hadn't gone more'n two miles 'fore I jumped up as nice an' fat a buck as I ever see. I let ol' flint lock holler, an' I see by the way the buck twitched his tail an' sprung away that I had touched him and touched him bad. I went on, an' found the snow all splashered with blood, an' blood markin' the deer's trail.

"'Here's goin' to be a saddle o' ven'son,' I says, 'setch as'll make Joe an' Sally Ann Parks glad they come into these here woods!' I says.

"I follered the deer's track, thinkin' how tickled Susan'd be when she sees that nice, fat deer, and the blood got thicker an' thicker, an' the buck's tracks slowed an' slowed, till I know'd I'd soon come up to him dead or dyin'. Pooty soon, though, I seen somethin' that jist made my blood bile. Some other tracks showed in the snow, right along the deer's. They was wolf tracks—two on 'em, a follerin' the deer!

"This is sad,' I says. 'That nice, fat buck of Joe's an' Sally Ann's goin' to be fodder fer two 'tarnal wolves! This is sad!'

"I hurried on, an' hadn't gone a hundred yards when I come square out on the wolves' trail. Sure 'nough, it was down, an' the wolves was tearin' an' gnashin' away at him tremendous. I up an' biazed away at one o' the wolves, and hit him bad. Away they both went, the wounded one havin' a hard time of it, an' leavin' lots of his worthless blood stainin' the snow as he went. Goin' up to the buck I see he was dead, an' the wolves had tore him so that my blood took to bilin' wuss'n ever.

"'Them wolves is wuth twenty-five dollars apiece,' I says, 'an' I'm bound to her 'em, but if they wasn't wuth a cent I'd hev 'em anyhow, jist fer their mummixin Joe an' Sally Ann's deer,' I says, 'an' disapp'intin' Susan,' I says.

"So I follered the bloody wolf track. The two devourin' wolves kep' together, an' I know'd where one went t'other un'd go. They led me a tol'able long chase, an' they'd a led me a longer an if the one wolf hadn't a ben wounded so bad. The trail led to an openin' in a ledge o' rocks, an' there, squattin' right in it, was the well wolf. He whanged away. Old flint lock didn't seem to be feelin' jest up to the mark that day. By rights she ought to tumble the deer square in its tracks, an' she oughtn't to let the first wolf git away, an' now she hadn't acted square with me in dealin' with the second wolf. She had tumbled it, o' course, but not so it'd stay tumbled, as' the wolf drug itself back into the hole, though it was a hard job fer it.

"'Cats!' I says. 'Cats! It's treatin' me right, flint lock,' I says. 'I'm afeard you've give me a bad job here,' I says. 'But I've got to hev them wolves,' I says. 'If I'd go home an' tell Susan I let a couple of wolves git away from me,' I says, 'she'd give me a look an' say: "Moses, I'm ashamed o' ye!" an' she'd move 'n likely say: "Milk the heifer; I'll go an' git them wolves myself," setch an astoundin' woman is Susan.'

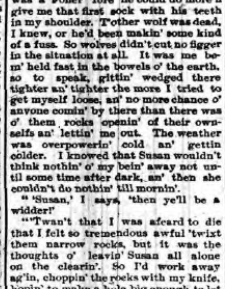
"That's what I said to ol' flint lock, an' I'add hev seen more in sorrow than anger. Makin' an inspection o' the openin' in the rocks, I seen that it run in amasin' narrow fer three or four feet, an' then spread out into quite a nice showin' of a cave.

"'That entry to them wolves' house is awful close work for the eyes!' I says. 'There's got to be some tight squeezin' done 'fore I git in to her it out with them wolves,' I says. 'But they'n in there, an' they've ap'lied Joe an' Sally Ann's deer, an' they've disapp'inted Susan, an' they'm wuth twenty-five dollars apiece!' I says. 'I've got to hev 'em, squeeze or no squeeze!' I says.

"So I took my buckhorn-handled huntin' knife in one hand an' started in. By wigglin' an' squeezin' an' twistin' an' turnin' like an' eel goin' up a dam, I got half through the narrow entry, when I heerd a terrible objection to my goin' any furder. There was an ugly growl first, then sa'sail, then a snappin' o' jaws, an' then the ball of 'em together, an' then the wolf that made 'em' sprung fer me an' socked its teeth in my left shoulder. I had my knife in my right hand, an' I didn't engage to lay there un'let the wolf do all the sockin', so I begun to sock the wolf with the knife. The wolf hadn't skeert me, fer I was 'spectin' somethin' o' that kind; but the fight hadn't no more'n begun 'fore I discovered somethin' that jist turned me cold from head to foot, an' it seemed to me as if I could feel my hair turnin' white.

"'Susan!' says I, 'I'm afeard yer as good as a widder!'

"'What was the diskivry I made? Why, sir, I was stuck as fast in that narrow place as if I'd a-ben built in there when it was made! I couldn't wiggle ahead, nor I couldn't wiggle backwards. I didn't keer fer the wolf.



SHE SNUCK AROUND.

As fer a matter o' that, layin' there half on my side, I socked my knife so hard an' so fast into that wolf that he was a goner 'fore he could do more'n give me that first sock with his teeth in my shoulder. T'other wolf was dead, I knew, or he'd been makin' some kind of a fuss. So wolves didn't cut no figger in the situation at all. It was me bein' held fast in the bottom of the earth, so to speak, gittin' wedged them tighter an' tighter the more I tried to get myself loose, an' no more chance o' anyone comin' by there than there was o' them rocks openin' of their own'selfs an' lettin' me out. The snow was overpowerin' cold an' gettin colder. I knowed that Susan wouldn't think nothin' o' my bein' away not until some time after dark, an' then she couldn't do nothin' till mornin'.

"'Susan,' I says, 'then ye'll be a widder!'

"'T'wan't that I was afeard to die that I felt so tremendous awful 'twixt them narrow rocks, but it was the thoughts o' leavin' Susan all alone on the clearin'. So I'd work away ag'in, choppin' the rocks with my knife, hopin' to make a hole big enough to let me out, but the way I lay I couldn't git to work where it'd do any good, or I could a done it in time. At last, after, I guess, three hours o' work, I was just petered out. I couldn't hardly raise my head nor my hands no more, an' the cold was eatin' in to the very mar row o' my bones. I don't know how long I laid there like that, but by an' by I heered somethin' at the openin' outside, an' then some one hollers' in an' says:

"'Be ye dead or alive?'

"'It was Susan! Of all things in the world, Susan! But I mean a know'd it. Astoundin' woman that she was, I mowt a know'd it!

"'Susan!' I says, 'I'm betwixt and between!'

"'Then I told her the fix I was in an' how I run into it deliberate an' with my eyes open. Susan, she crept in, an' she took my knife, an' she dug, an' she pried, an' she chipped, she kep' it up fer two hour, an' made room enough fer me to turn in. A few more chips an' chops an' pryin' an' I squeezed my way out. An' me an' Susan both sot down on the snow an' hugged an' hollered. Then by an' by Susan got up an' crawled in an' dug out the two dead wolves. An' how do ye s'pose it happened that Susan come along an' rescued me? If she hadn't ben so astoundin' woman she wouldn't a ben there an' she'd ben a widder. Not long arter I had left the clearin to go an' git Joe an' Sally Ann a deer for Chris'mas, a wolf come sneakin' up an' was nosin' around to git one o' Susan's chickens. Susan diskivered it, an' bein' as sly as the wolf, she snuck around with her clothes pounder, an' 'fore the wolf know'd what wos up, she fetched him a whack with it that sent him endways. But he was up ag'in' fore Susan could git in another lick, an' started fer the woods. Susan, with the clothes pounder had hurt him so bad that he couldn't run fast, an' what does Susan do but startion his trail. She could keep him in sight, but couldn't quite come up with him. She kep' on though, hoping that he'd hole up 'fore long, an' then she'd git him.

"'An it happened the wolf took a course that brought him square to where t'other wolves had ketched an' tore my buck. Soon as Susan see the dead buck she know'd what had happened, an' like bloody trail leading away from it, an' my tracks on the trail, kind o' sot her to thinkin', an' she give up the wolf she was chasin' an' took my trail. Consekently she wan't a widder, an' we had a jolly Chris'mas at Parks' next day, though we didn't hev no nice fat deer to give 'em for a present. Lord! what times we did useter hev on that clearin'! An' how astoundin' Susan was!'—N. Y. Sun.

SHE WAS A LIVING TORCH

AN OLD LADY SERIOUSLY BURNED THIS NOON.

Mrs. Aldrich Was Building a Fire in a Stove When Her Clothes Caught Fire—Seriously Burned Before Put Out.

Mrs. Charlotte Aldrich, a widow aged 74 years, and mother of Alonzo Aldrich, of Sherman avenue, met with an accident Saturday at noon which will probably result in her death.

Mrs. Aldrich lives in a small house on Sherman avenue, about 300 feet to the rear of her son's home. The fire in her kitchen stove was was nearly burned out and she was rebuilding it when her clothes caught fire from the flames.

In a second they were all aflame and temporarily deranged, she ran outdoors and began to scream. There was no one in the house at the time, but her cries attracted the attention of Alex Jeffers and another man who were working in the fields nearby. They rushed at once to where Mrs. Aldrich was standing, and taking off their coats, wrapped them around her and smothered the flames.

Word was then sent to Mrs. John F. Wieckers, corner of Grant avenue and West Eighth street and she telephoned for Dr. Endicott.

He responded quickly and upon examination learned that about two-thirds of Mrs. Aldrich's body was burned to almost a crisp and that she was suffering the most agonizing pain. Her wounds were dressed and as soon as possible she was moved to the hospital in the ambulance where everything possible is being done for her.

The chances are that owing to her advanced age and the extent of her injuries she will not recover from the accident.

NO BOSSISM THERE.

James E. Martine Talks About the Democratic State Convention.

J. E. Martine was asked by a reporter of The Press Friday as to whether he feared that the strife at the State Convention would in any degree be carried into the campaign.

"No!" said he with emphasis. "Our contest ended with the convention. The delegates-at-large are all men of high social and intellectual standing and sterling Democrats. Such contests are natural in a convention that is made up of independent citizens who wear no collar of bossism. In this the two parties are widely different. The Republican conventions are as smooth as a Sunday-school convention for the reason that the delegates are but there to do the bidding of the bosses. The Republican can flatter himself that the Democratic party is dead, or no Democrat fear that our party will be asleep in the great contest this fall."

STOLE SHOES.

Thieves Enter a Shoe Store at Front and Church Streets.

Sometime during last night thieves broke into Geo. Stagaard's shoe shop, corner of East Front and Church streets, and stole a number of pairs of good shoes which belonged to other people and were left to be repaired. They entered through a window on the Church street side and made way with their booty before anyone appeared. Nothing was known of the affair until this morning, when Mr. Stagaard opened his store and found the window open and the shoes missing. Nothing else of any importance was taken, as very little is kept in the shop. Mr. Stagaard is very sorry to lose the shoes, especially because they are not his property. He has an idea that the theft was committed by some of the circus contingent.

THE SHOW OF RAG DOLLS

A UNIQUE ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN AT THE FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Young People Disguised in Rags and Masks Make Fun for a Large Number of People—Names of Those Who Took Part.

A troupe of live rag dolls furnished no end of fun at the church sociable of the First Presbyterian church last Friday, and the audience was kept in a continual roar by the funny actions and sayings of this remarkable band. The programme opened with a pleasing piano duet by Miss Josephine Petrie and Miss Olive Newell. Then came a grand march of the novel entertainers, the rag dolls. They consisted, of course, of a number of the young people of the church dressed in some simple summer gown, while their faces were concealed by large masks of cheesecloth with remarkable faces painted on them in the style of the rag doll. And the faces! They were certainly a wonderful lot, for black faces, white faces, scowling faces, smiling faces, and other kinds of faces with a grand and glorious mixture of expressions, were all in evidence. Then followed a rag doll school with Miss Mary Kellogg as teacher and Miss Nora Williams and Edward Petrie as the capped and aproned nurses to look after the children. The children, dolls, or whatever they were, were represented by the following: The Misses Agnes Blair, Grace E. Overton, Eleanor T. VanDeventer, Helen Boice, Margaret Cave, Pansy Herring, Edith L. Pruden, and Mary A. Lackey, and Percy Dayton, Frank Flannery, Herbert Martin, John Petrie and Fred J. Bettman.

The school was divided into a morning and afternoon session. In the morning the children showed how little they knew about the different studies. Many of the answers to the questions of the teacher were very very witty which were duly appreciated by the audience.

In the afternoon session, exercises were held in honor of Josiah Methuselah Bettman, and the life of this honored individual was read by one of the children, while the doings whose voice sounded very much like that of Fred. J. Bettman. A remarkable essay on girls was read by Frank Flannery and another on rabbits was read by that awkward son of Ham, impersonated by Percy Dayton. Miss Edith L. Pruden read an original poem on the circus, while "The Story of the Camel" was read by Miss Mary A. Luckey. The children also generally misbehaved despite the nurses.

This decidedly novel kind of entertainment was gotten up by Miss Flora Petrie who arranged the questions and answers, made the selections and designed and painted the remarkable faces.

The entertainment was under the charge of the social committee of the Christian Endeavor Society of which Miss Agnes Blair is chairman.

The refreshments that followed the entertainment were provided by a committee of ladies consisting of Mrs. J. M. Bettman, Mrs. Robert Radford, Mrs. W. H. Shotwell, Mrs. Henry Lounsbury and Mrs. J. M. Dayton.

A DELIGHTFUL EVENT.

Mr. and Mrs. E. McCarthy Entertain at Their Home on Race Street.

A very delightful evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. McCarthy, of Race street, by a number of their friends, last evening. There was music during the evening by John Konneff on his violin, cornet solos by Tom Trainor, and solos on the accordian by Miss M. McCarthy. Dancing was the attraction for most of the evening. A bountiful collation was served toward the close. Among those present were: The Misses Jacot, the Misses McCarthy, and the Misses Bridget Connoly, Kate McMann, Maria McCaffery, Kate Judge, Lena Thornhart, Agnes Fitzgerald, Winnie Kane, Lizzie Fitzgerald, Kate Eganney, and Fathers Miller and Malloy, Patrick Kane, Mr. Eganney, Tom Trainor and John Konneff. The young women were all members of the Children of Mary.

The Netherwood Soon to Open.

The Daily Press reported recently the sale of the Hotel Netherwood to Dr. Shermer, of New York, and in connection with the above it is understood that Mr. Crossman, of New York, retains an interest in the property, having disposed of a portion of it to Dr. Shermer. The place will undoubtedly be known as the Townsend Sanitarium. Preparations are now being made to open the building at an early date.

is the way the old scholars had of putting it, when they handed down the precaution to "resist beginnings." Everyone recognizes this to be a wise precaution, and in no direction is its wisdom more strongly indicated than in diseases of the eye, the "beginnings" of which, and the sure method of checking their painful growth, can be reliably ascertained only by a scientific optical test. This is free to all at Collier's, 103 Park avenue.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria," and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

BEFORE THE GRAND JURY.

Theodore Kurzhals Takes Formal Action Against the Salvationists.

Unless some steps toward a settlement are taken at once, the county authorities will be called upon to assist in forcing the Salvation Army to suppress that essential element of their service—noise.

The movement against the army was started by Theodore Kurzhals, Sr., who keeps a barber shop next to the barracks, as was exclusively stated in yesterday's Press. Yesterday afternoon Mr. Kurzhal's complained to Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh that the noise in the meetings of the army had become unbearable, and that his wife's health had been injured by the strain on her nerves.

Mr. Marsh brought the matter before Prosecuting Attorney Fred C. Marsh who will call the attention of the Grand Jury to the matter.

After Mr. Kurzhals had seen the Corporation Counsel, the latter notified the local leader of the Salvation Army regarding the complaint. Mr. Kurzhals told a Daily Press reporter this morning that there was no disturbance last evening at all, as the bass drum was not used in the indoor meeting. He had decided, however, to let the matter take its course so as to prevent further trouble. Mr. Kurzhals does not appear to have the slightest enmity for the Army but looks on the matter as a painful necessity.

The Coming Choral.

"The Swan and the Skylark," which will be one of the works rendered by the Choral Society at the concert next Thursday, is the principal event of the Cincinnati May Festival. "The Transfiguration" will also be rendered at the concert. The leading roles will be sung by Madame Eleanor Meredith Mechling, soprano, Miss Mary Louise Clary, contralto, William H. Rieger, tenor, and Heinrich Meyn, baritone. "The Transfiguration" was composed for the Gloucester Festival, England, in September last, and has not been sung in this country before this spring.

Your Physical Condition

needs attention at this time. If you are tired, weak and nervous, it is clear that your blood is impure, and without doubt there has been too much over-work or strain on brain or body. The course of treatment for such a condition is plain and simple. The blood must first be purified so that the nervous system, and in fact all the organs will be fed upon pure blood. Intelligent people without number have testified that the best blood purifier, nerve tonic and strength imparting medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. Nervousness, loss of sleep and general debility all vanish when Hood's Sarsaparilla is persistently taken; in a word health and happiness follow after taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Band Concerts Assured.

Councilman Frost has succeeded in raising about $300 for the thirteen public band concerts to be given this summer in different parts of the city. A feature of them will be the introduction of prominent soloists from New York. Those desiring to contribute money for these concerts can communicate with Mr. Frost.

HOW TO FIGHT BEETLES.

ENTOMOLOGIST SOUTHWICK GIVES MANY PRACTICAL METHODS.

The Spray Nozzle With Some Poisonous Substance Will Exterminate the Bugs—How the Work Should Be Done.

Dr. Southwick, Entomogist of New York, addressed the Town Improvement Society last Friday in the Y. M. C. A. hall. The attendance was very good, completely filling the seating capacity of the hall. Dr. Southwick is one of the foremost Entomologists of this country and proved a very interesting speaker, holding the close attention of his hearers throughout.

He showed and fully explained the uses of the various instruments essential in properly caring for trees. Views of inside growths of trees were shown and the speaker explained how these growths gradually split the tree until a hole is formed to the outside, which admits water and the latter soon rots the soundest tree when once it gets inside. A very interesting portion of the lecture was that in which the speaker exhibited various styles and makes of ladders, in minature form, which are used in reaching any desired height to sprinkle trees to rid them of the elm beetle or other bugs and worms destructive to the growth of the tree. One was on the plan of a step ladder on a large scale and the other an extension ladder, the same as used in the fire department. Following these came an exhibit of the style of pole used to spray the tree with. It was a bamboo stick, in three sections, which could be made any desired length, on the top of which was the nozzle used in spraying. The hose which would convey the liquid to the nozzle, was connected to the pole near the top so that the entire outfit could be moved around at will to any desired position. Styles of hose and nozzles were shown and the speaker said that the association could purchase and entire outfit at a cost of about $100, this to include a pump which would be necessary to force the liquid to the nozzle and said that a spray could be thrown fifty feet with ease. He cautioned his audience against a too liberal use of the spraying solution upon the trees, as it would injure them. Two men with a regular outfit could easily spray 100 trees a day; providing the trees were not to large.

At the close of the lecture, the speaker answered numerous questions which a number of his hearers brought up in a very clear way and fully explained the best modes of extinction for numerous bugs and insects which one is forced to contend with in every day life.

At the close of the lecture the association, by a unanimous vote, extended thanks to Dr. Southwick for his very entertaining and instructive talk.

Artist Artisans Exhibition.

At the Artist Artisans Institute, on Twenty-third street, New York, an exhibition of the students' work is being held. Several students from Plainfield are among the exhibitors. Miss Carrie Elliott has some studies in still life and china painting. Miss Myra Clark has studies in still life. Miss Elise Horn some specimens of designing, and Roy Cahoone pen and ink drawings from life.

A RED-HOT CONVENTION.

THE DEMOCRATS HAVE A LIVELY TIME AT TRENTON.

A Strong Attempt Made to Elect F. C. Marsh as a Delegate-at-Large—Unable to Break the State Committee's Slate.

The Democratic State Convention Thursday elected U. S. Senator James Smith, Allan L. McDermott, ex-Senator Rufus Blodgett, and ex-Judge Albert B. Talman as delegates at large to the National Convention, and adopted a strong sound money platform. Assemblyman John Wahl Queen, of Hudson county, was made the permanent chairman of the convention. Ex-Assemblyman Bergen, who was designated as temporary chairman by the State Committee, declined to permit his name to be used as a candidate for permanent chairman. This was in pursuance of an understanding reached yesterday morning by which there was a change in the slate arranged the night before, and ex-Senator Blodgett and ex-Judge Talman were agreed upon for delegates at large. This arrangement was made between the Hudson and Essex leaders, and under it Blodgett withdrew his opposition to Queen for chairman.

The new deal angered the friends of ex-Senator Fred C. Marsh, of Union County, and ex-Judge Carrow, of Camden, who were candidates, and led to an uproar in the Convention that surpassed anything of the kind ever seen at Trenton. After the roll had been called for a ballot, the Marsh and Carrow men made a rush on the Hudson and Essex delegations with a demand that Blodgett and Talman be dropped and their votes given to Marsh and Carrow. For fifteen minutes the Convention was like a bear garden. Delegates in every part of the hall were on their feet demanding recognition from the Chair, and quarrelling and arguing with one another. Chairman Queen kept cool and refused to recognize any one until order had been restored, and finally, to meet his quieting the delegates, he signalled to the band in the balcony. The music drowned the noise, and order was at last restored.

In the mean time Allan L. McDermott had been working vigorously with the Hudson delegation, beseeching them to disregard the agreement by which Queen had been made Chairman and to give their votes to Marsh. Senator Smith, from a private box, despatched messages to the Essex delegation, urging them to stand firm. The result was a great victory for Senator Smith, the new Chairman of the State Committee. Hudson and Essex both stood to the agreement and the delegations voted solidly against Marsh and Carrow, two of the most popular and able young delegates in the State, and in favor of ex-Senator Blodgett, whose name was vigorously hissed and who was denounced as a traitor to the party. They also voted in favor of ex-Judge Talman, who is unknown except to a few persons in Camden and Gloucester counties. The first and only ballot resulted: Smith, 964; McDermott, 964; Talman, 684; Blodgett, 577; Marsh, 413; Carrow 301.

Delegate Lane, of Union, had a resolution adopted endorsing Senator Smith's course in Congress, but there was quite a large vote in opposition to it.

As Chairman Hays read the resolutions, the financial declaration was vigorously applauded, but the references to the tariff question were received with a silence which seemed ominous in contrast with the applause that followed the reading of the sections favoring coast defences and a strengthened navy, the endorsement of the Cleveland Administration, and sympathy for the struggling Cuban patriots.

The Convention voted to elect no alternates at large, as there were no indications of a contest, and the delegates from remote districts wanted to catch their trains. The State Committee, on ex-Senator Edwards' motion was authorized to appoint alternates if they shall deem it necessary.

The district delegates were announced and ratified as follows:

First District—Henry M. Harley, of Camden; George M. Betchner, Cumberland.

Second—James W. Lanning, Mercer; J. Frank Buzid, Burlington.

Third—George A. Helme, Middlesex; James J. Bergen, Somerset.

Fourth—Lewis J. Martin, Sussex; Elias C. Drake, Morris.

Fifth—Henry D. Winton, Bergen; Munson Force, Passaic.

Sixth—Gottfried Krueger and Edward P. Meany, Essex.

Seventh—William D. Daly and William D. Edwards, Hudson.

Eighth—Fred. C. Marsh, Union; Thomas F. Noonan, Hudson.

The Union county delegation chose ex-Senator Marsh for a district delegate when it was learned that he was not to be elected a delegate at large, and the delegation joined the Hudson county end of the district and elected ex-Judge Thomas F. Noonan, of Bayonne, over Mayor Hartford, of Orange, whom the Essex county men had slated for the place. This was in retaliation, because the Essex men last night had been pledged to support Marsh, but broke away from him in the morning by the agreement made between the Essex delegation, ex-Senator Blodgett, and ex-Assemblyman William J. Thompson, of Gloucester city.

Although the Convention made no formal declaration in favor of a Presidential candidate, there was no mistaking its sentiment. Chairman Queen, in making his address, mentioned the names of President Cleveland, ex-Govs. Pattison, Campbell and Russell. The President's name was applauded. Pattison's and Campbell's were both applauded and cheered, but there was a demonstration that lasted for several minutes when Russell's name was mentioned, and there were repeated cheers for "Billy Russell, of Massachusetts." Russell is clearly the popular candidate with the voters, but New Jersey's votes at Chicago will probably be cast for Grover Cleveland if his name is presented in the Convention.

Besides the short address of Senator Smith in calling the Convention to order and the remarks of Temporary Chairman Bergen and Permanent Chairman Queen, the only speech was made by Charles T. Atkinson, of Burlington county, in nominating Judge Carrow. He denounced the slate that had been agreed upon, referred to ex-Senator Blodgett as one who "had recently returned to the Democratic fold," and criticised the leaders for crowding out the young men. He said it seemed impossible to get Judge Carrow's name before the convention.

"You're a liar!" shouted a Camden delegate.

"No, I'm not a liar," replied Atkinson. "It's the truth. The young Democracy seems to be not entitled to representation, though their candidates are abler and as sound on the money question as any Democrat. If I've stirred up strife or stirred up a hornets' nest, let 'er come, I'm glad of it, and can stand it better than anybody else."

The speech excited the sympathy and applause of the delegates, but not their votes.

Chairman Bergen's speech was mainly a forecast of what the platform would be, and Chairman Queen's was an arraignment of the recent Republican Legislature for refusing to carry out its promises of retrenchment and reform, and a demand for the equal taxation of railroad property, which he said would be the issue next fall in New Jersey, and every candidate for the Assembly would be pledged on the subject when he was nominated.

A GUBERNATORIAL BEE.

Senator Roger Wants a Roomination to Prepare to Succeed Gov. Griggs.

The most important political news developed at the State House, Trenton, Thursday, among the politicians who gathered in the corridors, was the announcement that Senator Maurice Rogers, of Camdem, will be a candidate for a third term. It is unusual for a Senator in New Jersey to sit beyond six years, particularly from a large county like Camden.

There is more basis of this announcement than appears on the surface, and the politicians at Trenton believe that it means that Rogers is keeping before the public to continue in line for the next gubernatorial nomination. He was one of the seven candidates in the field last fall. Those who are familiar with Camden County politics say that Speaker DeRousse is likely to get the nomination, in spite of all Mr. Rogers' claims.

CHILDREN'S HOME OFFICERS.

Mrs. Horace Kimball Elected to the Office of President Again.

The annual meeting of the Children's Home Association for the election of officers was held in the Y. M. C. A. building Thursday afternoon. The result of the election was as follows: President, Mrs. Horace Kimball; vice-presidents, Mrs. Isaac Rushmore, Mrs. Louise Worrington, Mrs. Isaac S. Gilbert; recording secretary, Mrs. Ruth C. Leonard; corresponding secretary, Miss Lucy H. Everett; treasurer, Miss Ella Serrell.

Mrs. S. A. Hendrickson was appointed as usual matron for another year, and Edward Rushmore, M. D., visiting physician. The appointment of committees will be made at the next meeting of the association to be held in June.

THE PLANT AT GARWOOD.

The Hercules Seamless Drawn Tubes Company Incorporated.

Wednesday, articles of incorporation of the Hercules Seamless Drawn Tubes Company were filed in the office of County Clerk Howard. The incorporators are William Buell, of this city; Frederick K. Day, of Elizabeth and George M. Wilcox, of New York. The capital stock is $60,000. The company will manufacture steel and tubing and other products from iron, steel and other metals. The plant is located at Garwood and the principal office in New York city.

MAKE TOO MUCH NOISE

THEODORE KURZHALS SAYS THE SALVATIONISTS ARE A NUISANCE.

His Wife Has Been Prostrated By the Noise of the Army—He Will Make a Complaint to City Judge This Afternoon

Theodore Kurzhals, Sr., who conducts the barber shop at No. West Second street, just off Park avenue, declares that the Salvation Army is a nuisance in the neighborhood and this afternoon he will appear before City Judge DeMeza and make a formal complaint against them as such. Mr. Kurzhals says they are an annoyance because of their demonstrative manner of conducting warfare against Satan. Their object and endeavors meet with the approbation of Mr. Kurzhals, but the accompanying clamor attendant thereto is vehemently condemned by him, and it is because of this condition that he makes the complaint.

Mr. Kurzhals' family lives over the barber shop and right next door are the barracks of the Army. Mrs. Kurzhals is of a very nervous temperament. Since the advent of warm weather when the heat made it necessary for the Salvationists to open their outside doors and windows while conducting their meetings, the thumping of drums, and clapping of cymbals and tambourines has tended to increase her nervousness, and on several occasions, Mr. Kurzhals says, she has been confined to her bed with sickness.

Mr. Kurzhals stood it as long as he could and finally appealed to the staff officers to suppress the din which accompanies the service. The officers agreed to do so. However, since the Volunteers were started in this city, the Salvationists have left no stone unturned to maintain an active interest in the Army, and as noise is considered one of the essential elements in this direction, Mr. Kurzhals did not get the relief that he expected. Mr. Kurzhals thinks the officers did not intentionally continue to annoy his family, but when they became enthused they simply forgot and did just what they were requested not to do.

The climax came last night when the Army brass band was brought to town. They tooted vociferously at the barracks during the evening and about nine o'clock Mr. Kurzhals found his wife prostrated in the hall in a hysterical condition.

Dr. Probasco, the family physician, had treated Mrs. Kurzhals several times for this same trouble. He told Mr. Kurzhals that his wife's collapse was undoubtedly caused by the excessive noise of the Army, and suggested that the next time she was affected to call Dr. Tomlinson in order that his opinion of the matter might be secured. If it was the same as Dr. Probasco's why he would have corroborative testimony to present to the City Judge in making a complaint. Consequently Dr. Tomlinson was called and prescribed remedies which finally relieved her high nervous condition. He coincided with Dr. Probasco as to the cause of her prostration.

This was the straw that broke the camel's back, metaphorically speaking, and Mr. Kurzhals' patience gave out. He declared war against the Army and this morning he told a Press representative that he was either going to make the organization leave his neighborhood or else conduct their meetings in a more quiet manner.

Y. M. C. A. DIRECTORS MEET.

They Hear Committee Reports and Elect Several New Members.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. was held at the building last Friday. The following officers and directors were present: Wm. D. Murray, E. L. Bonny, A. B. Beers, R. H. Radford, H. O. Newman, G. H. Batchelor, C. E. Boss, G. R. Cornwell, J. W. Gavett, A. C. LaBoyteaux and John Vallant. Written reports were received from the committees on religious work, educational work, junior work, and from the general secretary, assistant secretary, acting physical director, and treasurer. The social committee tendered a verbal report. On motion the secretary was instructed to extend thanks to Alfred E. Pearsall for his elocutionary services on the seventh of last month, and also to Samuel Q. Lawson for the gift of a water fountain for the building. Plans of the baseball committee were submitted by J. W. Gavett, of the committee. An appropriation was made for a fence about the lot in the rear of the building. Terms were made to Miss MacMartin for use of the gymnasium for six months next season. A number of members were elected.

Josiah Brown Indicted.

Josiah Brown, who resides at the corner of Watchung avenue and Webster place, this city, and who is secretary of the American Tobacco Company, has been indicted by the New York Grand Jury for conspiracy against competitors. Nine other officials of the same company were also indicted.

AFTERMATH OF THE GREAT SHOW.

Incidents That Made a Small Circus For Those Interested.

Even after the "greatest show on earth" had departed, there was plenty of excitement. Such a large gathering was sure to lose something. Joe Beek was the first to discover anything of value, as he claims to have found a lady's gold watch on the ground where the ladies' dressing room was located. A lad named Perrine also found a silver watch. One young man, who was industriously hunting among the debris, suddenly came upon a flat-headed adder and had another little circus of his own.

The feed, hay and bedding that remained on the field, caused no end of trouble. A number of men appeared and started to carry it away. Each claimed to have purchased it and war seemed imminent. Nobody was able to produce a receipt for it and, at last, an owner of part of the land appeared and carted most of it away with the help of some of his neighbors.

Station Agent Erickson, at Netherwood, was a loser by the show, as someone quietly appropriated his stock of yesterday morning's papers from the Union News Company. The wrapper was found in the park minus its contents.

FIRE IN NEW BRUNSWICK.

Factories Quickly Wiped Out, the Loss Aggregating $40,000.

William Henderson's foundry and blacksmith shop, at No. 11 Water street, New Brunswick, was found on fire early Thursday. The fire gained great headway, owing to a confusion in the alarm system. At last a general alarm was rung in and the whole fire department responded. The fire speedily spread to the new works of the Empire Machine firm, W. E. and Walter Burns, proprietors.

The building is three stories, and besides the Burns plant contained that of the Crawford Manufacturing Company, makers of the "Stop Motion" for knitting machines, and Joseph Tice's telephone manufactory. The firemen, after two hours of hard fighting, succeeded in extinguishing the fire. Sparks flew in profusion, carried by a strong east wind, and neighboring buildings took fire, but these flames were soon put out.

The factories were practically ruined, and much machinery was damaged. The loss is estimated at $40,000, with insurance for about one-fourth.

Charles Greenwald, ex-chief engineer of the fire department, Mr. Wagner and Mr. Meyers were injured.

A DR. JEKYL-MR. HYDE AFFAIR.

Police Arrest a Woman Who They Think is Mrs. McGraff, But Are Not Sure.

The visit of Mary McGraff to this city Wednesday evening made a decided impression on the police force and when Patrolman Cooney arrested a drunken woman on Park avenue last night, whose face greatly resembled that of Mrs. McGraff, they supposed, of course, she had tried it again. The woman was gave, Maria McGrath, lent the same impression.

The woman was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza this morning and said she had never been arrested before in this city. Her gown was different from that of Mary McGraff, but there was a decided resemblance between the two women. The police thought they were the same person, but Maria said no. Judge DeMeza suspended sentence.

Married Quietly at Philadelphia.

A quiet marriage took place at Philadelphia last Wednesday, when J. Stephen Higham, of this city, was united in wedlock to Miss Emma Clara Lee, of Philadelphia. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride and was only attended by the relatives and intimate friends. Mr. Higham has lived in this city for some time, and is employed by a New York banking firm. The newly-married couple will reside on Lafayette place.

Post Office Examinations.

The regular semi-annual civil service examinations for employes of the postal department will be held in this city at the postoffice building on June 6th, beginning at 1:30 p. m. Applications must be made on or before May 18th. The recent examination held here was a special one, necessited by the need of more substitutes.

Freight House Nearing Completion.

The new freight house is nearly completed and the day when it will be used is not far distant. The ground between Richmond and Berckman streets next to to the railroad will be used for tracks on which to run the freight cars. Altogether Plainfield will have one of the best equipped freight houses and yards along the Central railroad.

Thieves Nocturnal Raids.

The Mountainside farmers are suffering from the nocturnal raids of thieves, who carry off chickens, bees, grain and other articles. One farmer had a pig stolen, but the animal set up a squealing as the thieves drove toward Newark and they dropped it.

AN IVORY SCREEN.

How It Helped a Young New York Man to Secure a Wife.

NOTHING could have been more exquisite than the last bit of bric-a-brac that Mr. Frederick Madson had added to his choice collection.

It was a carved ivory screen, not more than nineteen inches high, but so beautifully done, so Thorwaldsen-like in its grace of design, that one might fall on one's knees in worship of it, as a thing divine.

"To think that it had been in that shop window for two weeks and I never noticed it, though passing every day! To think that there are human hands so skillful that they can cut this dream from a flat surface! To think that poverty can be so pressing that the carver does this miracle and parts with it for a song!" And he bore from his store erect as his own exclamation marks, still admiring it, still adoring it like one charmed.

"Frederick," said a gentle voice behind him, "don't you mean to go to dinner? The bell has rung twice."

"Yes, mother, I'm coming," he laughingly answered, "if I can get away from it. Did you ever see anything lovelier than the light shines through it and brings out a whole gamut of cream tints from the deepest to the palest?"

"It is very beautiful," said his mother, bending over it. "See, here is a name, Frederick. Can't that unusual on work of this kind?"

"'Work of this kind?'" repeated Frederick; "but who ever sees work of this kind? I wonder if it can be a woman who has made it. Marie? That sounds feminine enough."

"I have known people in France whose last name was Marie," his mother rejoined, "but still it may be a woman, you know. Come now to dinner, and decide that afterward."

Frederick obeyed, but all the time at dinner and after dinner, "Marie, Roma" rang in his ears. Can she be a woman who has made so lovely one and a poor one; no ugly peasant, but a dainty lady must have carved that charm, and she must be sorely in need of money, or how could she have ever parted with such dreamland loveliness!

"What are you thinking of?" said his mother, good-naturedly, sitting near him in the library, some fancy work in hand.

"I? Ah! Oh! I was thinking I would go up to old Preston and ask him if he knows anything of this Marie, Roma."

His mother laughed.

"How in love with it you are," she said.

"Yes—no; that is, I might be able to order a special companion piece if I knew the artist's address," and he went out into the hall for his overcoat and hat.

"I wish the dear boy had a special companion-piece," whispered his mother to herself, as she heard the front door close after him. "I am such a poor, old, fragile piece of bric-a-brac for his fireside" and she moved farther back from the hot fireplace.

Frederick walked rapidly, coming to the shop where he had bought the screen quite out of breath. Then he pulled himself together and entered in his usual state of dignity.

"You remember that carved ivory screen I bought here early this afternoon?" he said.

"Oh, most certainly," said the shopkeeper, bowing and rubbing his hands heartily. "A most beautiful thing, sir."

"Have you anything more by the same hand?"

The shopkeeper shut one eye and pursed his lips as if reflecting deeply, then said, slowly:

"I am sorry we have not. To tell you the truth, a bit of pure art like that is rare, very rare. Still, if anything more comes of that kind I will let you know."

"I observed," said Frederick, taking up the conversation, much to the surprise of the little shopkeeper, who had thought it finished, "that in one corner there was 'Marie, Roma.' Do you know anything of that signature?"

"Oh! Most certainly! The piece was from Roma," he answered; "but 'Marie!' No, I do not know that. Perhaps the wrapper it came in would be some aid. Did you notice it, sir?"

"No, I did not," said Frederick, as if ready to take himself to task for a complete stupid. "I will look it up. Thank you." And he hurried out of the shop just as the next customer entered.

Once more in his library, he fumbled in the waste-paper basket till the screen wrappings came to light. Yes, there was the importer's address, as clear as a crystal, on the quadrangular bit of tan paper: "C. R. Pallatino, —, Roma. Importer of Fancy Goods." This last in plain English.

"C. R. Pallatino, —, Roma," must disclose the full address of "Marie, Roma."

It was an easy thing for this wealthy young bachelor to leave his home to his mother and make one of his quick trips to Europe without question; nobody commented, and everybody wished they could do the same. Three weeks later and Frederick was in Rome, threading one of its dark, obsolete little byways and looking up the address of "C. B. Pallatino, —, —," with warm, tired ardor, because for an hour it had eluded him.

There it was at last! The name clearly above the brown, weather-worn door, and a crooked and twisted flight of stairs by which to reach it. Very rapidly Frederick climbed them, paid no attention to the "No admission" sign, and tapping quickly, walked into an ill lighted, rubbish-loaded room, in which a dark, crisp Italian was packing odds and ends of art work for importation to America. He looked keenly up at Frederick, as if he were an intruder.

Frederick nodded to him, and made a quick inquiry in Italian.

"Ya-as, ya-as, I know what you mean," the importer answered, in excellent English. "It was a ivory screen, most delicate, most bootiful, sent to Meester Preston, — street, New York. Oh, ya-as, the name on it was, as you say: 'Marie, Roma,'" and he looked again, and smacking at cutting short the interruption.

"Will you kindly give me the full address?" Frederick continued, with a little assumption of command.

"You wish to obtain more of her work: I am the agent. You must deal directly with me," and the Italian straightened from his bending position, brushing bits of the packing from his sleeves. "I regret me much that I have not one thing of hers to offer you."

"She!" "Hers!"

Frederick caught at the pronouns with a gasp of satisfaction as he replied:

"I have no intention of purchasing directly from the carver, but wish, as long as I am so near, to see the author of this rare work."

The importer smiled shrewdly.

"You can assure me that you are no dealer or importer in this line like myself?"

"Most assuredly," answered Frederick, with considerable scorn in his voice.

"And that you will buy the signorina's work from me and not from her?"

"I shall do no such thing," Frederick responded, making a note of the importer's "signorina."

"Ah, well, it can do no harm, though the signorina is incapacitated from work by an accident to her right hand several weeks ago. Here, Antonio!" And he motioned to a little dark boy dusting vases in a corner, where he had escaped Frederick's notice. "Here, Antonio, I say, take this gentleman to the signorina's, and don't be long about it."

Antonio was instantly at the stairway, beckoning Frederick to follow him into the by-alley.

Placing a fat coin within the importer's easy reach, Frederick hastened after his small guide, turning up and down a labyrinth of footways till they came out upon a street in front of an old palazzo that must have been doing its best to decay and crumble away for the last hundred years. Antonio raised the knocker, held out his dusky palm for his fee, then clattered away as if an unseen taskmaster were after him with a whip.

The door was opened by a neat serving-woman, who admitted Frederick without a question, and carried his card to a fair, blonde young woman in the adjoining room.

There was a suppressed sound of surprise, a slight rustle of draperies, and Frederick looked up to find himself in the presence of, not a dark, madonna-faced Italian beauty, but a fresh, little bobolink of a woman, who two seasons before had been the belle of the set he had gone out with in New York.

"Mr. Fergurson!" she exclaimed.

"Frederick Madson!" she cried, holding out her left hand to him, for the right one was in bandages.

"Explain," he said.

"Tell me," she said, in turn; "have you come to take me home?"

"I—oh—" he stammered, unable to be connective. "I don't think I understand. Is it you that carved that beautiful screen?"

"Yes many of them," she nodded. "They are what nurse and I live on, now that mamma is dead, and the money all gone."

"All gone?" he asked, for when he had known her there had been so much.

"Yes. Papa lost it all, but I did not mind as long as I could cut ivories; that is such lovely work! A dear old Italian showed me how and lent me his patterns; but now my right hand is injured. I ran a sharp instrument into it, and as I can't work, I called to my New York friends that I would come home, so I fancied just in my surprise that perhaps they had sent you to see to my going home; but, then, I am forgetting that it would not be correct, as neither of us is married."

"But we might be," he interposed, recalling the time that Marie Fergurson had seemed all the world to him, till he heard of her engagement to a man he so honestly disliked that he had tried hard to forget both.

"I was never engaged to Richard Hart," she said, a little resentfully, as if reading his thoughts. "He never was the man I most cared for."

"Who was?" he asked, drawing nearer.

She hung her head with a Scotch daisy flush.

"Bless the boy!" said Frederick's mother, when he cabled his marriage and date of return. "I remember, now, he always liked Marie Furgerson!"

"Yes, yes! The Americano! He must have everything, even the fair signorina." Where got I my screens so cheap and so good as of her?" And he mapped his teeth under his thick mustaches.—M. Carrie Hyde, in N. Y. Ledger.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

The great and mystifying game of making a President with figures still goes on with McKinley's managers.

William E. Russell has many supporters in this city as a candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination.

Ex-Speaker James J. Bergen won hosts of friends by his manly withdrawal from the contest for permanent chairman of the convention.—World.

On the tariff question the Hon. William McKinley is known, but on that other equally important matter, sound money, he is the great unknown.

The Camden Independent, which came to "fill a long felt want," has gone the way of many a one before it. After next Saturday it will cease as a daily paper.

William B. Moore, keeper of the State prison, is generally referred to throughout the State as "Lucky Moore," because of the favorable and quick turns in his affairs.

The New York Evening Post, Saturday, contained an extended notice about the advantages of Plainfield, and said "that Plainfield is enjoying a steady and substantial growth."

Benjamin Urner, whose death occurred at Fanwood Sunday morning, was a candidate for Senator on the Greenback ticket in this county in 1881. He polled 338 votes. His opponents were Benjamin Vail, Republican, and Louis Hyer, Democrat, the former being elected.

The exports of bread-stuff during the last ten months show an increase of over $22,000,000 in value over those of the same period a year ago. At this rate the surplus of this country should soon be cleared out of the way, and open up a brisk market for the coming crop.

A Nebraska man who was ill and knew he must die, insisted upon having his funeral sermon delivered while he was yet alive, that he might know just what was said of him. The preacher naturally demurred at this but the sick man maintained that as it was to be his funeral he should have his way. And he did.

Richard A. Storrs, for thirty-nine years connected with the finance department of New York city, and whose death occurred yesterday, was a brother of Justice Storrs, of Kensington avenue, this city. The latter has also been connected with the same department for a great many years, and it is thought he may succeed his brother as the city's "wise man."

Congress compelled the use of the old Ford theatre building in Washington for years as a department for this of clerical work, because they refused, as a matter of economy, to provide better quarters. The building collapsed and it has just been figured out that it cost Uncle Sam $264,000 to settle the claims of the killed and maimed.

The original charges of insubordination preferred against Patrolman Vanderweg are not as serious as that of where insolence is alleged when he was brought before the Mayor. By his actions before the Mayor the officer has greatly changed his side of the case. A little more courtesy at the time would have doubtless proved an antidote in dispelling the original offense against the rules of the department.

L. A. Thompson, the new Clerk in Chancery, has just submitted his first monthly report, in compliance with the new law. The gross receipts for the month of April were $3,350.82, which amount was paid over to the State Treasurer. The entire expenses of the office amounted to about $1,700, leaving a clear profit to the State of about $1,600. This would indicate that from $15,000 to $18,000 a year will be realized to the State by the act of the Legislature changing the system of the office.

The contest made to elect Frederick C. Marsh a delegate-at-large over Rufus Blodgett was gallantly fought. Marsh was not really a candidate himself. He practically withdrew when informed that his withdrawal would enable the election of Mr. Queen as permanent chairman and result in the retirement of William J. Thompson. Before the convention came together he was selected as a district delegate by the Union county men, and the contest in the convention was purely spontaneous on the part of his admirers. There is no doubt that he could easily have been elected over Blodgett had he entered the lists a week ago.—World.

The newspaper cuts of prominent men are used repeatedly. Of course, a man's appearance changes in time, but the old cut goes on forever. The usual change is in whiskers, and from increasing baldness. But sometimes it is different. Senator Rogers, of Camden, is as bald as an egg, and the pictures of him made for the newspapers are not more than three years old. It seemed safe to gamble on his as a fixed face. But last winter the Senator bought a wig. It is a lovely construction, and where he is not known he looks like a youngster. He is no longer the Rogers of the newspaper cut, and it would be only justice to him—considering the cost of wigs—to cover the bald line along the Senatorial dome with a proper representation of hair.—Newark Call.

It is not strange that at the Prohibition State Convention protest should have been made, in the speech by the temporary chairman, against the introduction of free silver and other alien issues into the Prohibition cause. In the West the cold water men have some alliances, curious when the name and the controling principle of the party are remembered. It has come to pass that to be a Prohibitionist means also to be allied with the principles and ideas of other radical parties. New Jersey Prohibitionists as a class vote their party ticket simply to express their hostility to the liquor traffic, and among them are many people who hold conservative views on social and economic questions. It is no wonder that at the State Convention the sentiment that the issue advocated by the party should be that expressed by its name, was enthusiastically received.—Newark News.

Companies that are formed for the purpose of competing with established corporations, do not seem blessed with the best of luck, and especially is this so of local telephone companies. Some months ago a local telephone company was started at Elizabeth and from the talk at the time one was led to believe that it was a rosy future that lay in the path of the company. But it seems not. Last Friday a suit for $15,000 was begun in the Supreme Court at Trenton, by George S. Smith, a contractor of Elizabeth, against the Elizabeth Telephone Company. This amount, he claims, is due him for partly constructing the company's lines at that place. The telephone company officials claim they have not money enough to pay Mr Smith his bill and his lawyer says that he will make application for the appointment of a receiver to straighten out the company's affairs.

The following is the exact wording of the petition presented to the Common Council last Monday night by the Town Improvement Association, asking for a proper dissemination of city ordinances:

To have compiled, printed and posted, or circulated, such ordinances, in convenient and accessible form, an abstract of such city laws and ordinances as may be necessary, especially those concerning the health, beauty and cleanliness of the town, in order that all residents may be informed and assist in their observance.

By perusal of this petition it will be seen that the Association did not especially request that ordinances be printed in poster form, a fact which The Press is glad to hear and report. As has already been suggested in this paper, the Association feels the need of a pamphlet containing the ordinances to date which can be distributed all over the city and provide a ready and convenient form of reference. The ordinances have not been published in this form since 1892, and the members of the Improvement Association have found great difficulty in acquainting themselves with the ordinances passed since that time. Their work is hindered because of this condition of affairs. The Common Council should act favorably on the petition.

The Borough Justices.

The question in regard to borough justices which has caused considerable discussion of late, is now in the hands of the Governor. A law was passed at the last session of the Legislature and approved March 18th, 1896, which repealed all former laws in regard to the election of borough justices. Inasmuch as the North Plainfield borough election was held March 10th, 1896, and the Justices elected could not qualify till May 1st, it is a question whether the election will stand. The last law passed cuts out entirely the election of borough justices. Those interested are now awaiting the Governor's decision.

Realty Changes.

The following transfers of property have been recorded in the Union County Clerk's office from April 30th to May 6th, as published in the New Jersey Contractor and Gazetter:

George W. DeMan to James F. Powers, lot, road leading from Plainfield to Railway, Scotch Plains, $1,000; Edward Westcott to Thos. W. Muhlman, East Orange, 30 94-100 acres road leading from Connecticut farms to Scotch Plains, $2,000; Catherine W. Runyon to Mary E. Lesley, lot, North Avenue, Plainfield, $1,600; Ambrose Male to W. B. Brown, lot 4th street, Roselle, $1,000; H. Brown to Harriet Male, Plainfield, lot 12th street, $1; Abram F. Voorhees to James E. Codington, tract Spruce street, $500; Samuel A. Hills to Abram P. Voorhees, lots 18 and 19, Spruce street, $500.

The following contract has also been filed:

City National Bank, Plainfield, with Wm. T. Kirk, iron work on bank, $1,998.

a million killed

would make no impression on the number of the germs of consumption that exist in one affected lung. All germs are little enough, but those which cause consumption are very minute. Cod-liver oil won't kill them. We don't know a remedy which will. The germs float in the air and we can't keep from breathing them into our lungs. Then why don't all of us have consumption? Because a healthy throat, sound lungs, and a strong constitution won't allow the germs to gain a foothold.

DISCOURAGING TROLLEY TALK.

No Immediate Hope for an Electric Road to Elizabeth.

Chandler W. Riker, representing the Plainfield Electric Railway, has addressed a letter to President Egenolf, of the Elizabeth Board of Trade. It states the purpose of the company to build a road to Plainfield from Elizabeth, starting from North Broad street, and believes it for the interest of the public that the route should be over Westfield avenue, as far as Cranford, when it would cross under the Central Railroad tracks to South avenue, and subsequently back again to North avenue, entering Plainfield on that avenue.

It was proposed to lay the tracks in the centre of the avenue, and in place of the telford pavement thus destroyed the company, at its own expense, would pave with telford the sides of the avenue between the tracks and curbs.

This communication led to a lengthy discussion in the Board of Trade, and, excepting Silas D. Drake, all present were opposed permitting the use of the county road. President Egenolf, P. J. Ryan, A. S. Campbell, Dr. Adelberg, A. D. Mulford and others gave expression of their opinions. It was intimated that the Plainfield company was owned by the Consolidated Traction Company, and there was no reason why the connections could not be made on West Jersey street so that Elizabeth could have the advantage of traffic. If the road connected on North Broad street it would be only to the advantage of Newark. But if it came in on West Jersey street Elizabeth might get some advantage of the connection with Plainfield.

A resolution was adopted that it was the sense of the Board of Trade that county roads should not be used for trolley roads.

Splinter in His Foot.

The splinters that have always been a source of annoyance at the railroad station to passengers and others was the cause of an accident to Mail carrier Frisby on Saturday afternoon. He was about to catch the mail bag from the 2:30 New York mail train when one of those long yellow pine splinters entered the bottom of his foot nearly an inch. Baggagemaster Garretson and the conductor, Phil Backer, assisted in removing Frisby's shoe and extracting the huge splinter. Frisby then bound a piece of salt pork on the wound and pluckily went to his work. The Press hopes the day is not far distant when a substantial stone platform will replace the present board affair.

THE HIGH SCHOOL GAMES

ATHLETIC EVENTS ON THE CRESCENT OVAL ON SATURDAY.

The Crowd Was Not Large, But the Contests Were All Exciting—Several Prizes Won by Plainfield Boys—Result in Detail.

It is remarkable, but nevertheless true, that Plainfield has not given its hearty support to an athletic or cycling meet. And that fact was very apparent on the athletic games of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association on the Crescent Oval last Saturday afternoon. The day was perfect, the contests were exciting and yet even the grand stand was not half filled. Those that did go, however, saw a very successful field day. Besides the local crowd, which was an enthusiastic one, there were delegations from the Elizabeth, Newark, Montclair and Hoboken schools, who kept up the excitement with their rousing school yells.

The games were a great success and Plainfield secured just enough victories so as to yet remain hospitable to her visitors and please the audience as well. New Jersey's best athletes were entered, and Plainfield, and the borough also, can claim several of them as residents.

The first event was the one hundred yard dash and only one Plainfield boy, G. P. Smith, was entered. The event was run over owing to a misunderstanding at the start and Plainfield did not get a place. Shippen, the Stevens' crack, had the shot all his own way, but Smith took second with 37 feet 5 inches, two inches higher than the High School record.

The bicycle races appeared to be a cinch for the visitors as the High School team did not seem to be in it. Lindley Hillman managed to take third in the quarter mile race, and second in the one mile race.

"Oh!" one of the fair visitors on the grand stand was heard to exclaim, "I wish Will McCutchen was there" and in the two mile bicycle race, this gentle admirer of "Will" had her wish granted. The two mile race was open to all school boys in the State and eight contestants lined up at the start, including Lindley, Hillman, of the High School, and W. M. McCutchen and Raymond A. McGee, of Leal's school. Two of the riders, Coaney and Schaeffler, fell on the first turn, but the rest loafed so that they managed to catch the bunch. On the third lap, a very disgraceful thing occured. One of the out of town riders who was riding beside McGee, let down his own handle bar and seized McGee's, attempting to throw him. McGee's grip was too strong and the scheme did not work. As the referee did not see the incident, the man was not ruled off the track. It was a general loaf until the last lap when Allen, of Montclair, attempted to leave the bunch. McCutchen was not to be left in an instant and with one of his famous spurts shot to the front on the home turning easily. McGee followed him closely at the turn but the speedy rider of the Crescent Wheelmen soon left his opponent behind. McGee's spurt was strong enough, however, to land him a good second easily passing Allen and Holly who fought it out on the home stretch for third place. This was McGee's first race on the track and he promises to become a hard man to leave.

The pole vault caused quite a little enthusiasm when Moore, of Pingry's, pushed Smith very hard for first place Smith finally won by clearing 9 feet, 3 inches, a new High School record.

In the 440 yard run, Charles Dupee, of Washington Park, completely outclassed his opponents. He ran in excellent form, and although his opponents tried to run him out at the start, he ran away from the rest at the 220 yard post and finished easily. He was loudly applauded.

Carroll Runyon was a surprise in throwing the hammer, winning second with ease and pushing Reall, of Montclair, for first.

George P. Smith did the best work for the High School, and showed the side of all-round champion, which he rightly together with the Daily Press medal left Hall, for a deserved one. He contested in five events, and secured one first, two seconds and a third.

The summaries of the events were as follows:

100 yard dash. Won by C. A. Sulzer, Pingry's School; P. Jones, Newark Academy, second; C. P. Underwood, Pingry's School, third. Time, 10 3-5 seconds.

Putting the shot, 12 pounds. Won by R. Shippen, Stevens Prep; G. P. Smith, Plainfield High School, second; F. A. Reall, Montclair High School, third. Distance, 38 ft., 6 inches.

One-quarter mile bicycle race. Won by S. McClave, Stevens Prep; A. R. Allen, Montclair High School, second; Lindley Hillman, Plainfield High School, third. Time, 36 3-5 seconds.

Pole vault. Won by Geo. P. Smith, Plainfield High School; P. A. Moore, Pingry's School, second; Raymond Carroll, Plainfield High School, and W. Conlon, Newark Academy, tied for third. Height, 9 feet, 3 inches.

220 yard dash. Won by C. A. Sulzer, Pingry's School; George P. Smith, Plainfield High School, second; J. H. Cluckering, Stevens Prep., third. Time, 23 seconds.

Throwing the hammer. Won by T. A. Reall, Montclair High School; Carroll Runyon, Plainfield High School, second; George P. Smith, Plainfield High School third. Distance, 86 feet, 9 inches.

440 yard run. Won by Chas. Dupee, Dr. Johnstone's School; W. O. G. Quimby, Newark Academy, second; Carl Alexander, Pingry's School, third. Time, 53 1-5 seconds.

One mile bicycle race. Won by A. R. Allen, Montclair High School; Lindley Hillman, Plainfield High School, second; J. Schaeffler, Stevens Prep., third. Time, 2:46 1-5.

Running high jump. Won by Raymond Carroll, Plainfield High School; P. A. Moore, Pingry's School, second; W. F. Cornwell, Plainfield High School, third. Height, 5 feet, 1 inch.

Two mile bicycle race. Won by Wm. M. McCutchen, Leal's School; Raymond A. McGee, Leal's School, second; A. R. Allen, Montclair High School, third. Time, 5:07 4-5.

A MAY DAY PARTY.

Delightful Children's Party Given in Evens Saturday Afternoon.

A "May Queen Party" was the name of a most novel event which was held on Saturday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hill, 1312 West Front street. The party was given in honor of Francis Hill and was arranged by Miss Nellie Arthur, of New street. About 10 o'clock in the morning the little folks met at the home of their leader, Miss Nellie Arthur, formed into line and to the beat of the drum, which was in charge of Harry Blimm, marched through Front street to the home of Francis Hill. En route the young folks sang "Yankee Doodle," "Keep It Up" and "Marching Through Georgia." Each one wore a wreath for a hat, made of red, white and blue bunting, and they attracted considerable attention while marching. When they reached their destination everyone was heartily received and made to feel at home by their young host.

An excellent programme was then rendered by the little ones which was as follows: Vocal duet, "Ten Little Negroes," Mamie and Bessie Richards; recitation, "Mamma Bought a Baby;" Mamie Richards; recitation, "Three and Nine," Nellie Richards; recitation, Fred Buchanan; recitation, Somebody's Mother," Violet Hallock; vocal solo, "The Dandelions," Clara Hallock.

Refreshments were then served, during which time two Italians, who happened along with a concertina, furnished some pleasing selections. Mr. Britton, of Clinton avenue, very kindly sent the young people a supply of soda, ginger ale and other refreshments.

The afternoon was devoted chiefly to the playing of games, after the crowning of the king and queen. This was a pleasing sight. A large pole was erected in the centre of the lawn from which hung numerous colored ribbons. The queen, Nellie Arthur, and king, Ernest Buckman, stood near the pole, while the ribbons were wound about it. During this process, "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean" and "Three Cheers for the Red, White and Blue" were sung by the young folks. At the conclusion of the winding of the May-pole, handsome wreaths were placed on the heads of the queen and king. After a reasonable time was passed in playing games a walk to the woods was taken. The only thing to mar the pleasure of the day happened at this time, when Jessie Van Nest fell in the brook. After she had received a severe drenching she was bravely rescued by Anna Jessup, and no damage resulted except a wet dress.

The jolly party broke up about 5:30 and all returned home heartily satisfied that they had passed a most delightful day. Among those present were: Lulu Buckman, Maggie Townley, Charles Townley, Ella Wheeler, Anna Jessup, Lizzie Guince, May Arthur, Nellie Arthur, Freda Buckman, Bertie Glaentzer, Edith Glaentzer, Ethel Mohl, Robert Morgan, Harry Blimm, Harry Hook, Winnie Chase, Bessie, Nellie and Mamie Richards, Violet and Clara Hallock, Lillie, Lulu and Mazie McCarty, Lucy Caspar, Ethel and Alice Day, Hannah Guttman, Ella Frandlin, Laura Fairfax, Sophia Saums, Francis and Georgia Hill, Jessie and Ethel Van-Nest.

BENJAMIN URNER DEAD.

Founder of the Price Current Died at Fanwood.

Benjamin Urner, sixty-four years old, died while asleep at his home, at Fanwood, at an early hour Thursday morning.

Mr. Urner was born in Cincinnati in 1832, and early in life moved to Red Bank where he married Miss Alice Spring Arnold. He embarked in business in New York and was also president of the Mercantile Exchange, after which he began publishing the Price Current, with his son, Frank G., as secretary. Last fall a stock company was formed and incorporated as the Urner-Barry Publishing Company, when the name of the paper was changed to The Produce Review. Mr. Urner was elected president.

A few years ago Mr. Urner was elected by Republicans to the Common Council and was an active manager of the Elizabeth Hospital. He moved to Fanwood five or six years ago and took an interest in local politics there. For the last two years he suffered with heart trouble. It is thought that he died from fatty degeneration of the heart. He leaves a widow, four sons and one daughter.

Entertained at Euchre.

A very pleasant progressive euchre party was given Saturday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gorton, at their home on West Fifth street, in honor of the Misses Mary Cottrell and Sophia Reynolds, of Alfred, N. Y. The following were present: Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, of Dunellen; Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Titsworth, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Titsworth, the Misses Maxson, Clawson, Randolph, Mosher, Bently, Smith, Force, Titsworth; Messrs. Carter, Maxson, Clawson, Hubbard, Lon Titsworth, Nate Titsworth, Will Titsworth, Randolph and Smith. The lady's prize was won by Miss Reynolds and the gentleman's by Mr. Carter. After the playing had ceased dainty refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Gorton will leave to take up their residence in Boston about June 1st.

EQUAL TAXATION ISSUE.

MOVEMENT TO COMPEL RAILROADS TO PAY MORE TAXES.

Missionary Work to be Done This Summer by Prominent Men Throughout the State and to End With a Big Convention

Equal taxation, which was one of the leading themes discussed during the recent session of the Legislature, is to be made a political issue this fall in the State of New Jersey. The equal taxation bill, which attracted so much attention through the session, was not passed, on the ground that the subject was one of great magnitude, and not understood by the people of the State.

To overcome this the advocates of equal taxation have prepared plans for a campaign of education, ending with a general convention on the subject of taxation in the city of Trenton on September 7th, at which time there will be a generous discussion of the subject by representatives of Good Government Clubs, and of the Boards of Trade throughout the State of New Jersey. The plan proposed is, after this convention, to pledge all candidates named for the Assembly and Senate to support an equal taxation bill.

The subject is one of great interest in the larger counties, but so far Hudson is the only county that has organized in the interest of this particular reform. The support of the measure comes from both parties, and has received the indorsement of the Boards of Trade and Good Government organizations. It is claimed by the adoption of equal taxation the railroads will pay the same rate of tax as individuals, and that the localities in the State will be enriched to the extent of nearly $2,000,000 a year. Hudson and Essex counties would be the largest gainers by the change in the system of taxation.

The subject was thoroughly discussed before the Legislature and before the Committeeon Railroads and Canals, but the idea became prevalent that Hudson County had something up her sleeve in the Queen taxation bill, and they were rather suspicious of it, particularly as Hudson County was represented by a solid Democratic delegation in the Legislature.

To overcome these prejudices it is proposed to send out into the various municipalities men who are familiar with the subject of equal taxation to address meetings and distribute literature. Allan L. McDermott, former Democratic Chairman; Congressman Thomas McEwan, Joseph Dear, Charles Corkin and men of like reputation are to be utilized as equal taxation missionaries in the summer and early fall. It is argued that there is no politics in the issue, but that it must come sooner or later, or else some of the municipalities will go into bankruptcy.

It promises to be an interesting fight, for the railroads naturally oppose it, as the increase in taxation comes out of their cash box. The railroads, however, claim that they would favor some change of taxation, but not on the basis proposed by the equal taxation advocates.

A joint resolution was passed during the session of the Legislature providing for the appointment of a commission to take up the subject of taxation, particularly for the taxation of railroad property.

Incipient Fire Quickly Put Out.

About 6 o'clock Saturday evening Baggagemaster J. F. Garretson sent word to fire headquarters that there was a fire in Ivins & Co's lumber yard. The chemical engine and No. 2 hose wagon responded quickly, when it was learned that the end of a railroad tie on the trestle running into the lumber yard was on fire. L. M. Dunavan and Chas. Johnson secured an extinguisher and soon put the fire out. There was no damage.

Attacked by a Dog.

While Mail-carrier Patrick Revelle was delivering mail at a Belvidere avenue residence Saturday he was attacked by a large dog. Mr. Revelle was mounted on his wheel at the time and succeeded in getting away from the dog. His new uniform was torn in several places by the dog's teeth, which, however, did not reach the flesh.

NOT DEMOCRATIC ENOUGH

REV. C. E. HERRING'S REASONS FOR SALVATION ARMY SPLIT.

Commander Booth Was Too Autocratic for a Democratic Community—He Should Have Been More Flexible With Reilngs.

Rev. Charles E. Herring delivered a most powerful prelude to his sermon at the First Presbyterian church last Monday. He discussed the present situation of the Salvation Army in a way that was truly helpful. What he said follows:

"There is something very sad in the recent rupture which has taken place in the Salvation Army. It is unfortunate that such a break should occur in such a unique organization. The Old General is certainly a genius and the schemes he has propounded for individual and social salvation have certainly been wonderful. His latest scheme for the establishment of peasant settlements in India, gives evidence that he is not even now destitute of fertile plans for the amelioration of the condition of the destitute.

"Such an institution as the Salvation Army had and has a place. It has accomplished great good in the world. It has seemed to realize the words of the Master when he said 'Go out into the byways and hedges and compel them to come in.' No place was too low for the army to find recruits.

"There is still room for such an institution, yes, for two, if need be, to reach the 99 per cent of the artisan class who never enter a place of worship.

"It would have been pleasant to think of the persistance of the unity of the organization. Mrs. Booth says 'Our principles are identical with those we have held and taught heretofore.' And so we wish it had remained one. We are troubled with division. Reformation was a loss as well as a gain.

"There is another organization which is strong in its unity and that is the Christian Endeavor society. We trust that nothing in the Presbyterian church may come in to mar that unity.

"What has injured the cause of the Salvation Army in America, is its autocracy in a democratic community. It is not democratic enough to satisfy the American mind and flexibility of organization should have been recognized as a necessity. The Commander-in-Chief has been termed a despot, though a benevolent despot. In no other land as in our own could such a system be modified if it is going to endure. The practical sagacity of the Roman Pontiff recognized this and we have as a result an American Catholic church.

"It is not necessary to reangelicize the Army. Much is due the Commander and his estimable wife for the recognition of the army in this country. The original impression of the army before their coming was not very favorable, but after great trial, indefatigable work and fact, the army came to be recognized as a great spiritual force.

"America will be patriotic American sentiment is far too powerful a force for even a great religious movement to defy.

"We cannot but commend the Christian spirit of letting the matter drop, as there are now two organizations in the field. We sincerely hope that this [illegible] of a similar kind will increase the [illegible] labor of the army in other [illegible] though we candidly think that [illegible]ht of things in this country [illegible]—the son and not wisdom [illegible]nd so the American people [illegible] but we wish God speed to both forces."

Catarrh "cures" in liquid form to be taken internally, usually contain either mercury or iodide of potassa, or both, which are injurious if too long taken. Catarrh is a local, not a blood disease, caused by sudden change to cold and damp weather. It starts in the nasal passages. Cold in the head causes excessive flow of mucus and, if repeatedly neglected, the results of catarrh will follow, and oftentimes an offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles and contains no mercury nor any injurious drug.

WITH THE STEPPERS.

Several Good Races at the Driving Park Saturday Afternoon.

The trotting at the Driving Park last Saturday afternoon was up to the standard, and quite a number of people were at the track to see the sport. The programme consisted of the 2:25 class and two match races of a mile dash each, in both of which Hayes' brown gelding "Andy" took part, winning one and trotting a good game race in the other against a horse who was several seconds too fast for him and belongs in a faster class. The 2:25 class, although not finished on account of the lateness of the hour, as much of it as was trotted proved to be the race of the day and season, and showed St. Albans, the Woodbrook farm stallion, to be a race horse of the highest type. St. Albans, Myrtle Twig, Lillian M. and Highland Boy answered the bell in this class, and although Mr. Branningham's mare, Myrtle Twig, was the favorite on account of her recent victories, it was no secret among a number of horsemen that Johnny Osborne had Mr. Johnson's black stallion, St. Albans, in shape to give the mare the race of her life. Just after they got the word in the first heat Mr. Osborne and Mr. Branningham took back their respective horses, St. Albans and Myrtle Twig, having decided to reserve their fire until later on. That left Lillian M. and Highland Boy to fight it out. It was a pretty race between them around the upper turn and down the home stretch, but at the wire the mare had the best of it by a head in 2:27½. They got away on the third score to a poor start the second heat and all of them did considerable running, but Mr. Branningham's mare acted like a trotter when she caught and came home under the wire a short head in front of Lillian M. in 2:25½, equalling her best record over a mile track. St. Albans was close up at the head of the stretch in this heat but made a loosing brake which lost him his position. They took the word going fast the third heat but Myrtle Twig acted very rank and made repeated brakes and just after she left the half started to run with Mr. Branningham, and the other horses being close behind and coming very fast he was unable to take her back and she ran the entire distance. Notwithstanding this at the head of the stretch and after trotting around the whole field, Mr. Osborne had St. Albans at her wheel and when he pulled his head out side and called on the game son of King Wilkes he responded with that bull dog determination to do or die, that have made the Wilks horses so famous.

He flashed under the wire alongside of the runner in 2:25 flat, breaking his record by half a second. St. Albans trotted his mile in very fast time, as he was on the outside the entire distance and the skill and coolness with which Mr. Branningham handled his mare would be a credit to any trotting reinsman.

The summary is as follows:

2:25 Class—Trotting and Pacing.

Lillian M., br. m.	P. Osborne	1	2
St. Albans, blk s.		2	1
Myrtletwig, b. m.	Branningham	3	4
Highland Boy, sr. g.	Brower	2	3

Time—2:27½; 2:25½; 2:28.

Match Race—Mile Dash.

Andy, br. g.	Hays	1
Ollie, sr. g.	Robins	2

Time—2:42.

Match Race—Mile Dash.

Morton, sr. g.	Arrell	1
Andy, br. g.	Hays	2

Time—2:46.

J. W. Johnson was at the track with Colonel, his sorrel gelding and drove him a slow mile to Stelton wagon in 2:53.

A. C. Vail is driving the fast pacer Budd Onward, 2:21½ on the road.

Roxie French, John Osborne's good mare, will not be seen on the tracks this season, as John has his hands full with the Woodbrook Farm trotters.

The Band Concerts.

The public band concerts will probably be given on Tuesday evenings, and will be so arranged that they will run late in the fall, so that those who go away in the summer can have the benefit of them.

DESPERATE POLITICIANS.

A Correspondent Thus Characterizes the Republicans and the Silver Act.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—In July, 1890, every Republican in Congress supported the Sherman Silver Purchase law. It was signed by Republican President Benjamin Harrison. It brought fearful disaster, horrible destruction and heart-breaking, abject suffering on the masses of the country according to the testimony of Depew, Reed, Frye, Morrill, Dolph, Mayor Gilbert and other high, eminent Republicans. It was the price paid for the passage of the McKinley act. It was a damnable sale and compromise. It was nasty log-rolling on the style of after me the deluge. It was the conclave expedient of desperate politicians. It was a piece of wild, wierd finnance, condemned by every banker and business man in the country. The Republicans now shout for sound money. What is sound money? Does the silver bill of July 14th, 1890, represent the Republican idea of sound money? Will some Republican gentleman of Plainfield explain—Mr. Horr or Mayor Gilbert for instance. Let it here be stated that the country was not threatened in 1890 with the free coinage of silver because President Harrison could have vetoed that, and there were not enough votes in the House of Representatives to pass it over his veto, therefore the statement that the Sherman law was passed to stop free coinage is a lie, and it is the cry of the tricky politician. The McKinley act was bought and paid for with the Sherman bill.

Let The Press sound the key note on this subject, and make the Plainfield Republicans defend their party legislation, or else get into the Democratic band-wagon.

A Saturday Marriage.

The marriage of Miss Nellie Pierson, of East Front street, and James C. Hansen, of 133 Liberty street, was performed Saturday afternoon at 5:30 by Rev. Cornelius Schenck at his home on West Front street. The bridemaid was Miss Catherine Benson, a niece of the groom, and the best man was Peter B. Hansen, brother of the groom. The bride wore a gown of pearl gray, trimmed with lace, and the bridemaid was gowned in blue silk, trimmed with lace. The wedding was a quiet one, and immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Hansen went to their new home, 302 West Second street, where they will reside. A reception will be given at some future time. The happy couple received many handsome present from their friends.

BUD MADE UP THE FEUD.

A Touching Story of the Tennessee Mountains.

HOUGH, Bud Prock had been in bed for several hours, he had scarcely slept at all. Midnight having passed, he was roused by a heavy tread in the next room and the sound of his father's voice.

"To-morrow night is the time," he heard his father say. "We must do the job then. There'll be nobody there but Rube and his mother, and, maybe, that there parson. I tell ye, Burce Spillman, it was Rabe Hawkins as had the reverend up my still three weeks ago. It was him and the rest as run your son off to the nation last winter, on charge of that shootin' scrape he got into down on Smoky Run. Now is a good time for us to get even."

"That young preacher you speak of and the Hawkinses are some kin, I reckon," remarked Burge Spillman. "Hits minds me, too, as Bud and your Barbara Ann be purtier thick. I've seen them together more'n once. They was at the Borum gap to-day."

"Long with that Parson Sneed, was he? I'll wear him out if I hear say more such tales. I believe I'll wear him out anyhow."

At this point Bud became so agitated he knocked over an ox yoke that was leaning against the wall. Then Bud heard his father rise, open the door and approach the bed.

"Was you a-listenin'?"

"I couldn't hardly help it, when you talked so loud," returned Bud, whose fears would hardly carry him to the point of a downright lie. "Besides, I ain't deaf."

"Well, then, you've heard, and I reckon you know. But you 'tend to what I say." John Prock struck the table until the glasses on it rattled. "If I hear of you cheepin' a word to anyone—you, I say!—I'll wear the very hide off'n ye. D'ye hear?"

"Hold up your head and look at me! Don't you be seen 'long with that Preacher Sneed no more. I'll baste you for that if it happens agin."

"You know I wish you well, father," he said. "I've nobody else to care for since mother was put away. But I wish you would give up this thing, father. You and them Hawkins' have been a-jowering for months. What good do it do?"

"What thing? Is the boy crazy?" Prock gazed at Spillman in simulated surprise.

"You know what, father." Bud hesitated, for he had heard nothing explicit.

"Listen at the little fool! He'll be makin' out next that his pap wants to kill somebody. Look here, Bud. You get to bed, and quit botherin' your head. I reckon I know what I'm about."

Bud had neither brothers nor sisters. Since his mother's death, owing to his lameness and sensitive temperament, he became a creature of retiring habits, having no intimates, and but few associates.

The morning following the events just related, John Prock shouldered his rifle and left the house with scarcely a word for Bud, who, growing lonely, wandered off into the woods later on.

Ought he to warn some one against something? Or was he in honor bound to hold his tongue? He was still debating the question in his mind, rather aimlessly, when the crack of a rifle was followed by the appearance of a gentle-faced, slender young man, carrying several dead squirrels and a gun on his shoulder.

"Why, Bud," said Parson Sneed, "I hardly expected to see you so far from home to-day."

Yet the boy held his peace, and after a time the young man strolled off. Bud, still undecided and more vaguely distressed than ever, dreaded to go home. He wandered yet farther away, until at sundown he was considerably nearer the Hawkins cabin than his own.

THE DOOR WAS BURST OPEN.

Instead of turning homeward, he lay down at a point where, through the gathering darkness, he could see the firelight within the open door of the Hawkins house. The road leading from his own home passed through the glen just below his position.

The stars came out and the night wind sighed gently. A new fear came over the lad. Perhaps his father might suspect, from Bud's prolonged absence, that the boy was up to "some mischief." Yet he waited on wearily.

As the moon rose higher it whitened the trail for a long distance. Looking down this he noticed a cluster of dark objects moving round a shoulder of a ridge in the direction of his own home.

The Hawkinses were his family enemies, yet Parson Sneed, his friend, was with them. The boy's sensitive heart revolted from the thought of violence and bloodshed.

He had nearly a mile the start of those crawling objects, and but half a mile to go in order to reach Hawkins' cabin. He scrambled down into the road and hastened onward with a vigor of which he would not have been capable in calmer moments.

Inside the Hawkins' house were Rabe Hawkins, his mother, the young divinity student and two half-grown girls, Rabe's sisters. Bud Prock entered, his thin face drawn and pale, and his usually sad eyes filled with a strange, eager light. Fixing his gaze on Mr. Sneed, he exclaimed:

"They're a-comin' up the road, parson. They've got their guns, too. I wanted to give you warning to-day, but, somehow, I couldn't get the words out."

Rabe seemed to understand at once. He took down his rifle and produced a couple of revolvers from a bureau drawer, one of which he offered to Sneed, who refused it with a shake of the head, as he led Bud to the fire.

A sound of rapidly-approaching footsteps was now audible on both sides of the cabin. Then a door was violently burst open. It rushed John Prock, accompanied by three other men, one of whom was Burge Spillman.

The sight of Hawkins armed and apparently expecting an attack appeared to take them by surprise. Prock noticed Bud at the side of Mr. Sneed.

"I'll remember you for this, Bud, when we get back home," he said, in a fierce, grating tone that indicated volumes to the listener.

He threw up his rifle suddenly, but the young parson placed himself boldly before Rabe, who had also cocked his own weapon.

"Stranger," said Prock, "it's a good plan not to meddle in other people's consarns. But if you're for Hawkins, say the word."

"Father!" exclaimed Bud, bobbing forward and grasping his parent's arm boldly, "before you do harm to that man, take a good look at him. See if you ain't seen him somew here else. Have you fur got the log camp down at Grip's gorge, father?" urged Bud. "Father—you must not—I—I—you—"

"WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH THE KID, ANYWAY?"

"What!" at last Prock exclaimed, staring at Sneed. "It can't be him. Yer seems like you favor him powerful."

"Right you are, Mr. Prock. I am the man who nursed you when you had the smallpox that winter. I should have made myself known to you before, but for the unfortunate state of feeling between you and my cousin Rabe here."

Prock, who had been gulping down his amazement as if a lump were sticking in his throat, turned to his followers excitedly.

"The feller's right," said he. "I owe my life to him, I reckon. He stood by me in camp, when every one else as knowed me run. If he says quit, our job is over for to-night, boys. That's all we got to say."

"Father," pleaded Bud, "shake hands with Mr. Sneed and Rabe."

"Here you are again!" shouted Prock, not sorry to find some object on which to vent his baffled wrath. "Always a-pattin' in your oar!"

He shook his son roughly and pushed him away.

Next morning Bud did not rise as usual to prepare the breakfast after the father had made the fire. Prock called him, but, receiving no reply, went into Bud's room and shook the boy, whose body was cold.

Prock bent down. Bud's eyes were half closed and the pupils set unnaturally. His thin face looked wan and death-like.

"Wake up, Bud. What's the matter with the kid, anyhow?"

All at once it dawned upon him that Bud might be dying. He rushed into the other room and roused Spillman, who had remained there that night.

"Run!" he exclaimed. "Fetch somebody. Tell the neighbors to run over. Hurry! Don't you see Bud's dyin'?"

Spillman left the house at a run. John Prock gathered his son's light figure in his arms and rocked to and fro. A vivid consciousness of his own brutal neglect and Bud's truthfulness and affection had come over his hard nature.

Minutes that seemed like hours passed. Before Spillman came back with Parson Sneed and Rabe Hawkins, whom he had met, and, in his anxiety, had persuaded to accompany him back.

Sneed examined Bud carefully and pronounced the boy seriously though not dangerously ill. Hawkins surveyed his old enemy with gradually softening features.

At last Bud's respirations grew easy and regular. His lips lost their deathlike hue, his skin grew warm, and finally his eyes opened. When he saw Hawkins and his father both bending over him anxiously, he made a feeble movement as if to join their hands.

The two men divining Bud's meaning looked at each other, then Prock suddenly reached forth his hand.

"Let's shake, Rabe," said he. "I've just found out what a son is, by seein' Bud in this here fix. If Bud wants me to be friends with you I'm willin' now. And more'n that I'll get down on my knees to prove it, if necessary."

And thus peace was permanently made.—William Perry Brown, in Boston Globe.

JERSEY AND THE NATION

FAVORITE SONS WHO HAVE BEEN RECOGNIZED BY THE COUNTRY.

The State Has Never Wavered From the Democratic Column But Once, and That Was in the Greeley Campaign.

New Jersey is not of great account territorially in the United States, and her electoral votes, which have varied between seven and nine, but are now ten, have been cast for Democratic candidates so steadily that the political influence of the State has seldom been decisive in National Conventions. From 1852 to 1892 the electoral votes of New Jersey were uniformly cast for the Democratic Presidential candidates with two breaks only. In 1860 the electoral votes of the State were divided, some being cast for the Democratic and some for the Republican candidate, though on the popular vote the State was Democratic. In 1872 there was a large Democratic defection owing to the nomination of Mr. Greeley, and in that year, for the only time in forty years, the Democrats were in a numerical minority.

Though the political importance of the State has not been usually large, New Jersey has not been disregarded in National conventions. The pioneer convention of the Republican party in 1856 nominated a New Jersey man, William L. Dayton, for Vice-President. In 1864 the Democratic convention at Chicago put at the head of the National ticket George B. McClellan, of New Jersey. In 1868 Joel Parker, of Freehold, was the first choice of the true-blue Jersey Democrats in the National convention of the Democracy held in New York city. In 1876, 1880 and 1884 again the first choice of New Jersey, and in the Democratic National convention of that year at St. Louis he received on both ballots taken the solid support of the Cranberry State. In the Democratic National convention of 1880 Gov. Parker was for the third time favored by the Democrats of New Jersey, and in the National convention of 1884 at Chicago the Jersey Democrats had a candidate of their own in the late Leon Abbett.

The Republicans, in 1888, had among the candidates to choose from Wm. Walter Phelps, of Passaic. He received 25 votes for President on the first ballot, and was afterward favored by many Republicans for Vice-President when it became certain that the Republican nomination for that office would come to the East. Mr. Phelps was the most formidable opponent of Mr. Morton, receiving 119 votes, against 93 for W. O. Bradley, of Kentucky, now Governor of that State. Mr. Morton was nominated on the first ballot, the Republican Convention giving more heed to the preference of New York than that of New Jersey, and with good reason, as afterward appeared, the electoral votes of New York being given to the Republican national ticket, while those of New Jersey went to the Democracy. In the National Convention of the Prohibition party, in 1888, a Jerseyman, Clinton B. Fisk, was put at the head of the national ticket, and he polled 7,600 votes in his own State. In the politi al contest of 1892 New Jersey was not represented in either of the party Conventions. This year an effort is being made to secure for a prominent Jersey Republican, Garret A. Hobart, the Vice-Presidential nomination on the Republican ticket, and the recent Trenton Convention instructed the Jersey delegates to give him a vigorous and undivided support.

No Democratic Jerseyman has yet appeared in the political horizon, and in fact no Democratic Jerseyman has been prominent in a national Democratic Convention since Cleveland's name was first presented. Cleveland is a native of Caldwell, N. J.

CALLED THE CHURCH A NUISANCE.

A Hot Discussion That Took Place in an Episcopal Convention.

At the second day's meeting of the Episcopal convention, held at Elizabeth Thursday, an amendment was proposed to one of the canons to the effect that hereafter the Bishop and standing committees should have no power to permit the erection of a church building within a quarter of a mile of any existing church. This proposal provoked a long and vehement debate. It was recognized on all sides that the object of attack was the Church of the Redeemer of North Plainfield. This was openly acknowledged by some of the delegates from the Church of the Holy Cross. B. R. Western and C. L. Murphy addressed the convention and the latter closed by saying that "the Church of the Redeemer was a nuisance." The convention, however, by an overwhelming majority, tabled the same, thereby laying it over for one year.

MR. DRAKE'S TALK OF A BOOM.

The Real Estate Man Says That Mountain Park Will Attract Many.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—During the past twenty-five years how often has it been said the time would come some day, when capitalists would open up and develop the Watchung mountains, north of Plainfield, and offer desirable plots for building purposes for summer residence or otherwise. In these few lines I would like to give your many readers some impressions I have gathered from the citizens of Plainfield and particularly the outside world in regard to this enterprise of the Mountain Park Land Company. I have been engaged in a number of successful real estate enterprises and I must say this Mountain Park movement will beat them all. I am very much gratified to hear so many business men in New York say they intend to locate at Mountain Park, as it offers them so many advantages over other summer resorts, on account of its accessibility to New York, where they can attend to business during the day and be with their families on the mountain at night and where they can have the advantages of good drives, good stores for shopping and many other natural vantages not offered in the Catskills or other summer resorts. It is also very encouraging to the Mountain Park Company to know the citizens and particularly the business men of Plainfield have endorsed the movement and wished it God speed. This movement of the Mountain Park Company has already gone beyond the lines of Union County and today its merits as a summer residence are being discussed in Philadelphia, Boston, St. Louis and Chicago. The property owners and business men of Plainfield do not as yet realize what this enterprise will do for Plainfield. It will advertise this thriving city, it will attract capitalists and new comers to it. In time thousands will be attracted to view it and the business men of Plainfield will reap great benefit and profit from this new venture. With the continued well-wishes of the citizens of Plainfield, the Mountain Park Company will leave no stone unturned to make their work a success so their name and a benefit to others.

Yours Truly,
Silas D. Drake.

A BIG REAL ESTATE ENTERPRISE.

The New Orange Industrial Association Hoping to Establish a City.

For several months interest and curiosity have been excited in Essex and Union counties by the operations of a real estate company which has had men at work on a tract of land about three miles to the south and west of Newark and between South Orange, Elizabeth, Roselle and the Rahway river. The company's officers and employes have preserved an air of mystery in regard to the enterprise that is on foot. They have now disclosed their plan. The organization, which is called the New Orange Industrial Association, hopes to establish a new city. The originator of the dea is C. W. Manahan, Jr., who is said to have successfully carried out other real estate enterprises.

The land secured is about three and one-half miles square. The proposed city is to be called New Orange, the name originally given to the city of New York in 1673. Efforts are to be made to attract manufacturers to the place, and over 100 acres has been reserved for industrial purposes. The association claims to have already secured many industrial establishments. A belt line of railroad will, it is said, go by the doors of the factories, and will connect with the Central Railroad of New Jersey, Lehigh Valley, and Delaware, Lackawanna and Western roads. Besides, electric railroads will be built.

In the centre of the property is Wewanna Lake, which when work on it is completed will be about a mile long and from one hundred yards to half a mile wide. It winds in and out among a series of tree-covered hills. At the western extremity of the lake a casino will be constructed.

Artist Hunt a Relative of Mrs. Frost.

Alfred William Hunt, the noted artist of London, whose death was mentioned in the Daily Press last Monday, was the uncle of Mrs. George H. Frost, Watchung avenue. He spent two weeks here as the guest of Councilman George H. Frost in 1893, he having been appointed one of the judges in the British Art Section at the World's Fair at Chicago. His wife was a novelist of considerable note and his daughter, Violet Hunt, is the authoress of two recent novels which have had quite a run. He was a great friend of Ruskin, who was godfather to Violet Hunt.

YOUNG AMERICA WAS IN EVIDENCE AT ALL POINTS.

For Once in His Life He Was Able to Get His Parents to Recognize Its Solicitations—Best Performance Ever Seen Here

Peanut shucks, aching sides from a too liberal indulgence in a red decoction called lemonade, and a remorseful mind of those who may have been "touched," is all there is left of the circus. What was Plainfield's pleasure Wednesday is the joy of the Newark people today.

It was a great day for Johnnie and for Johnnie's popper, mommer and sisters. But Johnnie, albeit a fine specimen of young America, was prima facie evidence that the circus is no ordinary affair. Johnnie was the first one awake yesterday morning, and the first one to be on the show ground. A city of white tents seemed to arise as if by magic, where an hour before a brindle bovine had been placidly chewing her cud. The clock like regularity and system with which the circus paraphernalia was put in position to carry out the "greatest show on earth" was a revelation to Johnnie. He implored every official of the circus who seemed to have any power to give him a job to earn his way into the big tent in the afternoon. Such boys as were fortunate enough to enjoy the favor of "carrying water for the elephants" or some other like duty, were the envy of all other youngsters. Johnnie was enthusiastic and when he followed the circus parade down town, and was made for his midday meal he was full of talk. For once in his life his mother listened to his prattle. She had seen the circus parade and that was all the argument needed. Shortly after 1o'clock found the whole family going towards the show grounds. And they saw the best circus ever presented in this city.

The acrobatic and aerial acts were startling innovations in daring feats, and the equestrian performances were marvels of horse intelligence and training. The act in which John O'Brien uses fifty thoroughbred horses was the best spectacle of its kind ever presented for the amusement of the public. A clever innovation were women clowns and ring mistresses, though it cannot be said that they are a great success. The performance all way through was free from any act or word that might offend the most fastidious.

Before the performances, many of the crowd visited the menagerie tent. The natives of India attracted especial attention. The little dwarf there seemed quite to enjoy his position. Early in the evening a well-known man was leaning over the rope watching the Indian dancers on the platform. The dwarf walked up to him but the man did not notice him.

"Hello," grunted the dwarf as he brought his hand down on the man's back with a resounding slap. The Plainfielder jumped as if he had been struck by the native of India proceeded to explain what a great bargain it was to obtain his picture for five cents.

One new sight was the great number of cyclists that appeared for both afternoon and evening performances. Some left their wheels while many brought them right into the tent. The circus attracted crowds from far and near and there were many strange people that visited the city. One old fashioned carryall, drawn by a rawboned horse, contained a remarkable load. The woman of the party, evidently of the "new" variety, although she did come from the country, was in command. Two small children were seated beside her while an old woman and two more children occupied the rear seat while in the bottom, encased in a clothes basket, lay a little baby. This strange equipage halted on Front street to view the parade. The smell of the wild beasts excited the horse so that the commander of the expedition climbed out on the shafts and unharnessed the horse and a colored man led it away. They saw the parade undisturbed.

A Plainfield man named Stewart, while going to the circus yesterday afternoon, got into a crowd of people, with the result of having his pocket picked of $30. It was a costly trip, but he could get no satisfaction and was obliged to stand the loss. He will, no doubt, always remember the circus.

Lower Freight Rates.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey has made a general reduction of freight rates all along the road from New York. The rates per hundred to Plainfield are now as follows: First class, 14 cents; second class, 12 cents; third class, 10 cents; fourth class, 8 cents; fifth class, 7 cents; sixth class, 6 cents. The new rate will take effect tomorrow, and will mean a great saving for the local merchants who have big shipments of goods. It is a reduction of 3 cents a hundred pounds.

An Engagement Announced.

Plainfield people will be surprised to learn of the engagement of H. P. Talmage, the veteran banker whose handsome residence overlooks this city from Netherwood Heights, and Miss Helen White, the sister of Mrs. H. P. Talmage, Jr.

WANTS RECOMPENSE FOR DAMAGES.

John W. James Suing the Bound Brook Electric Light Company.

The case of John W. James, of Plainfield, against the Bound Brook Electric Light and Power Company, for damages came up in Justice Mattison's court Friday morning. The plaintiff was represented by Lawyer W. S. Angleman and the defendant by Lawyer Suydam. It appears that on the night of November 12th, 1895, a horse and wagon belonging to Mr. James collided with an electric light wire at Bound Brook and the wagon was completely wrecked. The wire through which the horse and wagon was driven by Mr. James' boy, it is claimed, is not a public one and has never been accepted by the borough. It is located on the Pierce property and sometime ago poles were erected there and wires strung to furnish light for Mr. Pierce's house. The poles were left standing while the wires were removed. Later Mr. Pierce's superintendent gave the company the privilege of stringing wires to their factory. The wires were run from Main street over the railroad track to the factory. On the night in question the wires were not able to finish the wiring and when they stopped work they fastened the wire slanting around the pole standing in the street in question. At the time it was very dark and when an attempt was made to drive to the home of Constable York, who lives at the head of the unaccepted street, the buggy caught in the wire with the result told above. Hence the suit for damages. The plaintiff claimed carelessness, while the defendants held that the plaintiff had no right to drive through the lane, which was a private driveway. A map and photograph of the place was offered in evidence. The plaintiff also claimed that one wire struck the horse, but this is disputed. In several instances both sides agreed. The vital question appears to be whether the company is responsible for the damage. The case was argued for three hours, after which Justice Mattison reserved his decision until Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

WATER WAS THE THEME.

A LIVELY DISCUSSION IN THE BOROUGH COUNCIL LAST NIGHT.

An Attempt Made to Compel the Street Railway to Sprinkle Somerset Street for the Privilege of Changing Their Guage.

If "temperance" had been the chief topic for discussion at the adjourned meeting of the Borough Council last Friday, the words of the Councilmen would have passed into history as advocating, in the strongest sense, that great essential commodity, "cold water," in a way that would have scared the natives who enjoy a glass of something else occasionally. It is safe to say that never before in the history of the borough has water received such consideration. It has always been conceded that pure water was necessary, but the manner in which some of the Councilmen talked last evening the impression was given that it was absolutely so. The discussion arose over the petition of the street railway company asking for the priviledge of narrowing the guage of the tracks in the borough. A few days ago the street committee met the officials of the railroad in regard to the matter and practically it was settled, that is until last night, when Mr. Woolston presented the report of the street committee through Borough Counsel Reed. The report recommended that the petition of the company be granted, that fourteen days be allowed them to make the change, that the street be replaced in its former condition, that the Council at any time have the priviledge of changing and repairing the pavement in the roadway if it was deemed necessary, and that the company pay one-third of the cost of same which is to be done to the satisfaction of the Council, and that while the tracks are being changed the Street Commissioner is to be paid by the company for his time while overseeing the work, also that a bond for $5,000 is to be filed for the faithful performance of the same.

Mr. Woolston then offered a resolution that the committee's report be received, adopted and that the Clerk be authorized to execute the necessary papers toward carrying out the contract.

At this point the discussion about water began. Mr. McLaughlin has always advocated the use of water, but no one supposed that he would actually fight for it, but such was the case. He arose to his feet and stated that a number of the residents on Somerset street had called on him and asked him to secure, if possible, the sprinkling of Somerset street, from one end of the trolley line to the other in the borough, by the railroad company. He thought that the citizens should be considered, and he made a motion which was seconded by Mr. Lounsbury, that the railroad company sprinkle Somerset street from the borough line to the end of their tracks, from April 1st to October 1st.

Mr. Woolston said that at the committee meeting, Mr. Riker for the company had explained the matter, and said that they could not establish the precedent of watering the streets and that they could not go to that expense. Mr. Woolston, continuing, said that the committee held out very strong, but it was learned that it was inconsistent to ask it. The trolley was a benefit to the residents. Every street is annoyed by dust and few pay for sprinkling. The people on Somerset street were troubled no more than those living on other streets.

Mr. McLaughlin said that it was the duty of the Councilmen to look out for the borough's interest, and he thought the company would sprinkle if the clause was inserted. The taxpayers should be considered.

Mr. Lounsbury stated that there was one thing to be considered and that is, the trolley raises and scatters more dust than any other thing on wheels on account of it being so close to the ground. The necessity of sprinkling was apparent through the admission by the company as stated by Mr. Woolston. Just at present the borough is to be considered. It is well enough for Mr. Riker to say the Company can't sprinkle, but if we say they can't change their guage they would soon come to it.

Mr. Valiant considered the trolley a convenience and it was a question as to whether changing the guage was not a greater convenience than the reverse. He thought there was a possibility that the company would not water the streets, then there would be a howl from the very people who now want the water.

Mr. McLaughlin thought that the company was obliged to change their tracks and when the Council asked a favor they ought to grant it.

It was stated that Mr. French charged twenty-five cents for sprinkling a fifty feet front, whereupon Mr. Woolston stated that most of the residents along the street sprinkle and would continue to do so. There was no reason why the company should water Somerset street and not other borough streets.

At this stage of the discussion the Mayor took a hand and Mr. Lounsbury took the chair. He said that he was present at the recent conference of the street committee and the officials of the street railway. The council had talked over the subject and outlined various concessions. As for himself he was opposed to the trolley. The steam railroad has to buy every foot of land they use, while the trolley people come along and ask for our well macadamized streets, and are not willing to give anything. The council is sworn to protect their constituents interests, but what are they confronted with? The people compel the granting of franchises. Some real estate agent has a piece of ground in the suburbs he wants to make some money on, and then he says that he wants the trolley to boom up that section. Thus there is a pulling and hauling between the people and their guvering body. "I saw that situation when the franchise was granted for the borough line," said he. Somerset street is only thirty feet wide, and they took the back bone of the borough. The people said they had to pay 50 cents for carriages and they wanted the street railway because it was cheaper. The trolley people knew the condition of affairs. If the people had kept quiet the council would have extracted good terms. "We are handicapped," said the mayor, "and I don't perform a single act in my official capacity wherein I have not this interest of the people at heart, no matter what my friends say. The trolley company has been operating a good road. They now ask us for the priviledge of narrowing the tracks. To be sure, they have not kept their contract, so far as keeping their portion of the street in repair is concerned, but now they agree to pay one-third of this expense and let us do the work to our own satisfaction. The compny occupy about nine feet of the roadway. We stuck out for the water, but Mr. Riker told us that most of the people from the brook to the Hillman bridge watered the street. The street would have to be watered if the track was not there. The question now is, do we want the tracks left as they are, or do we want them changed and have the priviledge of riding continously all over the city? Which will benefit us the most?"

Mr. Peck followed by saying that if there was any way of securing the water he was in favor of it, but if not, he was in favor of signing the contract just the same.

Counsel Charles A. Reed was given permission to speak as a taxpayer, and stated that he used to live on Somerset street before the tracks were laid, and that he with others had to pay to have the street sprinkled. The people wanted the trolly, and it built the borough up and has benefitted the residents living along the line.

He did not think, however, that the borough should demand more benefits from the company than the residents along the line receive. He thought the company should be compelled to water in front of his house, if they were going to water Somerset street. Everybody in the borough was to be considered, as the railroad benefits all.

The Mayor then called for a vote on the amendment as offered by Mr. McLaughlin and the amendment was lost. Messrs. McLaughlin and Lounsbury supported it. Messrs. Valiant, Peck and Woolston voted against it. The original motion then came up for discussion, and Mr. Lounsbury said that if the company was going to give the borough adequate compensation, he would not object. "When this matter is settled, it is final," said he. "The Watchung avenue opening is one of the strongest arguments. The borough will have to pay between $30,000 and $35,000 to open that street, simply because the trolley road runs through Somerset street, which is the main outlet and inlet. The opportunity is now offered to get something. We give them the priviledge for one third, and that makes it final. I don't think we get all we should. I am a patron of the road and ride probably more than other member." Mr. Valiant said that it is not obligatory on the company to change the guage and they might illude them. Mr. Woolston in speaking for the last time asked the question "What are we giving the company? If we were giving them a revenue so that they could pay a dividend, it would be different."

Mr. McLaughlin concluded by saying that Mr. Riker was interested in some real estate in the borough and would want further consideration for the company and he ought to be willing to grant the request. He moved the matter be tabled for one week. His motion was lost. The original motion was then presented and carried. Messrs. Valiant, Peck and Woolston voting in favor and Messrs. Lounsbury and McLoughlin against it.

The other business considered by the Council, was the acceptance of an invitation from the G. A. R., to attend the Memorial Day exercises in Music Hall, and the confirmation of W. B. Bennett, of Engine Company No. 1, also of the following officers of the company recently elected: Foreman, J. D. Anderson; first assistant, B. F. Conover; second assistant, H. G. Adams; secretary, J. J. Stahl; financial secretary, W. T. Newman; first assistant, Louis Fierling; second assistant, W. V. Krewson; stoker, F. M. Lunger. On motion of Mr. McLaughlin, the Council the adjourned to meet Friday evening, May 16th.

JAPAN'S NEED.

A Returned Missionary Tells of the Religious Condition in That Country.

The prayer meeting of the Crescent Avenue church Christian Endeavor Society Thursday was one of great interest and instruction. The meeting was led by Miss Hesta Marsh who, after opening the meeting, introduced the speaker, George P. Pierson. Mr. Pierson is a returned missionary and intends to take up his work in the fall in the field of Japan. The Christian Endeavor Society of the Crescent Avenue church have pledged themselves to support Mr. Pierson. In the course of Mr. Pierson's address he spoke as follows:

"Let me thank you all for the assurance which I have received that my support is to be looked after by you. It gives me great pleasure to speak to my best friends and the words which I would ask your attention to are those which are found in the latter part of the ninth chapter of Matthew. 'But when He saw the multitudes, He was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd.' Then saith He unto His disciples, the harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few; Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that He will send forth laborers into the harvest.' This passage is a direct and exact discription of the people of Japan today. They are sheep which have wandered out upon the mountains; they are as sheep having no shepherd. It is a faithful picture of Japan and of the other nations; they are lost sheep. They have no shepherd, no leader, no Saviour, no Christ. They are a united people, in language, laws, in devotion to their emperor, but sad to relate they are not a religion.

"The students of the nation are broad minded men and very easily dealt with. They rear English literature and have learned many of the ways of the west. They are beginning to see the folly of old beliefs and are searching for something better; they are looking for Christ and we should be ready to take Him to them. That cry is for more laborers, more Christian workers not necessarily foreign missionaries, although there is great need of more of such, but more workers at home. The fields are white to harvest but the laborers are few."

A Pretty Wedding.

A pretty wedding was celebrated at St. Mary's church by Rev. Father Murphy on Wednesday when Thomas O'Leary was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Hickey, both of this city. Charles O'Leary, of New York, was best man and Miss Johanna Hayes was bridemaid. The bride was neatly attired in a suit of cream-colored nun's veiling, trimmed with white satin and pearls. The bridemaid wore a steel-colored dress, trimmed with cut-steel and spangles. The bride carried a bouquet of white roses and the bridemaid a bouquet of pink roses. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mrs. McCarthy on Lee place, a sister of the bride. The presents were valuable and numerous.

Who Pays For It?

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I would like to ask if it's true that our policemen on duty at night are furnished a midnight supper at the expense of this expense of this city? I am told such a supper is furnished them each night. If so, who pays the cost? Are our taxes not high enough, without this silly and unheard of expense? Some of these days the citizens and taxpayers of this city will wake up to the fact that we are under a very costly administration, and may vote something beside a "straight Republican ticket." Taxpayer.

Not Encouraging.

The Netherwood extension of the street railway system was actually opened last Monday evening about 6 o'clock by a trial trip of car No. 6 over all the road. This extension rivets the trolley chain between Plainfield and Netherwood. Will the line ever be extended to Elizabeth? Nit. Not until somebody dies.—New Jersey Contractor.

TO HIM WHO WAITS.

To him who waits, amid the world's applause,
His share of justice, tolling day by day.
All things will come now dim and far away,
To him who waits.

To him who waits beyond the darkness drear,
The morning cometh with refulgent light;
Bringing sustenance of a day more bright,
To him who waits.

To him who waits, though tears may often fall
And knees be bowed in sorrow and in prayer;
All grief will end and everything be fair
To him who waits.

To him who waits and reaches out his hands
To aid a toiler up life's beating crags,
Successe will come from every ill that flags
To him who waits.

To him who waits and struggles not in vain,
To overcome the evils that abound
Within his breast, sweet will the victory sound
To him who waits.

To him who waits there comes a wily throng,
Who sneer and scoff and look with baleful eyes,
But what of them, they are but gnats and flies,
To him who waits.

To him who waits there cannot be recompense
For useful work, whatever may betide,
A compensation reaching far and wide,
To him who waits.

To him who waits, the stars are always friends,
The restless ocean and the azure sky,
All things in nature speak and prophesy,
To him who waits.

To him who waits in true love will some day come,
And lay an offering at his blameless shrine,
Life will be love, and love will be divine,
To him who waits.

To him who waits the world will some day cheer
And sing his praise; fame's mysterious gate a
Will open for him; Heaven seems more near,
To him who waits.

A WESTERN WEDDING.

Colorado Charlie and Sophia Blossom Made Man and Wife.

A Social Event in a New Mexican Town—One Break in the Ceremony—One Shot from the Bridegroom Stimulated the Interruption.

WENT into the little New Mexican village just as dusk was deepening into night. As the stage with its jaded team rolled into the outskirts of the place I at once noticed something unusual was going on. Cowboys got on to gayly caparisoned broncos, galloping gayly to the merry jingling of the huge spurs on their riders' heels. Men and women on foot, evidently of the "society" element of the town, walked alongside the road, all going in the same direction.

Presently we passed the little adobe church, which was brilliantly lighted, and, as I could see through the small windows, profusely, if not artistically, decorated with evergreens and clean white cloth inside.

"What's up?" I ventured to ask the driver, who had not spoken a word for the last twenty-seven miles.

"Weddin'," he replied, laconically, and gave the horses a vicious cut with the whip which started them into a trot.

I said no more and in a few moments we drew up at the door of the "hotel," another low, rambling adobe, whose front rose squarely up from the street. The landlord was at the door, and welcomed me with the genial "good evening, sir." I went into the house and, laying aside my wraps and seeing my grip safely set behind the little office counter and a cigar stand, was led by the affable host to the rear of the house, where I found water, soap and towel. After washing the inevitable desert grit out of my eyes, ears and nostrils and from my face and hands, I walked out to supper, which was announced at that juncture.

The meal was clean and well prepared by the landlord's own wife, who did her own cooking, and I was in the proper condition to enjoy it, which I proceeded to do.

"You are goin' to the weddin', I s'pose," remarked my hostess as she poured my second cup of coffee.

"I don't know," I said, "who is to be married?"

"Colorado Charlie's the man and Sophy Blossom, a Texas gal, is the woman," she said. "They're the spryest couple in this part o' New Mexico, an' everybody knows 'em. He's killed two men an' a sheriff an' come clear afore a jury 'cause they knowed 'im, and she's run off with 'im an' the new preacher is to splice 'em."

"They must be an interesting couple," I remarked. "I think I shall go."

Having finished supper I walked into the front room, paid fifteen cents for a five-cent cigar, lit it and strolled up the street. When I reached the church it was filled with boys, Mexicans, fine people and coarse people, large and small, all busy talking and guying each other, smoking and waiting for "the fun to begin."

Presently there was a sound of horses' feet at the door, a half a minute of silence, then two big burly fellows in Mexican sombreros, whom I afterwards learned were the ushers, elbowed their way in by main force, cleared a passage from the door to the altar, behind which the dapper young preacher, who had entered from the rear, took his place. The groom could be seen peeping in at the back door anxiously.

Every head was turned toward the front door as the tramp of the bridal party was heard entering. First came the ushers, who had returned to the door after clearing the aisle. Their spurs rattled on the rough floor as the stalwart fellows stalked in stately manner through the room, and after they were past my station I noticed the big bump under the coat of each made up the indispensable six-shooter. Then came the groom's attendants, big fine-looking fellows with long hair and fierce moustaches, waxed for the occasion. But on the hips were big guns. The groom was without them, but made up the difference with a "laundered" shirt and standing collar. Both carried "guns" of regulation size.

The attendants followed, each chewing her gum vigorously and looking her sweetest, one in pink and the other in white, with bouquets of wild flowers in their hands. The bride followed alone, looking really superb—her complexion fair, her hair thick, long and brown, dark, fiery eyes and small, firm mouth. She walked with the stately confidence of a western woman born and bred in an atmosphere of independence, where everyone looks out for himself or herself, as the case may be.

The groom meanwhile entered and met the bride at the altar, where he saluted her with a kiss, vigorously applied to her lips.

"Colorado Charlie" was not so large a man as either of his attendants, but was a muscular and firm built fellow, with a cool gray eye, cold, thin lips, and jet black short hair. He was not a vicious-looking man, but certainly inspired the beholder at first in disguise for courage and resolution. There was withal something about him to compel admiration.

The minister, who was shaking from head to foot, commanded the contracting parties to join hands, which they did.

Turning to the audience he said: "If there be any present who would show that the man and woman be joined in holy matrimony, let him now speak, or forever after hold his peace."

The groom and attendants pulled their six-shooters.

The minister almost fainted. The bride looked at him curiously for a moment, then burst into a hearty laugh.

"The tenderfoot's skeered," she said.

AT THIS MOMENT THERE WAS A FLASH.

"For God's sake, gentlemen, put up your weapons," he pleaded.

"Oh, it's all right," said the groom, assuringly. "We just wanted to get a glimpse of the galoot that was goin' to forbid this perseedin' to perseed."

"You bet we did, parson," remarked the principal attendant, who stood beside him.

"Sophia Blossom," began the minister, solemnly, "do you take this man whom you hold by the hand to be your lawfully wedded husband—"

"Ee-yaw, yaw-yaw!" broke in the voice of the omnipresent burro, as he put his head in at a broken window and failed to reach the dried grasses on the floor of a woman sitting inside and unconscious of his presence. The woman started at the warm breath on the back of her neck and another woman in the next row turned and leaned back to see what was the row. At this moment there was a flash, a roar like a cannon, a shower of feathers in the air, suddenly silence and the burro sank back out of the window in a recess. The feathers came from the dried body of a bird on the hat of the woman in the front seat, who came in range just as the saber pulled the trigger.

After a little general "joshing" about the good shot and the accident to the hat, for which the groom promised to pay, the ceremony went on without further accident or incident worthy of note to its completion. The crowd gathered round the happy pair and wished them the usual long life, happiness and prosperity, and the people dispersed.

"Colorado Charlie" and his bride came to the hotel to spend the night before going to his ranch, a thirty-five mile horseback ride away, and I was fortunate enough to receive an introduction and became pretty well acquainted with both, and was agreeably surprised to find how much real refinement is sometimes hidden under the rough and unconventional exterior of the cowboy of the plains and the woman who shares his rough lot with him.—Chicago Journal.

—Moore was a close student of oriental books of travel. He was thus enabled to imitate so closely the style of eastern thought and to so adapt himself to the peculiarities of eastern imagery that his oriental tales read as though written by a Persian or Hindoo. Even during his own lifetime lines of "Lalla Rookh" were sung by the common people in the cities of Persia and India.

QUEEN OF DRUNKARDS.

The Remarkable Criminal Record of Jane Cakebread.

London's Most Notorious Woman Topper Adjudged a Lunatic—Convicted in Open Court Nearly Three Hundred Times.

It looks as if the last words have now been said on Jane Cakebread. For nearly a generation past the efforts of the police "lady reformer" have been expended upon this unconquerable and picturesque virago and drunkard in vain. Time after time she has scouted all attempts to reform her, and plainly and in profane language assured those who have taken an interest in her that all she wanted was to be left alone and given free entrance to the public houses.

The last famous reformer to plead with her and try to reclaim her, says the New York Journal, was Lady Henry Somerset. For a time it looked as if this noted philanthropist might succeed where all else failed. But now Lady Henry has given up the battle in disgust, Jane Cakebread having tossed up her nose and declined to stay in the comfortable home that was provided for her because, as this awful woman put it, the inmates were not on her level.

The latest news that has come over from London tells of her final removal from the London "pubs," which she has haunted for the best part of 40 years. The other day she was examined as to her sanity, and the doctor of Holloway jail certified that the woman was not responsible for her actions. So they took her to an asylum.

As remarkable as anything in her whole career was the court scene. Age and the pilling up of crimes have not been able to stale Jane Cakebread's unique pleadings and ravings before the bar of justice. She struggled and shouted and declaimed against the whole English judicial system. She declared that, being a lady, she had a full and perfect right to get drunk and disorderly as often as she chose. She went on to say that she wanted "that $35,000" she was entitled to, and she wanted it "right off." Being comparatively sober, after having been shut up in Holloway, she declared tearfully that she was in possession of her "proper senses," and yelled that sending her to an asylum was a high-handed outrage.

Jane Cakebread holds the woman's record in the annals of English crime, and she is proud of it. Though never a felon, she has actually been convicted 280 times, mostly on charges of "drunk and disorderly." The English police records have never known of any woman so utterly irreclaimable. Not a feminine trait seems to be left in this haggard and bestial old woman.

The only weapon in which she has not drunk herself to death long before this. For probably the best part of 65 years she has been day and night soaking her system with alcohol. Her favorite drink has been gin, though she has not disdained any other beverage, her capacity for beer being abnormal when nothing stronger was offered.

She began to drink at five years of age. Her parents were criminal and train-soaked. Petty larceny is the most she has ever attempted, and in the social sense she was never a professional woman of the town. Her favorite method of going to the police station was strapped in a hand-barrow and screeching at the top of her voice.

Curious Natural Barometer.

One of the most curious of the many natural barometers consists of a half-pint glass half full of water, a piece of muslin and a leech. The leech must be put in the water and the muslin tied over the top of the glass so that the creature cannot get out again. When fine weather is to be the order of the day the leech will remain at the bottom of the water, coiled up in spiral shape, perfectly motionless. If rain is to be expected it will creep to the top of the glass and remain there until there is a likelihood of more settled weather. If there is to be a storm of wind it squirms about in the water with violence. For some days before the thunder it possesses ally moves its body in a convulsive fashion. In frosty weather it behaves in the same manner as in fine weather, and it foretells snow in the same manner that it does rain.

Homicides in United Italy.

"Every one hours a homicide is committed anywhere in United Italy." A startling way in which Baron Garofalo puts the fact that there 4,000 homicides a year in his country, ten times as many as in France, and 35 times as many as in Denmark.

Shall Women Propose.

The important question of "Shall Women Propose?" has been decided. The Bachelor Girls' club of Paw Paw, Mich., debated it last week, and unanimously decided that she shall.

Correct Physical Proportions.

Some gleaners of human family statistics say that a man or woman of correct proportions is six times as high as the right foot is long.

AROUND THE BASES.

Leo Smith and Ed Daley, two ex-Crescents, are playing on the Newarks, the former shortstop, and the latter third base.

The Atlantic League games are attracting a good deal of attention. The Metropolitans are in the lead, with Paterson and Newark close behind.

A number of the candidates for the Y. M. C. A. baseball team practiced at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last evening for the opening game on Saturday.

The Cranford baseball grounds are being put in condition for use this summer. The roof of the grand stand, which was blown off, is being replaced.

George Leidy, formerly of Plainfield, is playing left field for the Reading, Pa., Club of the Pennsylvania State League. He leads the club in batting.

It is hoped that a good crowd will turn out at the opening Y. M. C. A. game next Saturday. The Cranfords will be their opponents, and a good game is looked for.

Princeton College is represented more strongly on the diamond this year than it has been for several years past, and should have no trouble in defeating their old rival, Yale.

Billy Keeler is playing a snappy game for the Baltimores this year and promises to outdo his 1895 record. He manages to get in his share of hits every game, and has a clean fielding record. He is one of the most earnest players in the National League.

The Plainfield Athletic Club baseball team has been organized for the season and will play out-of-town games. They will open the season at Dunellen on Decoration Day with two games, with the Dunellen A. C. Manager Swaim has arranged games with Cranford, Westfield, Elizabeth, Dover, Washington and several other strong clubs. The club will have grey uniforms with black trimmings.

The Phillies are playing pennant ball just now, and if they do not commence on their annual mid-summer toboggan slide, The Press is under the impression they will land in first place. They are making a mistake in keeping Tuck Turner on the bench, and Sullivan in the field. Turner is his superior in batting and equal in fielding. They should give him a chance to play or release him to some other club. Cincinnati is anxious for him.

THEATRICAL.

The new summer scale of prices at Proctor's Pleasure Palace, New York, includes a twenty-five cent admission ticket that takes one to every part of the colossal amusement bazaar. Its immensity and high quality, the entertainments are kept up to a fixed standard. There is now a vaudeville introducing many popular and high-salaried performers, and within the next three weeks the new Garden of Palms and Roof Garden will add features in accord with the tastes of the summer amusement seeking throngs. John Kernell returns with his droll budget of Celtic songs and witticisms. Bonnie Thornton counts that week lost that does not enable her to sing two or three new songs. There is an indescribable something about this curious little woman that puts any audience in sympathy with her. Three added comedy teams that never fail to inspire merriment are Crimmins and Gore in their absurd "Coming Through the Rye;" the Two American Macs, Irish knockabouts; and Brown and Harrison, an original comedy duo. The favorite Russell Brothers remain, as the "Irish Servant Girls. Gymnastic features of potent interest are Virginia Aragon, the beautiful and fearless queen of the lofty wire, and the Marlo Dunham Trio upon the horizontal bars. Among the others are De Camo, comedy juggler; Gertrude Harrington, banjoist and singer; Carrie Fredericks, soubrette, and Theodore, ventriloquist.

Funeral of Mrs. Eakins.

The funeral of Mrs. William J. Eakins took place at 3 o'clock this afternoon from her late residence, 345 Manson place. The services were conducted by Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, pastor of the Monroe Avenue chapel. He was assisted by James McGee. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. The pall bearers were William Coakley, Oliver Pierson, William Ashwood and F. Stewart. The interment was in Evergreen Cemetery. A husband, a son and two daughters survive her, the latter two residing out of town.

Divorce For Mrs. Andrie.

A divorce was granted on Monday by Vice-Chancellor Emory to Elsie Andrie from Wiley Andrie. The couple lived in this city, and two years ago Andrie deserted his wife. Mrs. Andrie lives on West Front street, but the whereabouts of Andrie are not known.

Rudyard Kipling going to leave the country. And all because of a little scrap. As the schoolboys say, what a cowyard!

THE MERCANTILE MARINE.

Mahlon Vail Makes a Few Interesting Observations Thereon.

Forty years ago our mercantile marine was the pride of the nation. Great Britain in the amount of tonnage led the world, but this country was a good second, and our "Clipper Ships," of which there was not a few were admitted by all both at home and abroad to be the fastest and finest on the ocean; and they commanded the best freights the world over—even the English merchants frequently giving them the preference to their own for carrying valuable cargoes. Not only were the vessels considered superior, but they were known to be, as a rule, better officered and manned. As stated above, our commercial tonnage was at that time second on the list; but where is it today? I am not sure whether classed as sixth or seventh. Yet our country during this period has been prosperous and growing rapidly and our exports have greatly increased, while our ocean tonnage has been dwindling away.

The Protectionists will say, "our shipping was destroyed by the rebels during the war," and to a certain extent they are right, but England paid the damage, say $15,000,000, and there has certainly been time to replace all that was lost five times over. We must look for some other cause to account for this gradual decline of the last thirty years. In 1859 seventy per cent of our exports was carried by American vessels. In 1867 this was reduced to forty per cent. In 1880 to seventeen and six-tenths per cent. In 1895 to eight and two-tenths per cent. This decline continues but cannot get much lower.

Within a few days I have seen a report of the shipments of wheat at Portland, Oregon, from September, 1895, to March, 1896, loading in all sixty vessels for foreign ports, over forty of which were under the British flag; the remainder of various nationalities, and in the entire fleet but two American vessels.

The aggregate freight amounted to over $1,300,000, or an average of nearly $22,000.

It is easy to account for the decline of the old vessels, they are worn out or lost, and it is also well understood, if not generally admitted, why they have not been replaced.

It requires a large amount of material to build, rig and equip a moderate sized vessel, and everything used for this purpose has been and still is heavily taxed. Steel and iron from the smallest brad to the chains and anchor, copper fastenings and sheathings, cordage and canvas of all descriptions, whilst timber and lumber are only partially excepted.

These duties are imposed; not because it is necessary to import all this material, for, as a rule, that is not the case, but to protect the manufacturers at home and enable them to form trusts or combinations and extort higher prices than they could obtain with any fair competition. The result is that the builders of the former clipper ships are out of business, or are engaged in other occupations, and as for steel vessels, with present duties, they are not to be thought of, excepting for the Government, where cost is not taken into the account.

Great Britain is growing rich by her foreign commerce, while ours is being protected out of existence, and it is now proposed to nurse it back to life by subsidies.

Our farmers and planters who furnish the majority of the exports get very little for their grain and cotton when they sell at freight and other charges under the European markets; but we propose to pay or help pay a subsidy also, I think they will be apt to "see the darkey in the woodpile."

In order to rebuild our shipping we must have cheaper material, for which our own resources are ample. We could furnish all that is required for a first-class ship, at less cost than if imported free of any and all duties, were it not for trusts and combinations, and the only way to break them up is by free foreign competition—that would do more in months than the "Sherman Law" has done in years or ever will do. After we re-build our ocean shipping, where shall we find profitable employment for it? It is true we have plenty of outward bound freight, but under present duties, little to come home, and as a rule vessels cannot make money by carrying stone ballast, any more than a nation can be eminently prosperous on a one-sided commerce. China, for example, has been trying it for centuries and we see the result.

In the other direction take Great Britain as an object lesson for the past fifty years. What other European country has made half the advance in the same time, not only in a commercial way, but in the improvement and general condition of the poorer classes?

England's foreign commerce has more than doubled, while her imports over exports are nearly equal to our entire imports, viz: over six hundred million dollars per annum, thus showing the profits of her trade together with the earnings of her shipping. It is a theory with many Protectionists that this country should export more than it imports. If that be true we should not have complained of bad times in 1894, when our exports over imports exceeded 237 millions in merchandise, and in the same time we shipped $124,671,901 in bullion and specie.

When will our law makers learn and acknowledge that to protect any particular industry means the direct or indirect taxation of every other.

Mahlon Vail.

DON'T TAKE A SUBSTITUTE.

Preparations That are "Just as Good" Seldom Stand the Test.

A recent article in the New York Times says that "we are confronted with the serious problem of how to prevent keepers of drug stores from palming off some preparation of their own in place of goods that are guaranteed to be pure and wholesome, and which are put up in original packages, with the name and trade mark of the manufacturer on them."

No large and profitable sale can be obtained for any article which has not merit behind it. The advertiser merely makes known the quality of the article he has to sell, and his profits come from the steady demand of retail customers, who find by experience that the article is what it is represented to be. He makes his goods on a large scale, saves all possible economies, and, naturally, can make the best article. But the keen competition of business brings a constant pressure upon the retailer to substitute an inferior article for one on which there is a living profit.

There is one aspect of the sale of substituted goods which the public certainly should know about. There are many non-secret manufacturers of drugs in this country who will put up an imitation of a medicine, with the name and label of the local druggist who sells it on every package. The druggist who buys these goods has no guarantee that they are pure, and, as a matter of fact, they are frequently adulterated with comparatively harmless drugs, which cost, however, much less than the real drug. The manufacturer would not care to sell them under his own name as pure because it would injure his reputation. If the druggist put them up himself, he probably would not have the skill, nor the deliberate dishonesty, to substitute cheap goods for dear ones; but by shifting the responsibility, the fraud on the public is lost sight of. It is not the manufacturer's business; it is not the druggist's business, although they are sold under his name; a profit is made all around, and only the public is the loser.

When you ask in a drug store for any particular article that you want, and are put off with the answer that the druggist has another, made by himself, which is not only better but cheaper, take care! You can always afford to pay a few cents more for that article which has a record of years of results back of it.

NEW MARKET.

Mrs. D. Fulton has been entertaining her sister, Mrs. Stockbower, of Newark.

Miss Emma Clark, of Scotch Plains, is visiting Mrs. Smith and family for a few days.

J. Meeker, Robert L. Pierce and Frank Randolph have been appointed to make arrangements for the observance of the Fourth of July under the auspices of Lakeside Council.

Mrs. Charles Drayton of this place, who had been ill for a long time with typhoid fever, died yesterday morning about 5 o'clock. The death of Mrs. Dayton is a very sad one. She has been married not quite two years, and, besides her husband, she leaves an eight-months-old babe to whom she was ardently devoted. Her death was the result of an attack of typhoid fever. She had many friends in Plainfield. The funeral will be held from the First Baptist church tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The shingle roof of Kithen's blacksmith shop caught fire from a spark from the chimney this morning at about 9 o'clock. The New Market bucket brigade, with Abram Nelson as foreman, formed a line to the pond and soon extinguished the flames. Had they delayed very long, however, the building would have been doomed. It was owned by the father of John H. Kitchen, of North Plainfield.

Young mothers dread the Summer months on account of the great mortality among children caused by bowel troubles. Perfect safety may be assured those who keep on hand DeWitt's Colic and Cholera cure, and administer it promptly. For cramps, bilious colic, dysentery and diarrhoea, It affords instant relief. FOR AND BY YOUNG MEN

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

The First Year in Their Own Building Shows Enlarged Work—Reports of Committees and President's Address.

The first year of the Young Men's Christian Association in its new building has been an eminently successful one, and the Association has shown itself perfectly able to fun itself in its enlarged sphere of work. All this was clearly shown at the annual meeting of the Association held Tuesday evening.

Early in the evening, from 7 till 8 o'clock, the officers and committeemen of the Association were tendered an informal banquet in the small hall on the second floor. A bountiful repast was served by some of the members of the Women's Auxiliary, after which the guests adjourned to the main hall to digest more weightier subjects. The committee in charge of the spread consisted of Mrs. J. W. Gavett, Mrs. A. B. Beers, Mrs. Harry Manning, Mrs. Frank T. Clawson, Mrs. S. R. Struthers, Mrs. Townsend Rushmore, Mrs. Rankin, Miss Jennie Demarest and Miss Carrie Dewey.

The annual meeting of the Association should have been held on May 14th, the night of the Choral Society concert, but on account of the concert the meeting was adjourned to last evening when a goodly number of interested members gathered in the assembly hall to hear the reports of the work of the last year and plan for the future of the Association.

President W. D. Murray called the meeting to order, with Secretary A. B. Beers in his usual position. The meeting opened with Scripture reading by George R. Cornwell, after which Ira W. Travell led in prayer. The reading of the minutes of the last annual meeting followed, and then the president, on motion, appointed a nominating committee consisting of S. P. Kimball, H. C. Munger, W. F. Oliver, George Fuller, Harry Manning and J. H. Leggett. The committee began its labors immediately in another room, while the Association listened to the different reports. An evidence of the steady growth of the Association was shown by the first report, that of the membership committee, which had fifteen new members to propose. They were all elected into the Association, provided the committee approved of them.

The religious work of the Association is really the most important, and the report of the committee in charge of that department was a very interesting and encouraging one. It was read by the chairman, A. C. LaBoyteaux. The report stated that the year had been a successful one. The Sunday afternoon meetings for men were particularly successful on account of the large attendance and the helpfulness that had been done. The average attendance through the summer and winter had been one hundred and four. These meetings have been addressed by prominent men from this city and elsewhere, while music of different kinds has formed a pleasant feature. They have been self sustaining, while some of the collections have been given to the speakers to devote to their mission work. There have been several Bible classes.

The one taught by President Murray has had an average attendance of eight. The gymnasium bible class, taught by D. A. McPhie and T. E. Hazell has had an average of seven, while the evangelistic Bible class for non-Christian men has been attended on the average by twenty at each meeting. It was taught by A. C. LaBoyteaux, E. R. Taylor, F. C. Harder and others. This report and all the rest were accepted and filed.

Another very important branch of Y. M. C. A. work is the educational part and the new building has greatly increased the opportunities in this line. Before reading his report, Rev. Stephen Cahoone, chairman of the educational committee, awarded a number of certificates to members of the different classes for progress in study and faithful attendance at class. As the different courses are completed, diplomas will be given. The report told at length of the progress that has been made during the last year. A new mechanical course, lasting three years, has been introduced and was attended on the average, by twenty-two members. Eight of the members of this class passed the searching State examinations and qualified themselves for the State standing. The average attendance at the bookkeeping class was twelve, while the German class had an average attendance of seven. The Spanish class was organized in December with twelve members and continued with an average attendance of nine. Among the Y. M. C. A.'s of New Jersey, Plainfield's association stands second in the number of scholars in her educational department and third in the number of different subjects taught.

In the director's room a Bible reference of one hundred and fifty volumes has been opened but the regular library is practically useless. In the reading room there are forty-seven different magazines and papers on file. The report of the treasurer, H. O. Newman, was encouraging. It showed that the year had been started with a balance of $22.58 in the treasury. The sum of $6,518.85 has been received during the year, about one-third of which comes from the membership dues and the rest from rents, subscriptions and the like, making a total of $6,541.43. The expenses of the association have been $6,523.52, leaving a balance in the treasury of $18.91. There is, however, an indebtedness of $500, which is over balanced by assests of about $900 from unpaid dues, subscriptions and rents. President Murray then made a short statement regarding the building debt which has been reduced to about $11,000, less the allowance on the property of the association to be given for the extension of Watchung avenue.

President Murray as head of the association also made a general report on the association during the last year and it was listened to with great interest. His report was as follows:

> One of the signs of the times is the growing consciousness on the part of men that "No man liveth to himself." Societies for improved building, the Civil Service Reform, for model tenement houses, numberless vacation schools and missions, even among men not professedly Christians, are proving this truer today than ever before. The great factor in life today is the struggle for the life of others. And in no department of society is this truer today than among that most promising of all classes, young men. Our Association is a part of the great movement, and we have labored on through another year trusting that we are co-workers with God and brothers' keepers. We are conscious of comparatively little of what might have been done, but we feel that we can render a good report to the many kind friends who have made this work possible.
> This report covers our first full year in our own building, and we believe that the larger work accomplished and the larger number of men benefited far more than justified the investment of so much money.
> The financial report will, of course, show an increased expense, the total being $6,523.52, of this sum $6,518.85 received from membership dues, the balance from rents and subscriptions.
> We have demonstrated, too, that a building such as ours is useful, if not necessary, in a town of the size of Plainfield. This is proven by shown by the number of Christian and philanthropic organizations that have found in it a convenient meeting place. The following, not connected with us, have used the building, without charge, during the past year: Children's Home managers, King's Daughters, Medical Society of Union county, Primary Sunday-school Teachers' Union, Christian Endeavor, junior and senior young men, pastors of the city, Princeton Alumni Association, Women's Auxiliary, Rasores Club, Town Improvement Society, Christian Endeavor, junior and senior C. E., Y. P. S. C. E., some twenty entertainments have been given in our hall, of which six were given by us in order to pay off the debt.
> The report of the educational department is to be found in the able pen of Stephen Cahoone, chairman of that committee, but for completeness we say a word or two. We have conducted in penmanship, mechanical course, German and Spanish classes, in book-keeping, and with a total enrollment of 113 students.
> In like manner, the religious work of the Association, the most important of all our work, was wisely watched over. For this reason for our existence will be reported by Mr. LaBoyteaux, chairman of the religious work committee. We have been definitely in one department of this work in the large place the Bible has had in our work. Among the Sunday meetings, as they are known to us, it has been exceedingly difficult to organize classes for Bible study. In this connection it is interesting to remember that during the past few years through our efforts, eight men have been led to devote their lives to some form of Christian work.
> The work for boys continues to be an unsolved problem, though the solution has been manfully attempted this year. We have a boys' department with ninety-seven members who have their own rooms and who are entitled to the privileges of the gymnasium twice a week. Eighty-eight boys' meetings have been conducted for the boys, with an average attendance of thirty-three; a Bible class was started with seven boys, and also a class in vocal music. But this is very little, when we look at the boys who lacked and still lack the boys. We propose, however, to keep at it, hoping that in the end we may find that we are not satisfied with what we have done.
> For the first time in our history we have had the services of a trained physical director, and the wisdom of having such a man has been demonstrated. Under Mr. Moore's care evening classes were organized to meet the needs of business men, classes for boys were conducted and a very successful business men's meeting held. Through his efforts, eight men have been led to devote their lives to some form of Christian work.

Under Mr. Moore's care evening classes were organized to meet the needs of business men, classes for boys were conducted and a very successful business men's meeting held every Thursday noon at 1 p. m. Besides the class work we were able, through the kindness of Mr. Moore, to arrange a number of good runs to neighboring towns, and through a committee on basketball a successful team was formed. A bowling team was also put in the field. Mr. MacPhie left us in March to fill a larger field in Massachusetts, and we consider ourselves fortunate in having been able to secure the temporary services of one of our members, Mr. C. W. Nichols, a graduate of the C. E. A. gymnasium of the Springfield school, as physical director, his services to begin September 1st.
> The gymnasium has been the most attractive part of the building, and the bathing and shower baths have been highly appreciated. The city authorities have promised us the same privilege as the Y. M. C. A. of Elizabeth, that of having a uniformed policemen to undergo a physical examination.
> In opening our own hall, we have been able for the first time to give our members, free of cost, a series of entertaining and instructive entertainments. We can do but little to attract young men to our rooms, and the gymnasium is the all too frequently visit Plainfield, but there is no reason to despair of the work, we should at least to make the effort. This year we were materially aided by one of our public-spirited citizens who believes in this work and who bore the expenses connected with it. Of course, the work of the committee has been enlarged with the enlargement of our building, and members of that committee have taken advantage of every opportunity to make the work known and to advise in securing and assessment. In this work success has attended the efforts of the committee, and the cordial service rendered by the ladies. They have ministered in the spirit of the Master, and the ladies' parlor has done much to make the building homelike and attractive.
> The most extensive missionary work during the year in assisting the Association at Somerville and Bound Brook, in attending various district conventions and at the State convention, and in every request made of Mr. Moore by Interfinished committee and the Springfield school.
> But it is almost impossible to put on paper the various items of work which the Association undertakes. Much of it can never be put down in the language of the earth. Of course a large part of this is the work of the president and the general secretary. He is generally the one through whom the Association touches needy men. This is especially true

RIDING WITHOUT LIGHTS

AN UNLUCKY CORNER FOR WHEELMEN LAST EVENING.

Seven Bicycle Collisions Occurred at the Corner of Park Avenue and Fourth Street—Machines Were Wrecked.

The need of an ordinance compelling bicycle riders to attach lanterns to their wheels at night was very evident last Tuesday when seven accidents occurred in the vicinity of Fourth street and Park avenue, all of which were caused by one of the riders not carrying a lantern and then attempting to "scorch."

The most exciting of all was the collision between the Punnett Companion and a colored "scorcher" without a light. F. L. C. Martin and ex-Judge W. A. Coddington were riding along the middle of Park avenue on the double machine with lamp lighted. Suddenly there was a crash and a colored individual, bearing his wheel in front of the Punnett, soared away to land on the roadbed with a sickening thud.

He had been hustling along Park avenue with head down and minus a lamp. His machine was badly wrecked while he was painfully bruised and cut. The Punnett and its riders were not injured in the slightest.

As Mr. Martin was a bicycle dealer, the unlucky colored rider suggested that Mr. Martin repair the damaged wheel, but the offer was declined with thanks.

The other tumbles were not very serious, usually resulting in bruises and a damaged front wheel. They were all caused by someone riding at a rattling pace without a light. Among the victims were Arthur Wills, Frank McInerny and Ralph Tolles.

Life on Bicycle Row, as that part of Park avenue is sometimes called, was quite lively, repairing men and wheels who came to grief in the neighborhood.

This morning, Frank Pangborn struck a sewer bump, while trying to evade a wheelwoman and his front rim suddenly became very tired and laid down, while Pangborn shot over the handle bars into space. He escaped with sundry bruises.

GRAND JURY FINISHED.

A Presentment Brought Against the Elizabeth Officials.

The Grand Jury completed its work Wednesday, and brought in three presentments, one against the officials of Elizabeth charging them with failure to enforce the observance of the Sunday laws. The presentment includes Mayor Rankin, Chief of Police George C. Tenny and others.

Police Justice Neil was presented for exacting inadequate bail for serious cases and an excessive bail for lesser crimes. As an instance was cited the bail of $26,000 in the case of John Max Reiner, editor of the Herald, accused of libel, as oppressive. The Justice was also censured for failing to send the docket of the Police Court to the Grand Jury. The tax collectors of Westfield township were presented for the illegal collection of taxes. Forty-two indictments were found.

Burned His Hand.

W. S. Benton, the cashier for A. M. Griffin, met with a painful accident recently while lighting a match. He held in his hand a box of matches which can only be ignited on the box. He struck one and the spark flew into the box setting the rest of them in a blaze. The result was that his left hand was terribly burned in the palm and he is now unable to use it.

Special Excursion Rates.

On May 24, 25 and 26 the Central Railroad of New Jersey will sell special excursion tickets to Pittsburg, Pa., good to return till May 30, inclusive, on account of the National Convention of the Prohibition party, for $10.50 for round trip from Plainfield.

Purchased a Residence.

J. S. Schoonmaker, of West Eighth street, has purchased the residence of C. T. Kissam, of West Eighth street. Extensive alterations will be made and the house will not be occupied before next spring.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. We believe, however, that no better use could be made of one of these quarters than to exchange it for a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, a medicine that every family should be provided with For sale by T. A FESTIVAL OF BLOSSOMS

SUCCESSFUL EVENT OF THE WILLING CIRCLE, KING'S DAUGHTERS.

A Barren Room Changed Into a Place of Beauty, Graced By Charming Girls, and Filled With Good Things.

As the weary commuter made his way up Park avenue last Tuesday he was attracted to one of the stores in the Hart building, just above Fourth street, by the sound of merry voices inside. A peep in the door disclosed a bower of flowers with charming waitresses flitting about serving ice-cream and cake to the many patrons.

It was the "Festival of Blossoms" given by the Advance Circle of King's Daughters of the First Presbyterian church. The windows were filled with potted plants, while the room itself was handsomely decorated with pink and white bunting, draped and festooned about the ceiling and chandelier, and a profusion of wild flowers and vines, arranged in bouquets and fastened to the curtains and snowy table cloths. Pink shades on the electric lights and the piano and banquet lamplight softed the bright light and added to the charming effect. The lemonade table, in one corner, was a perfect bower; Miss Katherine Glen was in charge. The other large table was devoted to home-made cakes and candies. Mrs. William E. MacClymont and Mrs. Garretson looked after the candies, while Mrs. W. A. Coddington and Mrs. McClintock had charge of the delicious cakes.

The ice-cream deserved special praise as it, too, was home-made and not to be excelled. It was made by Mrs. Joseph Haynes, while she and Mrs. Howard A. Pope, president of the Circle, looked after the serving of it. The waitresses were the Misses Etta Bilsh, Aletta Bedford, Pansy Herring, Cressie Maag, Estelle Smalley, Mabel Pruden, Lizzie Bittenbender and Belle Bittenbender. Miss Bilsh had a general superintendency of this department. The potted plants in the windows were sold by Mrs. Jennie Abbott and Miss Scarborough.

The money raised is to go for the benefit of the city nurse. The decorating was done by the members of the Circle, with Mrs. W. A. Coddington, as chairman. E. B. Hazen and Joseph Haynes also kindly assisted in preparing the room.

HONOR FOR A. SALTZMAN.

Chosen President of the State Exempt Firemen's Association.

A distinguished honor was conferred on Plainfield Wednesday at the State convention of the Exempt Firemen's Association in session at Hackensack, when Auguste Saltzman was chosen president of that organization for the ensuing year. The following delegates were present from this city: T. O. Doane, D. W. Littell, Eugene Laing, Wm. A. Woodruff and G. Thorn.

Keep the Dogs In.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Do not the people of Plainfield think that they may some day have an experience with mad dogs, the same that the citizens of West Hoboken are having now? This city is full of dogs, mostly curs, running loose. Plainfield is being beautified by the fences being taken down, and those who have nice flower beds are much annoyed by the dogs. Why are they allowed to run loose to destroy flower beds or to bite some one? Subscriber.

Mrs. Ballington Booth to Talk.

Mrs. Ballington Booth, of the American Volunteers, will address a parlor meeting to be held on Thursday afternoon, May 28th, at 3:30 o'clock, at the residence of Mrs. Francis Wood, 313 Franklin place.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. To this we woul add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

Eczema is a frightful affliction, but like all other skin diseases it can be permanently cured by the applications of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It never fails to cure Piles. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

Young mothers dread the Summer months on account of the great mortality among children caused by bowel troubles. Perfect safety may be assured those who keep on hand DeWitt's Colic and Cholera cure, and administer it promptly. For cramps, bilious colic, dysentery and diarrhoea. It affords instant relief. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front Street.

AGAINST THE WOODMAN'S AX.

Jersey Men and Women Who Want the Forest Interests Preserved.

Prof. Halstead, of Rutgers College, will speak at the meeting of the State Forestry Association in the Casino this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The High School chorus will sing and there will be a discussion. Many prominent scientists will be present. In the evening B. E. Fernow, Chief of Division of Forestry at Washington, D. C., will give a lecture at 8 o'clock. In the lobby will be an exhibition of photographs of injurious insects.

A chorus of between fifty and sixty pupils of the High School will sing at 4 o'clock under the leadership of I.W. Travell. Miss Mabel Maxson will accompany the chorus. The programme follows: "The Brave Old Oak"; "Voices of the Forest"; "Song of the Skylark"; "Hail Columbia."

The prominent guests who will be present, and where they will be entertained are as follows: H. I. Budd, Mt. Holly, Commissioner of Public Roads, by D. W. Pond; William H. Whiting, editor of The Times, of Philadelphia, by Craig A. Marsh; Mrs. H. Brooks, of Camden, by Mrs. Frances Wood; F. R. Meier, of Mahwah, by Herbert E. Fernow, of Washington, D. C., and Prof. John Gifford, of May's Landing, by Mrs. E. D. McCarthy; Joseph Jones, of Camden, by John Dalziel; Prof. Halstead, of New Brunswick, by Mrs. C. L. Case; Hon. Augustus W. Cutler, of Morristown, by J. W. Yates, of East Seventh street. Other distinguished guests will be entertained by B. J. Shreve, Alex. Gilbert, W. D. Miller, Wilson Smith, Mr. Middledith and L. V. F. Randolph.

The committee of arrangements trust that there will be a generous response from the Plainfield people to entertain the out-of-town guests.

Friday the delegates will take a trip to the Palisades on one of the Pennsylvania Railroad tugs which has been offered free by the company.

ORATORICAL CONTESTS.

Prizes in Gold to Be Offered for the Best Declamation.

The weekly drill of the cadets will be held Friday morning at 9 o'clock in the school yard under the direction of Captain George Edwards. The company feel the absence of their captain, Volney F. Green, who has been confined to his home for the past week with illness. In Captain Green's absence First Lieutenant George P. Smith has taken his place. The company will parade on Decoration Day. A full attendance is expected.

On Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock a special meeting of the Kappa Delta Phi Society was held for the purpose of making the necessary arrangements for the coming oratorical contest to be held in the near future. William F. Cornwell and Charles Noble were appointed a committee empowered to make necessary preparations. The prize to be contested for is one consisting of $10 in gold, and is offered for the best original declamation produced by any young man of the school. The prize is offered by two young men, graduates of the High School and former members of the society.

WOMAN SUFFRAGISTS.

REPORTS MADE ABOUT THE PROGRESS OF THE CAUSE.

Committees Appointed to Look After the Various Departments of Work—Some of the Prominent Women Present.

The State Woman's Suffrage Association met Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the large hall of the Y. M. C. A. building, at which time a good sized audience was present. Mrs. Florence Howe Hall presided, and sitting beside her were Dr. M. D. Hussey, of this city, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Irving Angels, of Passaic, recording secretary. After the reading of the minutes, reports were given by the delegates to the National Convention held at Washington, last January. Dr. M. D. Hussey and Mrs. Laura H. VanClse, of Summit, were the delegates. Their reports were both very encouraging and interesting. This was followed with a report by Dr. Hussey on the passage of the school suffrage amendment by the Legislature. Mrs. A. B. S. Pond and Mrs. Aaron M. Powell gave excellent reports of the progress being made in Colorado and California along the line of woman suffrage. Chairmen for the various committees were appointed as follows: School Suffrage, Mrs. Rebecca Hawes, Hohokus; Parlor Meetings, Mrs. Madge S. MacClary, Rahway; Laws Relating to Women, Miss Mary Philbrook, Jersey City; Distribution of Literature, Mrs. A. B. S. Pond, Plainfield; Suffrage Work in the W.C.T.U., Miss Laura B. Holmes, Clarksboro. The following membership committees were also appointed: June, Mrs. S. F. Haff, Mrs. A. B. S. Pond, Plainfield; July, Mrs. A. C. Child, Elizabeth, Mrs. Rebecca Hawes, Hohokus; August, Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph, Plainfield, Mrs. Esther M. Poole, Metuchen; September, Mrs. Draper, Dr. M. D. Hussey, Plainfield; October, Mrs. Irving Angels, Passaic, Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, Plainfield; November, Mrs. Eaton, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, Plainfield. Dr. Hussey was continued on the committee of county organization.

It was stated that New Jersey had contributed $150 to the national organization fund, also that the State Association had received $50 from the Union County Association. Miss S. W. Lippincott reported the organization of an association at Moorestown, which was in a flourishing condition.

Among some of the out of town delegates present at the meeting were Mrs. Lucy Bakewell Wiltt, of Bellville, president of the Essex County Association; Mrs. A. Pond, of Massachusetts; Mrs. Ella B. Carter, Newark; Mrs. E. S. Wilde, of Glen Ridge; Miss Mack, of Newark; Miss S. M. Watts, secretary of the Essex County Association. The meeting was brought to a close about 5 o'clock, and an adjournment made to December.

ELIZABETH'S NEW PAPER.

Projectors Look Over the Field—The Scheme May Not Go Through.

E. E. Johnson, of the New York Evening Sun, who is contemplating starting a Democratic daily in Elizabeth, with the assistance of W. P. Anderson and Charles Pope, also of The Evening Sun, was interviewed yesterday. He says nothing definite has been done, and nothing may be done. He and Mr. Anderson called on John J. Matthews, chairman of the Democratic County Committee, and others Monday, to discuss the matter.

Justice Newcorn's Court.

In the cases on contract of Smith against Gray and the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company against Sturtevant, tried yesterday, judgment was given the plaintiff in each case by Justice Newcorn. The case of Pearson against Bohl was adjourned till next Tuesday, owing to the illness of the plaintiff.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. THE OTHER ONE.

Sweet little maid with winsome eyes
That laugh all day throughout the tangled hair,
Gazing with baby looks so wise
Over the arm of the oaken chair,
I marvel than you there can be none;
Since in your laughing face I see
Eyes that tell of another one.

Here where the firelight softly glows,
Shadowed and safe and warm from storm,
What to you is the wind that blows,
Driving the sleet of the winter storm?
Rest your head the ruddy light
Gilints on the gold from your tresses spun,
But deep is the drifting snow to-night
Over the head of the other one.

Hold me close as you eagerly stand,
Watching the dying embers shine;
Then shall I feel another hand
That nestled once in this hand of mine;
Poor little hand, so cold and chill,
Shut from the light of stars and sun,
Clasping the withered roses still
That hide the face of the sleeping one.

Laugh, little maid, while laugh you may,
Sorrow comes to us all, I know;
Better perhaps for her to stay
Under the drifting sheet of snow.
Sing while you may your baby songs,
Sing till your baby days are done;
But oh, the ache of the heart that longs
Night and day for the other one!

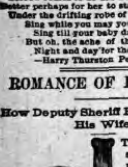
ROMANCE OF RED BUD.

How Deputy Sheriff Billy Hunt Got His Wife.



T was a bright, sunny afternoon, but the inhabitants of Little Dutch did not waste a thought on the weather. Sunny afternoons are too common a spring feature in southern Kansas to excite even passing comment. Besides, the residents were assembled at the Rose of Kansas for a special and important purpose. The introduction of a meteorological topic would have been so foreign as to be an impertinence, and in consequence loaded with danger.

"As I was a sayin' when interrupted by the gentleman a representin' of the double-bar-O brand, Little Dutch had got to pull itself together if it expects to retain its standing among the moonicipalities of the once bleedin' Kansas," said the speaker. "It's goin' to be a funny thing in current history if these spike bucks from Winfield, or Arkansas City, or any other town, is a-goin' to come down yere with a whoop an' a yell an' run off our horses an' we do nothin' but stick our noses in the mud an' let on we liked it. If we want to, gentlemen, we can raise stock for the whole southern tier of counties. Jest let the notion go abroad once that all us folks settled at Little Dutch for was to raise hosses for other folks to steal, an' you can string all your money on the proposition that they will be dead willin' to let us do it."

"What kind of a thin' was medicine bein' made?" inquired Bill Sidions, foreman of the "double-O-bar" outfit, who had entered the gathering while Burt Francis, a prominent and public-spirited citizen of Little Dutch, was giving his views.

"It's like this, Bill," explained Col. Tom North, who from years of sitting behind the box had acquired the repose of manner and gravity necessary to a presiding officer; "it's like this: Some unmitigating an' felonious cuss has run off two bronchos, the same then sent home to Mr. Wells who, notwithstanding his name, "English Jack," was a native of Oregon county, Missouri. "He cut the larints, the hasty-minded villain, an' spiled two as good ropes as ever you seen."

"An' the boys got together to discuss ways an' means," pursued Col. Tom North, having suspended his explanation to give Mr. Wells an opportunity to air his complaint, "the majority as law abidin' citizens, strivin' to promote the material interests of Little Dutch an' as a sort of a, natcheneeded rebuke to hoss thiefs appears to be in favor of hangin' the critter. Bill Hunt, the under sheriff of County's county, has the inhuman manner of bein' perched at his house, over at Red Bud, an' the general sense of this meetin' seems to be that we rides over this afternoon an' hangs the critter for the benefit of his morals."

"I'm agin hangin' as bein' too drastic," said Mr Wells. "As the overseer of them two cayuses which was stole, I'm willin' to say that the crime carried its own punishment. Though," he added as an afterthought, "I shouldn't ort to have cut them larints. This feller that run off the critters is not what you all might call a respectful deportment, but I reckon I'm jestin' around yere the day before he run off the bronchos, an' he's a slim, spindlin' critter, with a complexion like a drug store clerk. I bowed mebbe he's been readin' books an' started out to be a bad man jest for the fun they is in it. He didn't p'int out like no hoss thief, neither. Bill Hunt finds him as late as six o'clock this mornin' a sleepin'. He goes into camp an' builds a fire all as comfortable an' the same as if he was in a first-class hotel, instead of ridin' for the nation, the way professional hoss thiefs does."

"That ain't the p'int, none whatever," said Burt Francis. "I'm mechanically a humane man myself. I argued agin' the stranglin' of the nigger gear at Wellington, an' I don't take stock much in hangin' a white man. It's poor way to make old even a hoss thief. But it's the principle of the thing, an' the howlin' necessity of elevatin' Little Dutch to the position among border towns she is entitled to hold. This corporation pertickler distinct setback an' has carried a bad black eye ever since Jim Marshall gits away with the jack pot on a two-ace flush. It was not so much the hangin—that would surprise anyone, but the bein' tied of him go around alive a tellin' folks what marks we all is. Little Dutch has got to win back her reputation if we hangs every hoss thief twixt here an' the Canadian."

This seemed to accord with the general notion. Civil pride is a vast moving power. Mr. Thurston, who presided over the bar, set out the bottle, and the sixteen men who comprehended the greater part of Little Dutch's able male population accepted Mr. Sidon's invitation to irrigate before starting out on their eight-mile ride to Red Bud.

As Tom Thurston locked up the Rose of Kansas and prepared to mount his horse he inquired:

"I suppose Billy don't give up the hoss thief. He's jist been made under sheriff an' he may not think it's law."

"He'll give him up all right," replied the optimistic Francis. "I never yit hear of a law agin' hangin' a hoss thief."

"But you don't know Bill Hunt," said Thurston, swinging into his saddle.

"I'd be more than glad to help you out, gents," said Under Sheriff Hunt, "but you see the boy surrenders to me, an' I'm under bonds responsible to the state of Kansas for his well bein'. Wait until I lands him in Winfield. No doubt Scott, which is my superior in office, will turn the boy over to you all. He's just the man to let a band of Little Dutch folks come an' tend to his business for him. He's got a reputation for that, and you'll find him dead easy."

"The hoss thief isn't at Winfield, Billy," said Francis; "he's yere, an' they ain't no need of you all gittin' gay an' sarcastic neither. We is a band of plain, law-abidin' citizens a doin' of our duty to our corporation. So be decent, Billy, and turn out the boy. We don't want to proceed to any extreme measures, Billy, or take any steps which you might subsequently regret, but we've come for the hoss, Bill, an' a restive horse pitched against another and two Winchesters rattled. It was a nerve-straining minute or two.

"If you-all git him it'll be through smoke," replied Under Sheriff Hunt, "an' I'm figurin' there won't be many fools left to attend the funerals which is likely to prevail as a fashion around yere for the next few days."

"Let 'em come in, Bill, why don't you?" broke in a silvery voice on the war talk. "Let 'em come in. I didn't have to hold a reception, gentlemen," continued the bright-faced, vivacious young woman looking out from the doorway over Hunt's shoulder. "I didn't 'low when I came over from Joplin you'd give me Cousin Billy that I'd hold a reception the very fust day."

If Hunt was surprised he never betrayed his astonishment, nor did he wink an eye when his joyous young relative proceeded: "I turned that pore little boy loose a half hour ago, Cousin Bill, when I fust see these visitors a-comin'. The boy said some of 'em might feel constrained in his presence, as they was a matter of a couple of hosses outstandin' between him an' them, an' they might feel as if they orter settle with him."

Every hat in the party came off when the young woman first appeared. Said Col. Tom North, as he resettled his sombrero:

"I don't aim to be critical, Bill, but it looks like you all had better give your young wimmen relatives a hint or two on your duties as to the safe keepin' of hoss thiefs. Us Little Dutch people would never have let him git away, Billy," and the delegation rode home.

It was between deals a few months later that Burt Francis remarked to Tom North, who was putting the cards back in the box: "I hear Bill Hunt has married that cousin of his'n we met up with that time we rides over to lynch the boy that stole English Jack's hosses."

"Yes," said North, setting the deal box to one side, "I hears on it. I've seen the girl two or three times. Do you know, Burt, she favors that hoss thief mightily. I saw the kid a-loafin' around there the day before he runs off the bronchos, and he looks enough like that girl to be her 'twin. An', Burt, I rides 'round Billy Hunt's house that day an' they was'n't nary moccasin nor hoof track leadin' from it. An' that dress the young woman had on was Bill's sister's, which she was up in Winfield visitin' when we was thar. I recognized it at once. An' I'm keepin' up quite a heap of thinkin', Burt. Eight loss, queen win; place yer bets, gents."

CARD CUTTING FACTORY.

THE HASTINGS CARD COMPANY TO BUILD IN THIS CITY.

Factory Will Be Located on Second Street Between Elm Place and Plainfield Avenue—To Employ Fifty Hands.

It is now a settled fact that Plainfield is to have an industry that is not only thoroughly representative but one that will be a credit to the city. The Hastings Card and Paper Company, of which F. C. Lounsbury, of this city, is the president and treasurer, will at once commence the erection of a handsome two-story building, 26x96 feet, with a basement and attic, on the ground located just off West Second street, between Elmwood place and Plainfield avenue, which is owned by Mr. Lounsbury.

This company has for years held the reputation of being headquarters for everything in their line. They do not manufacture card nor paper, but they represent nearly all the large mills in the east. In the factory to be built card will be sent here and cut in the required sizes and then used for the demands of their business. They do elegant work in the card line of every description, such as programmes, price lists, society work, and embossing of the most delicate kind.

They employ only the very best help and especially true is this in regard to their women employes and when the factory is completed there will be a demand for young women and only the best will be taken. The factory which is now being conducted in Rahway, is run on a comparatively small scale and with the change there will be an increase of force. The factory will be built according to the latest scientific plans as regards light and it will be equipped in all the modern conveniences. Many details regarding the structure are Mr. Lounsbury's ideas and that is sufficient evidence that the building will be perfect in every particular.

The grounds are now being cleared off preparatory to commencing the work. Hummer Brothers, of North Plainfield, have the contract for erecting the building. The other contracts have not yet been awarded.

It is expected to have the building completed and ready for operation by August 1st.

A PITABLE CASE.

An Infirm and Homeless Old Lady Taken to the Elizabeth Hospital.

The ambulance of the Elizabeth General Hospital came to this city this afternoon and removed Mrs. Bolmer, who has been a great care to the benevolent workers of Plainfield, to that institution. She formerly lived on Church street, but of late has been living on Cottage place. During the past forty years she has been a resident of Plainfield, and for the last nine years she has been a helpless invalid, cared for by her husband, a man of seventy years of age, infirm and deaf. Her helpless condition and uncomfortable surroundings were those that appealed to the sympathy of all who knew of the case.

Mrs. W. As Woodruff, agent of the O. A. A., became interested in the old lady, and for several weeks has been persistently working to find a suitable place for her to spend the remainder of her days, or at least stay until her health was improved. Plainfield has no way of providing for an incurable case of this kind, and the State gives the subject no attention. Various institutions have been appealed to, but without success. On several different occasions Mrs. Woodruff thought that she had provided a place for Mrs. Bolmer, but when the time came for her removal those with whom she had made the arrangements seemed reluctant to take her. Finally, at a great expense of time and energy, Mrs. Woodruff prevailed upon the management of the General Hospital to accept the case.

An appeal was made through the local press for assistance for Mrs. Bolmer and $9 was realized. By private subscription since then a sufficient amount of money has been raised to keep her for three months, and there is assurance that there will be more coming when it is needed.

Movement for Good Roads.

New Jersey's delegation to St. Louis is being besought by Sterling Elliott, president of the League of American Wheelmen, to favor a plank in the platform at the National Convention which will sympathize with a general movement for good roads. "What we want," writes Mr. Elliott to the delegates, "is better highways and the help of the Republicans to secure them for us." A Democratic delegate to Chicago will probably receive the same request.

Cutting Down a Street.

West Third street, from Muhlenberg place to Grant avenue, is being cut down to grade. In some places it was found necessary to dig as deep as three feet. The dirt taken from the excavations is being carted to West Fourth street to bring it up to the grade established by the Street Railway Company. The work is being done by the city.

LIVELY FIRE AT WESTFIELD.

A Burning Coal Trestle Threatened to Make a Disastrous Conflagration.

Westfield was again threatened with the fire fiend Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock when a spark from a passing locomotive of the Jersey Central railroad set fire to the wooden trestle at the coal yard of J. J. Irving, just east of the station. The dry material of the trestle burned briskly and by the time the alarm was sounded and the volunteer firemen had arrived at the scene of the conflagration, the structure was beyond saving. The sparks set fire to the big lumber building nearby and the firemen confined their efforts at first to saving this structure. But while they were working there the roof on the house of the Rev. Henry Ketcham also caught fire, and a part of the firemen had to transfer their energies to that building. After much hard work they succeeded in saving both buildings.

Ex-Chief Erwin Waters, of this city, who is in business in Westfield, was among the most active of the workers and with his experience in fire fighting in this city he lent the local department much good advice. Mr. Waters specially distinguished himself when he carried a sick woman from the burning house and took her into the adjoining residence.

There were no cars on the coal trestle at the time the fire caught, and the damage was confined to the structure and a top layer of coal. The loss will not exceed $2,000.

AN INTERESTING LECTURE.

Rev. C. E. Herring Talks on the Work of John Livingston Nevius.

Every seat in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church was taken last Friday, when Rev. C. E. Herring gave an illustrated talk on the work of John Livingston Nevius in China. It was the regular missionary meeting and the pastor made it of great interest to all. The views were thrown on a sheet by a small electric lantern which was operated by Augustus Searing. Considering the size of the views they were exceptionally good, and Mr. Herring in his usual interesting manner held the closest attention of his hearers.

"John Livingston Nevius," he said, "was born in New York State and his ancestors came from Holland. Later in life he moved to New York city and was for some time an Alderman. He was a man that believed thoroughly in Providence which quality especially fitted him for the position of missionary. He was also a strong temperance man. He would go to the people for facts, but not advice. The Presbyterian missions were opened in China in the year 1844, and in 1854 Mr. Nevius sought that field of labor having been called to it. He met with many difficulties as there was only a small portion of the Empire at that time open to missionaries, but he was thoroughly devoted to his work and never gave up for one minute his labor for lost souls. He did not believe that it was necessary for a missionary to adopt the Chinese dress, but on the contrary thought it was a hindrance to them in working among the people. During his stay in China he accomplished much good and had the privilege of seeing many of the natives become thorough Christians."

RELIEF ASSOCIATION OFFICERS.

Men Who Will Dispense Benefits to the Fire Liddies.

The annual meeting of the Firemen's Relief Association was held in the parlors at the fire headquarters last evening, at which time the following officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Chief T. O. Doane; vice-president, Auguste Saltzman; treasurer, Joseph A. Hubbard; secretary, G. Thorn. The report of the treasurer for the year ending May 1st, showed the association to be in a far better financial condition than for several years past. There were less calls for relief, giving the association an opportunity of securing a neat little sum for the treasury.

A NEW DIRECTOR.

Freeholder Logan to Preside Over Somerset County Legislature.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders met in the Court House, Somerville, yesterday and organized for the coming year. J. C. Statts, the retiring Director, was presented with a handsome gold-headed cane by his fellow-members, as a token of esteem for his faithful services. Mr. Logan, a member of the Board, was chosen Director in place of Mr. Statts. Mr. Van Cleef, of Franklin township, is the only new member. The only appointment to be made was that of County Attorney, and Lawyer Frecht, of Somerville, received the appointment. The balance of the time was occupied in transacting routine business.

Two Borough Transfers.

These two real estate transfers were recorded in the Somerset County Clerk's office during the past week: Wm. J. Boesme et ux to Benjamin A. Hegeman, Jr., $300; Benjamin A. Hegeman, Jr., et ux to Charles A. Reed, $1,000.

J. F. HUBBARD, DIRECTOR

THE PLAINFIELDER WILL AGAIN PRESIDE OVER THE FREEHOLDERS.

W. R. Codington Chosen County Attorney Without Opposition—Other Appointments and Other Details of the Board.

The new board of chosen freeholders was organized Thursday morning. The new men in the board are Jacob Brucklacher of Elizabeth, Benjamin King of Clark township, James A. Burnett of Union, John Robison of Fanwood, John F. Wahl of New Providence. Messrs. Brucklacher and Burnett are Democrats. Politically the board is composed of 13 Republicans and 4 Democrats, the same as last year.

The meeting was called to order by Clerk S. Rusling Ryno, and J. Frank Hubbard was elected director. He was nominated by Freeholder Littell. There was no other nomination, and Mr. Hubbard's election was made unanimous.

Mr. Hubbard was escorted to the chair by Freeholders Clark and Roll. He thanked the board for the new expression of confidence. He appreciated the honor, and said he would do all he could to assist them in legislating for the best interests of the taxpayers.

The salary of the clerk was fixed at $300, and S. Rusling Ryno, of Rahway, re-elected. There was no opposition, and Mr. Ryno was also unanimously chosen. He expressed his appreciation of the unanimous vote. He was immediately sworn by Director Hubbard.

The salary of county attorney was fixed at $300, and W. R. Codington, of Plainfield, was again elected, and as in the other instances without opposition from the minority.

The salary of county physician was designated as $500, and Dr. Frank W. Westcott, of Fanwood, was nominated and elected the successor to Dr. E. R. O'Reilly, to serve for three years.

The salary of the county road inspector was fixed at $60 per month, and James W. Finck, of Westfield, was re-elected to serve in that capacity. There was no other nominee and Mr. Finck was honored like the other officials by a full vote of the board.

On resolution of Freeholder Littell the following newspapers were designated to publish the proceedings of the board: Elizabeth, Daily Journal, Central Herald, Daily Leader and Freie Presse; Plainfield, News and The Daily Press; Rahway, Advocate and Union Democrat; Summit, Herald and Record; Westfield, Standard and Leader. The compensation was fixed at $100 for each paper.

The rules of order governing the last board were readopted on motion of Freeholder Hulskamper, and on motion of Freeholder Ogden the regular meetings were appointed as before, on the first Tuesday of each month.

On motion of Freeholder Krouse, it was fixed for the next meeting was Thursday, May 21.

On resolution of Freeholder Littell, it was decided that the minutes of each meeting of the board shall be published in one issue of the newspapers.

Director Hubbard named the committee on appropriations; Freeholders Farrell, Ogden, Littell, Clark and Brucklacher.

The old Board of Freeholders held their last meeting Tuesday afternoon and cleared up the county business for the year.

County Collector Wood's annual report was read, showing the receipts to have been $439,385.83; disbursements, $427,593.90; balance in the county treasury, $11, 781.93.

The county roads committee reported that during the year 6¼ miles of old county roads had been repaired 15½ miles of gutters cleaned; 227 miles of top dressing, with clay, laid; 300 feet on North avenue, Cranford, widened, and in other sections depressions filled in with stone. The total cost of the work was $14,932.47, which amount is $67.33 less than the appropriation.

The lunacy statistics were given in the committee's report. There are 203 patients whose maintenance is chargeable to the county. Of these patients, 123 are from Elizabeth, 23 from Rahway, 22 from Plainfield, 6 from Westfield, 4 from Springfield, 4 from Linden, 8 from Summit, 3 from New Providence, 2 from Cranford, 1 from Clark. The number of patients from this county who died during the year was 6, discharged from the asylum 21. The total cost of maintenance was $33,460.96.

The jail inspection committee reported the cost of maintenance $4,582.90. At the beginning of the year there were 58 prisoners in the jail, and there were committed during the year 764; discharged, 731; remaining 73. The number of days of board, 23,347 and the average cost, 20 cents per day.

Want the Axle Replaced.

The fire and building committee of the Common Council have formally requested the makers of the chemical engine, Halloway & Company, of Baltimore, to replace the axle which was burned, while the chemical engine was responding to an alarm of fire some time ago.

RAMMING DOWN THE BUMPS.

Street Commissioner Meeker Compels Contractor Siddall to Fix the Streets.

Street Commissioner Meeker has about come to the conclusion that the people on Park avenue between North avenue and Front street do not know what they want. First, they petitioned him not to allow the steam roller to work in the day time, but at night. Mr. Meeker told them that one night of the steam roller would be all they wanted and he was right for they immediately petitioned that the roller be used only in the day time as they wished to sleep at night. The Street Commissioner consented and now the steam roller works by daylight.

The Park avenue residents are not suited, however. One complains that it is almost impossible to work with the steam roller groaning and roaring outside. The street would now be completed had the work been allowed to go along smoothly, but much time was necessarily lost by the changes in time.

After being jumped on most unmercifully, Street Commissioner Meeker has at last found someone that he can turn the tables on and that individual is Contractor Siddall By the latter's contract with the city, he is compelled to put the streets in as good condition as before. Street Commissioner Meeker has informed the contractor that he must level the bumps in the streets caused by the sewer connections, at once and Siddall's men are now picking off the top dressing and ramming down the bumps.

Another Passenger Station.

The Central Railroad is reported to have purchased ground at Broadway and Fourth street, Elizabeth, where it will erect a passenger station for its Newark branch, to compete with the trolley line, which is practically owned by the Pennsylvania road.

A Free Concert.

Orchard place is now enjoying a free concert almost every evening. Guttman's orchestra is now practicing at the home of their new accompanist, Miss Mabel Benner, who lives on that street.

REPORT FINALLY MADE.

BOROUGH COUNCIL TAKE ACTION ON WATCHUNG AVENUE EXTENSION.

The Finance Committee Will Ascertain the Best Terms in Which $30,000 Can Be Borrowed to Do the Work.

President Lounsbury occupied the chair at the meeting of the Borough Council last Friday, in the absence of Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., and Councilmen Woolston, Valiant and McLaughlin answered to the roll call.

W. E. Honeyman, secretary of the Board of Health, advised the Council by letter that it was the desire of the Board that another dumping ground be secured, as the one now in use on the Stein property was objected to. The matter was referred to the streets and public health committee.

Another petition from H. R. Munger asked the Council to place a new crosswalk on Washington avenue at the intersection of Willow avenue. This petition was placed in the hands of the proper committee.

The next petition, from Frank Jones, T. W. Morrison and other residents of the upper part of Somerset street, caused considerable discussion. They asked that the Council refuse to grant a license allowing the establishment of a merry-go-round in that locality. Mr. Valiant moved that the same be not granted if applied for in that locality. He stated that it was very undesirable, as it brought together a class of people who were disorderly.

Mr. McLaughlin offered an amendment, providing that it was the sense of the Council that no license be granted in the borough this season for such a purpose.

Mr. Woolston and Mr. Lounsbury thought the amendment was too sweeping, as someone might want to locate one on Johnston's drive where it would not be objectionable.

Mr. Valiant stated further that he understood that if a license was granted the residents intended to take steps to stop the same, and he also said that if a merry-go-round was running in front of his house he would very quickly secure an injunction to stop it. He was in favor of one being established on Washington Rock, if the owners desired a license.

Mr. Woolston offered a motion, which was carried, that the matter be left entirely with the Mayor.

Mrs. Eleanor Roome, W. R. Curtis, Harold Serrell and a number of other property owners protested against the vacating of Sycamore avenue, which was petitioned for previously by W. J. Roome.

Later, Mr. McLaughlin offered a resolution that Friday evening, June 9th, be set as the time to hear any objections to the vacating of Sycamore avenue. The resolution prevailed.

Mr. Woolston offered a motion, which was carried, that Mr. Munger's petition for a crosswalk be referred with power to the street committee. Mr. Woolston also handed back the petition of Summit avenue residents asking for water, and moved that the same be returned to them and that they be instructed to communicate with the Plainfield Water Supply Company. The motion was adopted.

At this time the report of the Watchung avenue commissioners was read, also the assessessment for damages to the property along the proposed extension, as published in The Daily Press under date of May 2d.

An opportunity was then given those present to make any objection they desired, but as there were no objections Mr. McLaughlin offered a resolution that the committee's report be confirmed. The resolution was not adopted at this time, but Mr. Valiant's motion that it lay on the table was given precedence.

Mr. McLaughlin then moved that the Council go into executive session, as all the members were not acquainted with the figures in the commissioners report. His motion was adopted and for forty minutes the Council discussed the report. The discussion was a lively one and was led by Messrs. Lounsbury, McLaughlin and Counsel Charles A. Reed. After the executive session the committee's report was confirmed. Mr. McLaughlin offered a resolution which prevailed that the Auditing and Finance committee ascertain the best terms on which a sum of about $30,000 could be raised on certificates of indebtedness, redeemable after one year from date thereof and payable in five years, to be issued for payment on the cost of opening Watchung avenue, and report at the next meeting. Another resolution, which was adopted, was offered by Mr. Woolston. It provided that the Streets and Public Health committee secure specifications for the opening of Watchung avenue, so that the Council can intelligently advertise for bids for the construction of the same. The business being concluded the meeting then adjourned.

Sheriff's Sale.

The following Sheriff sales will take place May 20th: Thickstun against Lyons, etc., Plainfield; decrees, $418, $1,070, $1,558. Sold to R. M. Stelle, $1,789. Byrd against Vanness, Plainfield; decree, $2,595. Vail, etc., against Odam, etc., Plainfield; decree, 1,070.

HARD TO SATISFY EVERYONE.

Street Commissioner Meeker Explains Something About the Steam Roller.

Some of the Park avenue residents are still not content with the methods of the long-suffering Street Commissioner Meeker. They have raised an indignant howl over the fact that the work is not hurried and that the steam roller stands idle part of the day. Street Commissioner Meeker explained the situation to a Daily Press reporter this morning. The man in charge of the roller has to act as engineer, fireman and everything else. As the roller is not on a regular track, but is steered by the engineer, it is necessary for him to remain by the steering wheel whenever the roller is in motion for, if left to itself, there is no telling in what direction it might suddenly go. It is, therefore, necessary for the engineer to stop the roller when it is necessary to take care of the fire or fill up the water tank.

The sewer connection bumps, which are the great enemy of cyclists and drivers, are rapidly disappearing, as Street Commissioner Meeker's talk with Contractor Siddall has proved effective. Of course it will take some time to ram them all down, but the cyclists may have the satisfaction of knowing that the are being fixed.

FOUR SCORE, AND A POET.

P. P. VanArsdale Celebrates His 80th Birthday With a Poem.

Though he passes his 80th birthday today, P.P. VanArsdale, of East Front street, is as bright and vigorous as a man in the prime of life. For this occasion he has written the following lines of rhyme, inspired by reading the Ninetieth Psalm:

Our life has been supported by Thy grace
Thus far, the Lord has been our dwelling place,
Before the mountains were brought forth, His name
Endures, to everlasting years the same.

But man, frail feeble man, is born to die,
When God doth say return, we must comply.
His life is like the grass which grows at morn
And at the evening withers, and is shorn.

Disease of sin is what our God doth hate,
But yet His pardoning love to us is great.
Our secret sins, viewed in His sacred sight,
Would make His dreadful sentence just and right.

We spend our years just as a tale that's told,
Or as a thought that's passed through mind of old.
Our days or years are three-score years and ten;
Yet few attain thereto among the sons of men.

But if by strength they should be four score years,
Yet often is their strength turmoil and fears.
The form and tottering step all seem to say,
Its soon cut off and then we fly away.

Teach us to know Thy power, Thy anger fear,
And so our days to number, that no fear
Of grief befall us—Thy love above,
But walk in fear and love, and wisdom choose.

Return, O Lord, how long, and grace afford,
O satisfy us with Thy mercy, Lord.
And make us glad according to the years
Wherein we've seen evil, yea, with tears.

Do let Thy ways appear unto us now,
Thy glory to our children dear, allow.
The beauty of the Lord our God bestow,
Establish us, that we in Thee, may grow.

A COMPLICATED AFFAIR.

An Action to be Commenced to Recover an Elston Marsh Legacy.

An action will shortly be commenced which will involve a quantity of Plainfield property into a complicated legal muddle. It is a portion of the Elston Marsh estate located on East Front street, opposite Farragut avenue. Several years ago the property, which consisted of four building lots, was bought by Wallace V. Miller from the estate, and he afterwards sold one lot to William F. Trust and three lots to F. W. Bird. The former sold his lot to Mrs. John Beerbower, and it was finally bought by T. A. Rogers and Alex. Sargeant. Mr. Bird still retains his possessions. Guarantee deeds were given with each sale.

After all these years it is now found that tiffe property was part of a legacy left by Mr. Marsh and could not be legally sold by the estate. The beneficiaries of the legacy have employed Lawyer Thomas McCarter, of Newark, who will commence proceedings to have the property revert to them, and a search is now being conducted before instituting the action. Inasmuch as guarantee deeds were given by each of the owners when they disposed of the property, the suit will of necessity involve each one in the suit and make them liable to whom they sold. But the liability in the course of legal events will eventually revert to the estate. The rear end of the property, which fronts on West Second street, is that which the Board of Education had in view for the erection of a new school-building in the East end.

Freeholders' Committees.

The following committees have been appointed by Director Logan, of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders:

Finance—Messrs. Hoagland, Barkalew and Schomp. County Buildings and Grounds—Messrs. Everitt, Perry, Van Liew, Siebel and VanCleef. Printing—Messrs. Perry, Lutkins and Barkalew. Roads—Messrs. Hoagland, VanCleef and Barkalew. Collector's Accounts—Messrs. Barkalew, Ballentine and Schomp. Auditing—Messrs. Ballentine, Everett, Lutkins and Hoagland.

Getting Ready for Practical Work.

Councilman Frost will start in next week with a number of street laborers under his control and will attempt to put a section of the Plainfield streets in repair. Mr. Frost spent yesterday afternoon inspecting the streets and getting points on the work.

—The Jersey Wheel Company, North avenue opposite depot, are offering some genuine bargains in bicycles and sundries. Cycles $30 to $60 and some handsome golf stockings at half regular price.

THE OLYMPIC GAMES.

Contests That Were Famous Among the Ancient Greeks.

Foot Races, Boxing and Wrestling Were the Features in the Earliest Festivals—Races for Boys and Girls.

In the April number of Century there is an article by Prof. Allan Marquand on "The Old Olympic Games," apropos of the coming attempt to revive the festival of Athens. A number of striking pictures by Andre Castaigne accompany the article. Prof. Marquand says:

The foot-races were three in number, called respectively the dromos or stadion, the diaulos, and the dolichos, according as the course was traversed once, twice, or twenty-four times. The dromos was a straightaway dash of about 200 yards, or exactly 192.27 metres. A long line of flagstones, grooved so as to be firmly gripped by the feet, was laid at each end of the course. This permitted the finish for both long and short races to take place at the same end of the Stadium. Along these flagstones posts were erected, dividing the line so that 20 runners might start at once; for there seems to have been an effort to will take some time to ram them all down, but the cyclists may have the satisfaction of knowing that the are being fixed.

in the Olympic festival by the hippiitodromos, or race for armed soldiers, who ran the length of the course and back again. At first they seem to have carried the helmet, spear, shield and greaves, but later the vase paintings indicate that only helmets and shields were carried. Twenty-five brazen shields were preserved in the temple of Zeus for this purpose.

The races for boys were not a revival of ancient usage, but were instituted by the people of Elis "because the idea pleased them." These races were over a shorter course than that for men, and we were also the races for young girls. The races for girls were not a portion of the great Zeus festival, but took place under the auspices of the goddess Hera on another occasion. Pausanias thus describes them: "Every fourth year 16 matrons weave a shawl for Hera, and the same number preside over the games. And the contest is a race for maidens of various ages, in the first race are the youngest, and next after in this order, and last of all the eldest. And they all run with their hair down their back, a short tunic below the knee, and their right shoulder bare to the breast. They use in this contest the regular race-course in Olympia, but not all the stadium part of a stade shorter. And the victors receive crowns of olive and part of the heifer sacrificed to Hera, and paintings of them are made for Hera. And the 16 matrons who preside over the games have as many handmaids."

Severer and more dangerous, but more popular, were the contests in wrestling, boxing and the pancratium. Wrestling, however, since the days of mythical Theseus, had been a test contest of brute force, and had become a trial of skill. Pindar praised the victor Epharmostus as being "deft-handed, nimble-limbed, with the light of valor in his eyes," and Plutarch regarded wrestling as the most scientific of all the games. Quickness of eye to detect a weakness in the stand of the opponent, activity in the use of arms and body and legs, and the timely application of muscular strength, brought into harmony a play of athletic qualities which made the contest an object of beauty to the plastic minds of the Greeks. Few were the restrictions, such as the rules against striking and biting; many were the stratagems which were permitted, such as choking, squeezing, tripping, clambering upon an opponent's back, or breaking his fingers. Thrice must an opponent throw his adversary so that both shoulders touched the ground before he could be declared victor, and if we may judge from the figured representations, the final overthrow was by no means a gentle act.

PARIS D[illegible]

There Are Enough of Them to Form a Good Sized Town.

Paris is the city where the dressmaking trade flourishes as it does in no other spot in the world. In 1850 the number of couturieres, as given in the Annuaire du Commerce, the commercial directory of those days, was only 158. There, besides the males who do the sale of ready-made feminine apparel, but there were none, as there are to-day, which sold lingerie or certain articles exclusively.

In the Bottin (as the Paris directory is familiarly known) of 1895 there are 1,636 couturieres and 296 commercial houses for the sale of ready-made garments, besides many establishments which manufacture and sell jupons de dessous or under-petticoats alone. The number of working dressmakers in Paris is estimated at 65,000.

In all France, according to M. Georges Michel, the industry of manufacturing the various articles of woman's dress is in the hands of 81,400 male and 143,548 female owners of shops or factories. These furnish employment to 700,801 persons, of whom over 500,000 are women.

In addition to these there are 925,855 persons who make their living from industries which are tributary to that of the manufacture of feminine apparel. The total value of the product of this labor from so many hands is estimated at £50,000,000.

A GREAT SNAKE COLONY.

An Australian Enthusiast Has a Fine Collection of Venomous Reptiles.

Mr. J. McCarrie Smith, an eminent bacteriologist of Sydney, Australia, is the proprietor of probably the greatest collection of snakes in the world, says the New York World. He is in the business purely for scientific purposes, and his collection is now advertised some time ago for 500 venomous reptiles, but one publisher refused to permit the advertisement until he had satisfied himself of the sanity of the scientist.

The different species of venomous snakes in Australia, so far as known, number 42, and Mr. Smith has specimens of all of them. The poison extracted from the reptiles is largely used in the Pasteur institute in Paris.

Mr. Smith is an enthusiast on the subject of snakes, and regards them as the most wonderful of living creatures. He has in his collection serpents that have gone nearly a year without food and are still fat. He has in fact found some of their own poison into them without the slightest ill-effects to them. As a result of his investigations he has established the fact that a non-poisonous snake is not affected in any way by the poison of poisonous species.

"Why," said Smith, "it does not kill one of its own species while it is so fatal to other creatures is one of the mysteries of the Almighty which we cannot unravel."

MADE FROM NIGHTMARES.

Methods Used by Artists Who Design Popular Grotesque Posters.

People who dine late at night in certain uptown restaurants may have noticed a well-dressed, wild-eyed, haggard-faced, dyspeptic man devouring night after night with apparent relish dishes which only the ultra brave have courage to eat more than once a month. This man is, it is said, the New York World, and eating indigestible food is a part of his business, for he is a maker of posters. Since the use of grotesque posters, built on the lines of Aubrey Beardsley's phantom fancies and on the principle of Chimpanzee Johanna's savage sketches, has become general as a means of advertising newspapers it is no more than right that the world should know how the designs are conceived.

The artist of this wild-eyed, haggard-faced, dyspeptic artist alone will be cited. His may or may not be the method used by all the better poster makers. Every night he goes to this uptown restaurant, eats a welsh rabbit, a broiled lobster, two cream rolls and a dish of ice cream and drinks a quart of cheap claret. Then he goes home, drinks two glasses of ice water, retires and the nightmare does the rest. In the morning he has designs for posters he sells to his dreams and finishes them as the orders for posters pour in. He is making a fortune in the business.

MICROBES ON STAMPS.

The Philatelist's Collection as a Source of Danger.

Having successfully disclosed the hygienic dangers adherent to the kiss, the telephone receiver and the towel, medical science has now turned its attention to the perils that beset the philatelist. Dr. Unna, of Hamburg, Dr. Unna, says the Science News, a patient was recently attacked by a peculiar parasitic growth in the beard. On making a minute examination of some of the hairs, Dr. Unna discovered that the case as "piedra," which is chiefly met with in British Columbia. The doctor's friend had never been in Columbia, but he frequently received letters from correspondents there, and, taking a collector's advantage always, he was in the habit of removing them from the letters. In Dr. Unna's opinion the gum on the postage stamp is an excellent material for retaining any disease germs that may recede from the application of the tongue, and in removing stamps—even when moistening is done with the sponge—there is always a danger that the collector's fingers may receive and communicate the contamination.

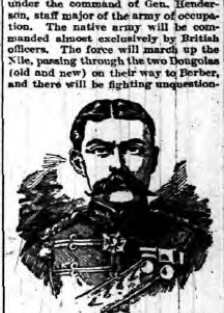
Turned the Tables.

When a schoolmaster entered the temple of learning a few mornings ago he read on the blackboard the touching legend: "Our teacher is a donkey." The pupils expected there would be a combined cyclone and earthquake, but the philosophic pedagogue contented himself with adding the word "driver" to the legend, and opened the school as usual.

AGAINST THE DERVISHES.

Gen. Kitchener to Lead the Proposed Anglo-Egyptian Expedition.

Gen. Kitchener, who is in command of the Anglo-Egyptian expedition which is soon to start up the Nile, is an able soldier and well fitted to be head of the enterprise by which it is hoped to reconquer East Soudan, now under the rule of the mahdi. He is the sirdar of the Egyptian army, and the expedition will consist chiefly of Egyptian troops. The native forces will be strengthened by 1,200 British troops, which will be under the command of Gen. Henderson, staff major of the army of occupation. The native army will be commanded almost exclusively by British officers. The force will march up the Nile, passing through Dongola Reach (old and new) on their way to Berber, and there will be fighting unquestionably at Dongola, where the mahdi has been collecting a strong force, to which he will add in anticipation of the approaching trouble. After Dongola is captured it will be made the base of operations against Berber. Twelve thousand Egyptian troops are on the advance already, and there is need for them also, for the dervishes are reckless fighters and scorn danger, believing, as they do, that if they die fighting they will be at once translated to the paradise of the koran. It is said that the supposed object of the expedition is to assist Italy by this diversion near Abyssinia, but this is not believed. On the contrary, there can be no doubt that the sole purpose of this great undertaking is to reestablish British supremacy in the domain in the fanatical sway-force of the late prophet. The territory sought to be reclaimed for Egypt comprises Darfur, Kordofan, Senaar, Taka, the Equatorial provinces and Bahr-el-Ghazal—in all 1,000,000 square Egyptian rule. In that year the revolt of the mahdi made it free. After the mahdi's death one of his lieutenants succeeded, and, with Ondurman as his capital, has since ruled over most of the territory. The khalifa still holds several of the prisoners taken at Khartoum. Last year France was said to have sent an expedition to the Soudan, but nothing has been heard of it.



GEN. KITCHENER,
The Commander of the Anglo-Egyptian Expedition Against the Dervishes.

CONGRESSMAN STEELE.

Sketch of the Statesman Who Is Opposing Gen. Nelson A. Miles.

Congressman George W. Steele, who declares he will prevent Congress from conferring the rank of lieutenant-general on Gen. Miles, if such action is attempted, represents the Eleventh district of Indiana and has a fine war and army record himself. He is a native of Fayette county, Ind., and was educated in the common schools, and in the Ohio Western university, at Delaware, in that state. He practiced law in Hartford, Ind., until 1861, when he was mustered into the Twelfth Indiana regiment, and the Twelfth Indiana regiment, and served in this and in the One Hundred and First Indiana until the close of the war. He was with the Army of the Potomac and the Army of the Cumberland, and went with Sherman on his march to the sea. When he was mustered out in 1865, he was lieutenant colonel. He was commissioned and served with the Fourteenth infantry from 1866 to 1876, in the west. He became a farmer and a pork packer. He was elected to the Forty-seventh congress, and was reelected three times. He was defeated for the Fifty-first congress and then went into business as a banker. He was the first governor of Oklahoma, laid out that territory and resigned after serving 20 months. He was elected to the Fifty-fourth congress as a republican. Mr. Steele established the First national bank of Marion, is a member of the Marion Commercial club, of the Philadelphia Land company and of the Indiana board of commerce. He is also a member of the board of managers of the national home for disabled volunteer soldiers.

No More Kissing in Austria.

It has hitherto been the custom of the children attending the public schools of Austria and Hungary to kiss the hands of the teacher on arrival and departure. This has now been forbidden by an order from the imperial board of education, which bases its action on the fact that sanitary investigation has shown that kissing is unhealthful, and should not be practiced when absolutely unnecessary.

EVEN SILK IS ADULTERATED.

Tannate of Tin and Silica to Give It Weight.

Some improvements in the treatment of silks are announced. Ordinarily silk is "weighted" by depositing tannate of tin on the fiber; the material receives a bath of tannic acid and then another of perchloride of tin, a repetition of this being made until an increase of the weight amounts to from 15 to 30 per cent, beyond which it is not considered safe to go in the case of silk intended to be dyed light shades or to be bleached. Recently a German inventor has brought forward a process in which silica is the weighting agent. In carrying out this method, says the Detroit News-Tribune, three steps are described. First, the silk, raw or in any stage of manufacture, and either before or after dyeing, is worked for an hour in a bath of perchloride of tin; then, after squeezing and washing, it is worked in a warm solution of water glass or soluble silicate of soda, for about an equal length of time, having also been previously passed through a solution of phosphate of soda. The operation may be repeated again and again, with no harmful effect on the fiber or on the subsequent dyeing, and in five operations the silk may be increased in weight some 100 to 120 per cent. The silk is now soaped, and, if already dyed, is cleared in an emulsion of olive oil and acid.

SAVED BY A WORD.

Knowledge of a Musical Term Proved Useful to an American Abroad.

There are more advantages in a musical education than one at first sees, remarks the Washington Post. A certain physician here in town, who is just home from Europe, says: "I never appreciated the advantages of a musical education until I went into a barber shop in Rome. Nobody about the place spoke a word of English. I was stretched on a rack that passed as a chair and swathed in a towel. The barber made an impressionist sweep from shave, for the dervishes are tricky fighters and scorn danger, believing, as they do, that if they die fighting they will be at once translated to the paradise of the koran. It is said that the supposed object of the expedition is to assist Italy by this diversion near Abyssinia, but this is not believed. On the contrary, there can be no doubt that the sole purpose of this great undertaking is to reestablish British supremacy in the domain in the fanatical sway-force of the late prophet. The territory sought to be reclaimed for Egypt comprises Darfur, Kordofan, Senaar, Taka, the Equatorial provinces and Bahr-el-Ghazal—in all 1,000,000 square Egyptian rule. In that year the revolt of the mahdi made it free. After the mahdi's death one of his lieutenants succeeded, and, with Ondurman as his capital, has since ruled over most of the territory. The khalifa still holds several of the prisoners taken at Khartoum. Last year France was said to have sent an expedition to the Soudan, but nothing has been heard of it.

DANGEROUS FIRE RISKS.

Insurance Companies Ask High Rates for Some of Them.

The marine store business is a risk which many companies refuse to avoid. A dealer may have stuff on his premises, consisting of rags, old dresses, and the like, which is probably worth several thousands, yet the insurance companies will refuse to insure him at any price. In the case of an ordinary householder, most of these articles would be insured without a demur as household goods.

Lumber yards and sawmills are not regarded by insurance companies with a very favorable eye. The stock of a lumber yard was once insured at a moderate premium, but when a small sawmill was built on one portion of the premises, the next insurance company rates. Owing to the addition of the mill, where the premium before was something like $25, about $300 was required, and this fever was only to be granted on the strict condition that no lumber was to be stored within 15 feet of the mill.

HARD SKULL SAVES HIM.

Mexican Receives a Volley of Bullets in the Head and Lives.

A Mexican was condemned to death for stealing a can of sardines, remarks the Buffalo Express. He was taken out by a party of soldiers, received a volley of bullets at close range, and was left for dead. As soon as the soldiers had gone he spread a blanket and walked to the City of Mexico, many miles away, where he entered a hospital. The doctors found three rifle bullets imbedded in his skull, but he was not fatally injured. They removed them, and the town which ordered him executed was him back in order to shoot him again.

But he objects. He argues that if subjected to the discomfort of execution a second time his health might be greatly endangered. There is no doubt in that. The man's plea ought to hold good. It is a serious menace to a man's health to be taken out and shot, and the fellow who survives the experience once ought to be spared a second attempt in order that he may come to the states and go the rounds of the museums as the man with the iron skull.

English Humor.

A strange society was brought to light during the hearing of a case before the Thames magistrate. Several men were charged with stealing a watch from a sailor, and were all discharged except Alexander Fullerton, on whom was found a savings bank book for $245 and a card of membership of a society with a curious title. It bore the following inscription: "National Liars' association—Having been a member of the above association, and finding you are a bigger liar than myself. I must congratulate you on receiving one of this card." It must be gratifying to the East end community, as well as a tribute to Fullerton's own abilities, that he had found no one worthy of relieving him of the card. The magistrate remanded him for inquiries.

Death in Japan.

There are no undertakers in Japan. When a person dies his nearest relatives put him into a coffin and bury him. The mourning does not begin until after burial.

The Constitutionalist.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

The matter with Hanna is that he is too much of a boss.

The Daily Press has been designated by the Board of Freeholders as one of the official papers of the county.

For a downright pretty town, where can Somerville's superior be found just at this time of the year?—Somerville Unionist-Gazette.

Right here in Plainfield.

The Town Improvement Association proposes to offer prizes in money for the best kept backyard bounding the railroad tracks.

It is understood that Charles A. Reed will appear for Policeman Vanderweg and Flynn at the Common Council meeting next Monday night, when the charges of insubordination will be aired.

The Press congratulates Editor Pearsall, of the Westfield Standard; he has been elected for the fourth time as a delegate of the New York Press Club to the International League of Press Clubs.

Spitting on the floor of public buildings, railway cars or ferry boats, is now a misdemeanor in the city of New York. Now is the time for some one to invent a pocket cuspidor for the use of the urbane metropolitanite.

Among the names mentioned as candidates for the office of Sheriff of Union county on the Republican ticket, this fall, The Press is glad to notice the name of the present Under-Sheriff, L. W. Miller, of Fanwood.

The following advertisement in a Boston paper tells a brief but eloquent story of the rise, decline and fall of eycling enthusiasm in one instance: "With my hand in a sling and my leg in a splint, I will sell my bicycle, three days in use, cheap."

A Paterson man attempted to kiss a damsel of that town, and yesterday he was ordered to pay a fine of $500 by Judge Hooper. Rather a costly attempt. If he had succeeded perhaps the smack would have been worth the price paid for it.

There is no town in New Jersey where there is more enthusiasm or work in the aid of equal suffrage than in this city, and it is eminently proper, therefore, that this should be the meeting place today for the State and county associations of the supporters of the movement.

If nothing more, a grand fusilade of words is being conducted by McKinley's opponents, and all the while McKinley remains silent. Between the demands of the east and the west, widely divergent as they are on the vital money question, the Ohio Napoleon knows not which way to jump.

The big New York papers, who are publishing columns about McKinley and how he is gobbling up the delegates, are doing so with the idea that it may help him to get the nomination, and then they will have the fun and a part of the credit in knocking him into obscurity. It is a great game.

We congratulate Hon. James J. Bergen upon his selection as delegate to the National Democratic Convention from the Third District. Somerset stands little show for honors in the district, either from the Republican or Democratic side. Monmouth and Middlesex are abominably greedy.—Unionist-Gazette.

Senator Sewell is bumptious. He says that he has been chairman of the National delegations for five consecutive times, and that he proposes to get there this time. One refreshing feature of his remarks is the knowledge that there is one monopoly which the suave and wealthy John does not monopolize.

The meeting of the New Jersey Forestry Association at Plainfield on Thursday next will deserve much credit if it enlarges public interest in the growth of trees and the preservation of the forests of New Jersey. The great forest fires in South Jersey, which not only dissolate the wooded districts, but threaten the towns and villages and destroy the isolated dwellings in their paths, will doubtless emphasize the words of the lecturers and add points to their arguments. These forestry meetings are usually very interesting, and without doubt the one at Plainfield will be of advantage and instruction to all who attend.—Elizabeth Journal.

In the Spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of—DeWitt's Little Early Risers, for they always cleanse the liver, purify the blood, and invigorate the system. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

It is said that the Elizabeth Common Council are contemplating the adoption of the law providing for the appointment of members of the Board of Education by the Mayor.

The people of Delford, a little town in Bergen county, have come to the conclusion that good roads are the proper caper, and they will vote on an appropriation of $16,000 to macadamize six miles. If the appropriation is carried, only the chronic croakers will regret the improvement after it is made.

The National Prohibition Convention will be held at Pittsburg on the 28th inst. George Lamont is one of the delegates-at-large. There is danger of a serious division between the eastern and western factions. The former desires to restrict the issue to temperance only, while the latter desire to traverse all public questions.—Somerset Democrat.

The New Brunswick Home News says that "in Plainfield a policeman is to be tried for wearing his trousers too high. Here a policeman can go on a high old drunk and do other naughty things without any notice being taken." But then it must be remembered that there is considerable difference between Plainfield and New Brunswick.—New York Tribune.

W. J. Bryan, the silver-tongued boy orator of the Platte, asserts that the Nebraska Democrats are for silver at 16 to 1, and no compromise. "We cannot be frightened by threatened bolts," remarks the Hon. Mr. Bryan. There is a well grounded opinion that if there are any bolts in the Democratic National convention on the money question, they will come from west of the Mississippi.

As The Press advocated on the 11th of March, the day following the spring elections, the Somerset county Board of Freeholders selected that honorable and upright citizen, William J. Logan, of Bridgewater township, as Director of that body. Mr. Logan, while an enthusiastic Democrat, is also a liberal-minded gentleman. The county of Somerset is fortunate in having such a citizen as Mr. Logan to administer over its affairs.

It was eminently proper for the Board of Freeholders as a recognition of past and assurance of future efficient service to again place the mantle of the Directorship on J. Frank Hubbard of this city. Mr. Hubbard is experienced in the duties of presiding officer of the county legislature, and his well-known fairness in the treatment of his colleagues and ability to quickly dispatch business has made him a popular member on whom they were happy to confer an honor.

A New Brunswick minister was walking along a lonely road Sunday night, returning from an outlying parish, when he hailed a passing driver whom he thought was a friend of his. But it seems not, for a crack of a pistol instantly followed and a bullet whizzed by the parson's head. The moral of this is that every pedestrian should carry a light on a lonely road. With an illumination, a man's chances for being taken for a highwayman are reduced to the minimum. And there is a supreme satisfaction in knowing that you are not running the risk of being shot full of holes.

Among the merchants who are unwilling to close on Saturday afternoons because of the heavy loss that it would entail, they say, there are some who have had a holiday or another day, say Wednesday. The strongest reason, however, in favor of closing on Saturday is that it enables the employes to get away to the country or the seaside in time to spend one full day there during the hot weather and that means a great deal to those who are shut up in stores all week. Working until 11 or 12 o'clock on Saturday night makes most of them too tired to care about going anywhere on Sunday.—New York Tribune.

All signs in New Jersey point to a Democratic canvass of old-fashioned vigor, conducted with the inspiration of hope, and managed in person by the most accomplished master of the art of practical politics that the party organization in the State has evolved in twenty years. The Democrats of New Jersey are for honest money and the gold standard. They will fight under that flag, and will win or be beaten with their colors flying. Their representatives in Chicago will consent to no dangerous or doubtful utterance on the part of the National Convention. At the same time they will make a tremendous and probably successful attack upon the Republican intrenchments within the State. It is a critical year for the Democracy. The Chairman of the Democratic State Committee for the campaign of 1896 is the senior Senator for New Jersey, the Hon. James Smith, of Newark. His leadership means business. It is quite characteristic of Senator Smith that he should not be content at this juncture with merely representing sound money sentiment in the Senate Chamber at Washington, but should come down into the field of active political management, where his services are at present most needed, and where his abilities are consummate.—New York Sun.

The Press has it on reliable authority that Mr. Clark Moffett, of Sterling, N. J., came to Plainfield a day or two ago and negotiated for five lots on which he intended to erect five small cottages. Before making the purchase he investigated the building ordinance, and now he has returned to Sterling and the lots are still on the market. Too much red tape is the reason assigned for his failure to consummate the deal.

New Jersey's first and most energetic woman lawyer, Miss Mary Philbrook, believes that if you don't get what you want, ask for it. And she does so unabashed. Miss Philbrook had an idea that it would be a good thing for her practice and professional reputation to be appointed as an assistant corporation attorney of Jersey City. Immediately she made known her desire and solicited Mayor Wanser to confer the honor on her. But the Mayor has deferred. However, Miss Philbrook has expressed her opinion, gained some notoriety therefrom and stands ready to capture the prize at some future time. And thus the cause of woman's progress goes marching on.

The Philadelphia bicycle riders say that New Jersey has the best roads in the country for the speeding of the wheel. This may be true enough in a measure, but New Jersey farmers are objecting to the paying of higher taxes in order to make roads for bicycling pleasure parties.—Democrat.

Up here in Union county, where exist the best roads in New Jersey, the farmers are not objecting to paying taxes for the reason assigned by The Democrat. As a matter of fact, they are not kicking at all over the road improvement taxes. They know that they get as much benefit from good roads as any class of people who use them, and it is in appreciation of this fact that they acquiese in their proportionate share of the necessary expense without complaint. The bicyclists can use the Union county roads all they want to, and not a kick will there be.

PLEASANTLY ENTERTAINED.

Miss Minnie Smalley Gives a Birthday Party to Her Young Friends.

An important event in the social life of the younger society of the borough took place Friday, when Miss Minnie Smalley, of Somerset street, tendered her friends a reception, the occasion being her seventeenth birthday. The invited guests completely filled the handsome residence, which was prettily decorated throughout with choice cut flowers and potted plants. Many banquet lamps shed a mild glow of light over the handsome gowns of the young ladies.

Dancing was the principal feature of the evening, a pleasant interruption of which were the piano solos rendered by Miss Ida Randolph, of New York. Music for dancing was furnished by an orchestra under the direction of Prof. Guttman. A delightful repast was enjoyed at midnight and about three o'clock this morning the reception concluded and the guests departed for their homes, wishing the young hostess many more such pleasant birthdays. Miss Smalley received a large number of gifts.

Among those present were: Miss Ida Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph and Mr. Weighart, of New York, the Misses Josephine Fritts, Tony MacLaughlin, Jessie Coddington, Jennie Simpson, Lena Smalley, Ida, Belle and Hattie Lewis, Maggie Summers, Mamie De Nise, Edith Miles and Etta Blatz; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Baglin, Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Smalley, Mrs. Summers, Mrs. Dayton, and Messrs. Jed Smalley, William Morrison, Marry Coddington, Will Cadmus, John and Will De Meza, Arthur Cannon, Edward Smith, William Kitchen, John MacLaughlin, Benjamin La Vere, Edwin Smalley, Frank Smalley, Frank Blatz and John Steiner.

Democrats, Be of Good Courage.

Democrats, do not be dismayed at the bluster of the Republican pretension and noise. In 1884 and in 1892 they made the same boast and claims as today, and yet the cause of justice triumphed and we elected Grover Cleveland on the promise of cheaper necessaries of life. This we have fulfilled. We have started the wheels of trade and extended our commerce almost to the ends of the earth. The justice of our tariff legislation is apparent to all students of economics, and to the head of every household as he buys the necessities for his family. Democrats, stand firm to Justice's cause.

WORK AND WEAR.

Repairs to Machinery While in Motion.

How Waste May Be Prevented and Energy Maintained.

If a machine works, it must wear out. It matters not whether it is the common plow of the field or the most complicated printing press. Work means waste. It is certain that these machines would last much longer if they did not wear out. Then only some accident would necessitate the purchase of new parts.

The human body is a complicated piece of machinery which is constantly at work. There is not an activity of the body, from the movement of a muscle to the digestion of food, which does not cause waste. Physiology teaches that we are constantly being supplied with new material to take the place of that which is worn out.

When the body is debilitated by disease, how quickly it could be built up, provided we could only allow all the parts complete rest. But, of course, this is impossible, for the changing of the foods into the various organs and tissues of the body means work, and this work means waste. However, we can aid the body in its work and save it much labor.

We can take especial care to use only those foods which are easily digested, and yet are highly nourishing.

It is necessary to add some valuable food which is also a medicine, as cod-liver oil, then we can save the body an immense amount of work by digesting the oil before giving it. How can an oil be digested? If you will consult some work on physiology you will learn that an oil is digested when it is broken up into minute globules, so small that high powers of the microscope are necessary to see the little drops of fat. When an oil has been digested in this way it is called an "emulsion."

This is why Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites is so easily borne by delicate stomachs, does not cause diarrhœa, and never produces gas in the stomach. When persons are ill, the digestion is also weak. But Scott's Emulsion is already digested, hence the body is not obliged to expend strength in preparing it for absorption. You at once see the advantage of Scott's Emulsion over raw cod-liver oil. It also contains the hypophosphites which every one recognizes as such strong tonics to the nervous system.

Scott's Emulsion has been indorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. Ask your doctor. Because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites. Insist on Scott's Emulsion with trade-mark of man and fish. Put up in 50c. and $1.00 sizes. The small size may be enough to cure your cough or help your baby.

DEATH OF GIDEON ALLEN

A RESPECTED AND WELL-KNOWN CITIZEN PASSES AWAY.

He Came to this City When a Young Man and Has Remained Here Ever Since, With the Exception of a Few Years.

In the death of Gideon Allen, of 35 Grandview avenue, which occurred last Tuesday, North Plainfield looses a valuable and highly regarded citizen, who since his birth has always been identified with the interests of the borough. Mr. Allen had been ill about six weeks, and toward the end he grew rapidly worse.

Gideon Allen was a son of the Daniel and Hetty Allen, and was born on a farm at Washingtonville seventy-four years ago. During his boyhood days he remained on the farm, but when he became a young man he secured a position with Jackson Pound, who kept a bakery where George Voehl now conducts the business on West Front street. He remained with Mr. Pound until he had learned the trade, and then went to Easton where he opened a bakery. He continued the business for several years, when he gave it up, and accepted a position as salesman with Ducker & Hetfield, Brooklyn bakers.

He held the position about thirty years, after which he retired to private life.

When a young man he married Miss Hetfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hetfield, of Scotch Plains, who is now living. Four children survive him. Mrs. Eugene Moore, Mrs. F. O. Smith, John and Howard Allen, also one brother, Eustlive Allen, of Newark.

Mr. Allen was well known for his many excellent qualities and his upright method of doing business. For many years he was a faithful member of the First Baptist church and always attended the services. In politics he was a Republican.

Pretty Home Wedding.

The marriage of Miss Amelia L. Greder, of Lincoln place, and Frank Sinclair, of Bloomsbury, was celebrated Saturday evening at 9 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Thomas Melcher, of Lincoln place. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. C. Johnston, pastor of Grace M. E. church. Jacob Voehl, guardian of the bride, was best man, and Mrs. Thomas Melcher was bridemaid. After the marriage a reception was held. Mr. and Mrs Sinclair will reside at Bloomsbury. They were the recipients of many useful presents. There were about twenty-five guests present, who witnessed the marriage.

BASEBALL STARTS WELL

PLAINFIELD AND CRANFORD OPEN THE SEASON IN THIS CITY.

A Good-Sized Crowd Present, Among Them Being Several Old-Time Cranks—Plainfield Won by a Score of 16 to 5.

Well! well! well! were the exclamations heard Saturday afternoon on the new baseball grounds which were opened by the Y. M. C. A. team, as one after another of the old cranks appeared. It reminded one of the old baseball days when the crowds were accustomed to gathering on the La-Grande avenue grounds, and were perfectly willing to sit or stand, for two hours, while the favorite team were losing or being done by their opponents. It really did one's heart good on Saturday to see such old-time cranks as Charley Burnett, Samuel Wilbur, Alex Mallinson, S. C. Peck, W. W. Pearson, Charley Reed, Jos. Garrett, and a host of others, who have always been identified with the national game, on the grounds. Then there was a goodly number of Plainfield divines present, which gave a tone to the affair. Of course, the small boy was in evidence, and while he is not the same one who was a figure in the good old days, his capacity for yelling and shouting is just as large. The fair sex must not be forgotten, for they were also present to cheer the home team and give them encouragement.

Manager McLaughlin was present with his eight stalwart young men who were to battle against the Cranfords. They took to the field and during their alloted practice time they covered the field in a manner that reminded one of a lot of colts. They fielded in a way that gave evidence that good ball is going to be played and considering that it was their first time together the team did remarkably well. Owing to an injury, Johnson was unable to pitch, and McLaughlin was obliged to take his place. Another change was made in the field in consequence and Sprowl was stationed in right field. The new catcher, Dennis of New York, showed up well behind the bat, and while he did not accomplish much at the bat, it is thought that he will improve. Major as short stop appeared in good form and he will undoubtedly be a favorite as will also Sanson in left field; both are good hitters and neither one appear to be muscle-bound. In fact the whole team seem to be well chosen. McKelvey is just the man for second base and Simmons at first base and Cory at third, did good work and will continue to improve if allowed to play long enough to get used to their positions. Townley is located in centre field and he put up a fine game, accepting every chance and doing good work at the bat, while Sprowl in right field played a very even game and helped materially in making runs. McLaughlin pitched an excellent game and held the visitors down to three hits.

The game began at 4 o'clock and at first it looked as though it was going to be very close, until the fifth inning when the home team made nine runs, which practically took the heart out of the visitors. They were plucky, however, and played their best till the last, hoping that lost honors could be regained, but luck was against them. Early in the game Cox, the pitcher for the visitors, attempted to stop a hard hit ball, and a finger on his right hand was injured This handicapped him very much and he seemed to loose control of the ball. The game was devoid of any brilliant plays, with the exception of a neat double made by Townley and McKelvey.

Below will be found the score in full. It will be seen that the Y. M. C. A. team won very easily:

SUMMARY.

Earned runs—Y. M. C. A., 9; Cranford, 0. Two-base hits—McKelvey, 2; Sanson 1; Barrett, 2. Three-base hits—Sanson. Double plays—Townley to McKelvey. Passed balls—Dennis, 1; Rolleh, 1. Wild pitches—McLaughlin, 1; Cox, 1. Left on base—Y. M. C. A., 7; Cranford, 4. Time of game—Two hours. Umpire—Mr. Ellis.

The large crowd present thoroughly enjoyed the contest, as was evidenced by their presence, and baseball bids fair of returning to its popularity as of yore. The grounds are located where the old athletic games were held years ago, just off of Washington avenue, not far from Front street, and a more delightful spot could not have been chosen. It is safe to say that many a good game will be witnessed there this year, and it only remains now for the people of Plainfield to turn out and support the team and encourage them in their efforts to give good ball. Seating accommodation will be provided and one could not spend an afternoon more pleasantly than to visit the grounds and enjoy a game in this cool and well-shaded locality.

INTEREST ALL CLASSES.

The Work of the Whittier House System of by Miss Cornelia F. Bradford.

In spite of the heat, Monday, the lecture room of the Congregational church was crowded with those who gathered to hear Miss Cornelia F. Bradford, head worker of Whittier House, Jersey City, the only college settlement in New Jersey, tell of the work there.

Whittier House has only been established a little more than two years. The work was begun in an unoccupied room in Rev. Mr. Scudder's People's Palace. Now it occupies an entire house. The workers seek in every way to prove themselves friendly and the hundreds who daily throng the settlement, show how fully they have won the hearts of the people. There are three classes of helpers: resident, semi-resident and non-resident, a device of college bred men and women, who gladly give of the advantages they have received to those who have been shut out from them. A large number of classes of all sorts, from Latin and elocution to military and dancing, have been established and are fully attended. There are also many clubs, the men's clubs, which have for their object the making of better citizens, the women's and children's club, all of which have a large membership and are thoroughly enjoyed.

THE FIRST PICNIC.

The Junior Epworth League of Monroe Avenue Chapel Enjoy Themselves.

The members of the Junior League of the Monroe Avenue chapel enjoyed a delightful picnic Saturday at Brown's woods. They left the chapel at about 10 o'clock in the morning with Rev. W. C. O'Donnell and Miss Charlottee Aldrich, as chaperones. At the woods the gay party called a halt, and there they remained until the setting sun reminded them that the dinner hour was near at hand. Lunch was, of course, eaten in the woods, and a big bunch of bananas and a large bag of peanuts furnished the needful refreshments during the remaining portion of the day. Some of the older people went down to the woods in the afternoon and enjoyed the fun as well as the younger ones. About forty were present.

For Your Protection.

Catarrh "cures" in liquid form to be taken internally, usually contain either mercury or iodide of potassa, or both, which are injurious if not long taken. Catarrh is a local, not a blood disease, caused by sudden change to cold and damp weather. It starts in the nasal passages. Cold in the head causes excessive flow of mucus and, if repeatedly neglected, the results of catarrh will follow, and oftentimes an offensive discharge. Ely's Cream Balm is the acknowledged cure for these troubles and contains no mercury nor any injurious drug.

HETTY GREEN IS MAD.

THE RICHEST AMERICAN WOMAN IS AFTER J. EVARTS TRACY.

She Claims That Mr. Tracy's Law Firm Have Wrongfully Confiscated Papers of Her Father's Estate.—Mr. Tracy's Say.

Mrs. Hetty Green, America's richest woman, is arter J. Evarts Tracy, of West Eighth street, this city, who is a prominent lawyer in New York, with a sharp stick, figuratively speaking. Associated with Joseph Choate, Mr. Tracy was the counsel for Henry A. Barling, the late trustee of Mrs. Green's father's estate. The essential points of the affair are taken from the New York Sun of yesterday and today as follows:

"Mrs. Green recently secured the appointment of Edward H. R. Green, her son, as executor of the estate of her father, Edward Mott Robinson, to succeed Mr. Barling; and according to the story told Saturday, when Mr. Green went to the office of the Robinson estate, at 45 Cedar street, he found that the seals which had protected the safe since Mr. Barling's death had been broken and that important papers that should have been there were missing.

"'When we went to have my son appointed trustee, Tracy appeared to oppose it,' says Mrs. Green. 'He was just awful. When Judge Lawrence asked him why he opposed Ned, Tracy said that it was because of Ned's connection with Texas Midland. Then when that objection wasn't received, Tracy said Ned shouldn't be appointed because he was remainderman. Judge Lawrence said that as the estate was coming to Ned in the end there was no better man to serve as trustee.

"'Then what do you think that man Tracy wanted to do?' asked Mrs. Green with rising indignation. 'Why, he asked Judge Lawrence to give him the papers and not let Ned have them. Judge Lawrence is a fine gentleman and won't be bulldozed by Choate and that crowd, and he said:

"'Why, Mr. Tracy, I am surprised that a lawyer of your standing would ask for such a thing. How can I nominate a substituted trustee without giving him the powers of a trustee?'

"Well, Ned went to Richmond and demanded the papers and securities so that his lawyers, Evarts, Choate & Beaman, had told him not to. Ned didn't want to go back to the court, and so he waited. Richmond and Tracy thought they owned the office at 35 Cedar street. Richmond was the only one who knew the combination of the safe, and he wouldn't give it to Ned. Tracy and Richmond wouldn't even give my boy a key to the office, and he had to go to the janitor and have one made.

Then Ned, when he found out that Richmond had already sent ten boxes of papers away, dismissed him. But Richmond wouldn't go. He said that Tracy had told him not to go, and Ned couldn't make him. My poor boy, who was nearly worried to death, didn't want the Judge to think we were quarrelsome, and he let Richmond stay. Finally my lawyers wrote to Evarts, Choate & Beamen, and complained about this refusal to let us have the papers. That did no good, and then we threatened to sue them. Then they consented to let us have a part of the papers. We decided to take those and fight for the rest. On Monday a partial inventory was made, and then my son had to go to Chicago.

Mr. Tracy does not seem to be very much worried over the charges that have been brought against him by Mrs. Green. He laughed about them when talking to a Sun reporter at his home in Plainfield Sunday.

"I don't care to get into a newspaper controversy with Mrs. Green," he said, when asked to make a statement.

"But the charges seem to be very grave."

"Well," he said with a smile, "they aren't the first grave charges she has made. She accused Mr. Barling of having stolen $3,000,000 and of having killed her father, of having forged a will. Why, I believe that she held the candle for her father when he signed that will."

"But she says that she has a letter from your firm saying that you have the papers."

"Have you seen the letter?" he asked, laughing. "You have only Mrs. Green's word for it."

"Her lawyers made a formal statement last night that they have the letter."

"H'm!" said Mr. Tracy. "Well, I don't think we have done anything unlawful. I have nothing to say now. When Mrs. Green says something in the proper manner, then maybe I'll answer her."

Mrs. Green is known as a most erratic woman, and Mr. Tracy's friends in this city, where he is well known, realize that the charges, if there is any substance to them at all, are greatly exaggerated.

OPENING DAY AT WOODBRIDGE.

Hotly Contested Races Between the Steppers of This Vicinity.

The Rahway and Woodbridge Driving Club opened their new track, which is situated about a mile and a half from Woodbridge, on Saturday, and the event from every standpoint was a great success. The track, which is one of the fastest and best half-mile rings in the State, was in perfect condition, owing to the care and good management of the association. And the crowd, which consisted of four good races, two trotting and two pacing, was gotten off without a hitch by their able secretary, H. D. Crowell. The official judges of the day were J. W. Johnson, of this city, and J. Crowell, of Rahway. Timers, J. T. Scott and R. H. Smalley, of this city. National Trotting Association rules governed. The Plainfield judges were met at the train by C. A. Campbell and Vice-President F. F. Amess, and on the way to the track made a stop at Mr. Campbell's elegant farm and after partaking of his hospitality, proceeded on their way. There were between ten and twelve hundred people at the track when the horses were called for the first race, the majority having come from Woodbridge, Amboy, Rahway and Plainfield. President Eyer, who was in the stand, said that he was more than pleased with the attendance, as it showed that the people from the adjacent towns had taken an interest in the sport. There will be trotting at this track every Saturday afternoon during the summer months and between the two associations, Plainfield and Woodbridge, there ought to be no end of sport for the lovers of the light harness horse. The first race called was the 2:40 trot. Four horses started in this class, namely: Jamie, Gold Dust, Gerd Benham and Dandy. The racing looking gelding Jamie, owned and driven by Mr. Carpenter, won this race in straight heats, with Gold Dust, driven by Charley Brower, the contesting horse.

St. Albans, Highland Boy and Myrtletwig met again in the 2:25 class and the game stallion again outfooted the pair and won the race in straight heats. They got the word to a good start, the first heat with Highland Boy at the pole, St. Albans second, and Myrtletwig on the outside, and it was a horse race from stand to stand, but at the wire St. Albans had the best of it by a length in 2:28. Highland Boy second, and Myrtletwig third.

There were only two starters in the 2:30 race, the black mare Hazel and the bay gelding Harry, but it was a horse race from wire to wire, and was won by the handsome mare Hazel, driven by Mr. Sweet. She won the first heat in 2:30¼, and then dropped a heat to the gelding in 2:36, but won the next and deciding heat in 2:37.

Three horses scored for the word in the 2:40 race, which was a split heat race, the first heat going to the good gelding Rey, from Rahway, but the second and third heats were won by the fast and good finisher, Ned Davis, driven by Mr. Cortright. Mr. Carpenter's gelding, Joe Boy, went a good race, but only got third position in the summary, as he failed to get a heat. The summary is as follows:

2:40 class—Trotting.

Deputy County Clerk of Hunterdon.

Elmore D. Moffett, of this city, who retired from the Deputy County Clerkship of Union county the first of last January, is now filling the same office in Hunterdon county. Mr. Moffett commenced his duties in his new position last Wednesday, having succeeded George Bell, who has been the deputy for some time past. Mr. Moffett is thoroughly experienced in the work of the office, and it is probable that he will move his family to Flemington, where the county seat is located.

Plainfield a Winner at Checkers.

SUSPENDED FOR 30 DAYS

SENTENCE OF POLICEMAN VANDERWEG FOR INSUBORDINATION.

Patrolman Flynn Pleaded Not Guilty and Both of the Officers Wrote Letters Apologizing for Their Conduct.

A representative and large audience assembled in the lobby of the Council Chamber last Monday for the purpose of hearing the trial of Patrolmen Flynn and Vanderweg, charged with being disobedient and using profane language, but their hopes were dashed, for the matter was quickly and amicably settled to the satisfaction of those interested, and a large portion of the crowd left the lobby.

President See and Councilman Barrows, Fisk, Stebbins, Frost, Ginna, Tolles, Serrell and Westphal answered the roll-call.

Mr. Fisk moved that the rules be suspended and the trial of the patrolmen be taken up at once, which was done.

Mr. Barrows then presented a letter from Patrolman Flynn which was read by the clerk. It stated that the officer could not plead guilty to the charges, but he regretted very much any act on his part that appeared disrespectful to the Board of Police or his superior officers, and he did not wilfully disobey. The reason he gave for not appearing for inspection on April 11th, was that he was excused in advance. He did not report April 20th at 6:30 to be measured for a suit for the reason that the hour was not specified, and he thought that he was to appear before going on duty. He said that he did go to Newark to be measured the day after he received the order. The night previous he was on duty and in the morning went home and went to bed. The order was given verbally to a member of his family and when he awoke it was too late to go to Newark and return before going on duty. He stated further that he looked for Sergeant Kiely at the time, but could not find him till the day afterward when he explained the matter.

Mr. Barrows then made a motion that the charges be dismissed. The motion prevailed.

Patrolman Flynn was present and after thanking the Council retired.

At this time Mr. Barrows presented a letter from Patrolman Vanderweg. This officer pleaded guilty to the charges preferred and apologized to the Mayor and the Board of Police for impudent actions. He said that he never felt not intended disrespect for those gentlemen. At the time he was accused of being insolent, he claims he had a sore throat and was hoarse. In regard to appearing for inspection, he stated that he had no clothes to inspect and did not think that he was expected to appear. Mr. Vanderweg stated that he did not swear in the presence of superior officers, but before other patrolmen while off duty. In regard to his trousers being too high, he said that he now realized that it was his duty to obey, though his trousers were so arranged to prevent his stepping on them. He regretted the fact that he had caused any complaint, and stated that if given an opportunity he would obey the law in spirit and in letter.

In answer to the above, Mr. Barrows stated that there had been considerable comment in regard to the charges, and many people thought they were trifling matters, especially about the trousers. Mr. Vanderweg, he said, came before the Mayor and Board not willing to obey, and thought that the rules could be easily broken, but not so. If you go to school, he said, there are rules to obey, and its the same in business. Success, he further said, depends on discipline. Mr. Barrows then offered a resolution that Patrolman Vanderweg be suspended for thirty days without pay. The motion was carried, as was also another one by Mr. Barrows, that a copy of the resolution be sent to the Chief of Police. President See announced the result to the officer, and as he had nothing to say, he retired after thanking the Council.

The regular order of business was then taken up and the Clerk read a communication from the Corporation Counsel regarding the attachment suit of Arthur N. Pierson and J. G. Unkeper against M. Honan & Sons. It is said that in respect to the notice served on the City Treasurer by Pierson and Unkeper that Honan claims the amount of $2,178.83 on moneys in the hands of the treasurer owing from the city to M. Honan & Sons, the lien claimants had failed to bring action within the required time and that subsequently they levied an attachon said moneys by a suit brought in the Union County Circuit Court. M. Honan & Sons had filed a bond to the Sheriff with the American Surety Co., as surety, and entered their appearance to the action. The bond had been approved by Judge Ben Vanschycke of the Supreme Court and thereby the claims are released and the moneys also released from any lien under the attachment. A letter from Frank Bergen, counsel for Pearson and Unkeper, accompanied the above opinions. It set forth that the clients do not claim lien on the moneys in possession of the city of Plainfield, claimed by Honan & Sons. Mr. Marsh accordingly suggested that the Council authorize the treasurer to pay the balance due M. Honan & Sons on account of bills previously ordered paid by the Council, for which warrants were ordered drawn. The suggestion was followed out on a motion offered by Mr. Dumont.

The Board of Education in a communication asked the Council to approve an act of the Legislature which gives them power to borrow money, issue bonds and incur indebtedness to the end that the board can secure $25,000 for the purpose of erecting a primary school building on Berckman street, between Midway avenue and East Second street, to accomodate the children.

The board claims that the present number of buildings are not sufficient for the increase of population, hence their request. They also stated that the law giving them such power is void, but the necessity for the building urges them to make the appeal. The matter was referred to the finance committee, and later Mr. Dumont offered a resolution that the Council approve the above to the amount of $25,000 for the erection of the school building as specified above. The resolution prevailed. Mr. Fisk then moved that the resolution be spread on the minutes, and that a copy be sent to the president and secretary of the board. The motion was adopted.

Corporation Counsel Marsh reported on the contract between the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company and the city, and suggested several changes. He was instructed to arrange a copy of the contract as suggested and return it to the Council. Assessor J. A. Hubbard in a letter stated that he was ready for the tax books as soon as the Council would supply them and on Mr. Fisk's motion the clerk was instructed to purchase them. Mr. Hubbard also stated that it was important that Field, Columbia, Leland and Martine avenues and Rose street, be numbered, to facilitate matters in making assessments. The matter was refefred to the street committee.

Mr. Frost presented a bill of M. Honan & Sons for 7½ per cent. reservation in their account with the city, and on motion of Mr. Westphal, of the auditing committee, the bill was ordered paid. The Council then adjourned.

Rescued the Pet Dog.

Michael Weber, of East Third street, had an exciting experience yesterday at the Elm street bridge which spans the brook. He has a very valuable dog and in some manner the canine fell into the brook, but strange enough the dog could not swim, and to save his life Mr. Weber was obliged to jump into the water and rescue his pet dog. He received a severe drenching, but felt well repaid.

Marble and Granite Works,

30

Somerset st., North Plainfield.

If you have not engaged your work I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertise for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe in warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

HOW ONE WIFE MANAGED.

Why John Weeks Built a Pretty New Home.

OLD SAYING—"What can't be cured must be endured." New version—"What can't be endured must needs be cured."

A very tired woman was Malvina Weeks, and she said she should never be rested again till she could have the house painted and shingled.

Every shower that came over the hills brought hurry and worry with it, for she must take down everything hanging in the lean-to, and set pails in half a dozen places in the attic, and the carpet in the end room had already been taken up because the numerous wettings that it had received were spoiling it, and the brilliant colors were all running together in one indistinguishable blur.

The paint was all off the house in some places and fast coming off in others; in fact, the cottage was in a state of "peel" all over. The neighbors had begun to speak about it, and say to Malvina how nice it would look painted in light colors. And down at the sewing circle one lady had heard that she was going to have her house painted, and another asked "if she'd got to hev paintin' done this fall?"

When she returned from that meeting, she decided she would not attend another till the house was either painted or she could say with truth that she expected it would be.

She had asked and asked John to have it done, and for two years she had asked in vain. First, John must have a new barn, for "A merciful man is merciful to his beast," and then he must have a new binder, for it would save half the time, and he would need but one man.

In vain she told him the house looked, in vain she told of the peeling paint, in vain she bewailed the new rag carpet ruined by the dripping water, and said how tired she was of setting pails, and how afraid even to go to the nearest neighbor for fear of a sudden shower and no one at home to attend to it.

Now his last refusal was ringing in her ears, and the poor woman, tired out with the numerous cares of a farmer's wife, just sat down and cried. But if you think a woman's tears end the matter, you are much mistaken. The tears are only the beginning.

When she wanted anything done, John was always ready to start for the poorhouse, and was quite sure that anything laid out on the house, inside or out, was only so many paving stones on the road to the grave, roomy old farmhouse where the dozen or so poor and crippled ones of the town were cared for.

The first time she asked him timidly if he didn't think the house needed paint, he said: "Yes, I do, but we should go to the poorhouse if we got everything we fancied."

When she wondered if he couldn't have the roof patched, he said: "No, he couldn't lay out nothin' this year, for that binder had jest about swamped him, an' he calc'lated he'd have ter go ter the poorhouse if he kep' on spendin' money."

She heard about the poorhouse till she was tired of it, and one day when she was out in the berry pasture, she sat down and looked at the building which could be seen in the distance just over the hill, and, with a queer feeling at her heart, she thought if she did have to go to the poorhouse, it would not be such a bad place to stay in, after all.

"IF YOU WANT TO GO TO THE POOR HOUSE YOU CAN."

Next day she went about her work very quietly, and stole away in the afternoon to Widow Smith's for a little while. The second day she made one more effort. "Don't you think you could have something done to the roof after you get the hay out of the way, John?"

"If you want to go to the poorhouse, you can, I don't," was the concise answer.

When John came in at night, his supper was ready, but his wife was not to be seen. He thought she would be in in a moment, but after resting awhile and seeing no sign of her, he decided to eat, as she had probably been called to some one of the neighbors. On his plate lay a note:

"DEAR JOHN: I have made arrangements with Widow Smith to come in three times a week and wash the windows and clean up the house while I am away. (Good land, where's she goin'?) I was looking at the poorhouse the other day from the Hill pasture, and it did look so nice that I thought it 'd rest to go there. It 's quite as well in there now as 'tis just been painted, and I asked Cousin Hiram if it looked, and she said so; and I'm going to ask Mrs. Grove to let me have the end room for you, for I s'pose it won't be many weeks before you'll come, too. That room looks right down on the meader that leads to our back door, and I think if it 's empty she'll keep it for you, for she's always been real accommodatin' ter me.

"Don't forgit to take down the coats in the lean-to, and set the pails as quick as you can, for it does come in like sixty when it begins. I shall work for my keep there, and if they allow papers to go visitin', I shall come over when I can. Your affectionate wife,

"MALVINA PERKINS."

"Wal, I never see the beat o' that!"

He ate his meal in silence, trying to digest the fact that his wife had taken his frequent allusions to the poorhouse in earnest, and thought if she had to enter the house some time she might as well take advantage of the condition of her own home and avail herself of its shelter at once. "Who'd a-thought she would?" was a question he asked himself over and over as he took the pails and went out to milk.

As he came back, he noticed the scaling paint and the bare sashes, and said to himself: "It looks wus'n I thought it did." Then he remembered his last remark to her, that she could go to the poorhouse if she wanted to, he didn't. She had taken him at his word.

Just at dusk, the keeper of the poorhouse drove up, and, stopping before the house, said to the man sitting on the doorstep: "Hello, Weeks, met with reverses?"

"No, not specially. Why?"

"Wal, Mis' Weeks she cum up an' talked with my wife alone, and asked if she might stay and help her a spell, an' my wife's real glad she's come, cos she does think your wife knows a leetle the nicest about doin' pickles an' things of anybody round, an' she put her in the spare room, an' sent me down to see you."

John chewed a straw vigorously while he wondered what Mr. Grove thought, and what excuse he, one of the largest tax payers in town, could make for sending his wife to the poorhouse. He tried to seem perfectly easy as he said: "Wal, the fact is, I told her she could go. I'm goin' ter hev the house shingled and painted, an' I thought's long's the smell o' paint makes her sick, I'd git her out of the way; but I 'spect she'll be some s'prised, cos I didn't let on that I was goin' ter hev it done."

"All right, neighbor, I won't say nothin' 'bout it," and turning the horse he drove away, but he wondered, and muttered to himself that "'twas curis doin's, and he bet there was suthin' that he warn't told."

However, the next time he passed the Weeks place, there were men at work on the roof, and men painting the kitchen inside, and he thought the front room was being papered, but he could not quite tell.

Meanwhile Vina was homesick, and though she went into the end room and looked out over the meadow that she knew reached her home just out of sight beyond the woods, it only made the tears come faster, and she wondered if she couldn't have stood the risks and the peeling paint a little longer, and then, perhaps, she might have coaxed John.

John was homesick, too, and hurried the carpenters and painters till they made jokes among themselves about his impatience. The home was not home with Vina gone, and he thought perhaps she might get so used to living in a big house that she would never again care for the little house she had called home so long.

With fear and trembling he harnessed the horse, and put on his suit of clothes and started for the poorhouse. "She's awful set, an' ef she's tuk a notion she's a goin' ter live in that big poorhouse, nothin'll fetch er back 'thout I told her I'd build a house next year, she'd come." So he tried to go over all the arguments he would use with the woman who was more ready to return than he could possibly be to have her.

She sat on the back porch knitting, when Mrs. Grove called her to answer the doorbell, for her hands were in the bread. John Weeks' argument fled, for Malvina threw her arms around his neck and sobbed:

"I've been so lonesome, oh, John!"

And he patted her shoulder and said, "So've I, Viny, so've I."

Then when she could think she said, with a curious expression on her face, "Have you come to stay?"

"No, I say, Viny, I'm willin'—I'll do anything—I'll build a house if you'll only come back to live. Miss Smith can't make bread fit to chew!"

Happy woman that went riding down the valley by John's side, and told him of her reasons for the house. Happy John when they came out beyond the the woods, and the cottage with its new paint and bright blinds looked at her. And then Vina put her head down on his shoulder, and cried that she would never go away again, and that it was all wrong for her to go when she did.

And he said very gruffly: "It was all right and she could go again whenever she wanted to, if she'd only come back which he come after her."

She does not look longingly at the big poorhouse now, and all the mountains it. Malvina has had the sewing circle meet in the parlor, and she took them all over the house, and showed them the paint and paper, and some one declared: "John must couldn't be called stingy about the house anyway."

Vina repeated it to him, with this addition: "I'd like to have folks think well of you, John."—Household

CITY NURSE'S DUTIES.

THE WORK OF THE PAST REVIEWED AND THE FUTURE PLANNED.

Dr. Simpson Has Fitted Up a Dispensary for the Use of the Nurse—He Plans for Fresh Air Trips for the Poor.

The Plainfield City Union of King's Daughters met Thursday in the Relief rooms, which were filled to their utmost capacity. Rev. Mr. Schenck opened the meeting with the reading of the Scriptures and prayer. Several reports were then made. The treasurer, Mrs. F. Harder, announced a balance in the treasury of $337.54. The report read by Miss Tracy, chairman of the nurse committee, was most encouraging. On Dec. 14th, 1895, Miss Caroline Rendall entered upon her duties as city nurse. Miss Rendall is a graduate of the training school for nurses at the "Woman's Hospital" in Saginaw, Mich., and has also taken a further course at the New York Cancer Hospital. She entered upon her duties with enthusiasm and interest, and has filled the position of city nurse in a most satisfactory manner. Physicians and patients, as well as the visitors from the Circles, speak highly of her work. As the nurse has proved so valuable it has been found that in some cases the poor are glad to pay a small sum for her services, and in such cases it was decided to charge a fee of twenty cents an hour. Twenty-one dollars has been received from these pay cases. The physicians feel that a nominal fee of this kind will save the self respect of the poor. The nurse committee meet regularly each week. Each Circle follows up the cases of the nurse for one month, which have been most effectually treated.

The dispensary, which is now open, has been planned and fitted up by Dr. Simpson, who has given much thought, time and money to the scheme. Dr. Simpson has named it the "King's Daughters' Dispensary," and has asked the services of the nurse for one hour each day to prepare and dispense the medicines. In connection with the dispensary the nurse has been given a closet of her own, where supplies, useful to her in her work, will be kept.

This report was followed by one from the nurse herself. During the past five months Mr. Rendall has nursed under nine physicians, and has had fifty cases in thirty-seven different families, consisting of Hungarians, English, Irish, Americans, Germans and Danish. Miss Rendall said that she felt the duty of the district nurse was to teach her art to the poor and distressed, to teach them to live more hygenic and sanitary lives, how to care for their sick, and to thoroughly appreciate the services of their physicians and friends, the King's Daughters.

The election of officers then took place which resulted as follows: Chairman, Mrs. W. L. C. Gleney; vice-chairman, Mrs. W. W. Howland; recording secretary, Miss Haviland; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Walter McGee; treasurer, Miss Mary E. Tracy.

Dr. Simpson then gave an address, speaking of the value of organization, district nursing and the need of a dispensary. He also referred to a plan which he hopes to carry out, that of taking sick babies and children to the mountains during the summer. Mr. Johnston will grant the use of land for the purpose on Watchung moutains, which is most beautifully situated amid a large grove of trees, grass plot and spring of delicious water. A shelter will be built to take the children to in case of storm. The nurse will assist in the care of the children.

The reports of the work done by each circle, which were most interesting, followed the address, after which Rev. Mr. Schenck spoke a few words upon "Impressions." First, the rapidity with which the business was done; second, that the cross was rightly chosen as their badge, for the King's Daughters followed the verse, "Not to be ministered unto, but to minister;" third, the practical character of the King's Daughters work.

A collection of $7.23 was taken up.

A Rose Tea to Be Given.

Miss Kenyon, of the Plainfield Seminary, is planning a rose tea to be given in aid of the Relief Association in the latter part of May or the early part of June, agreeable to the time of roses. This will be a delightful social event, and, with the underlying motive of aiding so worthy an object as the Relief Association, it should be more beautiful than an ordinary rose tea, that has in itself the elements of beauty.

Autopsy Favorable to the Doctors.

The Coroner's inquest in the case of Mrs. James Kingsley, of Elizabeth, who died on Sunday after an operation on her for the removal of a tumor, will take place Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Freeholders' room. Alderman James Oakes is foreman of the jury. The autopsy was performed by Dr. Mravlag, and it is understood the result exonerates from all blame Dr. John P. Reilly and Dr. Arthur Stern, who performed the operation.

DEATH OF DR. PAGE.

Plainfield's Well Known Woman Physician Succumbs to the Inevitable.

Death came very quietly and peacefully to Miss Rebecca P. Page, M. D., on Saturday at about 7 o'clock, and she passed away after a life filled with good and kindly deeds, at the home of A. D. Mallinson, 206 Watchung avenue, where she has been boarding for some time. She was about 65 years of age. Dr. Page was one of the few successful woman physicians, and has resided in this city for about twenty years. She was well known here and universally respected.

The cause of her death was general debility. She was only confined to her bed for a week, but failed very rapidly. Mrs. Mallinson cared for her and greatly assisted in making her last moments on earth as comfortable as possible. Miss Page was a sincere Christian, and her life was one of piety and gentleness. She attended, when possible, the meetings at the Friends' meeting house on Watchung avenue. She had no living relatives in this city.

Rebecca Porter Page was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Page, of New Brunswick. She was graduated from the New York Medical College for women in the class of 1869. For several years after she was a valued member of the house staff of the hospital connected with that institution, and afterwards practiced successfully in Hartford, Conn., until she came to this city.

A HAPPY SURPRISE.

The Young Friends of Miss Sadie Holmes Give Her a Party.

Miss Sadie Holmes, of Grandview avenue, was given a complete surprise last Friday. The affair was arranged by Miss May Shepperd and William F. Dunn. Miss Holmes, who is a member of the Grace P. E. church choir, attended rehearsal as usual and on her return home about 9 o'clock, she found that her friends were waiting for her and had taken possession of the house. The surprise was so complete that the hostess was unable to say a word. Dancing was the principal feature which all enjoyed exceedingly. About midnight excellent refreshments.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Love, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Garretson, Miss Fenner, Miss May Shepperd, Miss Lizzie Dunn, Miss Mabel Force, Miss Libby Joseph, Miss Cora Young, Miss Lucy Crosson, Miss Ross, William Crawford, William F. Dunn, Edgar Shepperd, Lewis Hummer, Henry Piker, Fred. Ross, Samuel Fenner and Charles Dolliver.

STOOD ON A SNAKE'S HEAD.

Four-Year-Old Hattie Demler's Wonderful Presence of Mind.

The remarkable presence of mind of little Hattie Demler, the four-year-old daughter of George Demler, Jr., of Washingtonville, on Thursday afternoon, doubtless saved her from the bite of a copper head snake, which measured three feet in length. The tot was playing about the yard when she stepped on the head of the reptile. The little girl seemed to realize her danger and she did not move. The snake bored its body above her head in a most threatening way, but Hattie tremously kept her foot on its head and screamed for help. George Mobus, who was working nearby, heard her and came to the rescue. He killed the copper head and the tot was saved from a dangerous injection of poison.

ENTERTAINED AT EUCHRE.

Pleasant Social Event Given at Washington Park Thursday Night.

A delightful euchre party was given by Miss Edith Smock at her home on Washington avenue Thursday evening. The first part of the evening passed very enjoyably in an exciting game of euchre, at which Miss Marion Henderson and Willis West secured first prizes. The booby prize was won by Miss Cornelia Faber. Dancing followed in which dainty refreshments made a pleasing interruption. Among those present were the Misses Ada Smock, Alice Barlow, Cornelia Farber, Marion Henderson and Sarah Long, and the Messrs. William Farber, Willis West, Edmund Rushmore, Alien Laing and Henry C. Wells.

The State Foresters.

The next meeting of the New Jersey Forestry Association will be held in this city on the afternoon and evening of May 21st. B. E. Fernow, Chief of the Division of Forestry, will deliver an election on forestry in the afternoon. Mr. Fernow is well known to Jerseymen, and is familiar with the forest conditions of this State. An excursion is planned to some interesting point.

MADE THE GRAND CHAPLAIN.

Dr. Rodman Chosen to That Office in the Royal Arch Masons.

At the Grand Convocation of Royal Arch Masons, held at Trenton yesterday, Rev. E. M. Rodman, D. D., of this city, was made Grand Chaplain of the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons of New Jersey. Dr. Wagoner, of Somerville, was elected Grand High Priest.

UNION'S EXPENSES INCREASE.

Freeholders Hope, However, to Lower the Tax Rate.

The Committee on Appropriations of the Union County Board of Freeholders met Thursday afternoon at the Court House in Elizabeth and prepared the annual financial budget for the year. It will be submitted to the board next Thursday.

It will cost considerably more to run the county this year than last as several appropriations will have to be increased. The appropriation for the support of the county's insane patients will have to be raised about $3,000, that for the support of the courts $4,000, while there are $32,000 worth of county bonds that will fall due this year and will have to be cancelled, against $19,000 last year. This will make an increase of $13,000 on this item alone.

Notwithstanding the increased cost of running the county, the Elizabeth Freeholders hope the tax rate will be lowered a few points.

RECKLESS YOUNGSTERS.

Boys Who Throw Stones Without Regard to the Result.

The small boys who frequent the courts of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, on Watchung avenue, have been in the habit of throwing small stones about the neighborhood in a most promiscuous manner.

Last Wednesday afternoon William L. McClure, of Crescent avenue, had a narrow escape from a very very serious accident caused by one of these missiles. Mr. McClure was playing on the courts when a stone struck him in the face just below the eye. A cut resulted, but had the stone struck his eye, the result would have been very serious.

A Parlor for the Ladies.

Plainfield's business men already have a high reputation for enterprise, and one of her leading business men, Garret Q. Packer, has introduced a new convenience for his patrons, which is not to be found outside of the large stores of New York and Newark. It is a ladies' parlor, and is located in the basement of Packer's and Gavett's large store in the Jackson building. It is handsomely furnished, and contains all the modern conveniences. The parlor was opened Thursday, and a large number of Plainfield ladies visited it and were greatly pleased.

High Praise for Craig A. Marsh.

Dr. Stephen Smith, of New York, in a letter congratulating the Drs. Hedges on their vindication by court and jury, after referring to the weight which the testimony of both defendants so manifestly had with the Judge and jurors, especially commended the admirable manner in which the legal plan of battle had been arranged and carried out by their counsel, Craig A. Marsh. Coming from this source this is high praise indeed, and the Drs. Hedges have over and over again said the same thing.

Medicinal Qualities of Mountain Water.

Mr. Leveridge, of this city, a celebrated chemist, has discovered that the water which will supply Mountain Park Inn has strong lithia properties and is very healthful, being the equal of the Geneva lithia water. This is an important discovery, as pure wholesome water is essential, especially at such a popular resort as this one gives promise of being.

EATON'S FAST WORK.

He Wins Several Events and Breaks Another World's Record.

Jay Eaton and the Jersey wheel seem to make a winning combination, judging from the way in which the crack rider of the Jersey Wheel Company's racing team is winning at the big indoor meet at Chicago. On Thursday evening he continued his fast work, starting from scratch in the three-mile handicap and finishing first after a most sensational finish. He also rode in the one-mile open, but failed to get a place.

On Friday evening he won two more races, and succeeded in breaking another world's record. It was the mile unpaced on a ten lap track, and he rode the distance in 2:16, one second faster than his world's competition record for the same distance.

The Chicago newspapers are making quite a hero of Eaton, and he has been a great favorite with the large audiences that crowd Tattersall's big building in Chicago. His riding is something remarkable, and, of course, reflects great credit on the Jersey wheel that he is riding on for the first time. From present prospects the Jersey wheel is going to make a big reputation on the track.

A House-Warming.

The Christian Endeavorers at Mt. Pleasant will give a house-warming in their new chapel on May 21st and 22nd in the form of a Festival of Holidays. The management has been placed in the hands of Howard J. Runyon. The fair will be arranged in the form of booths representing the different holidays at which will be for sale useful articles and refreshments. Mrs. De Forest, Mrs. R. C. Potter and Mrs. Runyon will be in charge of the New Year's Day booth and will constitute the reception committee. They will extend a hearty welcome to all who call upon them and will serve iced tea and cakes. The entertainment at this booth will be full of fun. The entertainment will consist of a phonograph exhibition and recitations by a young lady elocutionist. Admission ten cents.

Stole the Gate to Get the Silver Plate.

The gate to the fence in front of P. Wemberton's house, 324 East Front street, on which was a silver plate inscribed with his name, has been stolen, it is supposed, for the purpose of getting the silver plate. Roundsman Mattox was put on the case by Chief Grant, but has been unable to find the thieves. He ascertained, however, that the gate, minus the plate, had been seen at the corner of East Front street and Terrill road, but it is not there now.

Equal Suffragists to Meet.

The Union County Equal Suffrage Association will hold a meeting in the Y. M. C. A. building in this city next Tuesday morning, and in the afternoon a meeting of the New Jersey Woman Suffrage Association will be held at the same place, at which time reports will be made by the delegates to the recent National convention.

Granted 107 Patents.

Walter Scott, of this city, has been granted 107 patents since 1875. This is a record equalled by but a few men in this country. Thomas A. Edison has been granted 711 during the same period.

IN FAVOR OF DRS. HEDGES

THEY WIN THE DAMAGE SUIT INSTITUTED BY JOHN BENNER.

The Trial Occupied Four Days and the Jury Was Out All Night.—Benner Will Appeal to the Supreme Court.

From The Press of May 15th.

To be sued for $10,000 damages, threatened with conviction for malpractice, exposed to the uncertainty of a jury's verdict during a trial lasting five days, that is what Dr. Ellis W. Hedges and his brother, Benj. VanD. Hedges, have undergone this week. This morning they stand forth vindicated. The jury found a verdict in their favor.

The trial was begun last Monday. John Benner claimed his left leg was made crooked by the failure of the two doctors to properly set it.

Beyond his own testimony, the principal evidence in substantiation of this charge was offered by Dr. Cooper, of Westfield. The complainant swore that he had called the attention of the physicians to the fact that he thought that his leg was crooked, but at the time they had convinced him that he was mistaken. Afterwards he called Dr. Cooper, who made an examination on September 3d. On the witness stand Dr. Cooper testified that at the time there was a union of bone and the leg was then crooked. The Drs. Hedges were still treating Mr. Benner. After they had stopped treating him, Dr. Westcott stated, the bone was in the same shape it was when he saw it on September 3d and that it continued in that condition. The general sense of Dr. Cooper's evidence was that the Drs Hedges displayed a lack of ordinary skill and care in the treatment of the case. In support of his allegation of neglect, Mr. Benner stated that Dr. Ellis W. Hedges had told his wife, after they had been treating him for some time, that she could dress the wound just as well as he could. Dr. Mattison also testified for Mr. Benner.

The defense showed that owing to the great laceration of the muscles caused by the violent wrenching of the broken fragments of bone at the time of the accident, the fracture became a compound fracture, an abcess, running down to the bone, having formed on the side of the leg. Their treatment of Mr. Benner was given with the utmost minutia. Expert surgeons, probably the most eminent in this country, namely: Dr. Stephen Smith, professor, author of works on fractures, Bellevue Hospital Surgeon, etc., and Dr. McCosh, professor of surgery in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York city, Attending Surgeon to the Presbyterian Hospital, as well as Drs. Mravlag and Green, of Elizabeth, Dr. Norton, of New York, and Drs. Probasco, Murray and Tomlinson, of Plainfield, testified without contradiction from the surgeons on the other side of the case, that the treatment of the Drs. Hedges was the correct treatment from beginning to end; that they had not made one false step and had not omitted any care, and that Mr. Benner's crooked limb was due to his own fault and not to the fault of the doctors.

Mr. Benner admitted that he had no surgeon at all after he left the Doctors Hedges, and that although he had been told by them to wear a leather support, he wore it a week only and then cast it aside, and from that time on merely had bandages on the limb.

Much expert medical testimony was adduced at the trial. Dr. Probasco saw the case in consultation with the defendants. He testified that the leg was straight when he saw it, at that time there was abcess leading down to the broken fragments of bone, and that the treatment was entirely proper.

Dr. Norton, house surgeon to the Presbyterian Hospital, of New York city, saw Mr. Benner some time after Dr. Probasco's visit. He testified that the leg was straight, that pus was discharging from a bone abscess and that he moved the bones freely on one another, showing that there was no union of bones.

Dr. Stephen Smith, of New York, author of several works on surgery and for forty years Professor of Surgery in Bellevue Medical College, testified that the treatment of Mr. Benner by the Doctors Hedges had been in accordance with the best practice from beginning to end. He examined the plaintiff's leg and testified that from the conditions present union of the bones could not have taken place longer than four months ago, which was four months after he stopped going to Dr. Hedges, and that the crook in the limb was due to walking about on the leg without proper support after leaving the doctor's care.

Dr. McCook, Surgeon to the Presbyterian Hospital, New York city, testified that in the middle of last August he wrote a card of admission for Mr. Benner to come to the Presbyterian Hospital and have an operation of resection done on the then ununited bones. Dr. McCook also testified that the surgical treatment throughout had been above criticism, and from the large amount of provisional callus now thrown out about the seat of fracture, there could not have been union more than three months ago. He testified also as to the high character and surgical ability of the Doctors Hedges.

Dr. Mravlag and Dr. Green, of Elizabeth, and Dr. Murray and Dr. Tomlinson, of this city, also testified that the defendants had done throughout everything that care and skill could do for Mr. Benner.

After the Doctors had testified how they treated the limb, and the numerous experts had declared such treatment to be the very best known to modern surgery, Mr. Benner's experts did not go on the stand to deny it.

The summing up of the counsel occurred yesterday afternoon and occupied three hours, an hour and a half being allowed each side. Mr. Marsh made one of the strongest pleas of his life, as did W. R. Codington, while the summing of Mr. Swackhammer was highly dramatic. He used many devices and comparisons in drawing on the sympathies of the jury, and it is said there were many tears shed during his speech.

Judge Van Syckle charged the jury shortly after three o'clock, and after this it was thought the jury would return in a few minutes with a verdict for the Doctor Hedges. But they stayed out all night and this morning at 9 o'clock they filed into court and announced "no cause for action."

Mr. Swackhamer told a Press reporter this morning that the case would be appealed to the Supreme Court as soon as the proper papers could be made out. He stated that new evidence had been secured.

HITCHED TO AN ICE WAGON.

Thus a Borough Hose Cart is Taken to a Burning House.

A small fire broke out Thursday afternoon at 1:30 in the house 150 Grove street, occupied by Wm. Freize and family, with the result of burning a quantity of clothes which were hanging on a rack just off the second floor. Mr. Dicke, who lives near by, sent in the alarm from Box 152, and the fire bell was rung for fully ten minutes until a team of horses belonging to the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company came along attached to an ice wagon. The horse carriage was fastened to the wagon and taken to the fire, but before they reached the place kind neighbors had extinguished the fire with water.

How the fire broke out is a mystery. Mr. Freize says that he hung a coil of wire and a floor bag near the clothes, and the wire was hot at the time. The family thought they detected smoke, but thought nothing of it until the fire broke out. The damage was slight and there was no insurance. The Ice Company's team brought the hose carriage back to the house.

ASSURED OF QUIETUDE.

Theodore Kurzhals Will Not Proceed Against the Salvation Army Noise.

Through the intervention and influence of a prominent Plainfielder, the movement to call the attention of the Grand Jury to the excessive noise of the Salvation Army has been stopped. Theodore Kurzhals, who was the principal complainant, has been assured by F. C. Harder, one of the strongest supporters of the Army in this city, and who has great influence with the officers and soldiers, that he will not be troubled in the future with noise of the organization. Mr. Kurzhals therefore dropped all proceedings against them. James E. Martine is entitled to the credit of having acted as the successful arbitrator of the affair. Mr. Martine is not especially interested in the army, but their methods and motives are such as appeal to the sympathy of a man of his character and disposition and he felt that he could do the Army a good turn by soliciting one of their principal supporters to urge them to be more moderate in the amount of noise they made, and in this has been successful.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

Miss Agnes Perkins Becomes Mrs. Lewis G. Peterson.

The marriage of Miss Agnes Perkins, daughter of Mrs. Edna Perkins and Lewis Grant Peterson, of this city, was celebrated last evening at eight o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, 507 East Sixth street. Rev. Mr. Grobes, pastor of the A. M. E. church, officiated in the presence of guests from New York, Brooklyn, Newark, Westfield and Plainfield.

The bride was gowned in white as was also the bridemaid, Miss Harris. The best man was Mr. Perkins, brother of the bride. After the ceremony a pleasant reception followed, during which congratulations were extended. The happy couple received many handsome presents. They will reside temporarily at 507 East Sixth street.

JOY AND GRIEF IN SONG.

BEAUTIFUL RENDITION OF THE SWAN AND SKYLARK.

The Last Concert of the Season Given Before a Cultured and Appreciative Audience in Music Hall Last Night.

The concluding concert given by the Choral Society Thursday drew a throng of listeners to Music Hall, who were well repaid by the interesting and impressive representations given. A visitor at these concerts is impressed with the good understanding that exists between the singers and the audience. There is an atmosphere of sympathy and intimacy as if the singers were saying "We are doing our best, honest and truly," and the audience was saying in response, "We appreciate your efforts and are enjoying it thoroughly." Mr. Pittsburgh, the musical director, labored with the commendable earnestness that always marks his work, and the soloists were of high character.

"The Swan and Skylark," given for the first part, is a grouping of a Grecian poet's melancholy strain, the swan's death chant written by Keats, the skylark's rapturous song by Shelley, and the blending in the human heart of "the dirge note and the song of festival," by Mrs. Hemans.

The contrast between the swan's despairing death note and the joyous upriseing of the skylark gives great range for vocal effects and for this reason, no doubt, this selection is the principal event of the Cincinnati May Festival. The Grecian poet's tale was sung by Heinrich Meyn, a fine baritone, who has a strong, well trained voice. The swan's death chant was sung by W. H. Reiger, whose rich tenor voice of rare quality was full of melancholy farewell. The skylark's song was given by Mrs. Eleanor Meredith Mechling, and her pure clear soprano was admirably fitted for the "free triumphant song," without tears or heart-break. The blending of the two voices, where "Joy and Death" mingled their accents, was an exquisite bit of music, and the effective touches given by the Choral Society in its concise, true and intelligent expression of feeling, combined with the inimitable harmony of the orchestra from the New York Philharmonic Society, added their force to an already forceful rendition.

"The Transfiguration" for the second part was prepared by Frederick H. Cowen for the Gloucester Festival, England, in September of last year, and its first presentation in America was made last night in Music Hall. As the aim of the Choral Society has always been the noblest choral music, it is only natural that religious music should inspire their best efforts and be accompanied with the most satisfactory results.

The Transfiguration rendered last night was full of divine melody, and the glad note running through it was the skylark's song of victory, and triumph and cure for heart-break because the Elder Brother was transfigured with the light of God. The Scripture text given as a recitative by Miss Mary Louise Clary was full of power. Miss Clary's contralto voice has an unusual tone, the lower register of notes having a rare quality of depth and clearness. Throughout the whole rendition there was a well sustained devoutness of mood and a conscientious desire to make tones and words express the divine and holy meaning of the Transfiguration. Who could but think of the skylark soaring "Higher still and higher" when the quartette and chorus sang rapturously

"Lord speak, for we, Thy servants hear,
And hearing, rise on wings of love
When first inspired by joy?"

The final chorus sung in the society's best manner with great force and earnestness was a fitting ending to the grand recitatives from the Epistles and the Apocalypse given in varied tones by the richly gifted soloists.

A fly-leaf in the programmes announces the intention of the Choral Society to continue their work another year and present Rossini's "Stabat Mater" for the first concert of the season, if the patronage of the public is sufficient to encourage and justify the expense. "Stabat Mater" is an inspiring drama versed in rhythmic Latin words, musical in themselves. It was given successfully last year and many have expressed a desire to hear it again.

To Produce a New Piece.

Rich & Maeder, managers of Music Hall, this city, will produce and manage "The Cotton Spinner," a melodrama, by Scott Marble, the coming season, if it will be a big production, and Messrs. Rich & Maeder will doubtless score a success with it. They have engaged a creditable company, and will make the first presentation in the Grand Opera House, New York.

Railway Extension Completed.

The work of laying the street railway tracks was completed today and the wiring is nearing completion. Next week the work of narrowing the guage of the other tracks will commence. It will require about one month's time to finish this portion of the contract. It is understood that L. W. Serrell has the contract for changing the guage.

RUN DOWN IN THE ROAD.

Ex-Judge Freeman, of Metuchen, Accidentally Injures an Old Man.

A serious accident occurred on Park avenue, near Pumptown, last Tuesday afternoon, in which Mr. Egan, an old man of about eighty years of age, was knocked down by a passing carriage and dangerously injured. Mr. Egan lives on Park avenue, near Metuchen, and was driving over to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Samuel Johnson, of Pumptown, as the name mentioned, and ex-Judge Manning Freeman, of Metuchen, and Fred J. Bettman, of the borough, were speeding their horses on the level stretch of road. Mr. Egan stepped to the side of the roadway to avoid the approaching carriages, but just at that time another carriage appeared coming in the opposite direction. Ex-Judge Freeman's carriage was forced out into the gutter and his front wheel struck Mr. Egan. The force of the blow threw the old man for some distance and he struck on his head in the hard stone roadbed. He was carried to his daughter's home and a physician was called. No bones were broken, but Mr. Egan was badly bruised and stunned by the shock, the suddenness of which was very great. It is thought that he will recover, although still confined to his bed.

TAKEN FOR A ROBBER.

Frightened Driver Put a Bullet Through a Minister's Hat.

Rev. Philip Flumfert, a young Baptist clergyman, who preached in the Georges Road Baptist church, near New Brunswick, on Sunday night last, had an adventure after the service that nearly cost him his life.

When the service was over the young man spent a few hours with Rev. George Love, the pastor. He had expected a carriage to come after him to take him to the house of Samuel N. Stillman, where he was visiting, but when none came he started to walk. It was dark. The young man walked a short distance in the road when he heard a carriage approaching. Running forward, he cried out, "Hello! Is that you, Mr. Stillman?"

"I'll show you who it is," came the quick reply, and a moment later a pistol shot rang out on the night.

The preacher felt a bullet pass through his hat as the driver lashed his horse and passed along.

Mr. Flumfert, greatly frightened, hastened to the home of Mr. Stillman and told the story. The driver of the carriage had evidently taken him for a highwayman.

His Work Appreciated.

The Duluth, Minn., News-Tribune, under date of Monday, April 13th, has the following to say about a former Plainfielder: "Secretary Charles B. Brown, of the Minneapolis Young Men's Christian Association, delivered brief addresses on the work of the Y. M. C. A. in the Pilgrim Congregational and First M. E. churches yesterday morning. In the afternoon, in the auditorium of the association, a large audience of men assembled to hear Mr. Brown's address on "True Manhood." Secretary Brown's remarks were excellent, and commanded the closest attention of all present. In the evening Mr. Brown again spoke, this time before the congregation of the First Presbyterian church, presenting the work of the association at length. Secretary Brown's earnest words and active work on behalf of the Duluth association, cannot fail to be productive of much good for the Y. M. C. A. of this city."

What Will the Dudes Do?

A new era has dawned. The great tobacco and cigarette firms are no longer giving away so many pictures of actors and actresses as formerly. The demand for them seems to have commenced to fall away. Instead of portraits of those stage beauties in scant costume the large dealers are now giving spectroscopes and spectroscopic views. Mr. Campbell, the photographer, of Elizabeth, says that he is now printing 20,000 a week of these views, and orders are so rapidly increasing that 50,000 a week will soon be the order. He has eight photographers taking views in different parts of the earth to meet this new demand.

Claimed Italians Beat Him.

A man, who was evidently a tramp, but who said that he was walking from Philadelphia to Norwalk, Conn., made complaint in Westfield Tuesday night that he had been beaten and robbed of $16 in an Italian place on South avenue, near the Fanwood Township line. He had a disfigured face to back up his assertion of having been beaten, but as he had no proof of having lost the money, and as the Italians stoutly denied his having been in their place at all, no charge could be sustained against the Italians.

The Work Will Be Well Done.

Ex-Mayor Barnes, of Perth Amboy, has purchased a large tract of land near Flemington, Hunterdon county, where he proposes to live during the summer months, and in order to make it more beautiful and attractive he has given Civil Engineer F. A. Dunham, of this city, charge of the place. David Bowden, the contractor, has a number of men at work laying out drives, walks, etc.

SUSAN WAS AWAY.

And Wolves Carried Off the Cow and Calf.

Harrell Hines' Story of a Night with Wolves on the Clearin'. While Susan Was Away in Attendance on Sally Ann Parks.

"THE only time me an' Susan got the wust of it, down on our clearin'," said Cuthbert Miles, the basket-weaving octogenarian hermit of Indian River. "was the time the wolves come an' run our cow an' calf away one night. Sad, that was! Sad, I tell ye! Fer cows was cows in them days, an'—. But, Lordi what be I a-sayin'? 'Twa'n't Susan that got the wust of it, 'cause Susan wa'n't home that night. She was down to Parks' clearin', five mile, Parks havin' come up a-lumbrin' that day, an' ast her if she wouldn't go back with him, his Sally Ann bein' sick, an' Susan jest went, warnin' me to keep an eye on things an' not to let anything git away. So 'twas me, an' not me an' Susan that got the wust of it that night. Why, there ain't no more doubt than there is that I'm a twistin' this willer twig this minute that if Susan had a been home nobody'd got the wust of it but the wolves! Stoundin', woman! 'Stoundin'!

"Yes, sir. Cows was cows in those days in the wilderness. The nighest neighbor we had was the Parks', five mile, an' the next was Benson's, seven mile, with nothin' but woods an' b'ar an' wolves an' painters betwixt us. That cow of our'n was one Benson had got way down on the Green Branch, an' he had led her more'n forty miles through the woods to git her to his clearin', which was a big un an' old un for them days, Benson havin' been there for years when me an' Susan come down from York state, chopped a hole in the woods, and put up our log cabin. That was our weddin' trip, too, mind ye! That cow that Benson fetched up from the Green Branch made three cows for him, an' that was an amazin' drove fer one man to hev. He was a reg'lar cattle king.

"Benson was a good man, an' you better believe that there was a reg'lar time on that little clearin' of our'n when I made a dicker with him in the way o' cheppin' now an' then for him, and he turned the cow over to me, an' I led her home. Not only the cow, but a new calf at her side! Now mabbee we wa'n't rich! A cow an' a calf, a log cabin ye could see through most anywhere, an' a three-acre clearin'! Rich? I should say so! Richer, I bet you, than many a one is nowadays ez has farms they can't walk around in a day, an' cattle on a thousan' hills! 'Cause we was happy, me an' Susan was, down there by the wilderness! We didn't hev no pastur', an' we didn't hev no feed nor fodder fer our cow 'cept browse cut from the trees, but we kep' her goin' fust rate on that.

"Now, if I'd a-ha'f Susan I was goin to git the cow an' calf from Benson, she'd a up an' said:

"'Nothin' 'cept news from home could be better news than that, Moses,' Susan'd say, 'cause Cuthbert wa'n't no sort of a name to be in the wilderness with. 'Nothin' 'cept news from home could be better news than that, Moses, but fore you fetch 'em over, you jest shake up a barn o' some kind to put 'em in. There's too many b'ars an' wolves an' painters lookin' fer setch meat as that to hev it layin' right open fer their eyes!'

"Susan'd a said that, or suppin' like it, sure's yer born, 'cause she was so astoundin', but I wanted to s'prise her with the cow an' the calf, an' I was so anxious to git 'em that I never thought nothin' 'bout no barn, nor no b'ars, nor no wolves, nor no painters. I was just thinkin' 'bout Susan, 'an how glad she'd be. An' she was, too! She cried, an' hugged me, an' said:

"'Now if I jes had only a little news from home I don't think Heaven could be much nicer'n this here clearin'!'

"Susan wa'n't homesick, mind ye! But her mother was old and poorly,

"I CLUBBED THE GUN AND I FIT."

an' natur'ly Susan had a lon-gin'. But, glad as she was, she was put out 'cause we didn't hev no place to keep them an' the calf safe, an' it happened jest then that my time was so all-fired took up that it'd be a couple o' weeks 'fore I could go to throwin' up stumpin' to keep 'em in natral be'r'ar an' wolf an' painter proof, though it wa'n't much of a job. I could a-done it on a Sunday, but Susan wouldn't hear to that.

"'It ain't no less Sunday,' she says, 'cause it's 'way back here in the wilderness,' she says.

"So what do you think we took to doin'? Fust I made a three-cornered pen by throwin' up logs two or three rods from the cabin. This was to keep the cow from wanderin'. Then me and Susan 'd set up nights watchin' the cow an' the calf, with my ol' flint lock gun layin' handy, so as to tumble the fust thing that came nosin' around that live stock of our'n. Susan 'd set up part o' the night an' I'd set up t'other part so's we'd both ketch some sleep. We'd ben watchin' in this way for a week an' more, an' never a wunst had a b'ar or a wolf or a painter give even ez much ez a sign that they had their eye on our cow an' calf. + An' do you know why? Cause Susan was there. Nothin' else, sir. They knowed that as long ez Susan was in that cabin there wa'n't no more use o' their tryin' to git our cow an' calf than there would a ben o' their tryin' to lug off a drove o' wild elephants! That's what I believe, an' there ain't no doubt of it. 'Cause see what happened the minute Susan wa'n't there? The las' words she said to me when she went to Parks' that day was:

"'Now keep yer eye peeled, Moses, an' don't let nothin' git away!'

"'Don't you worry, Susan!' I says. 'Don't you worry!'

"I jumped the cow down that night, smoked a pipe or two in the cabin door, watched the sun go down 'hind the hills on one side of the clearin', seen the moon come up from 'hind the hills on the other side, an' I felt lonesome, I tell ye! By an' by I went in, shut up me cabin, got ol' flint-lock, sot down by the little hole we called the winder, an' watched, an' watched, an' thought o' Susan, an' I must a ben seen'd long to'ard mornin', fer the moon had got way past our clearin' an' we was in the shadders, but, anyhow, I dropped asleep. Yes, sir! Actilly step on the p'int o' duty! I was woked by a scrapin' an' a snarlin' an' a battin' an' a belierin'. The wolves was arter our cow an' calf! I don't know how I ever got out there, but I was there in less than no time. I let go with ol' flint-lock, an' one wolf was gone. Then I clubbed the gun an' I fit with hands an' feet. I clubbed an' I clocked an' I clutched, but the cow broke over the logs, and the calf follerin' her, away they went fer the woods, all that was left o' the pack follerin' 'em, howling like demons! Like a wild man I follered. I follered, thinkin' of Susan a-watchin' of a sick neighbor, an' me a lettin' wolves come an' run her cow an' calf away! I'm 'shamed to say it, but by an' by, nowin' there wasn't no use o' chasin' any longer, I sat down in the woods an' bellered like a baby. Yes, I actu'lly did! When I got back to the clearin' it was a broad day light. It was some comfort to me to see seven dead wolves stretched round that cow pen, an' it was a leetle consolin' to feel that if the cow had only stayed in her pen I'd a saved her, if there'd ben twict as many wolves!

"When I got into the cabin I begun to feel kind o' weak, an' then I see fer the first that I was blood pooty much all over me, an' that my hands an' arms an' chist was tore considerable, an' that my clothes was slit an' ripped an' tattered most amazin'. But I took a good pail at Susan's jug o' elderberry wine she'd left, fetched it all way from York state, an' went to the creek an' washed. Then I felt more nat'ral like, an' sot down in the cabin, waitin' for Susan, an' 'shamed to see her, fer let's' the cow an' calf be run away by wolves.

"'Long in the forenoon I see her comin' out o' the woods, jist on the edge of our clearin', on the side o' the cabin. Now if I'd a-had only a little mirror I couldn't see that it was empty till she turned round the cabin. I tried to git up an' go meet her, but my feet wouldn't let me, somehow. I see her turn the cabin, an' I pitched to see her jist flop right down an' carry on terrible the minute she sot her eyes on that empty ten. But I didn't know Susan yet. She give a little start an' a gulp or two, an' then actu'lly stood still an' raisin' her finger, counted ev'ry one o' them wolves over. Then she hurried into the cabin. I had got up by this time.

"'Susan,' I says, 'they 'm gone!'

"'Can't be helped, Moses,' says she, kissin' of me. 'You ain't gone, an' there's seven less wolves in the woods.'

"Then she just sot to work an' bandaged me up, an' all I could do was to say to myself: 'Astoundin'! Most astoundin'!'

"Arter Susan had made all done up, an' was kindly round among things to rights, suddenly she says, an' her eyes was twinklin':

"'Ye had a hard night, Moses. But think o' poor Joe Parks! You was only fightin' wolves, but think o' what poor Joe went through, an' he stood it like a man!'

"What in under the blue canopy has happened to Joe?' I says.

"'There's twins on his clearin'!' says Susan, an' ye orter heard her laugh!"—N. Y. Sun.

Will Live Together.

"Mamma," said an inquisitive little girl, "will rich and poor folks live together when they get to heaven?"

"Yes, my dear, they will all be alike there."

"Then, ma, why don't rich and poor Christians associate together here?"

The mother did not answer.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

FOR AND BY YOUNG MEN

of such phases of our work as securing situations for men, directing them to boarding houses, answering letters concerning them and giving them letters of introduction as they are moving here. Numberless letters about young men have been received during the year and many men have been converted with about personal religion. All who have shown any desire to lead a Christian life have been referred to the pastor of the church of their choice. Sick men, and there have been letters written to doctors and medical aid secured, the hungry have been fed, the naked clothed and the stranger has been received and made welcome in places where young men are to be found, as in the different shops, have been visited many times in the interest of our work.

If it would not be out of place I might recite in this report some of the incidents which have occurred during the year, but we are striving to lift men for their own sakes, not for the sake of the Association, and therefore many things which have encouraged us must be left unsaid. I can truly say that the self-sacrifices and devotion of Mr. Manning, our general secretary, has over and over again inspired us, and it is the earnest wish and prayer of all the officers of the Association that we may be able to keep him for many years to come.

The nominating committee made its report and presented the following nominations: President, W. D. Murray; vice-president, E. L. Bonny; recording secretary, John Valiant; treasurer, H. O. Newman; directors, E. R. Ackerman, G. H. Batchelor, George A. Chapman, C. E. Boss, Stephen Cahoone, George S. Clay, George R. Cornwell, D. E. Titsworth, T. E. Hazell, A. C. LaBoyteaux, R. A. Redford and Nelson Runyon. They were all unanimously elected and President Murray made a few remarks on the year that had closed and the one that had begun. Many people, he said, had claimed that even when the Y. M. C. A. had their building they would not be able to run it successfully. The contrary has been conclusively proved. Mr. Murray spoke about his long term as president and remarked on the fact that the next year would make ten. This was, he thought, long enough for any man to hold the president's office. One of the members suggested that he make it twenty years and another that he give ten years notice before refusing re-election.

There was a general good feeling among the members, especially after hearing the reports, and after unanamously passing a vote of thanks to the newspapers of Plainfield for their many kindnesses, the meeting adjourned and there was a general handshaking among the members.

An exhibition of the work of the different classes in Plainfield and Newark and also of the wood and metal work from Cornell University, the same as is hoped to be introduced into the Y. M. C. A., was made. The members visited this exhibit and spent some time examining them.

MURPHY WAS OUSTED.

Directors of a Collection Agency Depose the Manager, Who Protests.

Internal dissensions have sprung up in the New Jersey Mercantile Agency, which makes a business of collecting bad debts for merchants, and has offices in the Prudential Building, in Newark. The agency has a branch in this city. At a meeting in the concern on Monday John A. Murphy, the manager, was deposed.

The company was incorporated in January of this year by Murphy, Francis W. Knowles, a lawyer, and H. F. Freyling, a clerk in the latter's office. The capital stock was fixed at $25,000, the par value of shares being $100. Murphy was made manager, and Knowles counsel and treasurer.

Recently there were changes and counter-charges of unsatisfactory financial management between Murphy and Knowles, but these things were set at rest by a production of books and vouchers by both parties. Still dissatisfaction existed, and Murphy's deposition came on Monday. He protested against this action, and appeared in the office yesterday ready for business as usual. Later he engaged counsel to contest the matter and secure what he claims as his rights.

Late yesterday afternoon, under the direction of Mr. Knowles, all of Murphy's effects were moved from the office into a corridor of the building, while a Police Headquarters detective stood near to prevent possible trouble. Murphy, however, did not put in an appearance.

WITH ROD AND GUN

The Board of Fish and Game Commissioners of this State has made arrangements for the publication of a monthly report of its doings. All persons interested in the protection and propagation of fish and game can obtain free of charge copies of these reports by sending word to Charles A. Shriner, Fish and Game Protector, Paterson.

County Appropriations to be Made.

The Board of Freeholders will meet on Thursday and vote on the appropriations for the year, which it is expected will be larger than for several years, but it is expected that the rate can be reduced.

One minute is the standard time, and One Minute Cough Cure is the standard preparation for every form of cough or cold. It is the only harmless remedy that produces immediate results. For sale by L. W. Randolph 143 West Front Street.

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County.

[OFFICIAL.]

COMMUNICATIONS, PETITIONS, ETC.

From the New Jersey and Staten Island Ferry Co., as follows:

To the Honorable, the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, N. J.:

Gentlemen—Your petitioners respectfully show that they are a duly incorporated company under the name of "The New Jersey and Staten Island Ferry Company" formed for the purpose of establishing and operating a ferry between Elizabethport and Staten Island.

That in furtherance of the objects of said company, they have purchased the property at the foot of East Jersey street, Elizabeth, New Jersey, and are now engaged in constructing their ferry slip thereon; that they have also purchased and are constructing a slip on the Staten Island side.

Your petitioners respectfully apply to your honorable body to fix and determine the rates that it shall be lawful for them to collect at their said ferry, and your petitioners will ever pray, etc. (Signed)

The New Jersey and Staten Island Ferry Co., by Frederick C. Marsh, Attorney.

On motion of Freeholder Clark, received and placed on file.

From the State Charities Aid Association as follows:

Elizabeth, N. J., May 6, 1896.

To the Honorable, the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, N. J.

Gentlemen:—I have been requested by the Board of Managers and the standing committee on jails, of the State Charities Aid Association of New Jersey, to express to you their complete satisfaction with the management and condition of the jail.

At all times when visited, the jail has been found in the most cleanly condition and we note with pleasure that the majority of the prisoners are employed at such labor as the warden can provide.

We would suggest the removal of the wooden cages now used in the juvenile department and that steel cells be substituted.

They are in every respect better and more cleanly.

Again expressing our entire satisfaction in the management and condition of the Union County Jail,

I am sincerely yours,

Signed Emily E. Williamson,

Sec'y for the Board of Managers.

On motion of Freeholder Roll, it was ordered that the communication be received and spread on the minutes.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

By the committee to settle with the collector:

To the Honorable, the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, N. J.:

Gentlemen:—Your committee to settle with the County Collector respectfully report that we have examined his books showing his receipts and disbursements, together with his vouchers, bonds and coupons paid, and hank books; we find the same correct, and therefore, that his total receipts from the beginning of the fiscal years to this date are:

Receipts, ... $46,767.27
Disbursements, ... $407,908.23

Balance in bank, ... $2?,709.04

Dated, April 30th, 1896. Signed,

Jacob W. Littell,
Henry Krouse,
John Farrell.

On motion of Freeholder Halliday received and placed on file.

NEW BUSINESS.

By Freeholder Ehrlich;

Resolved, That the committee on Railway drawbridge be empowered to make a contract with Henry Pippenger as bridge tender, for one year, commencing May 1, 1896, at a salary of $200 per annum, payable quarterly.

Freeholder Miller moved the adoption of the resolution; and on roll-call it was adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Hulskamper:

Resolved—That the communication from the New Jersey and Staten Island Ferry Co be referred to a committee of five (5), to examine into and report on the same at the next meeting of this Board.

On motion of Freeholder Roll, the resolution was adopted without dissent.

The Director appointed as the said committee, Freeholders Hulskamper, Ogden, Badgley, Tier and Halliday.

By Freeholder Littell:

Resolved, That the bill of G. E. Ludlow, in amount $68, for grading Eastman street bridge at Cranford, be paid, when approved by the committee.

Freeholder Miller moved the adoption of the resolution; and on roll-call it was adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Hulskamper:

Resolved—That the bill of James O. Moore, in amount $106, for balance of contract in Eastman street bridge masonry at Cranford, N. J., be paid when approved by the committee.

Freeholder Halliday moved the adoption of the resolution, and on roll call it was adopted unanimously.

Freeholder Roll moved that when the Board adjourned it is adjourned to meet on Tuesday, May 12th, 1896, at 2:30 p. m., which was adopted.

A bill from Justus Morris, against the County of Union was read, for damages done by overflow of waters from bridge, 1894, $100; 1895, $150; and 1896, $200, total $450.

Freeholder moved that the matter be referred to a committee for examination, and report to the Board, which was carried.

The Director designated the County Road Committee to act in this matter.

REVOLUTIONARY HEROES' GRAVES

A Patriotic Society to Appropriately Distinguish Them by Marking.

It is proposed by the Elizabethtown Chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution to appropriately mark the graves of Revolutionary heroes buried in Union County; and, as it is somewhat difficult to locate all these graves, the committee in charge of the matter requests that all descendants of soldiers or sailors of the Revolution, Members of Congress during that war, or signers of the Declaration of Independance, whose ancestors are buried in Union County, and the location of whose graves is known, will communicate with the committee, giving full names of such ancestors and location of their graves. This request is not confined to members of the G. A. R, but to all descendants of Revolutionary ancestors in this county. As the Society expects to mark some of the graves on July 4th of this year, and others as soon as possible thereafter, it is hoped that all who are interested will communicate without delay with the chairman of this committee, Walter B. Timms, 128 Catherine street, Elizabeth, N. J. The markers are designed especially for this object and have been used on some 1,500 graves in the State of Massachusetts.

WALL CAME DOWN WITH A CRASH.

The Town Rooms Building at Westfield Wrecked, But No One Hurt.

A few minutes past 8 o'clock Monday night people in the vicinity of the corner of Broad and Elm streets, at Westfield, were startled by a loud crash, and the next instant the end of the brick Town Rooms building slid into the cellar that is being excavated for W. W. Gilby's new store.

The front part of the building, containing Gilby's store, was burned out sometime ago, and the walls were taken down. As the walls of the Town Rooms building seemed to be solid and in good condition the contractor did not think it necessary to take them down, and went on with the work of excavating the cellar for the new building without bracing the adjoining wall. The Township Committee has been holding meetings in the rooms as usual, the last meeting being held there Saturday night. Had the wall given way in the daytime, when the workmen were in the cellar, there would undoubtedly have been serious loss of life. As it was no one happened to be near the building at the time the wall gave way.

The heavy township safe, containing the township papers, is standing on the second floor, where the wall gave way, and the entire building is now so weakened that it is dangerous to go near the safe.

It is probable that C. M. Rydell, of this city, and Monte Scott will be in the back mark bunch men in the Millburn road race.

One swallow does not make Spring, but one swallow of One Minute Cough Cure brings relief. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

THE CHORAL JAMBOREE

CLOSING EVENT OF THE SUCCESSFUL SINGING SOCIETY.

The Old Officers Chosen to Preside Over the Society's Affairs for Another Year—Planning for a Very Big Season

The "jamboree" of the Plainfield Choral Society is a great institution, and is the scene of a general rejoicing over the successes of the past. Last Tuesday the Choralites turned out in large numbers to attend this famous annual event that closes the season for that prosperous society. It was held in the parlors of the Seventh-Day Baptist church and they were thronged with the members and their friends.

The entertainment which always occupies the first part of the evening consisted of selections by the Choral Society and the Cecelia Society. D. E. Titsworth presided, and his introductions and remarks were wittier than ever. The jamboree would not be complete without his humorous speeches.

The programme opened with a selection by the whole society, "Wood-land Chase," and then, when the loud applause for that had died away, the Cecelia Society sang "The Spinning Song." Secretary Nelson Runyon made his report of the year's growth of the society, and the good attendance at the rehearsals, besides other routine matters. Next came "Jack Horner," which the chorus rendered with their old-time vim, and then George T. Rogers made his report as treasurer. While the report was a good one, it showed the pressing need of more subscribers to carry the work along as it should be carried. While the visitors were thinking over this, the ladies of the Cecelia Society sang "Now is the Month of May" and "Old Madrid."

A burst of applause greeted E. J. Fitzhugh as he came to the front to say a few words. He congratulated the society on their excellent work and thanked them for their assistance to him in making the concerts so successful. The society did not forget their earnest and hard working leader, for they applauded as from their very hearts "Cupid's Lottery" and "The Little Sandman," arranged by Mr. Fitzhugh and dedicated by him to the ladies of the Choral Society, were then sung by the members of the Cecilia Society and the programme was over.

The nominating committee made their report and nominated the old officers as follows: President, C. W. McCutchen; vice president, D. E. Titsworth; secretary, Nelson Runyon; treasurer, George T. Rogers; directors, Rev. W. B. Richards, D. E. Titsworth and R. J. Shaw; librarians, N. Y. Hull and Stacy Raynolds. They were unanimously elected. A period of sociability and refreshments followed.

While the members and visitors gathered in groups, the young men passed the ice cream and the young women followed with the cake and everybody enjoyed themselves. As the hands of the clock gradually neared the hour of eleven, the crowd slowly departed and the jamboree of 1896 was a thing of the past.

The refreshments were a very important and pleasing part of the jamboree and were under the charge of a committee composed of Mrs. L. M. French, chairman, Mrs. G. E. Stillman, Mrs. Robert Gorton, Mrs. L. S. Bond, Mrs. H. E. Ryder, Miss Josephine Petrie, Mrs. J. H. Manning and Miss Gussie Runyon.

Merry George's Fiftieth Birthday.

Next Sunday evening, May 31st, George Thatcher, the well known minstrel and vaudeville performer who resides in this city will be given a testimonial at the Herald Square theatre in New York. The occasion marks Mr. Thatcher's fiftieth birthday and the completion of his thirtieth year on the stage. A very strong programme, chiefly contributed by "star" actors and actresses, is promised. The committee having the affair in charge are Charles E. Evans, George W. Lederer, Jere Dunn, Frederick M. McCloy and Leander Richardson.

Sewer Diggers Strike.

The Italians working on the Roselle sewers struck Saturday and compelled a lot of Hungarians to join them. Monday the Hungarians resumed work, but the Italians have succeeded in intimidating them so that they would not return to work. New gangs were hired.

For every quarter in a man's pocket there are a dozen uses; and to use each one in such a way as to derive the greatest benefit is a question every one must solve for himself. LAST SALE OF THE SEASON.

Park Avenue Baptist Church Woman Conducts a Successful Affair.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church held their last sale of the season at the home of Mr. and Mrs Phillips, of Central avenue. The house was prettily decorated with flowers, and especially attractive was the electric light arrangement by Mr. Phillips. There was on sale fancy articles, confectionery and refreshments consisting of strawberries, cake and ice cream.

Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson and Mrs. Freeman were in charge of the fancy table, while Miss Haynes, Miss Swaney and Miss Fish looked after the confectionery. In the refreshment room Mrs. Theodore Runyon, Mrs. Skaden and Mrs. Phillips were in charge and they were assisted by Miss Thompson, Miss Day, Miss Brokaw and Miss Cuming. Excellent vocal and instrumental music was rendered during the evening by the Misses Coard. Mrs. J. H. Doane and Mrs. Harry Moore had in charge the decorations and Mrs. Nelson Runyon arranged the music. Mr. Opdyke was the efficient cashier.

The attendance at the sale was very encouraging and the profits will no doubt be quite large. To Mrs. Haynes, the president of the society, is due much credit for the success of the affair.

THE BOYS' CAMP.

Sumner F. Dudley Explains Its Objects and How the Time is Passed.

Sumner F. Dudley, a director of the Y. M. C. A. at Orange, and an assistant secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of New York State, gave a very interesting and instructive illustrated lecture in the Y. M. C. A. building Tuesday on boys' camps for the summer.

Forty-seven views were shown, all of which were made by boys connected with the association on their various camping expeditions. The balance were taken in and about the proposed camp for this summer, which is situated on Lake Champlain, near Westport, about 300 miles from New York city.

The speaker said that the plan of having these camping expeditions was spreading very rapidly among the associations, as the methods and objects of the organization are more fully understood by the boys after an intimacy of camp life. If camp life grows too monotonous, excursions are planned to nearby places of interest, but with the excellent fishing, boating and bathing, which abounds about the camp, there is a small likelihood of camp life becoming tiresome. The board at the camp costs $5.50 a week, and the round trip car fare from New York is $8.

Made a Fine Appearance.

Plainfield's "finest" made their first appearance last evening in their new summer uniforms and in honor of the event marched to the Jersey Wheel Academy, between seven and eight o'clock and had a drill and inspection. They went through their different parts like veterans and everything passed off smoothly. Captain Grant and Sergeant Kiely appeared in white duck police hats and their suits trimmed with gold. The whole department made a fine appearance and is a credit to the city. Those present to witness the affair included Mayor Gilbert, Councilmen Barrows, Dumont and Ginna.

Will Not Locate at Garwood.

A bicycle manufactory will not be added to the varied industries at Garwood, at present, at any rate. The proposition made by H. A. Lozier & Co., of Toledo, manufacturers of the Cleveland wheels, who were considering the question of locating at Garwood, was not accepted by the Garwood Land Improvement Company, as the terms were not considered satisfactory by the company.

At White's.

'Twould take columns to tell of the many good things that this live house has to tempt the dollars of the economic. The counters are goods everywhere, on every counter and every shelf is loaded down with bright, crisp goods that are most pleasing to every one, and such little prices that are asked makes you wonder how they can do it. Their advertisement tells of many of the good things they are offering, and what they advertise you are sure of finding.

Rench Will Survive.

Paul Rench, the man who attempted to take his own life in Dunellen last Monday, will probably recover. So Dr. Brakely, of Dunellen, told a Press reporter this afternoon. Mr. Rench will lose one eye and his face will be badly disfigured. He is perfectly conscious and has been so from the first, but is unable to talk except in monosyllables on account of the condition of his face.

WORKING ON THE BRAIN.

EDUCATIONAL WORK IN THE Y.M.C.A. FOR THE PAST YEAR.

Classes in Many Studies Are Maintained and an Active Interest is Shown by Members to Accept the Opportunities.

The committee on educational work in the Y. M. C. A. has made the following report for the year past:

The work in this department was formally inaugurated on Monday evening, October 14th by appropriate exercises in the large hall of the Association. Henry Coleman, president of the Business College of Newark, delivered an address, and there were musical selections rendered by ladies from Newark and also by one of our own members. About 150 were present, and by the public exercises an opportunity was afforded for enrollment in the different classes, and quite a large number availed themselves.

The regular class sessions began early in November, and in the following week a class was organized for the study of Spanish, and has been conducted by Prof. Cesar Cadalso, of the last of April.

For several years mechanical drawing has been one of our most important studies, and in order to increase the efficiency of this class the services of Mr. Jones, who has taught it past year has fully demonstrated the wisdom of the step. It is our purpose to offer courses during three years in mechanical drawing, the first year to be mathematical, and arranged by W. S. Timmie, the instructor, who has been connected with Prof. Geo. A. Wells, graduate of Rutgers College. Most excellent work has been done in this class, which has had an average attendance of 20 pupils, and also at the close of the term examinations were held in charge of Mr. Jones, and Mr. Timmie, secretary, reports that eight members have finished the course, and will be entitled to a copy of a supplementary examination, which will be held in charge of Mr. Jones. In this class a larger number will undoubtedly qualify and be entitled to the certificates which are to be given by the association. Another class in mechanics is of great value to all young men in the different machine shops in our city, who will avail themselves of the special privileges which it offers.

Our class in bookkeeping was organized about the middle of October, and for several years has rendered most faithful and efficient service as its instructor. Owing to the removal of Mr. Bonnell, he has been obliged to leave Plainfield early in the term, so that the secretary has been called upon occasionally. Messrs. Fuller and Mcmaller have been the pupils, and in Spite of the *work has been carried on without interrup*tion and in an efficient manner. The average attendance in this class for six months has been 13, commencing in November with 20 members, and at the end of April, but these figures are misleading as to the character of the students and the work that has been accomplished. The members in this class are generally men who work in the evenings and give the only time they have to study, so that the work in this branch, As there is much work for the scholars to do out of class hours, it is really necessary that they should command the time necessary to faithful work, and considering the limited time spent under the class, they labor, the class record is excellent.

The class in shorthand has been given by Rev. Mr. Klonkie, who organized the work last year with a large membership, but for two months there were only a small number present, so that the average, excluding these months, would be 9. German is a language of great practical importance in our city, on account of business, and very good work has been done in this class, which has had an average membership, common to some of the others also, of only meeting about half the time, rather the work is rendered more difficult both to teacher and scholars for this reason. However, the interest in the class has been good, and those of us who have continued to the close of the present term.

Last year your committee considered the question of introducing the study of French in our curriculum, but there was not a sufficient number of applicants to justify such an undertaking, although there is a growing interest each year a study of practical usefulness to those who contemplate business life with Spanish-speaking people. In December, '95, the class in shorthand was organized with a membership of 15, with J. A. Cestades as instructor. This class is larger and more interested in the entire term has been

THE ROOT OF EVIL.

Fable of the Farmer and His New-Found Riches.

One day, states the Detroit Free Press, a farmer, who lived four years in peace and quietness and was well-spoken of by all who knew him, found a pot of gold as he was digging in a field. In great rejoicing he carried the treasure to his house and told his wife the news, and in a day or so good luck was known to 100 people. His wife promptly decided to buy a piano and have a new house, and when the old man didn't think much of this scheme she upbraided him for his selfishness, and went about in the sulks. His three sons suddenly decided that they would blossom out as Jim-dandies and work no more, and his two daughters hovered for diamonds and silks. A deacon called and wanted him to give $500 to the African heathen; he was asked to establish a foundlings' home; his mother-in-law demanded a brick house and new carpets and his own sisters and brothers arrived and with the spouses and children to take the train; but he made a mistake, and instead of boarding the regular steam railroad train he took an electric car that passed the same corner. It happened to be a car of the loop line that runs between Berkeley and Oakland, going one route and returning another. He made the complete circuit once, but made no effort to get off the car. The conductor thought the scenery deformed and celestial, so said nothing, but collected his fare a third time as the car went on its second trip to Oakland. Eight times Ah Chow made the circuit of the line, paying his nickel with cheerful serenity, and the conductor asked for fare. Then at the end of the eighth trip the conductor called a policeman and Ah Chow was taken before a police judge for examination as to his sanity. The interpreter in the court soon discovered the cause of Ah Chow's peculiar doings, and with the court's permission accompanied him to San Francisco.

EPITAPH ON A WATCHMAKER.

Curious Inscription Seen on a Tombstone in an English Graveyard.

The following curious inscription to the memory of George Routleigh, a watchmaker by trade, occurs in the churchyard at Ashford, Devon: "Here lies, in horizontal position, the outside case of George Routleigh, whose abiding in that line was an honor to his profession. Integrity was his mainspring, and prudence the regulator of all the actions of his life. Humane, generous, and liberal, his hand never stopped till he had relieved distress. Sincerely regular were his motions. He never went wrong except when set a-going by people who did not know his key. Even then he was easily set right again. He had the art of disposing of his time so well that his hours glided in one continual round of pleasure and delight till an unlucky minute put an end to his existence. He departed this life, November, 1802, wound up in hope of being taken in hand by his Maker and of being thoroughly cleaned, repaired and set agoing in the world to come."

Snakes for Iceland.

Iceland has from time immemorial enjoyed a strange immunity from reptiles. This seems to have irritated upon the nerves of two German naturalists, who, emulated by the same spirit which induced the Chicago contractor to send in his offer to the town council of the Italian city of Pisa to straighten the leaning tower which is the principal attraction of the place, are now devoting their energies to introducing reptiles into Iceland. They have already experimented with frogs, both Danish and Prussian, and as the pioneer service of these humble handmaids of the biologist has proved successful, a cargo of able-bodied snakes is about to be dumped on the island, unless King Christian sees fit to resign this altogether novel form of German invasion.

The Moon and Stammering.

Nature publishes from a correspondent a curious fact which it vouches for. The correspondent says: "It was accidentally observed by a stammering friend of mine, during the months of May and June last, that on moonlight nights he stammered more than on dark nights, and when he slept exposed to the rays of the moon during the month of June he found he stammered the most on days succeeding full moons, while a day just after the new moon, and a day before, he had not a single attack of the ill."

Absent-Minded Professor.

Prof. C—— had gone to spend the evening at a friend's house. When he was about to leave it was raining very heavily, wherefore the hostess kindly offered him accommodations for the night, which he readily accepted. Suddenly the guest disappeared, nobody knowing what had become of him, and the family was about to retire for the night when Prof. C—— walked in, as wet as a drowned rat. He had been home to fetch his night shirt.

MYSTERIES OF THE LOUVRE.

Vague Stories of Imperial Crime Reach the Outside World.

Everyone who has "done" the Louvre will remember the low-pitched and somewhat gloomy halls in which are stored the treasures of Egypt. Beneath these lie yet more darkly mysterious vaults, inaccessible to the public, though approached by a wide and handsome staircase, such as would lead one to imagine that it communicated with apartments of some importance. Yet one finds at the bottom nothing but broad passages, lighted in the form of a cross, and without any sign whatever of door or window.

A recent examination, however, of the solid walls gives experts reason to believe that the masonry is more recent than that of the superstructure in this, the oldest portion of the fortress palace. M. Vaugneux, a well-known critic, believes that many of the bodies of victims killed in the revolution of 1830 were immured here, and that the government is afraid to reveal the facts when the remains of their comrades were collected beneath the Colonne de Juillet.

On the other hand, M. Blondel, the architect of the building, and M. Normand, the secretary of the Society for Protecting Parisian Monuments, hold the opinion that these subterranean passages led to the oubliettes into which Catherine de Medicis cast those who were unfortunate enough to incur her hate or fear. A judicious exploration would clear up the matter, and settle, too, several doubtful points as to the foundations of Lescot's original citadel. Unfortunately, the annual grant does not provide for any such archaeological research, and it would be necessary to appeal for funds to the generosity of the chamber.—London Chronicle.

FROG AND TOAD JONAHS.

Yarns Accepted Not Without Doubt by Amateur Naturalists.

Most persons when they hear a naturalist tell incredible stories of doings by birds, animals, or reptiles grin and ask about big fish. One tale, which no one but naturalists seems to believe, was told in the Forest and Stream recently by Allen Chamberlain. He says he heard a cry one of the birds such as a distressed frog makes and found that a blacksnake was swallowing a frog. When the frog was out of sight the snake was shot through the head and the frog was released. At first it was stupefied, but was soon as lively as ever. Within 20 years the same paper has recorded at least a score of just such instances, reported by as many individuals, who gave their real names and addresses, and who declared they had seen the stupefied toad or frog come to as from a trance, hop about as if dazed, and at last go away as lively as ever.

S. D. Kendall, in the Forest and Stream of June, 1892, told about a mother quail which in trying to protect her young got within reach of a rattlesnake. The snake was killed in the act of swallowing the bird. When released the bird was for some time stupefied. But after awhile recovered enough to stagger off. On the next day she was all right and caring for her chicks.

POLLY IN A FIX.

His Piece Was as Applicable One Time as Another.

A showman at a fair possessed a beautiful parrot which accompanied him everywhere on his peregrinations through town and country, and excited the admiration of the gaping crowd by its capital imitations of the showman's voice and tones when inviting the public to step into the booth. One day the faithful bird took a walk on his own, and escaped into a neighboring plantation. Soon a number of men and boys were on its track, but before they had gone far they heard a loud noise caused by the excited parrot in the wood. On arriving at the spot whence the sounds proceeded they found poor Poll perched on the withered branch of a tree, bereft of most of its feathers and surrounded by a flock of screeching crows that were mercilessly pecking at it with their beaks. Notwithstanding this pitiable state of affairs the crowd of seekers could not refrain from laughing as they heard the poor victim scream out with the top of his voice: "One at a time, gentlemen! Don't crush so, please! Take your time! There's plenty of room!"

How He Took It.

An exchange tells a story of a Scotch minister whose physician ordered him to drink beer often. The next day, when the doctor called, the patient complained that the new drink made him sick.

"Why, sir," said the doctor, "that can't be. I'll try it myself."

As he spoke he poured some of the tea into a skillet and set it on the fire. Then, having warmed it, he tasted it, smacked his lips and said:

"Excellent! excellent!"

"Man," said the minister, "is that the way ye sup it?"

"Of course. What other way should it be supped? It's excellent."

"It may be gude that way, doctor, but try it wi' cream and sugar, man. Try it wi' that and see how ye like it."

A New Strawberry.

A San Diego man has produced a strawberry plant which, unlike the ordinary plant, bears fruit of a large size and delicious flavor on a running vine, and not almost directly from the roots, which after the manner of bearing of squash or melon vines. He astonishes a horticulturist to see bunches of ripe strawberries growing on a slender runner which shoots out from a parent stem.

Small Pensions.

A late decree of the queen regent of Holland awards to the widow of a prisoner-of-war a pension of 10 florins (not quite eight dollars) annually, while another widow has 13 florins showered upon her every twelvemonth.

MRS. ADLAI STEVENSON.

Just Elected President of the Daughters of the Revolution.

Mrs. Adlai E. Stevenson, the wife of Vice-President Stevenson, who has just been elected president-general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is fitted in every way for the signal honor that has been conferred upon her by her patriotic friends. The Daughters of the American Revolution was organized in Washington in 1890, and has a membership of 10,000 in 42 states. It is one of the most important women's patriotic societies in the country. Its conditions of eligibility to membership are as follows: "Any woman may be eligible for membership who is of the age of 18 years and who is descended from an ancestor who with unfailing loyalty rendered material aid to the cause of independence as a recognized patriot, as a soldier or sailor, or as civil officer in one of the colonies or states or of the united colonies or states," provided the applicant be otherwise acceptable to the society. Mrs. Stevenson was married to Mr. Stevenson in 1866. She was Miss Letitia Green, of Danville, Ky., the daughter of a Presbyterian minister, who was the president of Center college, in Danville. At that time this was the principal educational institution in the state, and turned out such good men as T. W. Crittenden, John Young Brown and Senator Blackburn. Adlai E. Stevenson, then a young man in McLean county, Ill., decided he would go to Danville for his education, and at a reception in the house of President Green he met his future wife. Two years later Dr. Green died, and Miss Letitia came up to McLean county to live with a sister who had married Matthew T. Scott, and the acquaintanceship began in Kentucky was continued in Illinois, and resulted in marriage. Mr. Stevenson had won a prize, for his wife not only brought him great beauty and a very fine disposition, but a head that has helped him consistently through hard work to the very high position he now occupies. Mrs. Stevenson is one of the most popular women in Washington society, and new honors will add little to the high esteem in which she is already held.

WILL REMAIN LOYAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Ballington Booth Decline to Lead an Insurrection.

Ballington Booth and his wife have retired from the command of the Salvation army in America. Eva Booth has been placed in command temporarily. Mr. and Mrs. Booth accepted their dismissal very quietly. They were asked if they would go to England or remain in America. "We will remain here," said the ex-commander. "We are American citizens, our children are Americans, and we do not intend to go to England."

The New York World says that Ballington Booth was offered the leadership of an independent American Salvation Army. The brigadiers, adjutants and majors whom he had created in all parts of the country besought him to become their general. Ballington Booth retired for a short time to his private quarters, accompanied by his wife, who has been by his side during all the exciting scenes. They locked the door. They knelt down and prayed for strength. The emissaries came again with their tempting offer. He met them calmly and firmly. He listened to their address, the pictured glories of future independence and great results for the cause of religion.

"It cannot be," he said. "I thank you, dear friends, for the honor you have conferred me, the confidence and the trust you have shown me, but I must decline. Mrs. Booth and I will quietly retire from the army in which we have labored so long. God has been God's blessing rest upon you!"

Unquestionably a decided anti-English feeling has strongly manifested itself in the ranks of the Salvation Army. It is claimed by many salvationists that if the commissioned officers of the army in America should decide to rebel against English domination, and summon to lead an American Salvation Army Ballington Booth and his wife, they will willingly respond.

PRESERVATION OF TREES

PROCEEDINGS OF THE MEETING OF STATE FORESTRY ASSOCIATION.

A Series of Ten Lectures Arranged to Be Held in Different Parts of the State to Educate and Interest People.

The study of forestry has become of such great importance that the people have formed themselves into an association for the purpose of protecting the God-given shade which is recognized as indispensable. This was brought about through the destruction of trees by a class of people who knew little or nothing of their value. The interest aroused in this matter has spread rapidly until now the most learned and intelligent portion of the people have taken hold of the subject in a way that predicts a preservation of the beautiful trees.

The New Jersey Forestry Association, composed of the best people in the State, met at the Casino Thursday afternoon at three o'clock for the purpose of hearing something more in regard to the objects and aims of the association. There was a large number of people present, and a short business session preceded the regular meeting. Ex-Assemblymen Augustus Cutler, of Morristown, who was the one who inaugurated a department of agriculture, presided, and the secretary, Prof. Troyel, of Trenton, read the minutes of the last meeting; also the treasurer's report which showed the association to be in a most flourishing condition. The question of providing a course of ten lectures during the coming season on forestry was brought up, and the secretary was given power to raise the necessary amount of money toward paying for the same. These lectures will be given in various parts of the State.

The secretary of the State Board of Agriculture reported that progress in forestry was being made and that the school teachers throughout the State had become very much interested. At this time a vote of thanks was extended to Prof. Travell, the women of Plainfield, and all who had assisted in making the meeting a success. A large chorus of young women and men from the public shools were present and sang several selections which the audience enjoyed exceedingly. Especially pleasing was the selection, "Song of the Skylark," with the various parts, and noteworthy was the male voices. Miss Mabel Maxson was the efficient accompanist.

Dr. Halstead, a prominent member of the Association, was then introduced by the president and by the aid of charts gave a most admirable address on the "Diseases of Trees." He spoke of the various diseases that trees are heir to, and the peculiar manner in which they work. The principal one spoken of was mildew. He spoke of its rapid growth and how it affected the breathing pores of leafs, working into the stem and branches. The loss of color in leafs, he said, was caused by mildew. A simple remedy was offered for this disease consisting of six pounds of sulphate of copper added to four pounds of lime with a sufficient quantity of water to make about fifty gallons of the preparation. This, the speaker said, would not cure every form of disease that a tree was subject to, but would be found efficacious in most cases. It can be used to advantage in fruit and vegetable gardens. The seed of an inferior plant, otherwise known as a spore, was described by Dr. Halstead in an interesting and intelligent manner. He also spoke of the black knot on the cherry and plum trees, and his advice was that a sharp knife used judiciously would bring about the best results.

At the close of Dr. Halstead's address, B. E. Fernow, Chief of Division of Forestry at Washington, entered the room and was called upon for a few remarks. Mr. Fernow said that as he was to speak in the evening he could not at that time say very much. However, he said that his first acquaintance with trees was at the age of three years. At that time he met the customary twig in a forcible manner. The speaker then briefly spoke of the many uses to which wood was being put, such as in tennis racquets, bicycle rims, handle bars, etc. He stated that he would have more to say later on.

The President closed with a few words of encouragement, after which all joined in singing "Hail Columbia."

The evening session brought together a large and intelligent audience. President Cutler opened the meeting with a few words relative to the prospective concerted action in this city against the elm beetle, and said that he hoped that other places in the State would profit thereby.

Prof. B. E. Fernow was then introduced, and was most heartily received. He said that he felt like the preacher who had the same subject to talk about each Sunday, but had to present it in a different form. Continuing he said in part:

I have been considering what subject would be best adapted to this audience and have concluded to generalize the study of forestry into the following:

"Why Should Every Citizen Take an Interest in This Movement?"

A lack of consideration at the proper time is the cause of difference between capital and labor. The right man of experience forecasts the future and provides for it. The great point nowadays with the forester is how to turn logs into cash quickly. The destruction of forests by fire and cutting has been most damaging, but few people realize the fact. Wood enters every purpose in life, for it is the most convenient.

The forest products in the United States rank second. They are ten times more than gold and silver and six times more than coal. That is the value of the raw products, not after it enters into its thousand uses. It is one of the largest resources of our country and we should take an interest in it. We don't want to stop the cutting of trees by lumbermen. We want to see the trees cut, but we also want to see them reproduced rightly, that is our object. It is the supply and demand that rules. With all other products there is an annual harvest, but it is not so with forests.

The influence of forests on the climate is well established, but the instruments at hand are too poor to ascertain the influence, for they are not reliable. An enjoyable ramble through the woods has proven that the forests are healthful and elevating. The influence of one tree is not large, but it is the massing of trees that brings the result. The tendency of forests is to change high and low temperature, the greatest difference being in the moisture current which keeps the under soil open. The sanitary influence is also a beneficial one. I trust that I have shown every intelligent person present their duty towards the forests, and your organization is a most important one. You should seek such legislation that will bring about the desired result. New Jersey has made a most creditable beginning. You can't expect private owners to take care of their property for the benefit of others. This State has started on the right lines and is sure to accomplish something. My advice is to join the Forestry Association and assist in the cause. At this time, Prof. Fernow having finished, Mayor Gilbert was called for and he responded in his usual excellent manner. He said that he had just finished an address at another meeting, and it would serve his audience just right if he should repeat it to them. He said that it gave him great pleasure to state that Plainfield was noted for its hospitality, its beautiful trees, and he might add its beautiful and energetic women, and he didn't know which of the three graces Plainfield could afford to loose. We love the ladies and we also love the grand old trees. He said that the Town Improvement Association have alarmed us regarding the elm beetle, and if you have any knowledge that will quiet us let us have it before you leave town. He was glad the convention had come here and he hoped the Plainfield people had learned something of tree life that will be a benefit to us.

FOURTH STREET CARS RUNNING.

Another Line of the Street Railway Extension Opened Up.

Superintendent Adleman, of the street railway, succeeded in placing car No. 2 on the Fourth street line at noon. Regular trips were made. As soon as the work of narrowing the guage is started, car No. 2 will be used on the Front street line in transferring passengers. The reason that car No. 6 does not run to Netherwood is that it takes too long for one car to make the trip and connect with the other cars. The manufacturers of the new cars have promised to make a shipment on Monday. As soon as they arrive they will be put into service.

Cut in Prices of Wheels.

The Eldridge Bicycle Company, of Park avenue and Fourth street, have received notice from factory that $80 Hartfords are to be sold at $65, and $60 Hartfords at $50. These wheels can be seen in their show window today and at the price represent the best value of any wheel on the market. The make and quality of Hartford bicycles is so well known that people in need of wheels can make no mistake in buying at these prices. The Eldridge Company wish to notify all customers that a rebate will be made on all these wheels previous to this date, and that same goes with wheels as when sold at higher prices. The Columbia wheels remain at $100, which price is guaranteed for the year.

On Sounding Qualities.

G. A. Audsley, of Grove street, the well-known architect, lectured at the Connecticut Musical Teachers' Association festival held in New Haven last evening. His subject was "Acoustics." He treated the subject in a comprehensive and thorough manner, and was listened to by a large and deeply interested audience.

THREE YEARS OF SERVICE.

Endeavorers of East Third Street Mission Celebrate Their Anniversary.

Three years of hard work have made the Christian Endeavor Society of the East Third Street mission a prosperous one, and the members had a right to rejoice last Friday at their third anniversary, which was celebrated at the mission by a crowd of enthusiastic Endeavorers from the mission and the home church, the First Baptist.

The room was tastefully decorated with ferns, oak branches and cut flowers, the work of a committee directed by Clifford A. Braider and Robert Schreiner, and presented a charming appearance.

The programme opened with a piano solo by Clifford A. Braider and was followed by a prayer by Rev. D. J. Yerkes, D. D. Robert Barnes, president of the society, gave a violin solo and then read a history of the society, telling how it started three years ago with thirteen consecrated workers in the mission and now had grown to include thirty-five active, five honorary and fifteen associate members. He spoke about the Christian activity that had been displayed during the last year and showed that the year had been one of general progress.

Rev. C. E. Herring made the address of the evening, and took for his topic, "Hited, Tried, Fired." He said that the life of a society was divided into three parts and that this society had reached the second. The time of formation was past and the trying time was at hand.

A recitation, "The Irish Washerwoman's Letter" was given by Mrs. E. P. Drake, and William N. Bunyon sang several selections. A recitation and song by Edward Wolf was followed by a vocal solo by Miss Schmid, and then Rev. Dr. Yerkes made a few remerks on "Endeavor and Perseverance," and said that the society must hold fast for future developments.

After a vocal trio by the Misses Freeman, refreshments were served and a general good time enjoyed. The entire affair was in the hands of a committee of which Irving L. Brady was chairman.

EARTHLY PARADISES.

Portions of the Earth That Approach Climatic Perfection.

For an inhabitant of the north temperate zone the most nearly correct climate would probably be the island of Tasmania, which enjoys warmth without heat and breathes coolness without cold, and moreover possesses a climate so equable that the average temperature ranges from 44 to 63 degrees, giving a mean of about 54°. In addition to this, or possibly in consequence of it, and the purifying effect of the sea breezes, there is practically no disease save what the inhabitants are responsible for. There are many groups of islands in the South Pacific which fully deserve the name of earthly paradise, but they have the fault of being too much like paradise. The valley of Cashmere in northern India and of Quito in Equador possess climates which are almost perfect, but they suffer the disadvantage of a great distance from the world's trade. It is too dry and New Zealand too damp to approach perfection; but Tasmania possesses the happy mean which affords health and comfort without the danger of degeneration which is the penalty of more luxurious climes. Of places near home, the Isle of Man probably most nearly fulfills the conditions of the question. Although so much farther north, its average temperature is almost as high and quite as equable as that of the Isle of Thanet, and it possesses the additional advantage of freedom from the fogs, which are the greatest disadvantage of the shores of the English channel.

TESTING CHRONOMETERS.

The Interesting Process of Adjusting Watches for Temperature.

Before a first-class watch is sold it has to go through a variety of tests or "adjustments," and one of the most important is the adjustment for temperature.

Chronometers are adjusted for temperatures varying from 50 degrees to 90 degrees, as a rule, but some makers —especially in France—cool them down to zero, and often they are heated to 130 degrees. Beyond 140 degrees it is dangerous to heat them, as the oil would be liable to injury, and even the works might suffer.

Pocket watches are adjusted for temperatures varying from 15 degrees to 95 degrees. The process consists in putting the watch in a close-fitting case, and placing this in a cold room, or a refrigerator with ice, and leaving it there for some time, altering the works as be needs it, keeping a record of time. Then it is very gradually heated, great care being taken not to let the moisture in the warm air condense upon it.

Next it is put in a specially constructed oven, and heated up to or 100 or 120 degrees, the machinery being again adjusted to go regularly. Chronometers are usually kept a week in the cold chamber, then a week in the hot, and again a week in the cold chamber. After this they are ready to make voyages to any port between the equator and the poles without losing or gaining a minute.

CURIOUS CHINESE CUSTOM.

Calling to Mind the Blessing of Having Written Characters.

In a work entitled "An Australian in China" occurs a description of the queer practice in China of honoring waste paper by committing it to the flames. In the center of the green stands the hollow pillar, in which Chinese waste paper is reverently burnt. "When letters were invented," the Chinese say, "the gods wept and hell trembled." "Reverence the characters," is an injunction of Confucius which no Chinaman neglects to follow. He remembers that "he who uses lettered paper to kindle the fire has ten demerits, and will have itchy scorn;" he remembers that "he who tosses lettered paper into dirty water, or burns it in a filthy place has 30 demerits, and will frequently have sore eyes or becomes blind;" whereas, "he who gets alms, and collects, saves and burns lettered paper has 5,000 merits, adds 12 years to his life, and will become honored and healthy, and his children and grandchildren will be virtuous and filial." But his reverence has strict limits, and while he reverences a piece of paper upon which a moral precept is written, he often thinks himself absolved from reverencing the moral precept itself.

Provoked a Speech.

A good story is told of the way in which a New England senator was once aroused to make a stirring speech. At the outset of his political career he had been known as a remarkably clever "orator of the stump," and later on, in the lower house of the legislature, he made a brilliant name for himself. But when he became a senator he ceased talking, much to the regret of his friends and admirers. Finally the liquor law came up for discussion, and the wife of a friend of the senator, who was much interested in its passage, was greatly disappointed to see that the brilliant man had no apparent intention of joining in the discussion. She sat down and wrote a few words on a sheet of paper, which she inclosed in an envelope and sent by a messenger to the senator. "Do speak," Evan Dolman's ass spoke once!" This brought the senator to his feet and elicited one of the best speeches he ever made.

A Tottering Spire.

It is reported that the spire of Salisbury cathedral, in the south of England, is tottering. When the cathedral was built, in 1220, there was no thought of erecting a spire, but it is one of the most graceful in England. That was an afterthought, and the architect who designed the tower strained the strength of the original substructure to the utmost. It has always had to be carefully watched, and the means taken to strengthen it by iron bands and ties have only added to the weight. Of late the stonework has been decaying rapidly, so that the spire is in great danger of collapsing.

NEW PRISON LABOR LAW.

Provision of the Bobbs Measure Signed Yesterday by Gov. Morton.

Albany, May 23.—The bill of Assemblyman Robbie, which Gov. Morton signed yesterday, is another of those measures drafted by the state prison commission with a view of employing prisoners after Jan. 1 next in accordance with the provisions of the new state constitution, which prohibits prison labor from coming in competition with outside labor. The bill amends the county law and provides that keepers of county jails shall cause each prisoner committed for imprisonment under sentence to be constantly employed at hard labor when practicable during every day, except Sunday, and the board of supervisors of the county, or judge of the county, may prescribe the kind of labor at which such prisoner shall be employed; the labor shall not exceed, at least annually, with the board of supervisors of the county for such labor. Such keeper may, with the consent of the board of supervisors of the county, or the county judge, from time to time cause such of the convicts under his charge as are capable of hard labor to be employed outside of the jail in the same, or in the adjoining county, upon such terms as may be agreed upon between the keepers and the officers, or persons under whose direction such convicts shall be placed, subject to such regulations as the board or judge may prescribe; and the board of supervisors of the several counties are authorized to employ convicts under sentence to confinement in the county jails in building and repairing penal institutions of the county and in building and repairing the highways in their respective counties or in preparing the materials for such highway, for sale to any person in such counties, or towns, villages and cities therein.

ALBANY CAPITOL.

Contracts for Its Completion, Aggregating $1,356,388, Awarded.

Albany, May 23.—The new capitol construction commission met yesterday to receive bids for the completion of the capitol building to the several lowest bidders for the several portions of the work, the amounts of the bids aggregating $1,356,388. The papers were drawn up and signed and the contractors given until next Thursday to make return of their bonds, which will be passed upon by the commission at that time. It was agreed between the commission and the contractors that Morrison & Jennings, of Syracuse, contractors for completing the tower at $119,297, and D. S. Hess & Co. of New York city, who are to do the work of completing the comptroller's and treasurer's rooms at $65,000, at $65,400, should finish their work by Jan. 1, while the remaining work is not to be completed before July 1, 1898. E. J. Carlin & Co. of Brooklyn, whose contract calls for $951,691 worth of work, have given an advance of $302,000 out of the appropriation of $500,000 and Prescott, Buckley & Callahan of Keeseville, whose contract is for $420,000, are to do $115,000 worth of work before they can receive a cent. Lewis J. Hinton was reinstated by the commission as carver and designer.

WANT HIM SURRENDERED.

State Department Applies To Spain for Forger Martin, Now in Havana.

Washington, May 23.—The state department has applied to the Spanish authorities for the surrender of Martin, alias Verdoun, wanted in New York for forging the name of August Belmont. Martin is the man who was arrested on some charge unknown to this government, and of whom it was erroneously reported that his extradition to the United States had been refused by Spain. Nothing has yet been heard of the intention of the Spanish government with regard to the request, and the department does not expect to be informed on that point until the evidence in the case can reach Havana by mail.

New York Firemen Not To Go Abroad.

New York, May 23.—The board of fire commissioners has decided to abandon the project of sending a crack team to take part in the London fire-men's tournament. As Mayor Strong had promised $500 towards the expense of a department parade in New York during the summer the board decided to return all money collected for the trip to London and have a local parade.

Catholic Prelates Indicted.

Jacksonville, Ill., May 23.—The grand jury has returned indictments against the heads of the Illinois college and the Catholic and parochial schools for not having flags on their school buildings, among those indicted are Bishop Ryan of the Alton diocese and Vice-General Hickey of Springfield, many other prominent people being included.

Coal Barge Sunk.

New York, May 23.—The British steamer Vedra which sailed last evening for Cape Town, East London, etc., collided with a three-masted coal barge, heavily ladened, in Gedney's channel. The barge sank within five minutes, her crew being taken off by the Vedra.

Providence Bonds Floated.

Providence, May 23.—City Treasurer Granger has just sold Providence bonds to the amount of $700,000, to Kidder, Peabody & Co. of Boston, $500,000 at $113.69, and $200,000 to the Providence Institution for Savings at $114.61.

The Revolt in Peru.

Lima, Peru, May 23.—Ex-President Caceres has telegraphed President Pierola offering his own and his party's services to repress the insurrectionary movement in the Loreto district.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—Miss Anne Walworth, of Cleveland, has given $100,000 to the Euclid Avenue Presbyterian church of that city, of which Rev. Dr. S. F. Sprecher is pastor.

—Buddhism of late is gaining quite a number of adherents among the intellectual leaders in Germany, such as George Ebers, Gabriel Max, Julius Stinde, F. Hartman, and they have just begun to issue a monthly at Brunswick under the title of Sphinx.

—Benjamin D. Silliman, of Brooklyn, becomes the oldest living Yale graduate by the death of Charles L. Powell, of Alexandria, Va. Mr. Powell was born in 1804, and was graduated from Yale in the class of 1823. For several years his name has appeared first in the list of living Yale graduates.

—Baron Achille Paganini, the only son of the great violinist, who died recently at Parma, was himself a good amateur musician. By a special appeal to Pope Leo XIII. he obtained permission to have his father, who died without the sacrements, buried in consecrated ground.

—Ramkrishna Gopal Bhandharkar, professor of Sanskrit at Poona, has been elected foreign correspondent of the Academie des Inscriptions, being the first native of India to receive the distinction. The other new correspondents are Kirchoff, the classical scholar of Berlin, and Beandorf, of Vienna, the archaeologist.

—Sir Frederick Pollock, whom Harvard honored with an LL. D. last commencement, has not forgotten the distinction, and there is much praise of American jurists and American character, in general, in his article on the Harvard law school which he contributed to the London Times.

—The board of visitors of the University of Wisconsin has just investigated a charge that President Charles K. Adams is a free thinker and Christian, and has decided that the charge is unfounded, on the ground that the president was born on a farm, and worked his way through school and college.

—Evangelist Smith, who is conducting a series of successful revival meetings at the People's temple, Boston, is a full-blooded gypsy, and was brought up in New Forest, England. He is described as a most picturesque, forcible and eloquent preacher, although at the time of his conversion he could not read.

A NEW THEORY ABOUT THE HAIR.

Don't Cut It Often and You Save Yourself Much Annoying Trouble.

"You are getting very bald," remarked the barber, cheerfully and with exquisite tact. "It won't be many years now until you'll look a good deal like Bill Nye in your upper regions."

The customer moved uneasily under his tormentor's clutch, and tried ineffectually to get a puff at his fast-expiring cigar.

"Yes," mused the barber as he fondled the customer's few remaining locks and mourned the small heap of disposed hair men so often observed in tonsorial artists, "and you would hardly believe it, but I am largely responsible for your baldness."

At this the customer strove to rise, but could not, for he was lying on his back, one hand was locked under an apron, the other held a cigar, and he could secure no leverage.

"Yes, sir, I can tell you the whole truth now," resumed the barber, "because this thing has gone too far to do me any harm. I have been cutting your hair for 15 years, on an average of once a month. If I had cut it only once in six months you would have twice as much hair on you have at the present time. And if I had cut it once a year you would probably have a capillary adornment equal to that of Mr. Buffalo Bill.

"You see, the more the hair is cut the weaker it becomes at the roots, and if the cutting is repeated often enough the roots will become so weak and degenerate that they will no longer be able to afford an anchorage for the hair. As a result, of course, the hair falls out and you become bald.

"There are not many persons outside the medical profession who understand this. Some of the barbers do, but I have never heard of their saying anything about it to their customers. And I only tell you because I feel that you will not want your hair cut very often from now until you die, for the powerful reason that you have none to cut.

"Each little thread of hair contains a slender tube, like the pith cylinder of a plant stem. It is by means of this tube that the hair receives its nourishment. Under natural conditions the hair is allowed to grow to its full length. Then the tubes do their work properly. But when the hair and of course the tubes, too, are cut off, every few weeks, the roots are sure to become weak, and eventually they will lose their grip on the scalp.

"It is often said that cutting the hair will make it stronger, just like cutting grass. So it will for a time. Repeated cutting tends to make the hair coarse, but it is just this sort that falls out easiest and earliest. Women are seldom bald, for they let their hair grow. Did you ever hear of a bald Indian or negro? Baldness has been a victim of civilization. I guess not."—N. Y. World.

Warning of the Register.

If your register sends forth a blast of ashes every time the furnace is raked you have proof the most positive that there is a leak in your fireboxy otherwise the ashes would not reach the register pipes. This should be remedied at once, since it is not only a frequent cause of the unsatisfactory fire, but it inevitably introduces coal gas and cellar air into the house. Any odor from the combustion of foreign matter in the furnace should not rise through the pipes: if it does, the lesson of the ashes is but repeated in another form.—Philadelphia Ledger.

AT A LEAP-YEAR BALL.

He Was Only a Timid Flattering Thing, and He Knew It.

The "new man" made his initial bow and was launched on the restless social sea with all the pomp and ceremony worthy of such a truly great event "Gladys" as he is known among his friends, was taken to a leap year party and behaved just "too lovely for anything," or so the women said, at any rate.

This is a true story.

His escort called at 8.30 and was kept waiting a half hour in true feminine fashion by Gladys, who was putting the finishing touches to his toilet. Finally, just as his escort began to fret and fume under the delay, the tardy young man tripped lightly down the stairs into the drawing-room, exclaiming: "Oh, Miss Soreoss! I am afraid you will think I am a horrid man to keep you waiting so long, won't you? It was dreadfully stupid of me, I am sure, and I am awfully sorry, really. Mamma mislaid my side combs, don't you know, and we have had such an exciting time hunting for them that I was in a terrible state of excitement when you rang. Mamma says I am a silly little goose to get agitated over such a small matter, but then I don't agree—I think it is highly important to have I am older. (Gladys has been on speaking terms with Santa Claus for 35 years.) How do you like my new gown —don't you think it is just too sweet for anything?" gushed Gladys.

When his escort had recovered his ecstasies over the bewildering display, the little man coyly remarked: "Oh, you girls are such fearful fibbers we poor men scarcely know how much to believe of what you say. You think we consider seriously all the nonsense you tell us—now don't you, honor bright? Well, I want to tell you we don't, so there, now. Oh, you naughty, naughty girls! But then I don't blame you a bit—we are all naughty, aren't we? How thoughtful you were to send me these lovely flowers. I do so adore orchids. Do you know, papa thinks it a shameful waste to squander so much money on flowers for us men, and thinks it would be much more sensible to put the sum in the Homestead Aid association, where it would accumulate interest. Papa, you know, spent his early days on a farm and wasn't reared in the lap of luxury and social life. But then he is such a dear kind old soul, and keeps me so well supplied with pin money that I can't bear the thought of openly disagreeing with him. Poor, dear papa! I really don't know what he will do without him—I don't think the woman lives that I would marry and leave my papa. (Gladys starts for the carriage and gets as far as the door, when he calls back): Oh, dear me, I forgot! Papa is my fan and the door key? I am so thoroughly excited I dearly forgot them." (These necessary articles are produced. Gladys cuddles confidingly up to his side in the carriage, and the party is fairly off for the party.)

Arriving at the ball Gladys devoted 15 minutes to rearranging his hair, and was ready to go downstairs at a quarter before ten.—Utica Observer.

A PRETTY MOUNTAIN MAID.

A Member of the House Thought She Was Trying to Bluff Him.

A somewhat gay and gallant member of the Kentucky legislature, even for a member, was telling to a small group of listeners, of which a Star reporter was one, some of his campaign experiences.

"On one trip in the mountains," he said, after narrating several good ones, "I was riding along a road up a picturesque valley with my campaign companion, when we met a buxom, pinkcheeked, good-looking country girl on foot. As I spoke to her after the custom of the country, she stopped us.

"'Have you seed anything of a red-headed, freckled-faced feller down the crick?' she inquired.

"'We have met three or four men in the last hour,' I replied, 'but not one that was red-headed. How old was he?'

"'Bout my age, I reckon.'

"'So young as that?' I asked with all my courtliness.

"'Purty near's powerful young,' she said, without the slightest apparent comprehension of my compliment. 'He's 21 and so'm I.'

"The man we met with the red head was twice that old. He couldn't have been the one you were looking for, could he?'

"'I reckon not. The man I'm lookin' fer and me wuz to git married yistiddy, an' when the time come he wazn't thar. I started up the road fer him with a gun an' mowed down a mile or two.'

"This made it interesting, and I at once felt it to be my duty to offer my assistance.

"'Tell me his name,' I said, 'and I'll make inquiries along the road.'

"'Sim Johnson, and I'd give a tencare farm to git holt uv him.'

"Her anger heightened her color, and put such a brightness in her eyes that she was positively handsome, and I just couldn't help paying another delicate compliment on her.

"'You must excuse me,' I smiled and bowed, and sent forth my softest glances, 'but with such a pretty girl as you are after me, I'd like to be Sim Johnson.'

"This time it was a ten-strike.

"'Wall,' she responded, as she looked me over critically, not to say admiringly; 'I hain't no objections.'

"It took me a little time I ever laid down before a bluff," concluded the member, "but that one knocked me flat, and I never did know how I got away."—Washington Star.

Had Tried Everything Else.

Sympathetic Caller—I am sorry your rheumatism doesn't get any better, Dad. Have you ever tried a course of calisthenics?

Sufferer (with languid interest) — I think not, but I couldn't take them if they tasted nasty. My stomach is all sore out.—Chicago Tribune.

MR. GLADSTONE AT WORK.

A Busy Man with a Passion for Saving the Minutes.

Three writing tables stand in the Hawarden castle library, and not one of them is for show. At one table Mrs. Gladstone writes what is of her letters the second, standing between two windows, is Mr. Gladstone's political desk. It looks new too neat, too tidy, by far, for the taste of any Gladstonian politician; there's blotting pad has an unused air about it; the pen-wipers, nicks, knives and other appurtenances stand about with a mathematical precision which means want of use, and there is neither note nor leaflet to be seen. The political desk, at all events for the present, must be numbered among the unemployed. But turn to the third, the literary writing table in the niche by the window, which is the most peaceful corner in that centre of peace. You may there at any time during the day see a sight that will make your heart rejoice, and that will linger in your mind while pictures linger there at all.

The whole desk is covered with reference books of all shapes and sizes. They form a wall around three sides, and there is only an opening in the front of the desk just wide enough to allow Mr. Gladstone to place the sheets of foolscap on which he writes there at the desk the G. O. M. sat lately all day long, with very short intervals, absorbed in "Bishop Butler," the man whom he gives a place among the best of men who have ever lived. The number of volumes revered by Mr. Gladstone for reference is almost endless; he has often to search through one bulky tome after the other for some chance paragraph that may help him to elucidate a dark place in a page of "Analogy." He sits absorbed in his work; now writing rapidly and eagerly for some minutes; *now throwing down his pen and dip*ping into one of the books with which he has surrounded himself. Sometimes a specially favored artist has been admitted to take Mr. Gladstone's portrait, but it is on express condition that the "sitter" shall not in any way be distracted from his work. Not once does Mr. Gladstone look round from his task, you may perchance be sauntering about the room in company with a member of his family, or be privileged to have a chat with Mrs. Gladstone as in loving pride in her husband's doings, she points out to you this, that or the other of the objects in the library to which attaches a special interest for him. Not that Mr. Gladstone is altogether indifferent to violent interruptions. In fact, he objects to them strongly, and he does not hesitate to say so. But when it happens that he himself has invited you to "come into my room," he forgive you if you appear while he is busy at his desk, quite undisturbed by your presence or your voice, with an absorption in his occupation which is nothing short of marvelous. Whatever the work may be which he has in hand, it takes up his whole attention that he has to be aroused from it as most people are roused from sleep. Mr. Gladstone does not, as a rule, care to talk of his idiosyncrasies, since he holds the sincere opinion that he is very much like the rest of the world. He does however acknowledge that his faculty of concentration is his special gift, the one by which he is distinguished from other people.

Another reason why Mr. Gladstone gets so much done, and such an amount of work is his extraordinary habit of using up odds and ends of time. One day, not long ago, he was going out for a drive into Chester after luncheon. He pushing was very hot, so he went away from the table, changed his clothes, got ready for the drive and came back and finished his pudding, thus saving the ten minutes during which his pudding cooled!.

From a recent luncheon time Mr. Gladstone spends regularly in the library, hard at work. But when the gong sounds he puts down his pen, for promptness in everything has become a second nature to him, and he is probably in the dining-room before anyone else arrives. Petz alone, if that little creature can arrange it so, is as prompt as his master, for his two ruling passions—love for his master and love for his food—come into play at the sound of the luncheon gong.—Westminster Gazette.

AN ABSENT-MINDED MAN.

Why He Thought His Sandwich Was Dry and Tasteless.

The absent-minded man took his seat at the restaurant table, and, as usual, buried his face at once in a newspaper. A waiter placed a bill-of-fare, a napkin and a knife and fork in front of him and stood by for three minutes unnoticed before asking:

"What shall I bring you, sir?"

"What's that?" said the absent-minded man, starting up suddenly, not recognizing the waiter at all except as one.

"What do you want for lunch, sir?" the waiter asked again.

"Oh! yes," said the absent-minded, trying to collect his wits. "Bring me a cup of coffee and a ham sandwich."

The waiter supplied the order and put a large pasteboard check for it down on the table, the absent-minded man continuing to read his paper. The waiter went away to attend to the wants of other people, and about 15 minutes later came back.

"Do you wish anything more?" he asked, politely.

"Yes," snapped the absent-minded man, scowling viciously. "Go and get me a fresh ham sandwich. The one you brought me was as dry as a bone."

"Why, here is the sandwich I brought, sir," said the waiter, pushing the plate forward him, "and you've eaten the check."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Indispensable.

"I don't think I want a cyclopedia," said the woman of the house, "but if you have got any nice book for children—"

"Great Scott, madam!" exclaimed the unblushing book agent. "We use this cyclopedia for a children's book at our houses altogether. They sit on it at the table."—Chicago Tribune.

CANOVAS DEL CASTILLO.

Famous in Spain as a Diplomat, Scholar and Political Leader.

Senor Antonio Canovas del Castillo, prime minister of Spain, is one of the most eminent literary men of Europe, besides being a really good statesman. Since he formed his ministry a year ago last June he has earned praise from the Spanish people. It was Canovas who ordered certain maps, geographers, to apologize to Minister Taylor recently for having spoken abusively of the United States, and it was by his orders that special detachments of police were put into service recently to prevent any serious attack on the legation of the United States. All this was thoughtful and wise. The premier was born in 1830, and his public life began in 1851, when he became editor of the Patria. Three years later he was named deputy for Malaga, and has been in the cortes ever since that time. He has had some diplomatic experience, in 1856 he was charge d'affaires at Rome. He it was who was largely concerned in drawing up the concordat between Spain and the holy see. He has been in turn governor of Cadiz, director general of the administration and under secretary of state for the interior. In 1864 the queen called him to the ministry, and he was minister of finance and of the colonies. Passing through the revolution, his greatest service was to uphold legitimate and constitutional monarchy in the constituent assembly of 1869 in the face of the triumphant revolution. For this he has become the supreme director of the Alfonsist party, and his honors in that capacity have been sufficient to make up a small history in themselves. In spite of extraordinarily busy public and political life he has found time to write numerous books on moral and political science, which have placed him in the forefront of the profoundest thinkers of Europe and have won for him large honors from several continental monarchs. Take him all in all, Canovas is one of the brightest, ablest, most intellectual supporters of the monarchical idea in the world to-day.

ANTONIO CANOVAS DEL CASTILLO.

NAPOLEON THE FOURTH.

A Boy Who May Some Day Become Emperor of the French.

In a big old chateau just outside of Paris lives a 14-year-old boy who may some day be the emperor of France. The latter country is so much divided in politics, and there are so many of its inhabitants who would rather be ruled by an emperor than by a president elected by the people, that it is not wholly impossible that the youth hereinbefore described may not some day be an imperial successor to the throne of the great Napoleon I. Indeed, the boy is none other than Napoleon IV., legitimate son of the late prince imperial.

Very little is known in or out of France about the little fellow who has a kingly prospect. One thing is certain, Empress Eugenie is very fond of Napoleon IV., whom she tenderly calls her grandson, and it is she who is providing the boy's education—an education that fits him for statesmanship, politics and diplomacy. Although he may never sit on the throne of a new French empire, it is just as well, so his guardians think, to have the boy in perfect trim for the high position which he and his followers expect.

The young Napoleon IV. is a black-haired lad, manly in his bearing, and of robust health. The greatest possible pains is taken in his training, and special tutors are engaged to teach him special studies. Even if he can never become a great monarch, he will at least be a polished gentleman and scholar. The boy lives modestly with a Dr. Evans, whose son he is supposed to be, and who is looking after the young king's health and training. Once a month the boy's mother visits him, sometimes in the company of Empress Eugenie. The mother of the new Napoleon is a bright little English woman, who sings divinely, and is loved even by the silver-haired old empress.

Such is the true story of Napoleon IV. He may yet be one of the foremost figures in Europe, or he may be the last hope of the Napoleons. Will he ever realize his lofty ambition? Future history will record the facts.

Runners in Paris Streets.

French law favors the drivers and carriage folk, and not the pedestrians; and as a result it is said there were more people killed in the streets of Paris last year than died from all the diseases that Pasteur devoted his science to combat.

Eighteen of the twenty-one counties in New Jersey will elect Sheriffs this fall.

It is said ex-Judge Alfred Walling will be the Democratic candidate for Senator in Monmouth county.

Speaker Louis T. Derousse, of the House of Assembly, will endeavor to be the next Sheriff of Camden county.

Alvah A. Clark, who has just been nominated for postmaster of Somerville, was in Congress from 1877 to 1881.

With their ears to the ground, the people of New Jersey are waiting to hear something from the Voorhees Investigating Committee.—Tribune.

What? A dull thud?

Here is variety. A Camden man is suffering with blood poison from a rooster peck. Many a man knows what it is to be henpecked.

"Jersey City hasn't any money to burn," was the remark of an official of that city who has eye to the practical and humorous when the appropriation for $1,000 for Fourth of July fireworks was defeated.

A sound-money Democrat on a sound-money platform will form except the contention to defeat a temporizing straddler standing on a platform of compromise and insincerities.—Manchesester Union.

Here is a decision by the Attorney-General of New York State that will be of particular interest to Plainfielders just at present:

A careful reading of section 2 of the act (the Raines excise law) will lead to the conclusion that a person must hold a liquor tax certificate in order to lawfully traffic in fermented or hard cider.

"All is not gold that glitters," is well said in the case of Abbey & Grau, the big theatrical managers and producers, whose failure is announced this morning. Only a few days ago a benefit was tendered the gentleman which was said to have enriched their coffers $20,000, but even this golden streak could not save them from business ruination.

The brute who broke the back of a cat, and was fined $10, well deserved the punishment, though it is admitted that if the scene had been a back-yard fence, the time 2:30 a. m., and the instrument of annihilation a bootjack or some other toilet article, the man would have doubtless been discharged for accomplishing what has not yet been recorded to the credit of any known man.

There is a possibility that the destruction of the Palisades will cease within a short time, as Gov. Griggs yesterday instructed Attorney General Stockton to obtain injunctions against all the firms and individuals now engaged in quarrying along the great wall of rock. It was said in Trenton yesterday that the necessary action will be taken next week.

Speaking of ex-Congressman Alvah A. Clark's nomination for postmaster of Somerville, the Plainfield Press says:

He, if he should accept, will appoint someone to conduct the office, as his large law practice will not permit him to attend to such a small affair as a post office.

That will never do. No man has any business to accept a public office if he cannot attend to the duties of it. The people of Somerville would no doubt be pleased to have Mr. Clark for postmaster, but it would not be fair to them, the Government or himself, to accept and do the work by deputy.—New York Tribune.

The New York World this morning impeaches the Democracy of Alvah A. Clark, who has just been appointed postmaster at Somerville, and insists that the appointment will not be conducive to party harmony in Somerset county. The charge is made that Mr. Clark violated all allegiance to the Democratic party last fall by working for the election of Charles A. Reed to the Assembly. It is likely that The World's comments are inspired by some of the disgruntled candidates for the place which Mr. Clark has been selected.

The records of this State in regards to Governor's vetoes and bills which have failed to become laws during the last ten years, seem very incomplete. According to the printed minutes of the Legislature, the veto messages of the Governors numbered as follows: In 1895, 18; 1894, 15; 1893, 6. The index of the minutes for 1892, 1891 and 1890 shows no veto messages by Gov. Abbett. Gov. Green's veto messages were: In 1888, 11; 1888, 22; 1887, 2. In 1886, at the end of Gov. Abbett's first term, he wrote 21 veto messages. The following is the number of bills marked "vetoed" in the records of bills kept by the State Librarian: 1895, 19; 1894, 49; 1892, 55; 1891, 56, 1890, 23; 1889, 22. The number of laws signed in the last ten years was as follows: 1895, 434; 1894, 354; 1893, 292; 1892, 296; 1891, 285; 1890, 311; 1889, 297; 1888, 237; 1887, 182; 1886, 270. Gov. Griggs has so far signed 217 bills and has 5 remaining for action in his hands. He has vetoed 69 bills.

Miles Rose, for many years the Democratic leader in Middlesex county, announces that he will not take part in politics this fall.

Ex-Judge Thomas F. Noonon, of Bayonne, has his eye on the Democratic Congressional nomination in the Eighth District.

There are rumors that John Y. Foster, for many years secretary of the State Republican Club, will not be re-elected because he worked against the Republican candidate for Mayor of Newark.

Business principles enforced by the Union county Board of Freeholders have the effect of reducing the annual tax rate. This body can be judged well by such praiseworthy results.—New York Press.

Plainfielders will be interested to hear that Roswell G. Horr, formerly Congressman from Michigan, now a resident of this city, is being urged to take the Republican Congressional nomination in the Eighth District.

The Tobacco Trust, as a way of getting around the Iowa anti-cigarette law, will make a cigarette covered with a light tobacco wrapper instead of paper, which makes it not a cigarette in the meaning of the Iowa statute.

When a woman, a witness in a celebrated will case, was asked to give the date of her birth she said: "I never make a statement under oath on what I know only from hearsay evidence." A slight extension of this theory would leave the individual in doubt as to his or her identity.—Evening Sun.

It is to the credit of Plainfield that the assignment of J. P. Laire is the first heavy failure that has taken place among her merchants in many a day. No town in Union Jersey possesses a class of tradesmen who are so uniformly progressive and up-to-date and to branch out to the extent that local merchants have, required, in the parlance of the day, nerve, besides a substantial reputation to meet their bills among the wholesalers. In the case of Mr. Laire, all sincerely regret the the financial straights in which he has become involved, and it is the hope that he may be able to resume business at an early date.

SWEETLY RENDERED MUSIC.

Choice Programme Given at the Recital Arranged by Prof. McClymont.

The vocal and instrumental recital given by W. E. MacClymont at the Y. M. C. A. building Tuesday was largely attended and eminently successful. The Lotus Glee Club was assisted by Miss Lillian Nicholl, pianist; R. W. Smith, tenor; Mr. and Mrs. George Jenkins, banjoists; Mrs. B. T. Barnes and Frank Adair, accompanists, and Howard M. Case, organist. The programme was finely selected and rendered, each number being heartily encored. The work of the glee club was especially good, while the playing of Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins, Miss Nicholl, W. E. MacClymont, and the singing of Mr. Smith was thoroughly appreciated. The programme follows:

Piano Duo	"Andante and Variations" ..... Beethoven Miss Nicholl and Mr. MacClymont.
Lotus Glee Club	"Hark! the Trumpet" ..... Buck
Tenor Solo	"Ave Maria" ..... Mercadante Mr. Smith.
Piano Solo	{ a Nocturne in B flat, op. 32, No. 1 ..... Chopin { b "La Filleuse" ..... Raff Miss Nicholl.
Lotus Glee Club	"Springtime" ..... Kreutzer
Banjo Solo	{ "First Dearest Rest" ..... Kucken "Dixie" ..... Sousa Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins.
Lotus Glee Club	{ a "Song of the Waves" ..... M'Cy { b "The Chapel" ..... Arcadelt
Piano Solo	{ a "Romanza" ..... MacClymont { b "Air de Ballet, No. 2" ..... Chaminade { c "Fantasie Impromptu, op. 66" ..... Chopin Mr. MacClymont.
Songs	{ "Ethel's Eyes" ..... MacClymont { "Araby" ..... Clay Mr. Smith.
Banjo Solo	"Waltz Medley ..... Arr. by Jenkins Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins.
Lotus Glee Club	"Blow, Bugle Blow" ..... Buck

Below will be found the names of the glee club: Tenors, W. M. Meier, Chas. Angleman, Herbert Schutt, Herbert Moore, J. E. Douglass, Harry Yaeger, Fred Tallamy, Robert Clark, Edward Clark; Basses, Raymond McGee, L. S. Darling, Wyatt Barnes, Stacy Reynolds, F. J. Pope, A. H. Cornish, Ralph Miner, Ed Kline, B. T. A Deception Easily Practiced is the offer of a reward for "any case of catarrh not cured" by certain "cures" of "blood medecines." Nothing is said regarding the number of bottls required, and therein lies the deception. The makers of Ely's Cream Balm have never resorted to such devices. Cream Balm is an elegant preparation, agreeable to use and immediate in its beneficial results. It cures catarrh. You can rely upon the fact that it contains no mercury nor other injurious drug. 50 cents.

THE PATRIOTISM OF 1861

A SERMON PREACHED TO THE G. A. R. POSTS LAST NIGHT.

Rev. C. L. Goodrich Draws Inspiring Thoughts From the Civil War—It Means There is Equal Freedom to All Forever.

Members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R., John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., and Woman's Relief Corps, No. 10, to the number of about one hundred, attended divine service at the Congregational church on Sunday and listened to a patriotic sermon by the pastor, Rev. C. L. Goodrich. The front of the church around the pulpit platform and choir loft was prettily decorated with flags, one of which was a camp flag of the 3d New York Cavalry. The quartette choir, consisting of Miss Meredith, Miss Belluop, Herbert Schutt and J. M. Burnett, rendered several appropriate selections. Mrs. B. T. Barnes was the organist. Rev. Mr. Goodrich addressed the audience as follows, taking as his text:

Psalm 60: 5:—"Thou has given a banner to them that fear Thee that it may be displayed because of Thy truth."

"We have brought in the National flag and hung it up here to night. We believe that there are few more appropriate places for it than the church. No organization should teach more earnestly the truths of which it is the symbol than the church. One day in the year this church always devotes to patriotic thought, but with special pleasure we welcome the soldiers of the Grand Army of the Republic here. Your presence will serve to arouse in us warmer feelings of patriotism.

"Memorial Day is no longer a day of mourning. It may well be a season for the recalling and teaching those principles for which the patriots died and suffered. The spirit of '61 was the same as the spirit of '76. In one line, the patriots whose deeds ennoble our past, the line of those in whose heart the love of country burned fiercer than the love of life; who were borne on by a divine afflatus to deeds of heroism and endurance at which men of my generation marvel as they rerd, whose fruits men of every generation will enjoy as long as our flag waves, and whose glory can never die.

"It is well now to recall for what you of the Grand Army fought; and in doing so I shall be stating—in the phrase of the text—what the truth is because of which our banner is to be displayed, what our flag means as it floats among the national ensigns of the world. There were those who were ready to say when the war broke out that it was the inevitable breaking up of an impracticable scheme of government. What the soldiers of the '60's did was not simply to put down a rebellion, it was the vindicating the righteousness and practibility of the principles in which the Union was founded.

"The principles we do well to repeat often and with much the same devoutness with which we repeat the Creed.

"'To establish justice,' our national creed goes on, 'to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity.' Justice, sang the bugle; Justice, echoed the tramp of gathering armies; Justice smiled on the great man at the head of the nation as he flung the Emancipation Proclamation across the Potomac after Lee's retreating troops; Justice, rang the rifle; Justice, bellowed the cannon; Justice writ across the serried ranks and in the set and awful faces pressing on behind the glittering bayonets in a mighty host that nothing could turn back, till in all the broad land over which the flag again waved unchallenged, there was no man called a slave; And it had been settled with sword and gun and sealed in blood, that caste is not for this new world; that this nation holds a man to be a man whatever his color or his race; that she guarantees him fair play and equal rights before the law, and pledges to him for their security the whole strength of the nation, the last dollar of treasure and the last ounce of blood.

"No wall of masonry surrounds our land; few and simple are the forts along our coast; small is our standing army; but let that flag be flung to the breeze, let a single shot be fired upon it and a living wall of manly breasts will spring to place which no armed foe from without or within has ever yet been able to batter down or pass over. That Concord and Yorktown began to say long ago, and Gettysburg and Appomattox have overwhelmingly proven to promote the general welfare I think of those times. I think how men left their business and their homes, put on the blue, and marched away to the South, great, ever-renewing armies of them, to melt away in the awful fires.

"I think of the wonderous slopes of Fredericksburg, of the blue wall behind the stone at Gettysburg, of the Bloody Angle at Spottsylvania, of the slaughter at Cold Harbor, and I know that these men were not doing and enduring all this for self, but for the country's good, and I am ready to heartily repeat the declaration, 'The one National debt which we can never repay is the debt we owe our soldiers.'"

"Patriotism for us Americans is loyalty to the American principles, those same principle which I have sketched from the preamble as those for which the Grand Army fought. To restall them is to stall our present duty."

FAST STEPPERS MAKE SPORT.

A Renewed Interest in the Gentlemanly Sport of Horse Racing.

The club races at the Driving Park were continued Saturday, and the horses were all in the best of shape and on edge after their race at Woodbridge on the 16th. The 2:25 class, together with several exhibition miles which made up the programme, kept the spectators interested throughout the afternoon.

Several horses that have been kept back in their work were let step, some for the first time this season in public, and it looks as though from the material we have and that which is likely to come from neighboring towns, that Plainfield is to have some harness racing such as it has not had since the time of the fair.

Morton and St. Albans came together in the 2:25 class, and it was won by Morton in straight heats in 2:29½ and 2:30, he being very well driven by his owner, James Arkell, of Westfield. The summary is as follows:

2:25 class—Trotting.

Morton, gr. g.	Arkell	1 1
St. Albans, blk. s.	Osborne	2 2

Time—2:29½; 2:30.

Crop Report.

Sergeant Neagle has sent the following weather report to the State Weather Bureau for this week: "The drought was broken by showers on the 19th, 20th and 21st, amounting to 1.03 inches, which proved very beneficial to growing crops, but not enough. Much rain is needed between now and June 15th to ensure a good crop of hay. Ploughing and corn planting, which was retarded, is now progressing rapidly. Other crops look fairly well. Average temperature of the week was 67."

Made Too Much Noise.

Nicholas Kelly indulged too freely Saturday evening, and when Patrolman Cash suggested that he make less noise, according to the officer, Kelly abused him roundly, giving him names that weren't the most complimentary. Cash arrested him and this morning he was given a hearing before City Judge DeMeza. He pleaded not guilty, and his trial was set down for next Monday morning.

A Great Battle.

Do consumptives recover? Yes, thousands of them. Even after the disease has a firm hold? Yes, no doubt about it. After cavities have been formed and hemorrhages have occurred? Yes, even then. If the system is too weak, the disease will probably conquer, but if the body can be reinforced there is a fair chance for a winning fight. For twenty years, thousands have testified how they gained the victory.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil with the Hypophosphites is still coming to the rescue. Out-door life, fresh air, and good pluck are of immense value. But in addition to these the body must be supplied with that peculiar kind of fat which is found only in cod-liver oil; combined with valuable medicinal agents; and there must be the tonic effect which comes from the hypophosphites. It is a great battle, and a great victory is often gained.

"Just as Good" is not SCOTT'S EMULSION.

TWO YEARS OF GROWTH.

CHURCH OF REDEEMER STARTS ON A PROSPEROUS THIRD YEAR.

Special Exercises Held by the Pastor, Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone, Yesterday Afternoon —Encouraging Words to Congregation.

The growth of the Church of the Redeemer, during the two short years since its organization, has been a very rapid one. And from all appearances, not only in numbers, but in prosperity and well-doing. The second anniversary of the founding of the church was celebrated Sunday. The services were a communion service at 7:30 o'clock in the morning; morning service, special sermon and holy communion at 11:15 o'clock; Sunday-school celebration with address by the pastor, Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone, D. D., at 3 o'clock; and evening service at 4:30 o'clock.

The special sermon in the morning was especially interesting. Rev. Dr. Johnstone's text was from the seventh and eighth verses of the second chapter of Acts.

He referred to the origin of the doctrine of the Holy Spirit and its intimate connection with the Holy Catholic church. He told of the evolution of the Christian church, of the humility of its origin and its rise from an obscure province and an obscure race to its present place. He spoke of the reasons given by Gibbon, in his "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" for the rapid growth of Christianity in early times and discussed the first two. The first was the zeal and enthusiasm of the early Christians. No work, said Dr. Johnstone, has ever succeeded without the aid of enthusiasm and earnestness. Everyone's future depends on himself. And young men, if they work with enthusiasm and earnestness, are bound to succeed. The second reason was the belief in the quick return of Christ.

"Today," said Dr. Johnstone, "we enter into the third year of our existence as a church. Personally, I can express the greatest pleasure in looking back over the last two years." He then heartily thanked those who had assisted during those two years and told something of the growth of the church. They commenced with sixty-seven communicants, which number has been increased by one hundred. We cannot grow much larger, he said, in this place and it is the duty of all to provide us for greater successes. We are representing the broad division of the Protestant Episcopal church. We stand for liberty of conscience and toleration and believe that God loves all men alike. We realize that success will come to our church if we continue in these principles. Although small in numbers our interest is going out and we cannot measure it by mere numbers. His views, he added, were such as would not be received by many of the Episcopal churches, but be believed in the simple truths taught by Jesus Christ, and in liberty of faith and toleration to all. He closed by expressing a hope that the church would continue in the right path and grow spiritually and numerically.

REINER PLEADS NOT GUILTY.

The Editor is Indicted on Three Counts For Libelling Mayor Rankin.

Before Judge McCormick, in the Union County Court of Common Pleas, in Elizabeth, Saturday, about thirty who were indicted by the Grand Jury were arraigned to plead. The principal indictments were against John M. Reiner, editor of the Elizabeth Herald, who was accused of criminal libel by Mayor Rankin. He was indicted on three counts, and after pleading not guilty was released on furnishing $300 bail upon each indictment. Justice Vincent W. Nash, of this city, became his bondsman, and the trial will be held on June 15th, when Reiner will be defended by Samuel Kalish, of Newark.

There were no Plainfield indictments.

Carrying Jokes Too Far.

For sometime past boys living in the West End, near Clinton avenue, have been playing jokes and carrying them too far until the people in that neighborhood are thoroughly aroused. On two occasions they entered the Church of the Heavenly Rest and cut the rope so that the bell could not be used, and several times Corieli's hat factory has been entered and much damage com mitted. The trouble has been placed in the hands of Chief of Police Grant and no doubt it will be stopped.

No Complaint Yet.

Patrolman Cooney was not far from right after all or else Henry Bundy became suddenly very bashful, for no complaint was made against him Saturday evening. It is said, however, that he will bring the matter to the attention of the Police Board later on.

Arrangements Completed.

The committee of the Catholic Club who have in charge the picnic to be held Saturday in Vail's grove, have completed their arrangements. A fine time is assured all who attend. Prof. O'Reilly will furnish the music.

A PARSON'S CYCLE RIDE

REV. C. L. GOODRICH INAUGURATES A NEW CHURCH AMUSEMENT.

A Party of Congregational Church Members Indulge in a Pleasure Run Arranged by Their Progressive Pastor.

The bicycle has been introduced into many different lines of work, but it made its first appearance in Plainfield in connection with the church on last Saturday afternoon, when Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, gave his first "bicycle" sociable, which was nothing more or less than a run to Pumptown and return. This sociable was first announced a week ago yesterday and all the cyclists of the church were invited to participate. As many of the congregation are riders, the invitation was accepted by fully thirty, who gathered in front of the church at the appointed hour, all expectations to find out what a "bicycle" sociable was.

Rev. Mr. Goodrich led the party to Park avenue and up that broad and level thoroughfare to Pumptown, as that little triangular park with a pump in the centre, about five miles from this city, is called. The ride was a delightful one and general satisfaction was expressed with the "bicycle" social. Only one accident happened and that merely added a little excitement to the ride. Miss Demarest's chain broke, but was repaired by a machinist who luckily happened to be working in a neighboring barn. Toward the close of the run, the chain gave way again and Miss Demarest was towed home by her friends. The return was especially enjoyable as the wind was blowing on the backs of the riders and fairly carried them along.

Among those who took part in the ride were: George W. Rockefellow, Miss Nellie Rockefellow, Roland Rockefellow, Joseph A. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Burnett, A. C. La Boyteaux, L. B. Morgan, Miss Morgan, John V. Beekman, Jr., Miss Eda Beekman, Wickam Beekman, Miss Julia Belknap, Miss Frankie Demarest, Miss Phenie Demarest, John Allen, William Van Alstyne, Mrs. Louis Van Alstyne, Miss Capitola Conover, Miss Mary Chase, Miss Kate Reed and Stacy B. Raynolds.

When the party returned from the ride they were received at the parsonage by Mrs. Goodrich with some delicious lemonade, which seemed just the thing after the run.

Got Trace of the Wheel.

The wheel belonging to George Gould, which was stolen from in front of the Eldridge Bicycle Company's salesrooms some time ago, has at last been heard from. Gould heard of a wheel for sale at Elizabeth at an unusually small price. Examination proved that it answered to the description of Gould's wheel.

Damaged by Cows.

A number of residents of Harrison street, in the borough, are complaining bitterly of the cows which roam at will about that street. Lawns are disfigured, flowers trampled to pieces and shrubbery eaten until in some places the lawns look as though a cyclone had struck them.

ENTRIES FOR THE RACES.

THOSE WHO WILL COMPETE FOR PRIZES ON THE OVAL SATURDAY.

Best Riders of the Country Will Pedal Around the Track—The First Big Meet in the Metropolitan District.

Decoration Day might be called the formal opening day of the bicycle racing season in this, part of the country. Although races are always held before that date, yet it is looked upon as the big beginning of the season. On that day, the famous Irvington-Milburn road race is always held while last year the National circuit opened in this city the same day. This year the National circuit begins in the west, and comes eastward to reach Plainfield, September 26th.

The Crescent Wheelmen will hold a race meet on Decoration Day, however, and, as it is the first large open meet in the Metropolitan district, it promises to be a large one. The entry list, which closed last Saturday evening, is an unusually large one and includes most of the fast amateurs in this district. The professional class is also well represented by a number of the crack-a-jacks, including our own Jersey team. The number of entries in the one mile handicap is something extraordinary and it promises lots of excitement.

The entries for the different events are as follows:

FELL FROM A WHEEL.

WILLIAM LOCKE GETS A PAINFUL INJURY CROSSING CAR TRACKS.

It Was First Thought That He Had Dislocated His Hip, But at the Hospital It Was Found to Be a Serious Bruise.

While bicycle accidents have been quite frequent in some places, Plainfield, despite her large number of riders, has been particularly free from serious ones. The car track was the cause of a heavy fall for William Locke, of Orchard place, Monday afternoon about five o'clock, and Locke now lies in Muhlenberg Hospital as a result of his tumble. Locke is a machinist, employed at the Scott Press Works, is twenty-eight years of age, and resides on Orchard place with his family. He is an enthusiastic cyclist and went out for a spin yesterday.

He was riding along West Front street, just below Plainfield avenue, when he tried to cross the street car tracks. Instead of crossing them at right angles or nearly so, he did so at a small angle. His tires caught and as he was moving along at a lively pace he was thrown heavily to the ground, striking on his hip.

He was unable to rise, and Lemuel W. Serrell, Jr., who was in his father's place at the time of the accident, came to the rescue and assisted the injured man to a place of safety. It was thought that Lock's hip was broken and the ambulance was telephoned for. Quite a crowd was attracted by the catastrophe and a rumor of some terrible accident spread about the town. When first examined, the Doctors thought Lock's hip had been dislocated, but it was found only to be very badly bruised. Locke was also pretty well shaken up and still remains at the hospital.

Hospital Statistics.

Dr. Boone, medical director for the hospital for this month, presents the following report today: Patients admitted, 23; discharged, cured, 14; discharged, improved, 4; discharged, not improved, 1; died, 2; total, 35; remaining, 14. The dispensary patients number 30. Eighty-one visits have been made to the hospital.

HE TAPPED THE TILL.

E. E. MARSHALL LOSES $13.50 FROM THEFT BY AN EMPLOYE.

Joseph Burke, a Young Lad, Was Left in Charge of the Store, Saw the Money, Couldn't Resist Temptation, and Stole.

Joseph Burke, a young lad about fifteen years of age, ran for a short time past been employed by E. E. Marshall, the North avenue wall-paper dealer. He bore a good reputation and his employer thought him to be honest until Saturday, when he gently lifted $13.50 from the safe, and a few hours later made his escape for parts unknown.

There was considerable money in the safe Saturday, and the above amount, together with some other money, was set aside to pay the men with. As young Burke saw the money placed in the safe he evidently kept his eye on it. During the noon hour the safe was locked and Burke was left alone in the store. Nothing strange was noticed by Mr. Marshall until 5 o'clock in the afternoon when he went to the safe to get the cash and then discovered that the safe had been tampered with and the money taken. Fifteen minutes earlier Burke had left the store to go to supper. That is the last he was seen at the store. A little later a boy answering the description bought a ticket at the North Avenue station for Fanwood. Mr. Marshall had Justice Nash issue a warrant for his arrest, and Saturday night Chief Grant and Frank Burke, a brother of the missing lad, went to Elizabeth in search of him, but he could not be found. Young Burke took a revolver from home when he left.

FAILURE OF J. P. LAIRE.

ONE OF PLAINFIED'S OLDEST BUSINESS MEN MAKES AN ASSIGNMENT.

Dissolved Partnership With His Brother, and Since Then There Has Been Legal Conflict Which has Been Disastrous.

The people of Plainfield will be somewhat surprised when they learn that J. P. Laire, one of the oldest business men in the city, has made an assignment. In the spring of 1895 the partnership existing between he and his brother, W. R. Laire, of Belvidere, was dissolved.

J. P. Laire took the business and assumed all debts, etc. Since that time there has been an unsettled account between the brothers, and the latter owed his brother money on account. Up to four months ago J. P. Laire had paid the interest. W. R. Laire has been anxious to secure what was due him, and consequently sued his brother through the Supreme court. About three weeks ago judgment was secured and Saturday night the Sheriff served the notice.

As a result Mr. Laire made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, without preference. The court will appoint appraisers in a day or two, and an account of the stock will be taken and the latter disposed of. Mr. Laire has appointed W. A. Codington assignee. It is hoped that the difficulty will soon be settled and that Mr. Laire will again resume business.

CLUB WOMEN OFF TO LOUISVILLE.

New Jersey Members of the Federation Leave in a Special Car.

In a special car attached to the train that left the Pennsylvania railroad station in Newark at 2:26 o'clock yesterday afternoon was the New Jersey contingent of women bound for the convention of the general Federation of Woman's Clubs of America, to be held at Louisville Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. The women represent different federated New Jersey clubs, and they took with them reports and papers to be read at the convention.

The part in the convention that has been assigned to women of this State includes a paper by Mrs. Yardley on the "Principle and Plans of Working Girls' Clubs," department social economies; paper by Mrs. Frank Hall on the "Montclair Woman's Town Improvement Society," same department; paper by Miss Marion Courtney Smith, of Orange, on "The Drama and Historical Novel as Interpreted of History," department of literature. Mrs. Edith McCarthy will advance the cause of Forestry, and Mrs. Frank B. Smith will give the reports of New Jersey club work, while Mrs. Florence Howe Hall has obtained for the State the honor of the chairmanship of the department of literature. Mrs. Yardley has been chosen to act upon the reception committee at Louisville.

Death of Captain Seth B. Ryder.

Captain Seth B. Ryder, one of Elizabeth's best known citizens, died Saturday morning at his Summer home at Liberty, Sullivan county, N. Y., to which place he had gone but a few days ago. Captain Ryder had been suffering from Bright's disease, but it was hoped that the change would benefit him. He came of Revolutionary stock, and served during the war in the 13th New York cavalry. The last thirty years of his life were spent in Elizabeth, and in 1872 he was nominated for Sheriff on the Republican ticket, and was honored by the largest majority ever given for that office. In 1882 he was elected Mayor of the city. The funeral will be held in Elizabeth on Tuesday.

The Late Captain Benedict.

Concerning the death of Capt. Geo. Benedict, the Marietta, Ohio, Register says: Captain Benedict was in his 82d year, therefore his passing would not be surprising and more especially since he had been in feeble strength. His visit to his old home and Marietta friends last fall, he considered as probably his last, which it has proved to be. Capt. Benedict was born at Belpre, this county, and readed [illegible] seventy years, always a respected citizen. In 1865 he was elected to the board of the County Commissioners, and at various times held responsible positions. He was a merchant for many years, retiring soon after 1879, when he disposed of his Front street property to the proprietors of the Register, on which site the business is still conducted. He was a kindly man, socially, greatly attached to his friends, and had the finest sense of business honor. His family are all at Plainfield and New York.

A Talk by a Nurse.

The King's Daughters of Grace M. E. church enjoyed a rare treat Saturday afternoon at the church when Miss Robinson, a nurse in connection with St. John's Guild, New York, was present, and gave an intensely interesting outline of her work in the city. Many humorous and pathetic incidents were related, which the members enjoyed exceedingly. After the talk, tea was served to all. Mrs. Most, president of the Circle, presided at the meeting and Mrs. Valiant poured tea. A very delightful social time was passed, and altogether the affair was one of great profit.

Bitten By a Dog.

While Miss May Thompson, of Liberty street, was walking from her house to call on a neighbor a few days ago, a dog belonging to the neighbor jumped at her and made an incision in the thigh with his teeth, causing blood to flow. Miss Thompson was frightened and called at a doctor's office, but the doctor was out. She returned and received home treatment. The injury is healing nicely and no serious results are expected.

Lacerated by a Saw.

Wm. Pangborn, Jr., of the borough, who is employed in a local meat market, sustained a severe injury to his left hand Saturday night while using a butcher's saw. The saw jumped from its position and striking his left hand, the teeth penetrated to the bone. Mr. Pangborn hastened to Dr. Mattison's office and had the member treated. A considerable quantity of blood was lost before the hand was bandaged.

KING RUNS TWO HOTELS.

A German Institution Which Dates from Peter the Great.

Although a Sovereign Ruler, King William of Wurtemberg Is Not Too Proud to Pose Before the World as a Bonifacc.

Queen Victoria is about to confer the Order of the Garter upon a hotel keeper. True, the hotel keeper is a king, but he is none the less a bonifacc. It is his majesty William of Wurtemberg, and the hotels which he owns are the "Marquardt," situated right opposite the royal palace at Stuttgart, and the "Riesig," located under and over the arcade of the Konigsbau. In running these hotels as a source of profit to his private exchequer, the king of Wurtemberg is merely continuing the traditions of his predecessors on the throne. There is a story told as the time of Peter the Great in connection with this peculiar source of royal income.

It seems that the czar, who was determined on retaining his incognito in traveling through Europe, absolutely declined to take up his quarters at the royal palace at Stuttgart, but insisted on going to an inn. Having learned of this prior to his arrival, the Wurtemberg sovereign caused all the hotel and inn keepers to remove their signs. Over the principal doorway of his palace he had a huge sign hung out, stating that there was cheer for man and beast at cheap prices, and that the name of the hotel was the Konigsbau.

On the czar's carriage and retinue entering the city, the postilions, previously instructed by the Wurtemberg officials, drove straight to the palace, and there, standing at the main entrance, was the sovereign host and burly, annayed in a traditional costume of a bonifacc, with white apron and cap, while the various princesses, princes, nobles and dignitaries of his court were costumed as waiters and waitresses, hostlers and other servants. Peter the Great, greatly amused by this witty and kindly manner of humoring his wishes, entered thoroughly into the joke, which was kept up until the following day, when he proceeded on his journey.

Nothing that the postilion mounted on the wheeler of his traveling carriage was a man of singularly unkempt appearance, his clothes ragged and covered with mud, he made the remark to one of his attendants that there was at least no mistake as to the social condition of that man and that there could be no danger of his being a nobleman of the first stage. When the postilion came to the carriage door to receive his gratuity and raised his cap from his head, the czar, to his astonishment, recognized in him the heir of Wurtemberg's throne, who had assumed the disguise for the purpose of speeding his father's imperial guest.

The king, who will be accompanied on his approaching visit to London by his queen, enjoys the distinction of being the only ruler who makes use of a single eyeglass, and with this exception presents a striking likeness to the prince of Wales. His beard is of a reddish blond color, sprinkled with gray. His hair is likewise of the same tone, and thin on the top of the head, while the girth of the king's waist is almost identical with that of Queen Victoria's eldest son.

The queen, besides being of rare charm and beauty, is distinguished for her nerve and her presence of mind, of which latter quality she gave evidence the other day when her horses bolted while she was out driving at Stuttgart. Both the coachman and the footman were thrown off, when upon the queen climbed upon the box, and bending down over the dashboard, managed to secure the reins which were trailing on the ground, and finally obtained control of the frightened animals.

Her lady-in-waiting who found unconscious from fear when the carriage was stopped, but she soon recovered, and beyond a loss of paint from the wheels of the carriage and a few bruises sustained by the coachman and footman, there was no harm done. This is by no means the first time that the queen of Wurtemberg has given evidence of her pluck. About three years ago, prior to her husband's accession to the throne, she was driving with him to church at Ludwigsburg, when an unemployed soldier, named Kistler, fired a revolver at the prince. The ball let grazed the forehead of the princess, and the would-be assassin was seized by passers-by before he had time to fire a second shot.

The queen is very popular, not only in her husband's kingdom, but also throughout Germany. She is the second wife of the king, his first wife having died, also leaving no children.

Where Toothpicks Are Made.

Only one characteristic distinguishes the little village of Strong, Me., from the thousands of others that are scattered all over New England. That is the peculiar industry which serves to support the entire community. Strong is famous for nothing but toothpicks, but is known in the trade as the place from which come the majority of the toothpicks that are used in the United States.

WHISKERS FROM THE SEA.

Something Concerning the Formation of a Curious Marine Growth.

There is a marvelous marine growth called sertularia which has the appearance of a delicate bush, although its slender stalks or fibers are built up by thousands of minute animals, something as the coral polyp builds up the cork. It is found, says the New York Sun, in clumps and bunches on wreckage and stones and elsewhere, and sometimes it is torn loose in storms and driven ashore. The many thousands of tiny creatures which have built it up and inhabit it die, and the dead bush is called a skeleton. Its fibers shrink some now and they are even finer than they were. They may be a foot in length; sometimes nearly two feet. They are brown, some bunches being dark and some of a lighter shade.

As the children of the carpenter adorn themselves with shavings from the fresh pine work he does, so do children of the fishermen with the sertularia cast up from the sea. Its fibers are pretty nearly straight, so they cannot be made to serve as ringlets, as curly shavings do, but the girls take the longer, finer bunches, which are usually the lighter in shade, and make of them long brown tresses. The boys make great mustaches of the sertularia, and flowing Dundreary whiskers and sober beards. In wandering along the shore one might come upon a stranded boat hauled high above the tide with her side stove in, perhaps, so that she would not float, but occupied by a dreaming youth in sertularia beard and mustache, who imagined he's a gallant ship and himself her bearded commander.

RUINED BY A CONTRACT.

An Iron Founder Undertakes Something Out of His Line.

The founder of the Vendome column in Paris met with financial ruin in his contract. The French government, when it decided to erect the notable column, entered into a contract with an iron founder, says the Philadelphia Record. He knew nothing whatever of modeling or casting in bronze. The government agreed to supply him with cannon captured from the Russians and Austrians during the campaign of 1805, in quantities sufficient to found the monument. The contractor, knowing nothing of the phenomena which the fusion of bronze offers, found when he molded the column was completed that he had used up all his metal. Sufficient bronze had been given him to complete the monument, and he was responsible for the entire amount. Finding himself face to face with bankruptcy he melted his scoriae and mixed the metal with cheap refuse which he purchased, and so completed the founding. The castings, however, were found to be so full of flaws that the workmen stopped, and the founder ruined. The moldings of the different parts of the bas-relief were so badly executed that the chiselers who repaired the defects removed no less than 70 tons of bronze. They received for their labor $1,500, which was added to the 70 tons of bronze, which became their perquisites. The whole transaction was very, very French.

BROKEN WIRE.

How the Telegraph Operator Tells Where the Break Is Located.

Perhaps the greatest of all mysteries, to the uninitiated, about telegraphy is the fact that when a wire is broken or damaged the operator sitting in his office can tell exactly where the accident has occurred.

The explanation, however, is very simple. It requires force to send electricity through a wire just as it does to pump water through a hose. The longer the wire is the greater is the force required. This force is measured, not, instead of calling it pounds, as in the case of water pressure in a boiler, electricians call the units of electrical force "ohms."

Suppose a wire between two offices is 150 miles long, and that, on a stormy night, it is broken by some means. The telegraphist knows that when the wire was sound it takes just 2,000 ohms to send a current through, or 14 ohms per mile. He now finds that he can send a current with only 700 ohms. He divides 700 by 14 and finds that the break in the wire is 50 miles from his end.

When the wire is under the sea a curious thing happens. The electricity decomposes the sea salt, and a new salt is formed on the broken ends of the wire; and until that is cleared away by what is called a zinc current, acting for ten or twelve hours, no measurement can be made.

Nature Pleists of Negroes.

A writer in Progress and Artisique, in discussing the music of south Africa, says the races living there possess to an astonishing degree the faculty of assimilation and imitation. They reproduce with surprising fidelity the songs of birds, cries of animals and the various sounds of nature. Child-people, they receive in their otherwise obtuse brains impressions of freshness and vivid intensity. Their long solitary wanderings in hilly and prairie regions, and their fleeting association with foreigners, results in a species of melodic nature-plaints, as one might imagine, a developed monkey music.

Pointed and Witty.

A lawyer residing in the north of England and noted for his laconic style of expression sent the following terse and witty note to a refractory client who could not succumb to his reiterated demands for the payment of his bill: "Sir, If you pay the inclosed you will oblige me. If you do not I shall oblige you."

A Walking Encyclopedia.

Lord Bacon was a walking encyclopedia. He was a master of all the knowledge of his time and remembered it to the minutest detail. He rarely made a note of anything, trusting to his memory all the particulars of the complicated legal cases brought before him, and seldom was it found at fault.

DIVISION OF THE MONEY.

WHAT THE DIFFERENT DEPARTMENTS OF THE COUNTY COST.

The Board of Freeholders Make the Appropriations for the Year—Director Hubbard Appoints the Committees.

The Board of Freeholders met in Elizabeth Thursday and fixed the appropriation for the fiscal year as follows: Laws, $40,000; jail, $65,000; lunacy, $36,000; expense of Board, including salaries, $8,000; coroners' fees, $1,000; elections, $11,000; stationery, $3,000; advertising and printing, $2,500; burial of soldiers, monuments, etc., $10,000; principal on bonded debt, $22,000; hospitals $500; payment bank interest, $1,000; improvements on buildings, $7,000; erection and repairs on bridges, $33,000; roads, $15,000. These figures are reduced by the fact that the Board has a surplus of $80,000 in bank. The total amount asked for by the committee is $190,000. Estimates of cost for a new bridge on South street, Elizabeth, and the Willow Grove road will be secured. The committee asked that an increase of $30,000 be allowed. Comptroller Carlton opposed the increased appropriation, and stated that Elizabeth would have to pay forty-six per cent. of the amount at a time when an attempt would be made to reduce the tax rate. It was finally agreed to increase the appropriation $5,000, the whole of which will go to the hospitals.

Director Hubbard announced the standing committees, as follows:

Collector's bonds—Freeholders Wahl, Miller and Burnett.

Publication—Freeholders Hulskamper, Wahl and Swain.

Discharge of prisoners—Freeholders Krouse, Roll and Robinson.

Settle with collector—Freeholders Littell, King and Krouse.

Miscellaneous account—Freeholders King, Robinson and Brucklacher.

Jail option—Freeholders Ehrlich, Tier and Brucklacher.

Appropriations—Freeholders Farrell, Ogden, Littell, Clark and Brucklacher.

G. A. R. MEN IN DISPUTE.

New Brunswick Organization Will Not March With Boggs Post.

Kearny Janeway Post decided Wednesday not to participate in the New Brunswick parade on Memorial Day. It has been customary for the posts to conduct the exercises jointly, and the Common Council has appropriated $400 for expenses. This year A. J. Sedam, who recently resigned from Kearny Janeway Post to become a member of Robert Boggs Post, was elected Commander. That displeased the members of Kearny Janeway, so when an invitation was sent asking them to join with Frank Lloyd Post, of South River, it was accepted.

The members of Robert Boggs Post claim that the other Grand Army men are making an effort to break up the parade, but is denied. Robert Boggs, members say they can get along very well without the other post, as they will have the assistance of the Rutgers College Cadets and the High School boys.

The Cost of Religion.

Both as a purchaser of materials and supplies, and as an employer, the church has important relations to business. It is manifest, therefore, that the financial affairs of the church must be on a large scale, when all its interests are considered. Its expenditures foot up to an aggregate which is truly enormous. It takes $10,355,000 annually to pay the bills of the Protestant Episcopal church; $23,963,000 to pay those of the Methodist Episcopal church; nearly $14,000,000 for the expenses and contributions of the Presbyterian church (northern); $11,673,000 for those of the Regular Baptists and $10,355,000 for those of the Congregational denomination, making an aggregate of $88,000,000 every year contributed by 10,786,000 members—an average of $8.16 per member. The grand total for all denominations would hardly be less than $150,000,000 and it might be many millions larger. Most of this is made of voluntary contributions. The value of church buildings, lots, and furniture, in 1890, was about $680,000,000. It is quite probable that it is now fully $800,000,000.—Dr. H. K. Carroll, in the May Forum.

Enough Trees to Go Ahead.

The elm tree committee has been successful in securing enough trees to go ahead with spraying. Work will begin Tuesday afternoon. Information can be obtained at the office of Geo. J. Tobin, North avenue. In the absence of Mrs. McCarthy, Mrs. Pierre Mall will undertake the supervision. She will have a corps of assistants each day. Co-operation of all is asked for.

J. FRANK FORT'S PREDICTION.

Thinks Jersey's Republican Delegation Solid for McKinley and Hobart.

Garret A. Hobart, of Paterson, and J. Frank Fort, of Newark, were in Washington Thursday. They appeared on the floor of the house in the morning before 12 o'clock, and Mr. Fort had interviews with a number of Republican members.

Judge Grosvenor, of Ohio, was sought out, and an interview of fifteen minutes was had with him concerning political affairs in Washington. The entire New Jersey delegation was on hand to meet the two gentlemen and introduced them to many members of the House. They also met the Speaker and talked with him for a few minutes before the House convened.

Mr. Hobart stated that he was down there, "looking after things a little and on pleasure bent in addition." He is becoming acquainted with those who will figure in the coming convention.

Mr. Fort, when asked his views on the political situation, as it now stands, said:

"There is no longer any doubt who will be president. It has been practically settled; so do not be surprised when you see McKinley nominated."

"How does the New Jersey delegation stand?"

"I believe that the Republican delegation to the National convention from New Jersey will be solid for McKinley. They are particularly looking to Mr. Hobart for Vice-President. We have seen while here many gentlemen who have given us gratifying news. I am here personally in the interest of Mr. Hobart. I am endeavoring to learn as much as possible of the probable support from different States for Vice-President."

"What action do you think the convention will take?"

"The platform adopted at the convention will of course be for a gold standard and from what I can learn I do not believe that there will be any split in the convention. Perhaps one or two of the western States will bolt, but so far Teller is the only Senator antagonistic."

There is no doubt here that Mr. Fort speaks advisedly with reference to the New Jersey delegation's attitude toward McKinley.

MARSHAL'S AIDES; LINE OF MARCH.

Marshal-of-the-Day Tyler Maps Out the Programme of the Parade.

Mason W. Tyler, Chief Marshal of the Decoration Day exercises has issued the following:

The following named gentlemen have been appointed as aides to assist the marshal-of-the-day: Capt. Will Hand, Major W. D. Miller, Thomas R. VonBoskerk, Samuel Brader and Daniel F. Ginna.

The parade will form on Front street right resting on Watchung avenue and facing northeast, and those who are to participate in the parade are requested to report at the said rendezvous at 8:30 o'clock on the morning of Decoration Day when they will be given their positions in the line by the officer-of-the-day, William Smith.

The procession will move promptly at 9 o'clock, and will substantially be formed in the following order:

Marshal and Aides.
Band.
Daughters of the Regiment.
Edwards Cadets.
Boys of Veterans.
St. Mary's School.
Platoon of Police.
Detachment of Children.
Platoon of Police.
Detachment of Children.
Platoon of Police.
Detachment of Children.
Platoon of Post 9.
Detachment of Post 9.
Platoon of Post 9 as Rear Guard.

The line of march will be as follows: Counting from Watchung avenue to Grove street, through Grove street to Lincoln street, through Lincoln street to Somerset street, through Somerset street to Front street, through Front street to Park avenue, through Park avenue to Watchung avenue, where the divisions charged with the duty of decorating the graves in the different cemeteries will separate and the parade disperse.

Helen Rice Back With Her Parents.

Miss Helen Rice, the sixteen-year-old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. Warren Rice, who last November created a sensation by fleeing with her father from the State, has again returned to New Brunswick, and is once more with her parents. It will be remembered that Mrs. John Woodbridge instituted proceedings to have Helen placed in the care of a guardian, on the ground that her parents, who are alleged to be morphine victims, were incompetent to bring her up right. Vice-Chancellor Bird issued an order that Dr. and Mrs. Rice appear before him with Helen and show cause why their daughter should not be placed in a guardian's care. In defiance of the order, Dr. Rice and Helen left the State and stayed for several days in in Montreal. They returned later, and Helen was placed in the care of her aunt, Mrs. James Demarest, of Long Island.

About the Peach Crop.

Two hundred and sixty replies out of three hundred inquiries sent out from Flemington to the largest peach growers in that section, regarding the prospects for this year's crop, substantially report that the prospects for an immense yield are good. The cold spring weather retarded the growth of the buds until late frosts were over. The buds are now open and are healthy in appearance.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their respective hospitals with Castoria, and although we only have a special medical supplies what is known as regular products, we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

ONLY $900 MORE NEEDED.

Then the Relief Association Will Own Their Home Free of Encumberance.

The ladies of the Plainfield Relief Association desire gratefully to acknowledge further contributions to the amount of $150 towards extinguishing the mortgage on the house recently donated for their use, and as a centre for city charities. This additional sum was contributed by Charles Potter, Rev. D. J. Yerkes, Howard J. Runyon, Curtis M. Thorpe, Mrs. O. B. Leonard, the Church of the Redeemer, Mrs. J. Wesley Johnston, Mrs. Charles E. Ryder and Miss Ethel Harte. The sum of $2,484.51 had been previously contributed and acknowledged, so that altogether $2,635.01 has been given toward the required $3,500. The Association also owes thanks to William M. Stillman for time and professional services given to the Association in searching the title; and Col. Mason W. Tyler and Charles E. Brooks have kindly aided the Association in their attention to the passing of the title to the property and to the insurance. Thanks are also due to J. J. Heldefelt, who, as his contribution, voluntarily reduced his every moderate bill for work done in the building.

About $900 more is needed to complete the fund, and thus render fully available certain handsome subscriptions included in the amount raised, but which were made conditional on the raising of the whole sum.

Subscriptions may be sent to Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph, president, or to Mrs. H. P. Reynolds, treasurer, of the Plainfield Relief Association.

PREPARATORY SERVICES PROPOSED.

If the Ministers Consent, Rev. B. Fay Mills Will Conduct Special Meetings.

The United Society of Christian Endeavor has manufactured a large number of flags for the Washington Convention. They will be furnished delegates at the rate of $1 a dozen.

The Christian Endeavor societies of New York city contributed $5,000 last year to missions.

The programme committee for the State Convention are steadily completing the same. It will be one of finest every given in the State.

The proposed plan for the State Convention to be held in this city next October is to have Rev. B. Fay Mills precede the convention with a week of special services. As Mr. Mills will not come unless the unanimous consent of the Ministers' Association is given, the matter will have to be brought before that body.

The New Jersey Endeavorers to the Washington Convention will hold a large reception in Dr. Talmage's church during the conference.

Real Estate Transfers.

The New Jersey Contractor this week publishes the following transfers of Plainfield property as recorded in the County Clerk's office: Frank A. Pope et ux to Jennie C. Pope, lot Fifth street, $1; Jennie C. Pope to Hannah A. Pope, lot Fifth street, $1; Sheriff Kyte to Samuel Parmalee, lot Leland avenue, $3680.92; Andrew L. Smalley to John F. Pierson, North Plainfield, lot Everett place, $100; Charles H. Hand et ux to John D. Runyon, 2 tracts, Manson place $1; John Kelly et ux to Elizabeth Nixon, lot East Third street, $500; Laura G. Weller, New York, to Mary Ann Murray, lot LaGrande avenue, $2,000; Dora B. Sturtevant to Ralph I. Tolles, lot Liberty street, $1.

A MATTER OF PRINCIPLE

AN INTERESTING PHASE OF THE SERVANT GIRL QUESTION.

Counselor McClure Insists That the Colored Girl Had No Right to Her Pay After the Conduct She Indulged In.

Counselor William K. McClure was seen by a Press reporter this morning with reference to the suit of Eliza Ford against Mrs. Katherine De Lawrence, tried before Justice Nash, and which is of so much interest to the class of people who employ servants. Mr. McClure said:

"The facts as brought out at the trial are these: Eliza Ford, a colored servant in the employ of Mrs. Katherine De Lawrence, was discharged for disobedience of orders, gross impertinence and violent and threatening conduct. She had timely warning that her conduct, if persisted in, would result in her discharge without pay. She persisted and was discharged. She refused to leave the house and became so abusive and threatening that a policeman was sent for, who removed her. Under my advice Mrs. Lawrence refused to pay her for the time served, her discharge before the expiration of her work, the duration of her employment, being justifiable under the law.

"The pleayure sum of $3.50, as the article in the News states, cuts no figure in the case. The vital question is, can servants come into our homes, disobey as they please, be as impertinent and insolent as they please, and then, although discharged under such circumstances, compel the master to pay them for the time served? Mrs. Lawrence simply stands upon her rights and the rights of others who employ servants, and her stand is taken and will be maintained to teach all servants that their duties are obedience, politeness and faithfulness to their employers. I desire further to say that the case was not ably argued, as stated in the News. In fact there was but little argument at all. At the close of the case I asked the counsel for the plaintiff, W. S. Angleman, if he wished to argue the case, and he replied that he wished to argue upon the law. The Court then said that if that was all he wished to argue upon there was no need of argument, as the law upon that subject was well settled in this State.

"Whereupon the counsel for the plaintiff requested to be heard upon a new point of law not before raised, the new point being that as the plaintiff was taken upon trial there was no entire contract and wages could be apportioned. The Court heard the counsel through and to his argument replied that the plaintiff herself and both witnesses for the defendant had proven that there was a hiring for a month and such being the case, the contract was an entire one and wages could not be apportioned. The judgment was no cause of action.

"The article in the News says that the Supreme Court will probably be called upon to finally decide the issue. It has done so already. To carry such a case to the Supreme Court, that has held in Beach against Mullen, 5 v., 343, that a servant can be discharged for impertinence solely, would be worse than inviting the wrath of the gods; it would be inviting the derision of the Court."

HIS WATCH WAS GONE.

G. THORN HAS AN EXPERIENCE WIT LIGHT FINGERED GENTRY.

Jostled in a Big Crowd, Mr. Thorn Has a Valuable Gold Watch Deftly Taken From His Pocket by a Pickpocket.

Hackensack has been immortalized in song, but even if it had not, it is likely that G. Thorn, of this city, would remember the town from which, as runs the rhyme, came the man "with the little bunch of whiskers on his chin." Mr. Thorn visited Hackensack Thursday as a delegate to the State meeting of the Exempt Firemen's Association, and after a day of pleasure he underwent an experience with a pickpocket that he very much regrets. There was an immense crowd in attendance at the convention, and late in the afternoon every train leaving the place was crowded, people surging back and forth at the station in the endeavor to board the cars and get seats. After the train had started, Mr. Thorn put his fingers to his watch pocket intending to observe the time. Much to his surprise he found the timepiece missing. Then he remembered that while boarding the train he had been particularly jostled by an individual, who afterwards jumped off the car and ran up the track. At the time, Mr. Thorn thought the strangers actions rather odd but he was not suspicious of his being a victim of the light fingered gentry. But putting two and two together, Mr. Thorn concluded that his watch was running faster than the jeweler who sold it figured that it would, and that he would never see it again. The watch was a valuable one, not only on account of its cost, but because of its associations, it having been presented to him on one of his birthdays by his wife.

SWEET MUSIC AND PLEASANT CHAT.

A Delightful Event Given for the Benefit of the Church of The Redeemer.

The Soiree-Musicale given by the Guild of the Church of the Redeemer, under the direction of Walter Arnold Hudson, last Friday, in the Babcock building, was socially and financially a success. The rooms were not large enough to seat all who were present and many were obliged to stand. The programme was a select one, and each number was given perfectly. Owing to the death of Mr. MacClymont's uncle, he was unable to appear, and Miss Lillian Nicholl, of Scotch Plains, kindly took his place. The programme was as follows:

Paderewski—"Legend No. 2".....Piano
Miss Lillian Nicholl.
Spicker—"A Dream of Spring".....Tenor
Mr. S. Bond.
Cantor—"As the Dawn".....Soprano
Miss Florence L. Stevens.
Abt—"O Chin and Lovely the Evening Bells."
Misses Stevens, Runyon and Kline. (Trio)
Chaminade—"Concertstuque" } Piano
MacClymont { 5, "Romanza" }
Miss Nicholl.
Fisher—"I Wait for Thee".....Contralto
Miss Florence Kline.
Chaminade—"Ritournelle".....Soprano
Miss Elma H. Runyon.
Flotow—"Mar'tana Fall O'er Thee."
Quartette
Misses Stevens and Kline and Messrs. Bond and Hudson.
Mrs. B. T. Barnes.....Accompanist

After the musicale, all adjourned to another room where the women served cream and cake. The rooms were tastefully decorated in an attractive manner by Mrs. Townsend, Miss Thompson, Miss Brown, Miss Hasbrouck, Miss Faber and Miss Storm. The refreshments were looked after by Miss Davis and Mrs. W. E. Brock, while the following served as waitresses: Miss Clapp, Miss Barlow, Miss Hull, Miss Horne, Miss Phillips, Miss Faber and Miss Hasbrouck, and the committee of arrangements consisted of Mrs. Phillips, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Townsend and Mrs. Stevens.

An Escaped Convict.

Sylvester Egerton, a desperate character, known as "Blacky the Bum," has escaped from the Middlesex county jail, where he had been confined for the past three months serving a sentence for breaking and entering. The prisoner was employed in the culinary department and escaped by scaling a wall some time during the day. His escapé was not made known until a late hour yesterday afternoon. This is the ninth prisoner to escape from the jail within a year.

Like the Bishop.

A certain Bishop was taken to task for being egotistical beyond what was consistent with the humility of his profession. "It is not egotism, brethren," he cried. "It is the consciousness of superiority." Same here. Peck often speaks of the quality of his goods, but it is not egotism. It is conscious superiority.

Additional Team at the Headquarters.

F. A. Pope, of Park avenue, has placed a fine new team of horses at fire headquarters for the use of the engine. They will be in charge of David Anguerbauer who will use them to the watering cart. Whenever needed they will be brought in. The expense of the the team and driver is paid by Mr. Pope.

Thieves Around Metuchen.

The country residence of Edward Morris, President of the Oak Tree Bottling Works, was entered Tuesday night by thieves. A pocketbook containing $38 was stolen, together with a watch charm and clothing. The Robins "Homestead Farm" adjoining was also entered, but little was stolen.

CHEMICAL'S GOOD WORK.

A HARD FIRE QUICKLY EXTINGUISHED EARLY THIS MORNING.

Defective Construction in Mrs. J. E. Corlies' Residence Allowed Flames to Get Headway that Endangered the House.

If ever the chemical engine was a welcome sight, it was at the residence of Mrs. J. E. Corlies, of Road's Ending, early on Thursday. For nearly an hour had the residents and a few neighbors been fighting the fire, but gradually the flames spread and five minutes more would have made the destruction of the house a certainty. Then it was that the chemical engine showed that the confidence of Chief Doane and the firemen had not been misplaced. Within two minutes after a stream was turned on the flames the most of the fire was out and the building saved.

Mrs. Corlies' residence is located at the end of Central avenue, about two miles from the central portion of this city. The house is a large one and is built so that the second floor overhangs the piazza. On the extreme end of the second floor beams there is a chimney over the piazza post. An open fireplace is located in the second floor room at the bottom of the chimney and rests, or, did rest before the fire, on the beams which separates the fire from the beams below. This is exactly what is prohibited in the building ordinance recently passed, which states that there shall be a brick arch to support every chimney and open fireplace.

A fire was started in the fire place at the beginning of the recent cold spell and the heat cracked the flagstone below. Red hot coals set fire to the beams below and the fire began to spread. The conflagration must have started early this morning for when it was discovered at about 4 o'clock it had attained considerable headway. The fire crept along the space between the floors and up between the walls until almost the entire second story was ablaze.

An alarm was sent in by telephone, and the chemical engine, manned by Chief Doane, Second Assistant Chief Murray, Driver George Fiering and Captain Newman, quickly responded. Charles Van Winkle heard the engine and followed.

The stream from the chemical soon extinguished most of the fire and then it was necessary to put but all the little fires in corners and out of the way places where it had crept between the walls. After an hour's hard work, the little delegation from the fire department had extinguished every spark. Instead of flooding the house, less than sixty gallons of water, the contents of one tank of the chemical, was used and the wonderful utility of the new engine was again practically demonstrated.

The damage is estimated at about $500, which was fully covered by insurance.

The support for the chimney was burnt away and it hung "by the eyebrows," making a dangerous thing for the firemen to work under. They luckily managed to escape all injury, but the benefit of the section of the new building ordinance relating to that was very evident.

WINFIELD SCOTT POST ORDERS.

Commander McVoy Issues a Bulletin for the Memorial Day Observance.

In accordance with usual custom, the following general orders have been issued by Commander McVoy, of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, for Memorial Day. The orders are as follows:

1st. The Post will assemble at Post Headquarters, Sunday evening, May 24th, at 7 o'clock, for the purpose of attending memorial service at the Congregational church on Park avenue. Members will appear in dark clothing, uniform hats, membership badges, white gloves and canes.

2d. In accordance with the request of the Grand Memorial Detail, Comrade O. Mason Whitfield is hereby appointed Marshal for Memorial Day, and he will be respected and obeyed accordingly.

3d. The graves of our deceased comrades will be decorated by the scholars from the public schools, under the full supervision and direction of the Post Committee on Memorial and the Sons of Veterans.

4th. The Commander and the Officer of the Guard will report to the Officer of the Day, Wm. C. Smith, for orders on Memorial Day morning at the Lincoln Hall, at 8 o'clock. J. V. Commander having been detailed to decorate the graves at St. Mark's and vicinity.

5th. The Post will assemble at Post Headquarters on Memorial Day morning at 8 o'clock for the purpose of going in general parade and decorating the graves of our deceased comrades.

6th. Comrades will re-assemble at the Post Headquarters at 2:30 p. m. prompt to attend the memorial exercises at Lincoln Hall. Comrades are expected to appear in full uniform. Officers of the Day will appear in dark clothing, uniform hats, memorial badges, white gloves and canes.

THEY DID NOT EVEN SPEAK.

Colonel Moore and Madam Carre Simply Stared at Each Other.

Colonel Moore, formerly of this city, and erstwhile deputy commissioner under Colonel Waring, and Mme. Carre, who was Colonel Waring's private secretary, met at Fulton street and Broadway on Wednesday, but they did not speak as they passed by.

There is no love lost between them, because it was mainly through the instrumentality of Mme. Carre that Col. Moore was compelled to resign, and he in turn started the crusade which ended in her ousting. Mme. Carre is now employed in the office of Corporation Counsel Scott.

THREE CHICAGO POETS.

Ernest McGaffey, Charles Eugene Banks and Louis Block.

What They Have Done to Merit a Niche in the Temple of Fame—Their Popular Recognition Only a Question of Years.

[Special Chicago Letter.]

Whatever the critics of the east may say, it is nevertheless a fact that Chicago has given to the world of letters three poets whose fame is destined to grow from day to day. They are not magazine rhymesters who deal in mysterious nothings, but true men who sing of nature and life as healthy men and women find them—and have always found them. Neither are they long-haired freaks who pose before the world as prodigies. Every one of them is a busy man of action, capable of holding his own in the workaday struggle for existence, as far as the writer is concerned, he honors these men as much for their clearheadedness in everyday life as for their great abilities as literary leaders.

Take, for instance, Ernest McGaffey, whose volume of "Poems," recently issued by an eastern publishing house, has attracted general attention. He is a young lawyer with a bright future, a man of the world, a companion for judge or preacher. His views on current topics are quoted by the press; his knowledge of affairs political brings to his office the leaders of parties. And yet this same man will retire to his study in the evening and commune with nature with an eloquence that surprises the critics who have repeated from year to year that "nothing of literary merit can come out of Chicago." From beginning to end McGaffey's "Poems" show inspiration and a wonderful perception of the beauties of things. There is not a page which does not contain a new idea or a precious thought dressed in a new form. Opening the little volume at random the other day, I became enchanted with this gem:

Like some lone, wild creature that paces all day
Back and forth behind bars in its dumb, strong wish to be free,
So paces the poet, caged and gray,
On its earth-bound shores, the mysterious sea of the sea.

If such a poet has ever clothed a beautiful sentiment in finer garb I have never seen his works. Equally strong is a poem in another vein, entitled "The Derelict," from which I quote the last verse:

And thus a wraith, a mote, a speck,
In watery solitudes
She sails, and hears the siren song
Of ocean's mysteries unfold to come
She wanders, derelict.
And what could be more charming than this picture:

Dear friends, tho' silent, the companion trees
That whisper as I pass, and scatter down
Leaf benedictions on my leaf-strewn path.

Mr. McGaffey's versatility is almost phenomenal. His fancy responds to the call of the moment. His reflective, descriptive and pathetic moods find ready expression in verse, which, while not always perfect, is never annoyingly halting. It has been stated that he has no rivals in America but Joaquin Miller and James Whitcomb Riley. This is a sweeping assertion, but one which will not be disputed a few years hence. The writer has been familiar with Mr. McGaffey's works for eight years. He has noted his development along various lines, and is justified in giving the widest circulation to Chicago's faith in a poet whose productions are even now quoted throughout the land. The keystone of Mr. McGaffey's success is his modesty, which constantly reminds him that he has yet to learn many things and that perfection in art must be based on constant observation and unremitting study.

Charles Eugene Banks has been called a "sweet singer." His work, although not quite as varied as McGaffey's, betrays genius and genuine poetic instinct. While McGaffey is always an optimist, even in his serious metaphysical words, Banks sometimes is mildly pessimistic. Take, for example, his little poem entitled "Clothes Worship:"

The world will crack the devil o'er the pate
If, dressed in rags, he peep across the gate—
But let the velvet hide his cloven hoof
He finds a welcome under every roof.

But these words never last long. The disposition of the poet is too happy to dwell on disagreeable themes, and hence we find on another page of his little book, "Then, Brooke, Go Softly," this charming tribute to love:

The world is as a clouded sea,
But love is like the sun,
That dwells amid the murky waves
And brightens every one.
O'er gloom is golden glory flung
While sunbeams sport the waves among.

The gem of Mr. Banks' productions, however, is a verse entitled "March:"

Pale Lenten morns, with gentle tread
And quiet air, among the dead;
March whips the sullen sky to tears,
And in the violet appears.

Another hopeful verse—and one that should appeal to everybody at this season—he calls "Easter Lilies:"

What though you build cloud-high the wall,
What though the sword you constant wield!
All kingdoms, monarchies shall fall
Beneath the chemonic power;
Shall stand the lilies of the field.

One could quote column after column of equally beautiful sentiments from Mr. Banks' pen, but it would exhaust the patience of lovers of nature and of pure poetry. "The gentle writer of gentle verse" is the expression in which I alluded to him several years ago; but, to understand fully the meaning of the phrase, it is necessary to know the poet. His personality is charming, his generosity unbounded. Nothing appeals to him as forcibly as the distress of the oppressed. To know Banks is to love him. And yet, although not in robust health and, at times, periods of his life, assailed by care and trouble, he has sturdily fought the battle for existence, asking no favors and complaining to no one. Starting out in life as a commercial man, he drifted into journalism, acted as business manager for trade papers, did reportorial work on Chicago newspapers, wrote advertisements for manufacturing firms, and finally invaded the lecture field, from which he has withdrawn on account of failing health. But neither in prosperity nor adversity did he lose his faith in mankind, as is evidenced by the poems he has given to the world during the past two years. Convinced that the American people—although slow and sometimes churlish—never fail to recognize genuine merit, the prediction is ventured that Mr. Banks' fame will eventually become national. And it is, no doubt, his experience which encourages him to perform, without grumbling, routine duties in a local newspaper office at Davenport, Ia. After so much darkness light must inevitably break through the clouds of our "gentle poet's" gentle life.

The third of Chicago's noted poets is Louis J. Block, scholar and pedagogue. Mr. Block is essentially a thinker, a lover of liberty and an exhorter. His great poem, "The New World," appeals to thoughtful people. It will never be popular, in the common sense of the term, but it will live and become a classic. From the purely technical view point of the rhymester many improvements might be suggested, but the mystic and the philosopher would deprecate such a course. As the title of the poem indicates, it deals with the discovery of America and its central figure, Christopher Columbus. Incidentally it touches the blessings of free government and free thought—liberty without license. One of the most striking passages, to my mind, is devoted to "Supreme Thought," apostrophized as follows:

Arrayed in storm, all life,
And mid stress over strife,
She sets the stars in melody and rhyme,
And makes the periods with each other chime;
Pouring her hopes into the dark recesses,
Threading her way through the vague wildernesses—
She fashions, rules, designs, and dwells within the lights,
Which is the heart of hearts, and very sight of sight.

Mr. Block has been accused of being "antiquated and behind the times," but persons whose vision is narrow enough to make such a charge cannot be considered fair judges of poetry. How can a thought like the following be "behind the times?"

He only wins his freedom truly,
Who daily wins it fresh and fair,
He ever rises newly
Into the purer air
Who falters not for blame nor praise,
But lives in strenuous and effective days.

And within the lights are to be found on almost every page of "The New World." Literary Chicago, if there is such a thing, should be as proud of Mr. Block as she is of McGaffey and Banks, and yet nothing of a very high or spectable sang, because respectable, presumably able poetesses whose names have from time to time appeared in capital letters at fashionable receptions. Writing poetry is one of Mr. Block's recreations, and it is to be hoped that in the future he may find plenty of leisure hours to devote to it. But the public must not expect too much in this direction, as his duties as principal of a large Chicago school necessarily occupy most of his time.

SCOTS AND EDUCATION.

More College Men in Scotland Than in England.

This desire for education is, indeed, the best feature in the intellectual temperament of the Scottish people. The well-known ambition of the Scottish mother to have her son in his pew in pu'pit" is now somewhat weakened by the opening up of other paths of intellectual achievement, but there is still, says Westminster Review, a widely diffused desire for intellectual in preference to commercial pursuits. It is an indication of the craving which exists for knowledge in general that for every young man who goes to college in England seven go to colleges in Scotland. In 1883 Scotland, with a population of 3,725,000, had 6,500 students attending her four universities, while England, with 26,000,000 of population, had 8,000 attending her four teaching universities. This, it may be supposed, has some connection with the large percentage of Scotch lawyers, doctors, clergymen and schoolmasters to be met with throughout the English-speaking world. The success of "the Scot abroad" is perhaps not entirely or even mainly due to his training, but it was at any rate the Scottish kirk that founded and fostered the Scottish educational system, and as to theology itself, if it has tended to confirm in him that quality of "high seriousness" which Matthew Arnold considered so important a feature in the best type of character, then the Scotchman's theology and its associations have borne a not inconsiderable part in making him what he is.

LINCOLN'S WIDE SYMPATHY.

Treated All People Alike in a Courteous Manner.

"Horace Greeley once said: 'I doubt whether man, woman or child, white or black, bound or free, virtuous or vicious, ever accosted or reached forth a hand to Abraham Lincoln and detected in his countenance or manner any repugnance or shrinking from the proffered contact, any assumption of superiority, or betrayal of disdain.'

"Frederick Douglas, the orator and patriot, is credited with saying: 'Mr. Lincoln is the only white man with whom I have ever talked, or in whose presence I have ever been, who did not consciously or unconsciously betray to me that he recognized my color.'

"George Bancroft, the historian, alluding to the characteristic, which was never so conspicuously manifested as during the darker days of the war, beautifully illustrates it in these memorable words: 'As a child, in a dark night, on a rugged way, catching hold of the hand of his father for guidance and support, Lincoln clung fast to the hand of the people and moved calmly through the gloom.'"

SMART COYOTE TRICK.

Sheep Cleverly Herded to the Brink of a Precipice.

An incident in illustration of a smart trick said to be frequently played by coyotes in securing food from among the herds of sheep on western ranges is related by a rancher of Grant county, Oregon. He had a herd of about 1,900 sheep, and recently missed a large number. In searching for them a herder found three sheep lying on the brink of a precipice, their throats marked with the teeth of a coyote. He made his way to the bottom, a canyon, 300 feet below, and there found the bodies of 110 sheep, or rather parts of their bodies, for the coyotes had been feeding on the carcasses for a week or more. From other incidents of like character it was concluded that several coyotes had got among the herd when the sheep were driven off their bedding ground in the morning, herded them to the brink of the precipice, much as a lot of sheep dogs would drive sheep. When the edge was reached the coyotes pressed the herd so hard in the rear that the 110 at the front either jumped or were pushed over the precipice.

"PA FELT LONELY."

Queer Freak of a Drunken Brute in Cleveland.

A Cleveland family was in court the other day. A daughter was one of the witnesses, and she had this cheerful tale to tell of her father: "Pa was sitting in his saloon, feeling lonely. He went to the barn, and putting a halter on his workhorse led him into the house, saying he wanted the animal to eat supper with him. Pa made me set a plate for the horse. Then he took hold of the horse's front legs and lifted them up on the table. We all sat down to supper and he helped me to pie. Pa picked up a mug of beer and began to laugh and throw both hands in the air. The mug hit the horse on the nose. The beast pulled his feet down, dragging the tablecloth and upsetting the table. The horse backed up and sat squarely on a redhot stove. This burned its tail so the animal kicked the stove over and ran out of the door. I screamed and pa threw a lamp at me. The house caught on fire, and a policeman came in. Pa has been arrested 108 times."

Not the Replies Intended.

The following extracts are from examination papers recently handed in at a public school in Connecticut: 1. From what animals do we get milk? From the camel and the milkman. 2. The hen is covered with feathers. With what is the cat covered? The cat is covered with fleas. 3. Name an animal that has four legs and a long tail. A mosquito. 4. Name two kinds of nuts. Peanuts and forget-me-nuts.

Cruel Examiners.

A reporter for the Cincinnati Tribune lately overheard a dialogue between two suburban gentlemen.

"How did your daughter pass her examination for a position as teacher?" asked the first man.

"Pass!" was the answer. "She didn't pass at all. Maybe you won't believe it, but they asked that poor girl about things that happened before she was born."

MONARCHIAL RULE.

The German Empire Has Done Much to Redeem It.

To the student of political institutions perhaps the most characteristic thing about the history of the German empire, says Macmillan's Magazine, is the example that it gives us of the revival or reaffirmation, so to speak, of the principle of monarchy. That principle has received some rude shocks in recent years. The establishment of the French republic was one, and the deposition of the emperor of Brazil was recently another. Both events gave great encouragement to republican ideas. Kingship in the old absolute sense had long been on the wane. The French revolution almost shattered the foundations of the old monarchical rule. In England the old kingship received its final blow when George IV. surrendered his position on the question of the emancipation of the Catholics; no attempt has since been made to impose the royal will upon a reluctant ministry or parliament. In France the old kingship disappeared when Louis Philippe, the Citizen King, was summoned to the throne by the revolution of July was built on strictly constitutional lines. Even in Prussia a very restricted constitution was reluctantly conceded. King Frederick William IV. vowed that he would never be a shareholder in a business between God in Heaven and his subjects; but even he was forced at last to yield to the spirit of the age, and, as Bismarck picturesquely put it, the crown itself threw a clod upon its coffin. The Italian States and Spain were for long in a condition of chronic revolution, and either constitutions were extorted or republics were established. It almost seemed as though the principle of kingship was doomed ere long to disappear. But the history of the German empire has done much toward the restoration of monarchy to its old illustrious position.

CLEVER PICKPOCKETS.

The Thief's Art Reduced to a Fine Point in Mexico.

Mexico is a land of thieves and lawlessness. An English correspondent tells of an adventure of two men in the Grand Square of Mexico. They stood talking before they should part. One was American, the other English. Suddenly the former said to the latter, pointing to the opposite side of the square under the colonnades:

"Look at that fellow. They're pinching him nicely, aren't they? And he's a friend of mine, you bet!"

And there, while he stood gazing at the cathedral all unconscious, another American was relieved of his watch and chain with ease.

"Smartest thing I ever saw," cried the watching Yankee. "Look here, I'd like to interview those coons."

They did so, the Englishman interpreting. Said the admiring Yankee, after a time:

"Can you do me like that? I'd like to know what it feels like."

And the answer came contemptuously:

"You? Why, we did you an hour ago!"

This is a true story.

Told of Indigo Snakes.

The student of animal life at the zoological gardens is startled frequently by the remarkable display of sagacity that is sometimes made by the inmates of that interesting place, says an English writer. That, for instance, could be more clever, more thoughtful or more amazing than the action of the indigo snake when cold weather comes on? It was illustrated recently. The first breath of cool air that was wafted across the gardens informed the indigo snakes that a cold wave was at hand. They could not hide their heads under their wings, like the robin of the nursery book. They could not take violent exercise to warm up their blood, for their blood will not warm. So they settle the problem by swallowing each other in turn. One indigo snake will swallow his better half, for example, until she becomes thoroughly warmed up and then she will swallow him until he feels comfortable.

A Grim Wager.

Wagers sometimes take rather a grim form. It is recorded that in the last century a wager was laid for one of a party of gay revelers to enter Westminster abbey at the hour of midnight. He was to enter one of the vaults beneath the abbey, and in proof of his having been there he was to stick a fork into a coffin which had been recently deposited there. He accomplished his object and was returning in triumph when he felt himself suddenly caught, and was so overpowered by terror that he fell into a swoon. His companions, not being able to account for his long absence, found him in this condition. The fork which he had fastened into the coffin had caught and pinned his long cloak and so occasioned a fit of terror which nearly proved fatal.

The Gun Would Determine.

It is said there's a man living near Hagerstown known as Old Uncle Zeb. He does not decide who to vote for until he has met the representatives of each candidate and had a conference. A local Hurst politician called Uncle Zeb the other day and said: "Well, Uncle Zeb, who are you going to vote for?" "I dunno, I dunno," the old man replied. "I need a double-barreled shotgun mighty bad. I calc'late to do a lot of hunting this winter. I dunno who I'll vote for."

Hasty Leaving.

There is a man living near Maben, Miss., who prides himself on his economy, and the other day, when discussing his favorite topic, he remarked that he had saved several dollars in matches.

"Why," he said, "when I came to Mississippi, nearly 40 years ago, I brought my fire with me, and I have kept the same fire ever since, never allowing it to die out, and during all this time have never spent one cent for matches."

TRIED TO TAKE HIS LIFE.

PAUL REUSCH, A DUNELLEN BAKER, ATTEMPTS TO COMMIT SUICIDE.

Put the Muzzle of a Shot Gun to His Mouth, Pulled the Trigger, and the Charge Tore Nose, Cheek and Eye Away.

The quiet borough of Dunellen, from one end to the other, was shocked last Monday about 8 o'clock when the news of the attempted suicide of Paul Reusch, the baker, spread rapidly. Mr. Reusch had been to Elizabeth in the afternoon to see his brother on business and on returning home about 8 o'clock, it was noticed that he was rather despondent. He entered his store, picked up a shot gun, and remarked to his wife that he was going to end his life. He then went to his room, and after undressing himself, placed the muzzle of the gun near his mouth and pulled the trigger with his foot. The charge entered the upper lip and nose and completely gouged out his right eye.

His wife heard the report of the gun and rushing to his room found her husband lying prostrate and bleeding on the floor, with the gun near by. Mrs. Reusch was frantic. From the ghastly wounds blood was flowing profusely and the man was in a comatose condition. Dr. Brakeley was sent for immediately and gave the best treatment possible.

The flow of blood was partially stopped and Reusch was left as comfortable as possible. At 2 o'clock this morning he became worse and Dr. Long, of this city, was called. He found that the wounds were bleeding considerable and in a short time he again became quiet. The rest of the night was uneventful.

In looking back many reasons are given for the terrible act. Mr. Reusch has lost several horses lately, he has been unfortunate in building and only a short time ago he had a horse run away and completely wreck his bakery wagon. These things, together with hard times, has depressed him very much and his visit to Elizabeth was to see if he could not get help from his brother. Mr. Reusch has for a long time conducted a first class bakery and everyone supposed he was doing a good business. He is well-known and universally liked by his fellow-townsmen and everyone was completely surprised to to learn of this terrible deed. He has a wife and children who are prostrated with grief over the affair.

On to the Mountains.

The first Mauch Chunk excursion of the season will be run on Decoration Day over the Central Railroad of New Jersey. Patrons in former years that have enjoyed the pleasure of one of these excursions will be most sure to repeat it. It is a delightful ride to Mauch Chunk and through a country rich in wild mountain scenery. The road runs along the Lehigh River, and the cool invigorating breezes are filled with life-giving odor of the pines. The gravity railroad is another interesting feature of the excursion. It costs but fifty cents to make a trip over the road, and it enables lovers of grand scenery to feast their eyes on lofty distant peaks and fertile valleys right in the heart of the coal region. Glen Anoko, with its delicate water falls, cool retreats and rambles, is the pride of the Blue Ridge region, and is so near Mauch Chunk that time is allowed for full exploration. There is no jostling or crowding on these trips and they are patronized by respectable and self respecting people.

Another Convention Coming.

which college men take with them into their professional. The phenomenal growth of educational work throughout the country in our Associations during the last decade has fully demonstrated the existing need and the great advantage of such instruction. To train young men physically, mentally and spiritually is our aim as a Christian Association, and we labor to render our students such assistance as shall enable them to become more skilful workmen, more successful business men, better citizens, and better men for all the agencies and methods of Association work has one specific ultimate end in view—the formation and growth of Christian character.

In closing this report your committee wish to put on record their appreciation of the faithful services that have been rendered during the year by the teachers and their assistants. We believe that our Association, through these educational classes, offers to great numbers of young men in Plainfield substantial privileges at a low cost, that will be of the greatest practical benefit to them if rightly improved. To bring these advantages to the attention of a larger number and to enlist more scholars for next year's work is our purpose, and we especially invite those in Plainfield who employ young men to aid us in this endeavor, believing that the gain to employers and to their employes will be mutual. On behalf of the committee,

Stephen Cahoone,
Chairman.

BEAUTIFUL FAIRVIEW CEMETERY.

The Public Officially Invited to Visit on Decoration Day.

The trustees hereby extend a cordial invitation to the lot owners and the citizens of Westfield, Plainfield, Fanwood, Scotch Plains, Springfield, Cranford, Roselle, Elizabeth and Rahway to visit this beautiful "city of our beloved dead."

On Saturday next, May 30th—Decoration Day—a committee from the trustees will be in attendance to escort visitors through the grounds and give any desired information as to price of lots, care of lots, trust funds, etc., etc.

The organization of Fairview Cemetery Association was perfected on the 13th of January, 1868, pursuant to the provisions of a general statute of this State, and a certificate was duly filed with the County Clerk, constituting the Association a legally corporate body.

The enterprise has met with favor and success even beyond expectation.

The Cemetery grounds are located on the public road leading from Westfield to Springfield, about one-and-a-half miles from the depot of the Central Railroad in Westfield, and about the same distance from Cranford station; convenient to each of the above cities and towns, at the same time not too far for the accommodation of Springfield.

The Cemetery embraces an elevation of land formerly owned by John R. Miller, and long known as Mount Pleasant, commanding a view of the surrounding country for many miles distant in every direction.

It is the often-expressed opinion of civil engineers and others who have been upon our grounds that in respect to their locality, the distant views in every direction from the summit, their wavy, rolling surface and woody slopes, the dry and suitable nature of the soil, and their general adaptation to burial purposes, they are not only the most desirable in this section of the State, but unsurpassed by those of any cemetery in the country.

The Superintendent, Charles W. Sortor, can be found at the Lodge and will at any time render to visitors any desired information as to burials, location of lots, prices, etc.

By order of the Board,
J. S. Irving, President,
B. J. Crosby, Secretary.

WITH THE STUDENTS.

Little Happenings of Interest Among the High School Scholars.

There are no handicaps allowed to the lower classes over the senior class and therefore the members of the Fourth, Third and Junior classes have to compete with the seniors on an equal basis for the essay prize. Several members of the lower classes are working very hard to win the prize and as the senior class does not contain the literary leaders of the school, it will not be surprising to see the prize go to one of the members of a lower class.

Members of the High School will be pleased to hear of the improved condition of Volney F. Green, of the class of '96. He has been confined to his home on East Fifth street for the past two weeks with a severe illness.

Yesterday morning Charles Noble rendered a declamation entitled "The Horse chestnut Bud." Felix Layat is on the list to declame in a few days.

The regular drill, both of the boys' and girls' companies, will be held next Thursday morning at nine o'clock, weather permitting. The week's drill will take the place of the third recitation of the day. The boys' company will pay especial attention to platoon movements in preparation for the parade on Decoration Day.

DUNELLEN.

Mrs. Mary Hull, of Sing Sing, is visiting her mother, Mrs. W Slape.

Mrs. Abbott has returned home after a visit with relatives in Somerville.

Some mean thief entered the barn of Joel Giddis Saturday night and stole a bag of feed.

Mrs. Walter Apgar has returned home after an extended visit with friends in New York and Newark.

Samuel Dennick, of California, is home on an extended visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Dennick.

Miss Cecelia Syers, of Sheepshead Bay, is visiting her grandfather, John McCall, at the residence of Constable Warden, of Lincoln avenue.

Miss Stella Elke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Elke, who has been ill at Muhlenberg Hospital, Plainfield, for the last few weeks, has returned home much improved in health.

Several new sets of books have been added to the Methodist Sunday-school library, which were purchased from the money raised at the ice cream and strawberry festival held recently.

NEW MARKET

Mr. Smith, who has been visiting friends in town, has returned home to Bound Brook.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Titsworth have been entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Newhall, of Brooklyn.

Elmer Blackford has returned home to Brooklyn, after a visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Blackford.

The Father Lights Missionary Society of the First Baptist church will hold a Japanese entertainment on Saturday evening in Friendship hall. A feature of the evening will be a fan drill.

A literary and musical entertainment was given in Friendship Hall, New Market, last evening, under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of the Seventh Day Baptist church. Music was furnished by the Schubert Ladies Orchestra.

A Forcible Speaker.

A large attendance greeted Rev. George A. Francis, of Westfield, last evening at the meeting of the Plainfield Branch of the Christian Alliance in the W. C. T. U. rooms, and his earnest and forcible remarks, together with his excellent delivery made a deep impression on all who heard him.

His subject was "The Newness of Life in Christ Jesus." Miss Nora Herndon, the city Missionary, was announced as the leader for the next meeting on Tuesday evening, June 2d.

To Float the Stars and Stripes.

A grand time is in prospect for next Saturday at the Berkley Heights public school, at which time there will be a flag pole raising. A. J. Cammeyer, the New York shoe dealer, who has a country home at this place, will present the school with a handsome American flag. There will be other interesting features.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. THE FIRST JUNE BRIDE.

A PRETTY HOME WEDDING CELEBRATED ON EAST 2D STREET.

Miss Mary E. Thorn Becomes Mrs. William C. LaRue, of New Brunswick—Married Under a Floral Horseshoe—Guests Present.

An ideal home wedding was celebrated on Tuesday at 8 o'clock, when Miss Mary E. Thorn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Thorn, of 616 East Second street, was united in marriage by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, of the First Baptist church, to William C. LaRue, a well-known resident of New Brunswick.

The rooms were beautified with a profusion of roses, while in the parlor was suspended a large horseshoe of flowers under which the bridal party stood. The Lohengrin wedding march was finely executed by Clifford Braider on the organ as the party entered. The bride was becomingly gowned in pink silk and carried pink roses. Miss May Thompson, of East Orange, and Miss Edna Carson, of North Plainfield, nieces of the bride, acted as flower girls. The former was gowned in pink and the latter in white. Both carried baskets of flowers. Congratulations followed the ceremony during which several classical selections were rendered by Mr. Braider. A supper was afterwards served to the guests. A feature of the event was the presence of the bride's Sunday-school class of girls, ten in number, who acted as waitresses.

Mr. and Mrs. LaRue received a fine collection of presents, including a large handsome family Bible from members of the East Third Street mission, of which the bride is a member. The bride and groom left on the 10 o'clock train for New Brunswick, where they will reside in the future.

Those who witnessed the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Thorn, the parents of the bride; Mrs. LaRue, mother of the groom, Miss LaRue and Mr. LaRue, sister and brother of the groom, of New Brunswick; Mr. and Mrs. William Perrine and family, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Thomson and family, of East Orange; Miss R. A. Thorn, of West Farms; Mr. Bixby, of Pittsburg; Dr. and Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Carson and family, Mrs. Obleinger, Miss Althea Vail, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Randolph, Irving Brady and Clifford Braider.

Owing to illness, the groom's father was unable to be present.

ANOTHER BIG REAL ESTATE DEAL.

Woolston & Buckle Get Control of a West Front Street Store Property.

Another big real estate deal has just been consummated by which Woolston & Buckle become the owners of the business block on West Front street, occupied by Harry Werner, the clothier, and John French gains possession of two beautiful residences on Willow avenue, formerly owned by James McGee. The exchange was made through the efforts of Charles H. Lyman.

Plainfield Gets a Good Citizen.

Among the prominent business men of New York who have recently made Plainfield their home is Frederick W. Perry, of 51 Willow avenue. Mr. Perry is a director and the resident-manager of the new United States Cheque Bank, Limited, at 40 Wall street, New York. This bank represents in America the Cheque Bank, Limited, of London, with a capital of $750,000. Mr. Perry, it is understood, contemplates establishing a sub-agency in Plainfield. Mr. and Mrs. Perry have already made many friends in their new home.

To Speak in Reform Hall.

Arthur Klein, A. B., of Cambridge University, England, will deliver an address in Reform Hall Thursday evening of this week. The occasion will be of special interest to all, and everyone is cordially invited.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

A FESTIVAL OF SWEETS.

LUSCIOUS ARTICLES ON SALE AT THE MONROE AVENUE CHAPEL.

The Chapel Transformed From a Sombre-Looking Edifice Into a Bazar of Gayety and Life—Those in Charge.

A surprise awaited those that came to Monroe Avenue chapel Tuesday to attend the strawberry and ice cream festival. Instead of the rows of chairs arranged about the platform, artistic booths and tables were placed in the centre and sides of the room, while a crowd of young people and children gathered about each one and kept those in charge busy attending to their numerous wants.

A booth to the right of the door, draped in purple and yellow, contained a choice assortment of flowers. This was presided over by Miss Thompson and Miss Saums.

A large earthen jar, decorated with daisies, made a very acceptable lemonade well, and here Miss Mary Beekman established her headquarters and was kept busy supplying the crowd of thirsty buyers.

In a corner was a booth covered with many dainty little fancy articles that were sold by Mrs. James Rogers.

In the rear of the room was a novel stand, that is novel for a festival, for here were sold peanuts and bananas. Those in charge were Miss Bertha Wenzel and Miss Minnie Whitney.

In the centre of the room was a table on which was displayed such a wonderful assortment of candies that the eyes of the small boys fairly popped out of their heads as they gazed. But the best of this table and its delicious load was that everything was furnished by the members of the Junior Epworth League.

The table was decorated in yellow and white bunting while immense bunches of daisies adorned each end. The candy, which was all home-made, was enough decoration in itself and attracted old and young alike. Miss Charlotte Aldrich, Superintendent of the Junior League, was in charge, dressed in an appropriate yellow and white gown while her little aides, all in white, were the Misses Stella Kriney, Daisy Brouard, May Bruower, Lulu Randolph and Annie Littell.

The booths and tables were all delightful, but the real attraction of a strawberry and ice cream festival was the refreshment department. The visitor first had to go to the cashier's desk, which was presided over by Mrs. Nicholas Brouard, and there purchase checks for the good things to come. One large table and three small ones were crowded most of the evening with the visitors, and Mrs. Hayes, Mrs. Pierson, Mrs. Pugh, Mrs. Fulton, Mrs. Eakins and Miss Wenzel were kept busy collecting the checks and furnishing the equivalent, ice cream and strawberries.

The children found a new source of delight in the shape of a little electrical machine that generated enough electric current to make their hands and arms tingle in a most surprising way. The youngsters lined up around the machine, taking hold of hands and as the current passed through them, screamed with delight at the "funny feeling" that resulted. There was no regular programme, but several of the musicians of the chapel played familiar airs during the evening.

The festival was given by the Ladies Aid Society of which Mrs. I. P. La Rue is president.

Bitten By a Dog.

William Claassen, of Liberty street, is rapidly recovering from several bites of a dog which he received Sunday. He was talking to Mrs. John Sullivan, of West Third street, when Mrs. Sullivan's dog sprang out and bit him several times in the leg. He had the wounds cauterized.

If it required an annual outlay of $100.00 to insure a family against any serious consequences from an attack of bowel complaint during the year there are many who would feel it their duty to pay it; that they could not afford to risk their lives, and those of their family for such an amount. Any one can get this insurance for 25 cents that being the price of a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In almost every neighborhood some one has died from an attack of bowel complaint before medicine could be procured or a physician summoned. One or two doses of this remedy will cure any ordinary case. It never fails. Can you afford to take the risk for so small an amount? For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

A. L. Wooster, a prominent citizen of Oseco, Mich., after suffering excruciatingly from piles for twenty years, was cured in a short time by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, an absolute cure for all skin diseases. More of this preparation is used than all others combined. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front Street.

SWEARING IN RECRUITS.

THE AMERICAN VOLUNTEERS INCREASED BY THIRTY MEMBERS.

After Putting the Post on a Sure Footing, Capt. Mimms is Transferred to a Newark Post—New Officers for the Local Post.

A rousing meeting of the American Volunteers was held in Reform Hall Tuesday, at which time thirty recruits were sworn in, the largest number yet enrolled at one time. The hall was crowded by the vast audience which had gathered to witness the ceremony and also to hear Major Pattie Watkins sing.

The meeting was preceded by a street parade, and when the Volunteers passed the Salvation Army, who were holding an open air meeting on North avenue, the former ceased their drumming and marched quietly past the gathering for fear of disturbing it, thereby showing that good-will toward the parent organization.

The meeting in Reform Hall was a spirited one, and was opened with the usual song service. Major Watkins then gave a very interesting talk and was listened to attentively throughout. She said that she had been asked why she had taken Capt. Mimms away and sent her to another post. She said she would not have done so, had she not thought it would be productive of good.

Captain Mimms had her last meeting in this city last night. Tonight she leads a meeting at Seacliffe, L. I. She was in command at the latter place during the trouble in the Army and the Seacliffe corps was the first one to go over to Ballington Booth. Captain Mimms' place here will be taken by Lieutenant Bisbee, late of Dover, who will, however, receive her commission as Captain before she takes command here Thursday night. After tonight Captain Mimms will be at the new Training Home. Lieutenant Chalfont, who was in charge with Captain Mimms, will go to Dover to take charge of the Post there. Staff-Captain Lindsley, the head of the Trade Department of the Volunteers in New York city, was also present. He is an expert cornetist and is now organizing a band among the Volunteers.

The local officers sworn in last night were: Sergeant Major, Alex. Grant; treasurer, G. H. Van Nest; secretary, Jessie Billett; recruiting sergeant, W. L. Sharkey; color sergeant, J. Q. Miles; gazette sergeant, Mrs. W. L. Sharkey; bass drummer, T. Herman; snare drummer, Fred. Pangborn; visiting sergeants, Mrs. G. H. Van Nest and Mrs. Alex. Grant.

Lieutenant Ransome, of Jersey City, who is often seen at the meetings in this city and who has a large circle of friends here, has resigned his position on the New York Morning Advertiser and goes to Philadelphia to take a Post there.

TO PERMIT HIS RESIGNATION.

Pastor Greene to Go as Soon as He Finds Another Charge.

By advice of the Elizabeth Presbytery, the First Presbyterian church, of Cranford, has given its pastor, Rev. George Francis Greene, permission to hand in his resignation as soon as he is able to find another pastorate. Rumors of dissentions in the church have been rife for some time.

Although Mr. Greene has labored well and faithfully for more than ten years, some of the members have become dissatisfied, and after a series of consultations the officers sought the advice of the Presbytery. A committee was appointed to consider the matter, consisting of Rev. Dr. Kempshall, of Elizabeth; Rev. Dr. Richards, of this city; Rev. Dr. McNulty, of Woodbridge; and Mr. Squier, of this city. Mr. Greene and his critics were all present, and testimony was taken secretly.

As near as can be ascertained the principal charge was that the pastor was preaching on the topics of the day rather than from Scripture. The committee declined to pass judgment on the justice of the complaints, and simply recommended that Mr. Greene remain in Cranford till an opportunity presents an acceptable charge elsewhere. When he shall have found such a charge, he is to be permitted to resign. Mr. Greene accepts the direction, and it is understood will seek another pastorate.

DESECRATORS' WARNED.

MOTHER AND CHILD RECEIVE A LECTURE FOR STEALING FLOWERS.

Convicted of Taking Them From a Grave in Evergreen Cemetery, But Justice Nash Considered the Publicity Punishment.

The flowers on the graves at Evergreen Cemetery are likely to have a more peaceful existence hereafter, as the desecrators were given a severe lesson in Justice Nash's court Monday morning. After several years of mysterious disappearances of flowers from the graves, one of the supposed thieves was captured, as was exclusively told in yesterday's Press.

John H. Tier, Jr., was the man to make the complaint. Erasmus Harris, a colored man, has been employed by the Tier family to look after their plot and report when any flowers were stolen. This is Harris' regular business and he looks after the Tier plot together with a number of others.

Last Sunday Harris and his wife were walking through Evergreen Cemetery when they noticed a little girl ahead of them lean over the grave of Nellie B. Tier and pull a small white flower out by the roots. The little girl was accompanied by a woman. She held the plant in front of her until she reached another plot and there laid it down.

The watching couple in the rear could not tell who planted it but, at any rate, the plant was set out on another grave. Harris reported the occurrence to Mr. Tier and the complaint followed.

The woman was Mrs. Philip Hapeny and the child, her little six-year-old daughter, Lizzie. They appeared in Justice Nash's court this morning to answer the charge. Harris and his wife were present to testify as was Charles Smith, of Oak Tree, who was in the graveyard at the time. They all told their stories while Mrs. Hapeny vehemently protested her own innocence and that of her child.

When she took the stand, she declared that no flower had been taken, but had no evidence to offer.

Justice Nash then called the little girl, whose eyes were already filled with tears, to the side of his chair and after talking to her for some time extracted the fact that she had taken the flower.

The mother and child were pronounced guilty and the Judge, after lecturing them severely, suspended sentence, deeming that the publicity of the conviction would be enough punishment.

Any future attempt, however, will receive the full punishment, a fine of $100 and sixty days in jail.

FREE SCHOLARSHIPS.

The Competitive Examination of Candidates Will Take Place on Saturday.

The competitive examination of candidates for free State scholarships in the New Jersey State College at New Brunswick, as provided by the laws of 1890, will be held at the Court House, Elizabeth, on Saturday, commencing at 9 a. m.

The examination will be in charge of County Superintendent B. Holmes and the city superintendents in the county.

It is required that candidates must be residents of New Jersey, and at least sixteen years of age in September next. No person can receive one of the new State scholarships who does not enter the examination. Candidates who pass will be admitted to the State College without further examination. Candidates who fail in one or more subjects required for admission, but are otherwise well prepared, may, if qualified, remove such deficiencies at the college on September 15th.

The law under which these examinations are held provides, that to increase the efficiency of the public school, and in order that students may receive the stimulus to pursue the course of studies in college, the State shall furnish gratuitously scholarships to the number of one each year from each Assembly District. If there are more than one suitably prepared applicant from the same Assembly District, such additional candidate may be received on any vacant scholarship of any other Assembly District.

CUPID COULDN'T WAIT.

SO A BROOKLYN GIRL BECAME THE WIFE OF A PLAINFIELD MAN.

Miss Jeanette E. Bryan, of Brooklyn, Married to Richard Menzel Last November—Parents Object—Are Reconciled.

If love has any essential qualification it is persistency, and thus it was in the affairs of Miss Jeanette E. Bryan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Bryan, of 142 Fulton street, Brooklyn, and Richard Menzel, of this city. The two met and they loved each other. But when they had made up their minds to get married the young woman's parents objected on the grounds that they did not think it was the proper time. Accordingly on Thursday, November 7th, 1895, Miss Bryan and Mr. Menzel went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson, 442 Monroe avenue, Brooklyn, and were married by Rev. Phil Johnson, an Episcopal clergyman. Mr. and Mrs. Nelson stood up with them during the ceremony. Soon afterward the bride and groom came to Plainfield where they have been living.

Owing to the parent's objections the marriage was kept a secret, and not until a week ago was the fact made known to them. They were inclined to be provoked over the affair, but finally became reconciled. Miss Bryan is a niece of Mrs. Hebert, of 80 Mercer avenue, and has visited there quite frequently. Mr. Menzel, previous to coming to Plainfield two years ago, was manager of the Mathushek Piano Company, and during his stay in this city has had charge of F. S. Taylor's music store on West Front street. He is a well-known musician, having appeared many times before Plainfield audiences. His wife is also an accomplished musician. They will make their home in the borough, but as yet have not chosen a house. For the present they are boarding.

ROASTING SENATOR SEWELL.

Representative McEwan Very Bitter in Denunciation of the G. O. P. Boss.

Representative McEwan, of Jersey City, still keeps up his warfare on Senator Sewell. He says that the Senator will undoubtedly be the chairman of the New Jersey delegation at St. Louis, "but," he added, "he will be under no obligations to me, as a delegate, for the honor."

"I believe," said Mr. McEwan, "that the time has come when the Republican party should set aside the representatives of corporations and monied interests and that no corporation representative should be chosen to preside over the deliberations of a delegation or a convention. I want to see all corporations removed from politics, and the quicker it is done the better it will be for the Republican party. When some people hear me make such assertions they reply that corporations supply campaign money and that, therefore, they are entitled to a prominent place in politics.

"My answer to this is," continued Mr. McEwan, "that corporations should not be permitted to furnish campaign money. The only capital that should be used in a political campaign is the platform, and voters should take sufficient interest in an election and primary to attend both, and in that way work for whatever they believe to be right. I have been in politics for twenty years, have been frequently a candidate for office, and was elected a member of the New Jersey Legislature and to Congress. During all my life I have not received an average of ten dollars a year in contributions from political purposes, either from corporations, individuals or any other source."

Not a Happy History.

Somerville has had a local telephone company but it has finally given up and the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company has taken possession. The history of the defunct company is not a happy one and after living for several years without any show of profit, the company has "gone under." Chamberlain's Pain Balm has done me a great deal of good and I feel very thankful for it." For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

HIS DEATH ON THE RAIL

A UNION VILLAGE FARMER KILLED ON THE RAIL.

Attempted to Drive Over a Grade Crossing on the Lehigh Valley and Was Run Down By a Passenger Train.

The morning was a delightful one. The stage which runs between Plainfield and South Plainfield was standing not far from the South Plainfield station on the Lehigh Valley railroad, while the driver, C. J. Barry, and his companion, Louis Cane, were stretched out on the front seat of the stage reading a newspaper as they waited for the arrival of the passenger train from New York due at the station at 10:05. "It will be here in a minute," said Barry, as he examined his watch, and just then the whistle sounded down the track. Again the shrill notes of the whistle broke the quiet of the morning, and this time it screamed like one in pain.

"Oh!" exclaimed Barry, and he sprang from his seat and ran for the grade crossing, just above the station. There on the track was a farm wagon and its only occupant, an old man, was apparently trying to back his horses off the track. There was another terrible shriek by the whistle, and the locomotive struck the wagon just behind the whiffletrees. The man was thrown for some distance, while the two horses and part of the wreck of the wagon were dragged over the trestle bridge.

Such were the circumstances of the death of Henry Burnett, an old and respected farmer living near Union Village, Wednesday, and how it was seen by the nearest witnesses. When the driver reached Burnett the injured man was gasping faintly and in two minutes more his heart had ceased to beat. His head and arm were badly cut and torn and it is supposed that his skull was fractured.

Burnett had gone to South Plainfield after a load of beer-malt, and started to drive across the track before he heard the train. When he he did, it is supposed that he tried to back off the track, but the horses did not respond in time. The poor animals paid dearly for their slowness. One was killed and the other, when found, was in the last throes of death. The wagon was completely wrecked. The accident was not seen by those at the depot, as another train obscured the crossing from view. The engine was 302.

Burnett's remains were identified by a neighbor, who was at the depot platform loading his wagon with grain.

The family of the victim of the accident were notified as soon as possible and his wife and daughter were taken to South Plainfield this afternoon by Henry Rogers, whose farm is nearby the deceased's.

Charles Burnett, the mason, of this city, Henry and Peter Burnett, farmers near Bindleytown, another son, and two daughters survive, with the widow. One of the daughters is Mrs. Henry Bodenheimer, of Somerset street. Mr. Burnett was about sixty-five years old.

YOUNG PEOPLE INTERESTED.

They Will Assist the Improvement Association in Keeping Clear Streets.

The Young People's Auxiliary committee has, through the several schools, already made some progress in interesting the young people in the work of the Town Improvement Association. The children have been set to work counting the elm trees, and a number have become members of the association. They are going to be careful not to litter the sidewalks and streets with paper and other rubbish, and will strive to encourage careful habits in their companions.

The pin used in Brooklyn has been adopted by this committee. It consists of an aluminum heart inscribed with an A, and signifies, "I will aid you with all my heart."

Children become members of the association by the payment of ten cents a year and they can secure the pin by the additional payment of five cents.

SPRING FEVER.

A "State of Mind" Which Comes with the Birds and Flowers.

It Is Easily Cured If One Only Has the Means to Follow His Inclinations—A Sort of Migratory Malady.

As the sun grows stronger and the last lingering snowdrifts become gray, dirty streaks, as the earliest spring birds return and the brown earth steams and swells beneath the midday warmth, there comes to us a restless longing for something different from the ordinary life, which is perhaps the survival of a migratory instinct transmitted from a long-forgotten ancestor who changed his aides with the changing seasons. Call it by whatever name we may, "spring fever" or "bad blood," this state of mind exists and needs a cure.

There is no better remedy for it than to yield to the feeling, just as the birds and beasts do, to burst our bonds for a little while and to spend a day, a week or a month, if we can, "far from the maddening crowd's ignoble strife." It matters little what the excuse may be so that we make to ourselves and our business associates, whether it is to go fishing on the opening day or to collect birds or wild flowers or to take a long bicycle ride; any excuse is a good one which for a time frees man or woman from the restraints of everyday life and gives opportunity for communion with nature, now just stretching her arms after her long sleep.

Although this restlessness comes to everyone except the most hardened business man, it does not come to all at the same time nor by reason of the same causes. One man may recognize its first symptoms as he walks through the crowded streets and feels a warm, soft air of spring blow upon his face; another may be stricken as he walks through a city park and sees the swelling buds of the soft maple or elm; a third may sit at his desk dreaming for an hour over a letter containing some chance remark which sends his thoughts a thousand miles afield, or yet another may find the sweet poison in some spring odor or in the voice of a newly-come bird. Whatever its cause, all know the symptoms of the disease and all know the remedy.

Let him who dreams of brown, foam-flecked streams, whose waters are kissed by the swollen catkins of bending willows and boarded by sprangling alders, make ready his rod and start for the trout stream. There he will perhaps catch some fish, but whether he does or not, he will find what is of more worth to him than trout, though he may not know it. He will see the newly-come sandpiper wading along the shallows of the stream, and the water thrush and the red-poll warbler sedately marching by the water's edge; the little tortoises scrambling along the bottom, and the kingfisher diving in the quiet places. He will hear the merry gurgle of the blackbirds, the clink of the jay, the tumultuous cawing of the mating crows and the far-off screech of the hawk. He will find it stretch his legs in a long day's tramp and will come to his resting place at night honestly tired out, and with an appetite such as he has not had for months.

Or, if his dreams be of Florida, what more easy than to take a train and find himself in a day at the long white beaches where the surf thunders unceasingly, where the sun is ever bright and warm, where the waters are bluer than the sky above them, where light-winged seabirds sail and dip and where the man may turn back the pages of 20 years at once become a boy again, running barefooted over the sand or wading in the surf to capture shells or fish, winning at the same time the rest and the new strength which mean for him, in the months to come, better work and more of it than he could have done without this interval of transformation from man to boy.

The mountain climber or the big game hunter has his attack of the spring fever at other times, but it does not send him away, for he knows that his time is not yet. But he plans, oh, he plans! He orders new guns or new ice axes and new climbing shoes; he studies maps, he corresponds with guides, and, above all, he talks over the contemplated trip with his chosen companion. They discuss elk countries and sheep countries and the best way to get a bear, or they figure on unclimbed mountain peaks and talk of glaciers and crevasses and bergschrunds and couloirs and cornices. And it may be that out of all this talk and planning and making of maps more pleasure than they do at last out of the trip.

There are many to whom these outings are their sole recreation, pleasures anticipated for one-half the year and looked back on for the other half, and the number of such is constantly increasing. It ought to increase, for they who really delight in such things do better mentally and make more useful citizens than those who let themselves down to the unending round of narrow business life.

The laying aside for a time of the daily routine, the change of air, the delight of again seeing beautiful things, long known yet ever fresh, and of seeing other things which are wholly new—all these combine to pour into a man's system a new vigor which will make him when he returns to his work to do that work with an increased interest, intelligence and earnestness. From the point of view of mere dollars and cents, it is every way profitable to take two vacations each year, one in the spring and one in the fall. Such play spells pay for themselves in the better work a man by reason of them can do through the long months of cold and heat.—Forest and Stream.

WIVES WANTED.

Inducements Offered Women in Northwestern Canada.

A Scheme for Encouraging Female Emigration to a Region Where There Is a Superfunity of Bachelors.

A great deal of money has been spent by the Dominion government in the last ten years to encourage immigration to Canada, and most of the schemes, to judge by the last census, have been more or less futile. Now the chief government organ here comes forward with another project to people the great northwest. This paper, referring to a statement by the land commissioner of the Canadian Pacific railway to the effect that the great want of the northwest is more women, says that the bachelor life of the farmers in Manitoba and the northwest makes them dissatisfied; that they soon get discouraged and write to their friends in Great Britain about the cheerless, unattractive life they are leading; and that it is well known that these letters have been widely circulated in the English provincial press, and have had the effect of turning off the tide of emigrants to other shores—to the United States, Australia and South Africa.

"If these men," the paper adds, "had been mated with plucky wives, the stories of their failure would not have been written home. They would have found the life of the northwest tolerable and would have taken a pride in overcoming their difficulties. A few thousand women of the right kind would probably do more to make that country what the other provinces should be and brought to bear upon it just now. Suitable immigrants of that kind can find employment, and are not likely to have to go long without husbands."

This led to a new scheme for peopling the northwest. It was started here a few days ago, and a committee is now hard at work on the details of the plan. A preliminary meeting was held to discuss the matter, and a committee was appointed to report on the feasibility of sending girls to the northwest from the overcrowded centers of population of the older provinces of Canada. "Girls wanted" was the motto of the meeting; but, when one of the gentlemen present unwisely suggested that part of the plan was to send girls out west to make wives of them for the prairie farmers, the ladies present took up arms against the matrimonial part of the scheme. They said that this was too delicate a matter to be carried through openly objected to associating any marriage scheme with the proposed female emigration to the west. No society, it was contended, could successfully arrange matches between persons whose modes of living had been so different, and no such plan was likely to succeed. While the ladies were willing to take part in any movement to encourage the emigration of girls to the northwest, and find employment for the destitute classes of them there, they absolutely refused to have anything to do with any scheme having for its object the shipping of a train load of girls to the northwest to be married to the first comers of that part of the country. There was also the possibility of ill-mating couples, and the ladies apparently did not care to undertake the responsibility of so delicate a matter as that of matrimonial alliances among the farmers. It was soon made apparent that the matter would have to be handled very cautiously, and that if the movement succeeded the question of matrimony would have to be kept in the background and the idea of marriage left to the emigrants themselves to work out in the good old-fashioned way. Lady Aberdeen, the wife of the governor general of Canada, wrote to Dr. W. E. Mills, the organizer of the meeting, that this was one of the questions to come up for discussion at the meeting of the women's council to be held in Montreal.

S. M. Jones, secretary of the meeting, deplored the flow of girls to the cities from the country, and thought they should go to the northwest and make homes for themselves and be independent, rather than come to the overcrowded population and work for a pittance. But one of the ladies thought that the girls in the cities were not fit to make farmers' wives. Mr. Jones ventured the opinion that the organization of the meeting, that this was one of the questions to come up for discussion at the meeting of the women's council to be held in Montreal.

S. M. Jones, secretary of the meeting, deplored the flow of girls to the cities from the country, and thought they should go to the northwest and make homes for themselves and be independent, rather than come to the overcrowded population and work for a pittance. But one of the ladies thought that the girls in the cities were not fit to make farmers' wives. Mr. Jones ventured the opinion that the organization of the meeting might as well emigrate to the northwest, for the men in the cities would not marry them, anyhow, and the lady sanguinely retorted that "the girls would not marry them."

A good deal of cold water has been thrown on the scheme, but the committee is hard at work, and believes that it will accomplish something. There is certainly a great lack of the softer sex in the Canadian northwest. It is estimated that there are in that part of the dominion between 40,000 and 50,000 more males than females. The organizer of the movement, who is confident of the practicability of the scheme, recalls the days in the early history of French colonization when the French king regularly shipped boat loads of girls to become the wives of the pioneer settlers in Canada. The railways would, it is thought, furnish free transportation for any number of girls who would be induced to go to the northwest, and it is hoped that government aid will be given to the scheme. Those who are unfavorable to the movement contend that the prairie tillers of the soil in the northwest have no need for women, and that they prefer to do their own work. But there are very few who share in this opinion, and it is generally believed that the men up there know how to appreciate the companionship, sympathy and support of women.—Toronto Cor. N. Y. Sun.

A KENTUCKY BELLE.

Claims the Credit of Killing Four Men—Other Little Irregularities.

Sheriff Jarvis, of Knox county, passed through the city late one afternoon having in charge five or six prisoners en the way to Frankfort. The prisoners were placed in the watch house until the six o'clock train left.

Among the prisoners was a young woman from Knox county, apparently about 25 years old, and a typical eastern Kentucky mountain girl. Her hair was cut short and her dress was of calico made in mountain style. She was going to Frankfort for housebreaking. She was placed in a cell by herself at the station house.

She was quite talkative, and when asked her age and home by a Lexington Transcript correspondent, said: "I am jus' 25 and live in Knox county. My name is Lizzie Harris. Used to live in Wes' Virginny, but got in trouble and left there. Jes going to Frankfort now for a couple of years, but I don't care."

"Did you ever kill a man?" was asked.

"Yes, Lord, killed four. I waylaid the highway one night in Wes' Virginny and dropped three men. I strayed in the pen in that state three years. I shot my sweetheart, too, and killed him, but a lawyer named Black pleaded me out of it."

"Did you ever commit any other crime?"

"Guess I have. Broke into one or two houses, but have had luck and got out. I think I will have a nice time at Frankfort. Some nice men there, I hear. My husband left me some time ago, and I am grieving over it."

STATISTICS FOR WOMEN.

Showing Her Representation in the Useful Occupations.

A recent census bulletin dealing with the occupations of the people of the United States shows that 45 per cent. of the persons, male and female, more than ten years of age, are engaged in some gainful occupation. The total number of working people is 22,735,661, of which 18,820,950 are men and 3,914,711 women—a gain of 1,267,554 women since 1850, a rate of increase nearly 21½ times as great as the increase of working men. A study of the tables in the bulletin reveals some interesting comparisons. In 1880 there was only one woman architect in the country; in 1890 there were 14. Then there were but five lawyers; ten years later there were 208. There were 67 women clergymen in 1880; in 1890, 1,235. The number of actresses increased from 692 to 3,940; artists and teachers of art from 412 to 4,662; chemists from 24 to 337; designers, draughtsmen and inventors from 13 to 306; journalists, 35 to 888; musicians and teachers of music, 8,753 to 34,519; government officials, 414 to 4,575; physicians and surgeons, 527 to 4,555; lawyers, 208 to 1,247; dentists, 56 to 757; theater managers, showmen, etc., 100 to 634; bookkeepers, accountants, clerks and copyists, from 8,011 to 92,525; stenographers and typewriters, from 7 to 21,178; saleswomen, from 2,775 to 58,449. There were 5,000 veterinary surgeons and 46 chemists and assayers in 1890, against none of either in 1880.

SWAPPED AWAY HIS WIFE.

A Little Family Complication Amicably Arranged.

The very unusual story of swapping a daughter for a wife is reported from Toledo, Wash., says the New York World, and a man named Thompson lost his wife a short time ago. She left him a little baby girl. The child he took to a neighbor by the name of Putnam to be cared for. Of course Putnam visits were made to see how the baby was getting along.

Mrs. Putnam was quite a comely person and very soon attracted the attention of the widowed farmer. Then he soon learned to love Putnam, and, worst of all, his love was reciprocated. The husband discovered the situation. The lovers naturally expected a scene but there was none.

Instead of making the neighboring hills resound with jealous r[illegible] Putnam called upon Thompson and [illegible] discussed the matter in a business-like manner. Putnam professed to be tired of his wife and said he would as lief that some other fellow should take her away as not; but he wanted something in return. He wanted some one around the house to minister to his wants; soon one he could learn to love. Thompson had a daughter who suited him very well and, if it was just the same, he was willing to trade his wife for her. That suited Thompson and the girl, too. So a bargain was struck and the exchange made. Thompson and Mrs Putnam went to Aberdeen and the girl to Castle Rock.

Wonderful Surgery.

Medical students who are engaged in the study of ophthalmology are still talking at the feat Dr. Fleming Carrow, professor of that branch in the University of Michigan, performed upon a young man last week. This patient had completely lost the sight of one eye through disease, and, in order to prevent the trouble from spreading, Dr. Carrow inserted a small, thin watch crystal beneath the lid of the other eye. So far the experiment seems to be very successful, and it is expected that the patient will be quite lively around the watch crystal so as to permit no impurities to enter. Meanwhile the patient seems to be quite well.

Saw the Point.

It is related that Baron de Rothschild, of Paris, once called Guzman Blanco the richest man in the world. When the Venezuelan dictator protested against the compliment, Rothschild retorted: "You are surely the richest man in the world, for who else has estates comprising 500,000 square miles of territory? Who else has an income of $37,000,000? Who else has 2,000,000 slaves?" Guzman was not slow in seeing the point.

SPAIN'S POLITICAL PRISONERS.

The Tortures Inflicted Upon Suspects in the Old Moorish Town of Ceuta.

From time to time the horrors of slave-dealing and the barbarism with which prisoners are still treated in certain parts of the world have been exposed to the public. There remains yet, however, a spot within 20 miles of English territory where such terrible sufferings and hideous tortures are undergone by human beings as to be almost incredible. This is at Ceuta, an old Moorish town in Morocco surrounded by a chain of fortresses which make it almost impregnable.

The place was built by the Moors in 945, on the side of the ancient mountain Abyla. All the fiendish ingenuity of which they were masters was exerted to invent and construct as many solitary dungeons and horrible torture-chambers as possible. Just as it was in those dark ages, with as many improvements as were added before the Spaniards took possession in 1840, so it is to this day.

The town to Spain is what Siberia is to Russia, but infinitely more horrible. Here political prisoners and persons whom the government suspects are transported. As a rule the "suspects" are prominent and respected citizens, who, however, have committed no crime, and against whom no charge can be brought. No suspicious papers have been found in their possession; they have no secret weapons; they have neither made rebellious speeches nor encouraged insurrection.

Since they have committed no crime they cannot be tried in the orthodox manner, nor can they be executed. Nevertheless, they are dangerous—they must be put out of the way. Therefore, they are spirited to Ceuta, given in charge of the governor of Ceuta, where they will be safe. The dungeons are hewn out of the solid rock beneath the fortress, and run in tiers 50 or 60 feet deep. They measure on an average eight feet square. The entrance is made through a door in the floor of the fortress, down long, winding stairs. The dungeons line either side of damp alleys, the only openings being a small hole about a foot from the ground.

It is through this hole, enlarged for the occasion, that the prisoner enters his cell, followed by armed keepers and a blacksmith. He is thrown on his back and chains are welded from his ankles into the solid rock. The keepers then withdraw and the hole is blocked up with fresh masonry. The dungeon is reeking with damp, is infested with vermin and absolutely dark. Scanty scraps of food are occasionally passed through the opening by the keepers.

For a month or so the prisoner is left to rot in the dungeon without seeing a human face. Naked and starved he crouches in the darkest corner, awaiting death. At the end of a year's time the keepers and blacksmith enter with the cell to see whether the captive is still alive, and that the chains are in good condition, possibly to add fresh ones.—Chicago News.

THIRTY-EIGHT YEARS OVER 100.

Time Seems to Have No Effect on This Man of Kourmia.

Ivan Feodoroviteh Kouzmin is, according to the Russian authorities, the oldest man in the world. This seems a rather broad statement, but the records are there to show that Ivan first saw the light of day on October 21 (old style), 1757, which would make him 138 years of age next birthday. One hundred and thirty-eight years of age!

Late last September George Lomonosoff, a member of the Moskowski Viedomosti editorial staff, happened to stop at a wayside inn near the village of Dukovy, in the government of Kostrama, and there met an aged son of Ivan and became interested. Having satisfied himself that Ivan Kouzmin, for he it was, was telling the truth about his age and having obtained some data as to the aged peasant's probable birthplace, Lomonosoff set to work to discover, if possible, the entry of his baptism.

This required an unusual amount of labor and research, but finally the church where this ceremony took place was found and the archives containing the entry were brought to light. There was the full name and the date, and, moreover, the name of the father, the officiating priest to the effect that God had blessed the child with the holy sign of the cross beneath the right shoulder blade, and this marked him for his future career. A subsequent examination of old Ivan's body revealed this peculiar mark, a growth of warty substance, slightly resembling the Greek cross seen on the cupolas of all churches of the eastern orthodox faith.

So there could be no mistake about it! Ivan Feodoroviteh Kouzim was 137 years of age! The records showed it, and his own words told the story still more eloquently. Here was a veteran, who, though entirely illiterate, and barely able to understand more than the requirements of a peasant's daily routine, could, in his leisure moments, recall the happenings of a century ago. He had seen the days of Peter the Great, quickly benefitted by this sudden bound into fame.—N. Y. World.

A Boy's Rapid and Fatal Growth.

Patrick Casey, a young Bridgeport boy, in the middle of August last was five feet high. He then began to shoot upward, and kept at it until the middle of the following October, when he was six feet three inches. This was an average of a quarter of an inch a day, or nearly seven feet a year. His age then was 17 years. Casey was unable to withstand this enormous strain upon his constitution and he died the following November. Before his death his hair turned from red to jet black. The physicians accounted for the change on the theory that the tincture of iron that had given to him as a tonic had entered into the blood and acted upon the hair. His case puzzled the doctors, but no autopsy was held on the remains, owing to the objections of the family.—Boston Post.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and thus to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

EXAMS. AT THE HIGH SCHOOL.

The Students Made Aware of Time When the Tests Will Be Made.

For several years past the examinations have been sprung upon the High School students without the slightest warning. This method of the faculty was not appreciated by the students, but the change that has been made in this is greatly enjoyed by every pupil. Now the examinations are all announced nearly one month ahead, thus giving the students time to brush up all their subjects in the correct way and order. The final examinations will occur this year as follows: June 2d, the classes in Roman history, English history, English Literature and Greek, Xenphon will be examined; June 5th, the examinations will be in rhetoric, higher English and chemistry; June 9th is the day for examinations in beginning Latin, junior Cicero, senior Cicero, Greek, bookkeeping and geology; June 12th, those scholars taking first Greek, third Greek, physics, and English literature will be examined; June 19th the last of the examinations will be held and will be in geometry, arithmetic, algebra, third year, and algebra and geometry, fourth year.

On Friday, May 29th, the Kappa Delta Phi will hold its regular monthly business meeting for the election of officers and for the transaction of any other business which may come properly before them. After this meeting the society will adjourn indefinitely. The object of this meeting is to leave the society in good condition with some officers, a few of whom will surely return next year, to call the society together in the fall.

STRUCK BY A TROLLEY CAR.

Several Persons in the Collision, But No One Was Hurt.

Trolley accidents have been very few and far between in this city, but one of the few happened Wednesday on West Front street, near Madison avenue. The carriage of John W. Murray, Sr., of West Eighth street, driven by Mr. Murray himself, was crossing the car tracks when the trolley car struck the carriage from behind, generally demolishing the rear wheels. Mr. Murray's daughter, Mrs. Townsend Rehmore, of Stelle avenue, and her little son, were also in the carriage. Mr. Murray says that he was driving across the track when he was run into, while the motorman claims that the carriage backed directly into the path of the car without the driver giving any notice. No one was hurt, and the horse which was badly frightened was led away by O. Q. Packer's stable on Madison avenue.

A Floral Presentation.

The attendance at the last meeting of the Parliamentary Club for the season, held this morning at the Y. M. C. A., was unusually large and considerable interest was manifested in the proceedings. Mrs. Cahoone, Mrs. Eaton, Mrs. J. D. Titsworth and Miss Bessie Brower read papers regarding foreign affairs, and Mrs. Cooley and Mrs. McGee delivered papers on art. At the close of the business Mrs. Cooley, in a few well-chosen words, presented Miss Yates, the president, with a handsome bouquet on behalf of the club as a mark of esteem for efficiency and faithfulness. Miss Yates responded by thanking the members for their kindly remembrance.

MISSES MARSH'S MUSICALE.

A Pleasing Programme Rendered by Their Pupils.

There was a highly pleased audience at the musicale given by the Misses Marsh and their pupils in vocal and instrumental music at their home, 915 Madison avenue, Thursday afternoon. The selections were well rendered and showed that considerable progress had been made by the pupils. After the enjoyable programme, refreshments were served and all enjoyed a period of sociability. The programme was as follows:

COUNTY ENDEAVORERS.

Officers Chosen for the Year at Elizabeth Yesterday.

About sixteen junior Christian Endeavor Superintendents of Union county met in the Greystone Presbyterian church, Elizabeth, Thursday afternoon and listened to two papers delivered by Miss Mabel Prudden, of Plainfield, and Mrs. Langstroth, of Rahway. An informal discussion followed, after which it was decided to hold the next meeting at Roselle, Thursday, July 30th, when papers will be read by Miss Wolfrez, Mrs. Atman and Mrs. Clard, of Elizabeth.

In the evening at the same place the County Christian Endeavor Union met and listened to an address by Rev. Mr. Francis, of Westfield. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mr. Humphreys, Elizabeth; first vice-president, Fred Williams, Rahway; second vice-president, Fred Smith, Plainfield; secretary, A. B. Wilson, Rahway; treasurer, J. M. Hawkins, Plainfield.

The county banner was awarded to the German Moravian Society, of Elizabeth. They have twelve members and all were present. The meeting closed with a consecration service, led by Rev. Mr. Kerr, of Elizabeth. The retiring president, E. E. Anthony, of this city, introduced the new president during the evening.

Borough Realty Changes.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded in the Somerset County Clerk's office during the last week: Mountain Park Land Company to Henrietta B. Herring, $700; Peter Struve et ux to Chas. Schwed et ux to Catharine Goodman et al, $25; Annette Beeching and husband to Jeanette V. Boehm, $1,400; Sarah J. French and husband to Hobert E. Rider, $100.

MAY EVENT IN SOCIETY.

RECEPTION GIVEN BY MR. AND MRS. RANDOLPH STELLE LAST NIGHT.

Marked by the Absence of Formality and the Geniality of the Host and Hostess—Guests Who Were Present.

The grandeur of Plainfield's society people was never more resplendent than Tuesday when they gathered at the charming home of Mr. and Mrs. Randolph M. Stelle, who were recently married in honor of the event. The home was graced by wealth, beauty and culture, and the entire absence of formality in every particular made the event a happy one.

The genial manner of the host was only equalled by the personal charm of the hostess whose introduction into Plainfield's society was thereby made. During congratulations, Rogers' orchestra rendered a selection of classical music which gave additional charm to the event. A number of the guests sought the spacious veranda where they enjoyed their supper amid the cooling breeze.

There were no special decorations, save here and there a cluster of beautiful roses, while the dining table had for its attraction a large bowl of roses.

The following guests offered congratulations during the evening. Rev. Dr. and Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, Miss Ida Yerkes, Miss Grace Yerkes, Mayor and Mrs. Alex. Gilbert, Councilman and Mrs. Harold Serrell, ex Councilman. F. E. Marsh, Miss Florence Marsh, Miss Anna Marsh, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. White, Miss White, Miss Martine, James E. Martine, Mrs. Clifton Wharton, Jr., J. H. P. Wharton, ex-Mayor and Mrs. Geo. W. Rockfellow, Miss Halloway, Counsellor and Mrs. W. K. McClure, the Misses McClure, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, Dr. F. C. Ard, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Ashley Grace, Miss Randolph, Mrs. Suydam, Miss Anna Bolce, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Runyon, Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Waring, Col. and Mrs. Sterling, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Yerkes, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Waring, Mr. and Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, L. W. Serrell, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Randolph, ex-Mayor and Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Kimball, W. B. Cock, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Biglow, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Randolph, Mrs. Sims, Mrs. Probasco, Miss Lawrence, Mr. Lawrence, Mrs. and Julia R. Stelle, James Leonard, Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Shreve, of Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Mathey, Mrs. J. L. Mathey, H. C. Mathey, E. Mathey, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Stillman, of Hoboken; Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Mathey, of Cranford; Mr. and Mrs. J. J. F. Randolph, Miss Sally B. Morse, D. R. Morse, F. R. Morse, Miss Mabel F. Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. H. Fisk, of Brooklyn; Mrs. Sarah Dodge, of Boston; Miss Mathey, of Staten Island, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. M. Sandford, Miss C. R. Yates, F. H. Andrews and Wm. L. McClure.

FOR THE HELP OF A MISSIONARY.

Warren Chapel Endeavorers Contribute to a Good Cause.

The Junior Y. P. S. C. E., of Warren chapel, held an entertainment last night in the chapel which was attended by an audience that completely filled the large room. The entertainment was given for the benefit of Miss Rachael Mair, who is laboring in Africa as a missionary.

The programme was a very pleasing one and consisted of scripture reading and prayer by Rev. J. O. McKelvey; song by the young people, "Brightest and Best;" dialogue, "The House that May Built," by a number of members of the society; recitation, "The Foot That Gets Tired," Frankie Whitely; song, "I will tell Jesus," by the Juniors; recitation, "Nellie's Gift," Clara King; talk, Rev. J. O. McKelvey; song, "Bless Our Mission Band," by the society; recitation, "Little Boy Blue," Frankie Whitely; drill and recitations, "Spring Cleaning," by girls from the Junior society. The programme closed with the singing of a hymn.

A BIRTHDAY SOCIAL.

The Approaching Storm Dispersed the Affair at an Early Hour.

The thunder rolled in the distance, and, in consequence, the attendance at the "birthday" social of the Sunday School of the Monroe Avenue chapel was comparatively small, but those that did brave the threatening storm had a very pleasant evening. A programme was rendered in the first part of the evening, which consisted of a piano duet by the Misses Etta and Edna Phillips, recitations by Miss Edith L. Burt and Walter L. McGee, and a vocal solo by Miss Ada Rogers. Then followed the birthday offering by months. November furnished the largest collection, $5.49. The total amount was $25.50.

The refreshments next occupied the attention of those present. They were served by a committee of which Miss Georgie Beekman was chairman. The thunder became quite demonstrative while the lightning also suggested a coming storm. There was a general exodus to reach home before the storm arrived and the social broke up rather suddenly.

THE ALUMNI RECEPTION

HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES OF '95 AND '96 ARRANGE AN EVENT.

The Reception to the Graduating Class Will Be Held in the Casino—Invitations to Be Limited to 400 Guests.

The commencement reception of the High School given every year to the graduating class by the two preceding classes, is the only annual social event recognized by the Board of Education. Until last year the reception has been given in one of the public school buildings. Last year the reception to the class of '95 was held in the Casino and it proved a great success. Only a limited number of invitations were issued and the great crowds of the previous years were done away with. This year this new precedent will be followed, and the reception to the class of '96 will be held in the Casino on the evening of Tuesday, June 25th. So it was decided at a joint meeting of the classes of '94 and '95, held last evening at the High School.

Miss Mary Howe Miller, president pro tem of the class of '94, presided at the meeting, and both classes were well represented. It was the opinion of all that the reception should be held at the Casino and then details were arranged. The number of guests was limited to 400. Each member of the two receiving classes will receive four invitations and each of the graduates four. The assessment was decided upon, and the money appropriated to the different uses. A financial committee, consisting of John V. Beekman, Jr., '95, chairman; Norman H. Probasco, '94, and Albert E. Woltmann, '94, was appointed to supervise the collection of the money and arrange other necessary matter. The other committees appointed were as follows: Casino, Edgar I. Serrell, '95; decoration, Miss Emma V. Fish, '94, chairman; the Misses Etta Bayhert, '95, Alice Needham, '94, Helen C. Hazen, '95, Henry B. Drake, '96, Fred W. Goddard, '94, and Geo. A. Horne, '95; printing, Charles B. Morse, '95, chairman; Thomas D. Blair, '95, and Edward O. Clark, '95; music, Miss Mary Howe Miller, '94. The meeting then adjourned and a consultation followed. An opportunity will be given members of the alumni to secure invitations.

A DELIGHTFUL AFFAIR.

THE MAY FESTIVAL AT THE M. E CHURCH LAST NIGHT.

The Ladies Aid Society Conduct the Event With Their Usual Dash of Completeness—To Whom Credit is Due.

May has almost gone but the May festival, held in Vincent chapel last Monday, was by no means out of season. It was a delightful affair and the Ladies Aid Society of the First M. E. church, under whose auspices it was given, increased their reputation of successful entertainers.

The decorations were not elaborate but very pretty and were principally about the booths. The lemonade booth was a veritable bower of ferns, while ferns and bunting were artistically arranged about the flower table.

The attendance was not as large as it would have been had the evening been a clear one but those who did come felt amply repaid. A delicious supper was served early in the evening and then followed a musical feast furnished by the Schubert ladies orchestra. Ice-cream and strawberries were an enjoyable part of the evening's programme as was also the candy table.

When so much work is done, there is always somebody that deserve lots of credit and in this case the somebodies were numerous. The entire affair was under the supervision of Mrs. L. M. French as general chairman, Mrs. H. A. McGee, the president of the society, added materially in making the affair the great success it was.

The flower booth was looked after by the following committee: Mrs. Samuel Clark, Mrs J. R. Joy, Miss Whitney, Miss Bertha Whiting, Miss Harriet French and Miss Tautum. The candy table was under the charge of Mrs. Charles L. Lyman, Miss Chandler, Miss Edna French, Miss Daydee Douglass, Miss Margeretta Barnes and Miss Elsie Horne. The committee to look after the cakes and their table consisted of Mrs. J. P. Homan, Mrs. S. C. Baker, Mrs. N. Y. Hull, Mrs. J. Hervey Doane, Mrs. C. H. Rugg and Mrs. J. P. Humble. The chocolate room was presided over by Mrs. J. W. Jackson, Mrs. J. C. Peck and Mrs. G. H. Whitney. Miss Lucie Palmer Davis, Miss Ethel Simmonds, and the Misses Davies had charge of the lemonade booth. That very necessary committee, the supper committee, was composed of Mrs. Garret Q. Packer, Mrs. N. W. Pike, Mrs. J. N. McNaughton, Miss Terrill, Mrs. I. L. McVoy, Mrs. Edward Winter, Mrs. D. E. Davis, Miss Susie Jackson, Miss Smalley, Miss Laura Mulford and Miss Roberts. The waitresses were the Misses Cory, Eva Jenkins, Alice Jenkins, Bessie Day, Bertha Jenkins, Maud French, Bertha Moore, Edna Harris and Nellie Chandler. Miss Minnie Sharp looked after the ice cream.

GENESIS OF A "CRANK."

The Effect of Large Ideas Upon Small Minds.

One of the most interesting of psychological studies, impressive to the Century, is the effect of a large idea upon a small mind. A large idea entering a large mind balances and dignifies it; its effect upon a small mind is often comprehensive. The idea becomes intellectually too heavy and unsteady.

When one becomes observant of this phenomenon he finds much to amuse and again much to deplore. He is amused, for instance, to notice the result it has had upon the thoughts a long career. Where a subject is thus acted upon by a succession of ideas, each embodying an important truth which the man is incapable of carrying, his receptivity to impression proves to be his bane. The sudden realization for the first time of a fundamental principle makes a monomaniac of him. Another sudden realization of still another fundamental principle and he is spining around on the principle.

But there are times when this effect of large ideas upon little minds is most mischievous and deplorable. Thus is bred the race of incurable cranks in philosophy, theology, art and politics. The word "crank" has been maliciously misused for purposes of cynical ridicule, but it is too descriptive a name to be set aside. The congenial crank is always started on his career of infinitity by the application of a big idea to a small brain. The most tiring thing about him is his self-complacency, owing to his knowledge of the fact that better men have been miscalled by his own accurately descriptive cognomen.

APPLICATION OF A FABLE.

A Sheep's Skin Hides the Form of a Human Wolf.

The story of the wolf who clothed himself in a lion's skin in order to pass himself off as the king of beasts is well known, but the tale of the thief who got inside a sheep's skin to be better able to carry on his nefarious trade is new to the readers of the London Telegraph. Early one morning two policemen, who were on duty at the slaughter houses of Paris, were astonished to see a sheep endeavoring to effect an entrance into the inclosure where creatures of its kind were destined when a man's shand protruded from beneath the stolen fleece. Their curiosity became intensified and they carefully followed the sham animal, who stopped at the pen which inclosed the fat cattle, and with great coolness chose the two largest and fattest of the flock.

Still observed by the watchful guardians of the law, this plagiarist of an ancient fable proceeded to lead out his up his capture, and was on the point of making off with his booty when he found himself in turn the spoil of the law and was quickly marched off to the police station, where he gave his name as Eugene Lamotte, and his account be made a good living out of his occupation by selling the meat to various butchers. For some time, at least, it is to be hoped, that the animals at the abattoirs will start to bleat on their earlier death by the depredations of this latest wolf in sheep's clothing.

THE LETTER "T."

A French Graphologist Says That It Indicates the Writer's Character.

A French graphologist has discovered that character can be read from the letter "t" alone. He claims that the vertical line represents the fatality of life, and the horizontal bar the influence of human will exercises upon this fatality.

In addition, he claims that the higher part of the vertical line—that projecting above the horizontal bar—has indications of the amount of fatality contained in the character of the writer, and that the inferior part of this line corresponds to the practical and material part of the man's character.

For instance, the optimist crosses his t's with a line that slopes upward from the earth to the sky, as a rule. The poet often crosses his t's quite above the vertical line; in other words, in the sky.

The pessimist crosses his t's with downward sloping stroke. The line which commences at the ideal portion of the letter, descends little by little until it is lost among the sad realities of earthly existence.

The practical man it appears, always strikes a middle course, and crosses his t's neither in the ideal nor in the material, but exactly midway between the two.

Snowballs Rolled by the Wind.

Passengers on the Flint River division of the Flint & Pere Marquette railroad who came to Flint, Mich., recently reported observing a strange phenomenon in the snow, level fields not far from the city, says the Chicago Tribune. Hundreds of snowballs, some of them of colossal size, have been rolled together, it is thought, by the action of the wind. The fields were covered with them, and nature accomplished in one night what it would take a large force of boys several days to do.

He Never Drank.

Old Mr. B——, who lived in Bangor several years ago, was called "very close," but grasping as he was he never would accept intoxicating liquor of any kind. One day he was asked to drink by some of his neighbors at the village store, where drinks were sold at ten cents each. "No, I thank ye," he replied; "I never drink, gentlemen. But if it's all the same to you I'll take a gimlet instead."

A Dog with Artificial Teeth.

It is said that a dog in Mulliken, Mich., possesses and uses daily a full set of artificial teeth. The dog is very old, and is a family pet. When it lost its teeth recently its owner, according to the story, had the local dentist make the animal a full set of teeth, and they are said to be a perfect working success.

A CASE OF TELEPATHY.

The Old Lady Appeared in a Vision at the Time of Her Death.

A gentleman in a house in Ireland for six months, and was accompanied thither by his wife and daughters, says the Realm. The house was furnished, and had plenty of bedrooms. Therefore, it was decided not to use a certain large, long room, which, being situated on one side (which had all been locked and sealed up with tape), in which things belonging to the owners of the house had been put away. One evening one of the daughters, going up to her room, saw an old lady in a shawl walking along the passage in front of her. The old lady appeared to know her way and hurried on without hesitation into the unused room. The girl called her sister, and they followed the dame into the room. But all was silent; no one was there; the dust lying about showed no signs of footprints.

Shortly after the same young lady was reading on the hearthrug by firelight. Looking up she beheld the old lady in the doorway watching her. Greatly frightened, she sprang up and, rushing downstairs, was found fainting at the drawing-room door. At last the family returned to Dublin. One day, however, the gentleman had a curious incident which I have narrated was referred to. The young lady very unwillingly told her experience. The visitor seemed very much struck and asked for a accurate description of the old lady. "For," said she, "this house belonged to two old ladies, sisters, and when they left their house they went to reside at Geneva. One of them, answering exactly to the description you have given, died at the time you saw her appear."

SUFFERING FROM THIRST.

Feelings Described by a Wyoming Man with an Experience.

No one can comprehend the tortures of a person who suffers from real thirst. A Wyoming man who was lost on the plains describes his sensations in a vivid manner. It was before noon when he began his journey over a desert strip, and before night his horse had fallen dead and he had drained his canteen. Then he laid down and tried to sleep, but he soon awoke in the agonies of thirst. "I couldn't cry out," he said, "because my tongue was numb and useless from the pain. When morning came I just beheld the outlines of a wagon in the distance. With a superhuman effort I gave a shriek and then I knew no more. When I regained consciousness I was on a bunch of hay near a fire, and two or three men were looking at me. I learned later that my scream had been heard by a party of prospectors, who were skirting the desert in search of water, and who, on to the Montana cattle trail, and that at first they thought it was some wild animal, but one of the party insisted on a search, as he had heard a man make just such a noise before he died of thirst. I was delirious for six weeks before I recovered completely, and I haven't been more than a mile away from water, and plenty of it, since."

THE COMETS.

Big Ones That Have Come Close to Our Sphere.

From all that is known of Perrin's comet, it does not seem, says the New York Sun, to be one of the largest of its kind. A very brilliant comet appeared in 1769 with a tail 40,000,000 miles in length, and passed within 2,000,000 miles of the earth without hurting anyone.

The comet of 1811 was computed by Herschel to be 100,000,000 miles in length and 15,000,000 in breadth. It remained visible to the naked eye for several months.

Biela's comet, which many persons feared would strike the earth, first appeared in 1826; it came back twice afterward, and then vanished.

Donati's comet, with a tail 40,000,000 miles long, was first seen in 1858, when it was 238,000,000 miles from the earth. It nearly ran into Venus, but did not.

The great comet of 1861 traveled at the rate of 10,000,000 miles every 24 hours and many persons thought that its tail came in contact with the earth June 30 of that year, there being on that day "a phosphorescent auroral glare."

Much of the knowledge of the composition of comets is due to the late Prof. Henry Draper, who was very successful in making photographs of several of them.

ANCIENT MANUSCRIPTS.

Astor Library Has $200,000 Worth of Them—Gems of the Collection.

There are $200,000 worth of ancient manuscripts in the Astor library, but the oldest of these, says the New York World, is the Evangelistarium, which is said to have been expressly executed for Charles the Bald, the grandson of Charlemagne. He was a patron of the fine arts, and was especially fond of embellished manuscripts. This rare and precious manuscript is written on fine vellum, the binding of which cost 400 pages. The first four pages have splendid full-length miniatures of the four evangelists, profusely illuminated with liquid gold and emerald green, shaded with red and white on an em purpled ground, the pictures covering the entire page.

This superb manuscript was secured some 15 years ago by the late Mr. Astor, from the famous London bibliophile, Bernard Quaritch, who catalogued it in 1890 at $5,000. There are more costly manuscripts in the Astor library—for instance, the Antiphonaire of Charles X., for which I am assured the late J. J. Astor paid $10,000. But this old manuscript of Charles the Bald has, as an antique, no rival.

Mammoth Rings.

In India at the time of the British occupation foliated rings were fashionable. They were so large that when worn on the second finger they covered almost all the outer portion of the hand.

HUMOROUS.

—"In battle musicians are always kept in the rear." "That's not fair. Many of them richly deserve killing."—Chicago Record.

—Next.—"I wonder what part of a man's costume the new woman will adopt next?" "Probably the frock coat."—Detroit Free Press.

—She (fishing)—"I know, Alfred, I have my faults." He—"Oh, certainly." She (angrily)—"Indeed? Perhaps you'll tell me what they are?"—Tit-Bits.

—Flora—"Chollie told me last night that he believed I could break a man's heart with my smile." Laura—"Chollie was just talking. A man's heart is not like a mirror."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

—The natural history class will now write down the names of 12 aretis animals," said the teacher in monotonous tones. Little Johnnie dashed off the following and handed his slate proudly to the teacher: "Six seals, five polar bears and one walrus."—N. Y. Evening Sun.

—Papa (busy with his accounts)—"I wish you wouldn't read aloud, Rachel. You disturb me." Miss Rachel—"This is the morning paper, papa. I'm reading 'Notes and Society.'" Papa—"So am I, child, and I've got some here that are awfully hard to collect."—Chicago Tribune.

—"That last load of coal you sent," said Mr. Slopay, with a most impressive manner, "was more than half slate." Yerbup, the coal merchant, retorted: the coal man, with much spirit, "that you said, after you had ordered it, 'just slate this, will you?'"—Indianapolis Journal.

—The latest device of a Paris paper for attracting readers is the engagement of two eminent physicians to attend gratuitously upon its yearly subscribers. Recently the manager of the paper gave notice to one of the physicians "not to prescribe for X any more; his subscription has expired." The doctor replied: "So has X."—Tit-Bits.

BOORISHNESS ON THE RAIL.

Theories of the Cold Treatment of Fellow-Passengers by Men of Assured Incomes.

What is it that makes a decent man turn boor as soon as he enters a railroad car? If there were 30 double seats in a car and 30 men entered it each would sit by himself. Let him, if he chooses. But let the 31st man come in and ask "Is this seat engaged?" and the chances are that every answer he gets will be "Yes."

The other day a Hartford man bound for Boston asked six men who were sitting alone if the seats beside them were taken. Each answered "Yes," and yet five of the six rode clear through alone. Indeed, this habit has grown so that, if a passenger moves along to make room for you, you look him over pretty carefully before you'll trust yourself with him, for fear he is a pickpocket. His unnatural demonstration of hospitality invites suspicion.

And this disposition of man to sit alone seems to be a matter of sex. Women do not behave that way—at least not in steamcars. In trolleys it would be useless. On one side of the car, but, after three, or even four, have gone, there's no more room, not even for another woman, than there was before. The remaining eight somehow spread out and manage so as to look more crowded than before. But in the steamcar the average woman, especially if she has with her a big bundle, a baby, or a restless child, will take a half-seat with you even if there's a whole seat vacant near by.

There are some men to whom this fate comes whenever they travel. It may be due to a Christian gentleness that beams in their eyes, but it may also be due to their manner that they can't conceal. At all events, they have the company, and, generally, before long, the bundle or the child is in their laps and they submit. One reason is that they have the appearance of being able to.

Maybe the cold treatment that one man gives another in the cars is his method of getting even for the way that women impose upon him. That is a plausible explanation and it's the only one I've heard. Nor does this do away with the charge of boorishness. That can't be done away with, for it's there.—Hartford Courant.

Prehistoric Literature in America.

The only evidence that has ever been found going to show that the prehistoric aborigines of America had a written language was discovered for the first time in the year 1891. In the summer of that year Profs. Shaler and Warren, the former of Yale college, made a thorough exploration of what is known as Great Spring cave, in the Sequatchie valley, state of Tennessee, and therein found incontrovertible evidence that the pachistoric Americans were a race of civilized beings, possessing a literature and an alphabet. In one of the galleries of the cave they found the body of a human being, transformed to stone by the salts and silica in the dripping water, and near by a large oval slab, upon which were carved 467 words. In all these words, some of which contained nine and ten letters, only 32 different characters were used, proving conclusively that their alphabet was one of 32 letters only.—St. Louis Republic.

Prize Place for Quail.

"Any quail on your neighborhood?" inquired a tourist who was about to register as a western Texas hotel.

"Quail!" said the proprietor, with an indulgent smile, "they have got to be a nuisance. A cook complains that she can't throw a piece of refuse toast out of the back window but four or five fat quails fight to see which one shall be down on it."—Texas Sifter.

Ambiguous.

The inscription painted on a board adorns a fence in Kent:

"Nouis—If any man's or woman's cows get into these hare otes his or her tail will be cut off as the case may be."—Toronto Register.

THE SPOTS ON THE SUN.

What the Scientists Think About Their Influence on Our Weather.

The vexed question of the influence of sun-spots on the weather seems to be as far from settlement to-day as it was ten or twenty years ago, says the Youth's Companion. So great an authority as Lord Kelvin has recently expressed a doubt as to whether the coincidences noticed by students of this subject are not, after all, deceptive and misleading. Other investigators, however, continue to think that a real connection exists between the spottedness of the sun and the condition of the weather on the earth.

Among the latest contributions to our knowledge on the subject are those made by Mr. W. L. Dallas, who has investigated the weather records kept from 1856 to 1879 on board ships in the Bay of Bengal, and by Dr. P. Polis, who has reviewed the records of 64 years at Aix-la-Chappelle. Mr. Dallas concludes that, as far as the Bay of Bengal is concerned, the best is greatest when sun-spots are most numerous. Dr. Polis, on the other hand, finds that at Aix-la Chappelle the warmest seasons formerly coincided with the smallest number of sun-spots, but that since 1878 a change has apparently occurred and now it is hottest when the sun is most spotted. Dr. Polis also finds that the number of thunder storms generally increases with a decrease of the sun-spots.

These facts and inferences are particularly interesting just now, because from this time on we are likely to see the sun-spots rapidly decreasing in size and number for several years to come.

TWO REASONS.

The Judge's Able Support of His Own Decision.

At a circuit court held some years ago in a western state an action of ejectment was tried by the court without a jury. The case rendered was couched in such a way that it caused considerable amusement.

The suit was brought, says the Youth's Companion, by a religious society to recover possession of a cemetery. One witness was a physician in active practice, who, as one of a committee appointed by the church, had bought the ground for the use of the society.

Afterward he severed his connection with the society, and it was found that he had taken the title in his own name, and intended to appropriate the premises for his private use. The defendant insisted that he had bought the ground in his own right after his relations to the society had ceased.

The court, after hearing the evidence and arguments, proceeded to state the grounds for his decision, and ordered judgment for the plaintiff. Whereupon the defendant's counsel arose, and asked the court to state more fully the reasons for the decision.

"Certainly," said his honor, promptly "first as you have heard what I have said, I have only two additional reasons to give: One is that the church seems to need a cemetery, and the other that the doctor has failed to show that his practice is sufficiently large to make it necessary for him to keep a burying ground of his own."

HARDWOOD FOR BATS.

One Concern Consumes Two Million Feet of Timber This Way.

The correspondent for the Northwestern Lumberman at Grand Rapids, Mich., says there is a concern in that city that probably makes more bats than any other in the country. This year the output will be 288,000, a record that has not been broken since 1889, when 316,800 were turned out. The best bats are made of second ground second white ash; ordinary ones of common white ash, while very cheap bats—such as the boys play out on the commons with—of maple and basswood. These latter are run through an automatic lathe at the rate of 1,400 a day, while the larger bats are turned by hand. A small quantity of "willow" bats are made of poplar. Twenty years ago about half the bats were poplar, but the style has changed. Some of the crack players will not condescend to use a bat that has not gone to the factory and have bats of the size and weight they desire made for them. If we figure it will be found that this Grand Rapids factory alone will consume about 2,000,000 feet of hard wood a year in the manufacture of ball bats. The others all told will consume a good deal more than that. Therefore, when you see a baseball player with his fingers knocked askew you can reflect that the sport and fun he is having calls for several hundred carloads of hardwood lumber annually.

Phosphorescent Diamonds.

An expert in gems has lately called attention to a property in the diamond which has not hitherto been fully appreciated. Robert Boyle mentions a diamond that became phosphorescent simply by the warmth of the hand, absorbed light on being held near a candle, and emitted light on being briskly rubbed. Observations by Mr. Kunz, the gem expert, confirm Boyle's statement that diamonds become phosphorescent in the dark after exposure to sunlight or electric light by being rubbed on wood, cloth or metal. This property is an important one, as it will help the non-expert to distinguish between the true diamond and other hard stones, as well as imitations, some of which is said to exhibit this phenomenon.

Beats a Good Wife.

Courtship and marriage are recognized targets for witticisms, of which Mr. Punch's famous "Don't" is undoubtedly the most brilliant example of a happy answer. Most of them are of the same cynical character. A careworn divine is reported to have said, in reply to the ecstatic declaration of an intending benedict that "nothing in the world beats a good wife," "Ah, yes; a bad husband often does and vice versa!"

The Constitutionalist.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

It seems as though we are living in an era of fatalities just at present.

Elias S. Ward, of Newark, denies that he is a candidate for the Republican Senatorial nomination in Essex county. He has only one political ambition, and that is to be Governor.

It is settled that Franklin Murphy will succeed himself as chairman of the Republican State committee, and that John Kean will be the treasurer, to succeed Colonel John J. Toffey.

Speaking of the report that Plainfield girls smoke cigarettes, the New York Tribune says:

If that be true it would seem to be the duty of Plainfield's moral vigilantes to organize a crusade. They could begin with a mass meeting and have James G. Blaine, the "Farmer Orator," deliver a Ciceronian appeal to the girls.

Here is the progressive west: Judge Horton, of the Cook County Circuit Court, declares that the old-fashioned custom of flogging in the public schools should be revived, in order to reduce the number of juvenile criminals in Chicago.

The merchants in nearly all the towns and cities of New Jersey have inaugurated the early closing hours for the summer months. What a graceful action it would be towards the hard-working clerks if Plainfield merchants would follow suit.

Such events as the bicycle races of the Crescent Wheelmen last Saturday cannot but be beneficial to the progress of the city. Plainfield looked her prettiest at this time, and with the good roads, beautiful residences, hospitable people and generous air of up-to-dateness, the thousands of visitors must have left town with a most favorable impression.

Ex-Senator Fred C. Marsh has appeared as the champion of dog rights. Genial Fred thinks that the canine is a much maligned animal, and that to muzzle them is a high breach of the humane law, for the dog, as a rule, is meek and faithful, and bent on minding its own business. The muzzle, he claims, makes more dogs mad than the heat, and in Elizabeth, where he lives, a public meeting has been held asking the Common Council to strike out the ordinance compelling the use of these instruments of torture for the bow wows during the summer months.

The editor of the North avenue paper intimated last night that the story printed in these columns last Saturday of the work done by the gamblers following the Hunting Tercus, was untrue. What a pity those gamblers would have had with the deacon's kids!—News.

There is no fear that The News employes would provide a picnic for anyone looking for money. In the first place, Editor Runyon pays nothing but sweat shop wages, thus making sure that his employes only have sufficient to eke out an existence; and in the second place, the slave driving methods which he maintains allows the employes no time to attend circuses or the like.

From present prospects it looks as though the Democratic party will be badly split up in the National convention over the money question, as from current reports leading party leaders all over the country the sentiment for free coinage seems to equal or exceed the gold standard idea of the Eastern States. This morning the New York Times publishes despatches from every State in which the currency situation of the party is summed up, and from Trenton the following is sent:

The New Jersey delegation to Chicago is pledged to stand upport of the strong gold plank in the Democratic State platform. The delegates will be controlled by the prevailing sentiment among the Democrats. They have expressed themselves as a unit for sound money and would resist the adoption of a silver plank. Democrats say, however, they would be likely to favor the nomination of a gold-standard man. The Democrats of New Jersey are almost unanimous on the subject of sound money. A few Democrats in Warren and Hunterdon counties are talking silver, but they were formerly members of the People's Party and Farmers' Alliance.

These are words of wisdom from the paper read by Mrs. Frank Hall, of Montclair, on "Town Improvement Associations," at the National Federation of Woman's Clubs in Louisville:

As women are the keepers of the home, so let them also be watchful and care over the surroundings of that home. All that is conducive to healthfulness, sanitation, order and beauty in the city, town or village in which they reside, and where their children are being housed and fed, should be of the utmost importance to them, and of greater moment? One of the first benefits derived by women in this work is that they gradually lose sight of the narrow limits of home life and advance to the far higher altruistic plane, where the welfare of the association one important fact must be kept firmly in view and that is, to assist and suggest not direct, the local authorities. Lead, but do not so far outrun public opinion as to excite stubborn prejudice. The lines along which this work can be carried on, varying according to local necessities, include municipal reforms, sanitary improvements, especially those of water supply, sewerage and disposal of household waste, improvements of roads and sidewalks, of parks and small plots of ground at the intersection of roads that may become beauty spots, with little expenditure; also improvement of school grounds, and those around railroad stations, where the corporation themselves lack public spirit to do so, and providing drinking fountains for the comfort of man and beast. All these and many more are ways in which women can work for the public welfare.

LOST TWO BALL GAMES.

PLAINFIELD Y. M. C. A. TEAM DEFEATED BY WOODBRIDGE BROWNS.

Wretched Errors Was the Cause of the Morning Defeat—In the Afternoon Woodbridge's Fielding Won the Game.

The Y. M. C. A. ball team met their first two defeats of the season on Saturday, and the first defeat was due to errors. The game rightfully belonged to them, but with the exception of a few players the others had an off day. Burt pitched for them and played a good game, but Dennis, not having had much practice with him, experienced some trouble in holding his balls. In the third inning Warren McLaughlin went in the box and pitched two innings. He had the visiting team at his mercy and they were unable to do a thing, but he had to leave early and Burt returned to the box. A number of wretched errors were made that were not excusable. The Woodbridge team played a fair game, but no brilliant plays were made. The attendance was excellent considering and everyone seemed to enjoy the contest exceedingly. In the afternoon the two teams met at Woodbridge and the Y. M. C. A. team was defeated 13 to 10. Owing to the fact that the regular team did not play accounts in a measure for the defeat. Johnson pitched for the Y. M. C. A. team, and McKelvey and Major were absent. The full score of the morning game in this city is as follows:

The game in the afternoon at Woodbridge was as pretty a baseball exhibition as one would see in many a day. The playing was brilliant throughout, and at the close, as will be seen in the score below, the Plainfield boys were the Woodbridge team, and made a ten inning game necessary. The Plainfielders played a great game at the bat, but were unfortunate in having twelve outs on fly hits in the out field. The score was as follows:

New Central Station.

The Central Railroad Company will erect a new passenger station at the corner of First street and Broadway, Elizabeth, which will accommodate passengers for Newark, that branch of the road being extended to a point which will enable the road better to compete with the trolley cars, which are carrying the bulk of the passengers now.

Shades "Down on Sunday.

The Mayor and Chief of Police of Elizabeth, have announced that hereafter on Sunday all places of business, except drug stores, must do business with the doors closed and the curtains drawn after 10 a. m. This mild form of closing will not interfere with the tradesmen. Barber shops, newsstands and bootblacks have to comply also with the edict.

A NEW SCHOOL ASSURED.

TO BE ERECTED IN THE EAST END AND CALLED THE LINCOLN.

The Board of Education Decide to Advertise for Bids for its Erection—Commencement Details of the Schools.

The Lincoln public school, for such has the contemplated new building been named, will soon be a reality for the Common Council have concurred with the action of the Board of Education and at the June meeting of the Board, held last Monday, it was decided to advertise for bids for its erection at once.

The meeting was attended by Drs. Probasco and Jenkins, and Messrs. Lounsbury and Lovell. After the usual routine opening business of reading the minutes and approving bills, the bills of Abram Angleman for taking the census were presented and ordered paid, found correct.

A communication was read from the Mutual Life Insurance Company giving notice that interest to the amount of $700 was due June 19th, on their bond of $28,000. This was ordered paid. The report of City Tax Collector Johnson showed $857.21 had been collected, on which the interest was $90.06, making a total of $947.27. The assent of the city to the erection of a new primary school building was shown in a communication from the city clerk enclosing a copy of the resolution passed by the Council approving the action of the Board.

Clerk Clark next read the replies of those who had been invited to act as judges in the commencement prize contests. Acceptances were read from Dr. B. Van D. Hedges, Rev. C. E. Herring, Assemblyman W. R. Codington, Miss Edith R. Leonard Mrs. W. R. Richards, Mrs. Matilda L. Stirling said that owing to other engagements it would be impossible for her to fill the position.

There are probably very few that know about the teacher's pension bureau that has been established by the last Legislature. Every teacher in the public schools can join it by giving notice to the Board of Education that one per cent shall be deducted from their salary monthly for its benefit.

Superintendent Maxson spoke a few words on it and presented notifications from three teachers, the Misses Louise Layton, Clara Tickner and Cora Cadmus, that they wished to be put on the list. The other teachers were, Superintendent Maxson said, waiting for his advice until he could examine into it more thoroughly.

As this was the last regular meeting before Commencement, it was necessary to hear from all the committees in charge of all the details in that event. Dr. Jenkins reported that Music Hall had been secured. Dr. Probasco, as music committee, told that Prof. Conde had been secured for both commencement and reception for $85.

Mr. Lounsbury's report, as printing committee, appeared in the shape of tickets, all printed, for the Commencement exercises. He reported that the programmes had been arranged for. Mr. Clark, as committee on ushers, reported progress.

An important matter was then called to the attention of the Board by the secretary, Mr. Lounsbury. He said that the street railway was not fulfilling its contract with the city by refusing to transfer passengers from the Fourth street branch to the West Front street line, and he told how several teachers and school children had been refused and how he himself had tried it and the conductor would not exchange him to the other line. He had taken it upon himself to send a communication to the Common Council that evening. The matter was talked over and the members approved of his action.

The speaker for the Commencement exercises has, at last, been chosen and Dr. Probasco reported that Prof. Bliss Perry, professor of oratory and aesthetic criticism at Princeton College, had promised to make the address.

The building committee report was the last of all business to come before the Board, but it played quiet an important part. Mr. Lounsbury, chairman of the committee, first read a notice asking for bids for the new school that he had drawn up to be published. It was decided upon with a few changes. The work is to be divided into the carpenter's work, the painting and the mason work, for arch of which, separate bids will be received. Bonds will be given for half of the amount of the contract and a certified check must accompany each bid. For the carpenter and mason work, it must be $300 each and $50 for the painting. The bids must be in by June 22d. C. P. Karr, the architect, was present and gave his ideas on the bids and their qualifications. It was decided to advertise for bids in the local papers, twice a week.

The name of the new school was discussed and on motion of Mr. Lovell, it was decided to call the new structure the Lincoln school.

The meeting closed with an informal discussion of the plans for the suggested repairs in Washington building and for the new Lincoln building. Mr. Karr was present and explained them.

At the close of the meeting copies of the financial statement for May were distributed. The statement was as follows:

Real Estate Transfers.

The following real estate transfers were recorded in the County Clerk's office last week:

Watson J. Tunison to Aaron D. Thompson, two lots South avenue and Berekman street, near Washington and Fourth streets, also lot Fourth street, near Washington street, $1; Charles H. Kissam et ux., to Anna Bella Schoonmaker, tract Central avenue, 148 feet, $15,000; Plainfield L. & I. Co. to Plainfield Real Estate Company, two tracts Fourth street, $1; Henry Harmond to Andrew Schlick, lot Third street, $300; Harry Avener to Andrew Schlick, lot Third street, $300; Samuel W. Baxter to William B. Smith, lot Third street 500 feet south, $1,700; William B. Smith to Plainfield R. & L. Association, lot Third street, 500 feet southwest Spooner avenue, $1,601.

Resigned of His Own Accord.

Principal C. E. Boss, of the North Plainfield public school, has presented his resignation to the Board of Education to take effect at the close of the school year. Several rumors have been circulated to the effect that he was forced to resign, but this is wholly untrue. Mr. Boss resigned of his own free will. He has many warm-hearted friends who will regret his decision.

Cancer on a Horse's Leg.

A valuable draught mare, owned by William Baldwin, of West Fourth street, went lame a few days ago from, at the time, some unknown cause. Dr. Koch was called in and found that a cancer had formed on one of the front legs, where a dangerous nail had embedded itself sometime ago. The animal weighs 1,780 pounds, and the doctor has every hope of saving its life.

Mrs. G. Thorn, of East Second street, has returned from a pleasant visit out of town.

BOATS FOR A DOLLAR.

A Fleet That Carries the Life of the World.

Millions of Tiny Craft With Human Blood for Their Sea.

The microscope has revealed many wonderful things, but none more wonderful than the minute bodies which exist in the blood. They are called corpuscles or cells, and are of two kinds, the white and the red. Just a few words about these red cells. They are so minute that there are countless numbers of them in the tiniest drop of blood. Yet each one has a peculiar shape, for which none of them ever vary.

An adult of medium weight has about twelve pints of blood in the body, and yet every small drop of this contains millions of red corpuscles. The number of them in the blood cannot be comprehended by the human mind. Of what use are they?

One great object of breathing is to bring oxygen into the air in close contact with the blood which is in the lungs, for oxygen is necessary for the support of life. It is the business of these little red cells in the blood, to carry the oxygen which we breathe in the lungs to every part of the body. The most minute part of every organ and tissue in the body must have its supply of oxygen or it will perish, and the only way the oxygen can reach all these parts is by means of these little red cells. No matter how pure the air may be which we breathe, if there are not enough red cells in the blood to carry a sufficient amount of oxygen through the body we will surely suffer. Plenty of fresh air and exercise to get in an abundant supply of these little "oxygen-carriers" necessary. These little red bodies have been called "boats for carrying oxygen." Certainly not a very bad name for them.

Oxygen starvation is shown by poor circulation, loss of appetite, debility, anaemia, nervousness, neuralgia, sleeplessness, repeated colds, muscular and mental weakness, and many other symptoms. What is the remedy? Something which will make more of these oxygen-carrying "boats." Nothing will accomplish this quicker than Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites. It goes to the foundation of things. It greatly increases the number of red corpuscles in the blood. What follows? More oxygen is carried through the system, and new life and vigor are imparted. The oil nourishes the body, and the hypophosphites give vitality and strength to the nervous system. As the large size of Scott's Emulsion sells for one dollar, so you can get "oxygen boats for one dollar."

Scott's Emulsion contains more pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil than any other emulsion in the world, that will stand the test of time as being a perfect inseparable emulsion. Ask your doctor.

ALL KINDS OF BUSINESS

THE COMMON COUNCIL DISPOSE OF MANY LITTLE MATTERS.

Complaint Against the Service of the Street Railway—Defect in the Police Board Ordinance—Many Other Details.

A varied lot of business was transacted by the City Council at the regular June meeting held Monday and all the members, except Mr. Fisk, were present to look after it. The first business after the reading of the minutes was the presentation of a communication from F. C. Lounsbury, in which he stated that the Street Railway Company was not transferring passengers from West Fourth street to West Front street. He also said that last week several school children in taking the car at the Franklin school were obliged to pay an additional fare to reach their homes on West Front street. The matter was referred to the Streets Committee.

A. M. Griffen presented a letter to the Council received by him from M. Honan & Son, in which the latter asked Mr. Griffen to see the City Treasurer and secure for them the money owing them from the city. The matter was referred to the Sewer Committee and later referred back to the City Clerk and the Clerk was instructed to prepare a proper bill for M. Honan & Sons to swear to.

Rev. P. S. Gibson petitioned the Council for four crosswalks to be located at the southerly, northerly and westerly side of Liberty and West Third streets and one at the northerly side of Liberty and West Fourth streets. The petition was referred to the Streets Committee.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company in a letter stated that they objected to the contract between them and the city which provides for the care of the fire alarm system, on the grounds that if signed they would be obliged to serve the city each year for the amount stipulated, no matter how many fire alarm boxes were called out.

The matter was referred to the fire and building committee. The Mayor appointed D. C. Irving, J. Parker Mason and George R. Cornwell, as commissioners to make assessments in connection with the system of sewers introduced. On motion of Mr. Frost the appointments were laid on the table for the present.

The monthly reports of the collector, treasurer and inspector of buildings were received as usual. The last reported that twenty-two permits had been granted during the month for the erection and alterations of buildings.

Mr. Dumont at this point offered a resolution that the $10,000 sewer note be renewed, and that the clerk be authorized to draw a new note for $8,000 to be used in connection with the sewer work. The resolution was adopted.

On motion of Mr. Barrows the police ordinance was called up and voted down, owing to a slight defect. The same member then introduced a new ordinance which was passed on its second reading and ordered engrossed and advertised.

Mr. Tolles called up the sidewalk ordinance and on his motion it was adopted on its final passage.

A petition from John Valiant asking that a crosswalk be laid in front of the Y. M. C. A. building on East Front street, was granted.

D. W. Rogers, E. R. Pope and others asked Council to establish the proper grade at Madison avenue and West Second street. They also asked that the streets be made ten inches higher at that point.

Mr. Dumont thought the Street Commissioner was going to fast in that street, as the report of the Madison avenue commissioners had not yet been received, and the city has no right to meddle with a street which does not belong to them. No action was taken in the matter for the present. Mr. Dumont stated that for several years past the assessor has had no safe place to keep his books, and he suggested the purchase of a second-hand safe for that purpose. A resolution was offered by Mr. Dumont authorizing the Finance Committee to purchase such a safe, and the resolution was adopted. Mr. Barrows said that he hoped the members would bear in mind the fact that the city hall matter was rapidly getting into shape and the city would then have a place to keep all such things.

Mr. Frost offered the street sprinkling ordinance as amended, and on motion of Mr. Serrell it was passed on second reading and ordered engrossed and advertised. It provides for an improved sprinkling cart which can be regulated to give the streets the required amount of sprinkling. Another ordinance was introduced by Mr. Serrell, which relates to ash and garbage carts. It provides that wagons carting ashes, lime and other objectional matter, shall be covered to prevent the dropping off of the same into the streets. The ordinance was laid over till next meeting to allow an examination of the same. On Mr. Dumont's motion Council then adjourned to meet Monday evening, June 8th.

FOUGHT A COLORED COP.

JOE GREEN OBJECTED TO BEING ARRESTED BY A NEGRO OFFICER.

Gave the Officer a Lively Tussle, But Roundsman Frederickson Hauled Him to the Rookery—He Was Convicted.

Special Policeman Pine Yatman attempted to arrest Joseph Green Saturday evening for throwing stones at another man and otherwise being disorderly. Green objected to the colored man touching him and a fight issued. Roundsman Frederickson finally appeared on the scene and marched him off to the lockup. In the city court, Green claimed that he did not know that Yatman was an officer. The case was a strong one against Green, whose past record was not the best, and he was ordered to pay $25 for his fun or take 60 days in jail.

An inoffensive character that gave his name as John Rooney was arrested by Patrolman Post Saturday for a too liberal use of intoxicants. As he was young and promised to behave himself, City Judge DeMeza suspended sentence on him.

Patrolman Post arrested Clarence Whelpy Saturday for celebrating with too much liquor. City Judge DeMeza suspended sentence on him.

Sentence was suspended on Michael Gleason Saturday on the charge of being drunk and disorderly.

Nicholas Kelly pleaded not guilty to the charge of being drunk and disorderly, and his trial was set down for Saturday morning.

Four small lads, John Cockley, Fred Cockley, Will McCue and Harry McCue, were tried on the charge of breaking windows and tearing down fences. Sentence was suspended.

The case of Cornelius Guinee, the hackman, charged with disorderly conduct, was adjourned at the request of his counsel, Walter L. Hatfield, until Saturday morning.

Takes Exception to the Rev's Remarks.

C. P. Farrell, publisher of Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll's books, sends the following letter to The Daily Press:

In your issue of May 25th is an article headed "Hot Shot for Ingersoll," in which the Rev. C. E. Herring goes on to say that Col. Ingersoll is a knocker, and that he proved it by saying that the theatres in New York city where he has lectured are not filled to overflowing. The Fifth Avenue Theatre, which he cites as one of them, the Colonel never lectured in but once, and the Academy of Music, which he refers to as being such a success, the Colonel has lectured in more than any other city and always turned people away. The Rev. gentleman ought to be sure of his facts before he rushes into print.

If You Will Use a Little Reasoning, and not be influenced by the claim that catarrh is a blood disease, you can easily prove that catarrh is climatic. How you not the severest catarrhal attacks during winter and spring, and have you but like evidence of catarrh during summer? Yes. Well, this proves it a climatic disorder, inflaming the membrane of the nasal passages. It is a waste of time and money to invest in blood remedies. The proper treatment is a local application, and the most prompt to cure is that popular remedy, Ely's Cream Balm.

HONORING THE DEAD

PLAINFIELD MAINTAINS ITS PATRIOTISM ON DECORATION DAY.

Bands of Music, Marching Veterans, Floral Bouquets and Patriotic Words Marked the Event of Saturday Last.

As the years pass by, increasing the span that separates the present from the time when the thundering clouds of war were driven from the skies by the superb generalship and stolid bravery of the nation's sons, the generation that knows the story of those stirring times only from recital, tradition and history observes with more fitting ceremony, the day set apart as the national tribute to the memory of the heroes of those times.

Plainfield has always been a grateful observer of the ceremonies of Memorial Day, and last Saturday was no exception.

Col. Mason W. Tyler, Marshal of the Day was unable to officiate, owing to having been suddenly called to Connecticut. Capt. William Hand, one of the aides, acting instead. The other aides were Major W. D. W. Miller and B. S. Braider. Daniel H. Ginna and Thomas R. Von Boskirk, did not take part but had been appointed aides. The formation of the line was as follows:

Marshal and aides; platoon of police, under command of Sergeant Kiely. Prof. Guttman's band of twenty-three pieces; High School Cadets, under command of Capt. Edwards; John Hand Camp, Sons of Veterans, under command of Captain Willard Sutton; platoon of Post 73; St. Mary's fife and drum corps, and children; platoon of Post 83; Daughters of the Regiment, Misses Fay and Sadie Mattox and Laura Radin; detachment of school children; platoon of Post 73; school children; platoon of Post 108; school children; platoon of Post 109; school children; platoon of Post 73 as rear guard.

The line of march was as follows: Counsermarsh from Watchung ave. one to Grove street, to Lincoln place, to Somerset street, to Front street, to Park avenue, to Seventh street.

All along the line of march Old Glory was very much in evidence. Several residents showed their patriotism by decorating their residences with bunting and flags, and when the parade passed such points those in it showed their approval of the patriotic efforts by shouts and hurrahs.

At Seventh street and Park avenue the different divisions charged with decorating the graves in the different cemeteries separated and the parade dispersed.

At the cemeteries in this city no service of any special interest was held, beyond placing the customary flowers on the graves of the departed heroes. When the parade dispersed, the band, Sons of Veterans and St. Mary's school delegation went to St. Mary's cemetery, from which point the band and Sons of Veterans were conveyed by stage to Scotch Plains, where a most interesting and impressing service was held over the grave of John Hand, after whom the Sons of Veteran camp was named. The service over the grave consisted of reading by Capt. Willard Sutton, a prayer by Chaplain McVoy and an address by Rev. Geo. Angleman, pastor of the Scotch Plains Methodist church, in which Mr. Angleman spoke of the solemnity of the occasion when we gather to do honor to the hero dead. Next came a song by the school children of the Scotch Plains public school. Prof. Guttman's band rendered "Nearer, My God to Thee." Three volleys were fired over the grave by the Sons of Veterans and then Rev. Mr. Parks, former pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, pronounced the benediction.

Then followed a short service over the graves of the unknown dead. Rev. Mr. Parks spoke touchingly of the heroes who lie beneath the sod and of whom there is no record. This was followed by the rendition of "America" by the band and then a short speech by John Robinson, of the Scotch Plains fire department, closed the exercises. The Plainfield delegation were escorted to and from the cemetery by the Scotch Plains fire department.

The usual Decoration Day exercises were held in Music Hall in the afternoon. They were scheduled to begin at 2 o'clock, and by that time the hall was crowded to the doors. It was 2:35 when the curtain went up and displayed to the audience of nearly 1,000 persons a raised platform, filled to its utmost capacity with children, each one of whom carried an American flag. The hall had been profusely decorated with flags and bunting, and the boxes on either side of the stage were almost hidden from view with flowers.

Commander Mc Voy, of Post 73, opened the exercises by calling on Adjt. Walker, of Post 73, to read the Memorial Day orders, issued from the G. A. R. headquarters at Indianapolis. Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, of Hope church, then offered prayer. Those occupying chairs on the stage were: Commander McVoy, General Negley, Rev. G. Kennedy Newell and Commander Dunham, of Post 109. A selection by Prof. Guttman's band followed, accompanied by the waving of flags by the children, which made a pleasing sight. The rendition was an excellent one and was greeted with applause that shook the house. Then there was a song by the children, accompanied by Miss Ada Nash on the piano. Commander McVoy addressed a few words of welcome to the assemblage, and was followed by reading of the Scriptures by Senior Vice-Commander Frank Whitely. Junior Vice-Commander Wm. R. Moore, Officer of the Day Wm. C. Smith, and prayer by Chaplain John Goodwin. Next came singing by the children, under the leadership of Prof. MacClymont, accompanied by Miss Nash.

Commander McVoy in a few timely words, presented General Negley whose speech was delivered in an excellent manner and was as follows:

Comrades and Friends:—As long as the love of country preserves the Union of States and so long as the plaintive banner yon floats so heroically through the gloom of disaster, undespered in the hour of victory, floats proudly over the dome of the Nation's Capital, the services of the Gigantic Armies of the Republic will be recounted and honored by countless generations. The ceremonies attending the annual inurnings of the survivors of the War of the Rebellion exhibit a pathetic expression of true American and loyal pride, reaching from the pine scented forests of the North to the golden strands of the Pacific.

To the boys who wore the blue it is an hour of solemn retrospection. Tangled memories of the days and nights when you closed up with measured step and undaunted courage, from Bull Run to Appomattox, rise out of the mist of years, and sets your hearts aglow and your souls aflame with the spirit of the battle you sang: "We are coming, Father Abraham, three Hundred Thousand strong."

The panorama of wonderful events since then have sped onward. Nature has cast her mantle of beauty and peace over the battlefields of war; intelligence, charity, patriotism and the pursuit of happiness have happily united the people of all sections under one government, one flag, and one country.

The high aims and progressive tendencies of the nation have expanded like the flowers that open their buds on this beautiful summer morn to shed their fragrance and enchant the wild roaming bee.

The statehood of states will be pledged anew today over the graves of the valiant host who fell in defence of their country's laws. The Blue and the Gray, comrades in death, recline at loose against slavery and the insanity of secession. The Century of Independence flourishes now on soil trodden by the tramp of serf or slave. No conqueror's foot or conquest for tribute,—it was waged against sectional hate and degradation of labor that the Union might be preserved. The restoration of the war was not for glory or revenge; on the contrary it was a war to insure peace, equality and liberty to all under the law. The heroes with whom the soldiers in both the Union and Confederate Armies laid down their arms and went to the implements of peaceful industries "with malice toward none and charity toward all," was an act that harmonized with immortal principles and achievements of war.

No other nation could have organized such an army from the untrained youth of its country, and disbanded it, and no other nation could without causing distress or commotion have found a place for it to have flown to return to their homes and resume peaceful labors without a murmur. Thus providentially, days were scattered throughout this fair land of ours self reliant, sturdy men,—men with unbounded faith, high resolve and a deep and abiding love of country. It opened up avenues of honor and renown to self made men of humble birth, whose ranks have furnished three Chief Magistrates, possibly a fourth will be our coming Executive.

The patriotism, endurance and earnestness of the volunteer armies challenged the respect of both friends and foes and furnished the pioneer in the fields of history the highest types of moral courage.

If it had been possible to record all the instances of personal valor displayed in every active service during five great wars, from episodes and acts of daring, which would fill pages of story, it may entertain the youth present for me to relate one or two of these incidents:

In the month of April, 1862, my command was stationed at Columbia, Tennessee. The greater part of General Buells army was en-route for Pittsburgh Landing. I was charged with the duty of keeping open the only line of communication between Nashville and the Tennessee River. Beauregard's army was on its way to join the Confederate forces at Shiloh. The country south of Columbia swarmed with Guerillas and small detachments of Confederate cavalry scouting in any direction on an unhealthy business. Returning to my headquarters late one evening, I found in waiting a trooper from General Mitchell's with reading the dispatch, I observed that the dispatch had been opened. I asked him about on the road. He replied that he was detained by a little misunderstanding with some rebels he had met near Pulaski. Then he was silent. Oh, I said, misunderstandings with rebels are becoming quite frequent and disagreeable, but tell me about it. Well, he said, my horse and I were riding slowly, keeping a sharp watch on either side, when suddenly from a thicket I met two mounted rebels face to face. I saw that they eliminated their revolvers, I spurred mine. Quickly pulling my revolver and spurring on my horse, I shouted, "Halt, or I'll drop you," this they did instantly. I then told them to ride in advance but to make no sound. On reaching the main line, I came upon another rebel cavalryman, who was dismounted, engrossed in target practice. I was too heavily loaded with salt bacon.

He failed to recognize me as a Yankee, I rode up to him and demanded his arms. Seeing his comrades disarmed he threw down his gun. I then ordered the Confederates to dismount and hand the reins to one of the troopers. The other was directed to take the harness off the mules, turn them loose, and pile rails under the wagon and set them afire. This was quickly done. The negroes were then ordered to accompany the team and ride toward Nashville as fast as the horses could run. They lost no time in doing so. I then told the Confederates to walk and keep ahead of me, which they did reluctantly, supposing that I intended to take them as prisoners. When a sufficient time had elapsed for the horses to be sufficiently advanced, I paroled the prisoners and rode off. Jackson, for that was his name, spoke of this affair with the utmost coolness, indeed, he looked upon it as a simple incident of duty.

Over 70,000,000 of people earn more from their home industry than 10,000,000 of the inhabitants of the whole of the United nations of Europe. We command one-fifth of the combined wealth of the civilized world; our accumulated earnings equal three-fourths of the savings of the entire nations of Europe. Since the close of the War of the Rebellion, the material wealth of the United States has increased one hundred per cent. as against England's forty per cent., Germany's seventy per cent. and France's forty-five per cent. We have in operation 181,000 miles of railway (not including mileage of sidings) traversing every state and territory, blending together the products of soil, the products of mine, of clime, sea and land. We have strengthened the power of the government abroad by the organization and equipment of one of the most effective armies afloat.

Each state is maintaining a thoroughly well organized, well disciplined fully armed volunteer soldiery—one of the most powerful instruments in preserving the peace at home and maintaining the respect of other nations. We have entered into commercial relations and friendly competition with all nations, and cause each to contribute to the comfort and welfare of our people.

No empire has experienced or produced within the brief space of thirty years such marvelous material and grand strides in the domain of peace; and none has ever before enjoyed such profits as largely from scientific discoveries, mechanical inventions, and the rapid development of its natural resources. The staple productions and industries of the South prior to the war were few, the laboring classes illiterate, and the great sources of her wealth come from her mines and manufactures. The South is rapidly advancing; many sections keeping pace with the North in the march of improvements. Industry has been the great teacher of the masses.

Men may deplore and censure the government for the large expenditures made in behalf of the Army and Navy. Notwithstanding the moral force of such criticisms, the threatening attitudes of other nations justify the policy of providing ample means for defence.

It is a perilous illusion of safety for our government to rely solely upon the principals of arbitration for a settlement of international conflicts. The ceaseless practice of powerful nations to invade the territory of the weak is a constant menace to the peace of their neighbors. Happily, underneath the diverse influences of factions and parties, we are a homogeneous people, working in social harmony for the glory of God, self government and liberty of conscience.

At the conclusion tremendous applause greeted the speaker and he was presented with a handsome bouquet by Mrs. Cox, in behalf of the Women's Relief Corps.

Clarence Mills, of the Franklin School, recited "Dandy Fifth," followed by a song by the children and the exercis s closed with a tableau entitled "America Supported by Her Army and Navy," which was exquisite in every detail. The credit for its arrangement belongs to W. R. Mattox. Those who took part were: Misses Sadie and Fay Mattox, as daughters of the regiment; Misses Edna Gunn and Lillian Haberle, flower girls; Robert Walker and Israel Stites, wounded soldiers; Henry Drake, sailor; and G. H. Bedford, soldier.

A pleasing feature of the exercises was the portion where twenty-four little girls marched across the stage and dropped flowers and flags on an imitation grave, the headstone of which was marked "Unknown," accompanied by the rendition of "Nearer My God to Thee," by the band. Each of the girls recited a few lines appropriate to the day. The officers of the G. A. R. who had charge of the arrangements of the day deserve much commendation for carrying them out so successfully.

"NYDIA" OFFERED TO PRINCETON.

Dr. J. A. Coles Will Give the Famous Rogers Statue to the University.

An offer of a large marble statue has been made to Princeton University by Dr. J. Ackerman Coles, of Scotch Plains, in a letter to President Patton, in which he says:

In appreciation of the mutual regard which for more than fifty years existed between the trustees, faculty and instructors of the College of New Jersey and the late Dr. Abraham Coles, our father, my sister and I will take pleasure in giving Princeton Hezekiah Bradolph Rogers' magnificent life-size marble statue of "Nydia," belonging to the estate of our father.

The statue was made of the best Carrara marble in Rome, Italy, in 1856. Several copies of it were subsequently made. It was at the Centennial Exposition and another in A. T. Stewart's collection. The one which Dr. Coles and his sister now offer to the university is the original. Mr. Rogers, it is said, received $3,800 for it, and it cost nearly $1,000 more to land it safely in New York. It has been carefully preserved, and its value has been enhanced with time.

IN AID OF THE ARMENIANS.

Rev. B. Fay Mills Will Address a Meeting for Their Help Next Sunday.

The Committee on the Relief of the Sufferers in Armenia are happy to announce that a meeting in aid of the cause to be addressed by Rev. B. Fay Mills, will be held in the Crescent Avenue church in this city on Sunday next at 4 o'clock p. m. Mr. Mills writes that the National committee is out of funds, that Miss Barton expected $500,000, but that up to the latter part of April she had received only about $100,000, and that unless more money is speedily forthcoming, tens of thousands will starve to death this summer. In response to the urgent appeal of the Hindoo Committee, Mr. Mills decided to devote a week or two to the conducting of meetings in this vicinity for the purpose of arousing general interest and raising money in aid of this object. It is earnestly hoped that there will be a large attendance and a generous response.

REV. HOBART CLARK TO LEAVE.

The Unitarian Minister Wants a Change in His Field of Labor.

Plainfield is to lose one of her well-known ministers next September. Rev. Hobart Clark, the pastor of the All Soul's Unitarian church, will leave his present charge and go to one of the New England cities—which one he has not yet decided. He presented his resignation last Sunday, and a meeting will be held Friday evening to take action on it. Rev. Mr. Clark told a Daily Press reporter this morning that his connection with the church had always been of a most pleasant nature, but that he was desirous of a change.

Accepted an Invitation.

The Grand Commandery Knight Templars of New Jersey will constitute Temple Commandery, No. 18, of Metuchen, Wednesday evening, June 10th. Trinity Commandery of this city has been invited and accepted the invitation at their meeting last evening, at which time the Order of the Temple was conferred on one candidate.

Is never done, and it is especially wearing and wearisome to those whose blood is impure and unfit properly to tone, sustain, and build up the wasting of nerve, muscle and tissue. It is more because of this condition of the blood that women are run down,

Tired, Weak, Nervous,

Than because of the work itself. Every physician says so, and that the only remedy is in building up by taking a good nerve tonic, blood purifier and vitalizer like Hood's Sarsaparilla. For the troubles peculiar to Women at change of season, climate or life, or resulting from hard work, nervousness, and impure blood, thousands have found relief and cure in

BLUE COATS TO BE M. D.'S

POLICEMEN TO BE INSTRUCTED HOW TO AID THE WOUNDED.

Dr. Simpson Made Police Surgeon and Will Give the Necessary Lectures—Philadelphia Plan to be in Vogue.

Another new feature is about to be introduced into the police department by Chairman Barrows, of the Police Board. Each member in the department is to be instructed by City Physician Simpson as to how to give first aid to the wounded.

The point is that many times a policeman is called to take care of a wounded man and treatment is often needed before a physician arrives. Dr. Simpson will fill the position of Police Surgeon for the Board and will also be required to examine each man in the department when ill and certify to his condition.

About fifteen years ago this plan was first introduced in Philadelphia and Dr. Simpson was at that time interested in the same. He will chiefly use that plan here.

The department will be divided into two squads and five lectures and demonstrations of one hour duration will be given on five different days to each squad. They will probably be given in the City Council rooms and on Thursday the instruction will begin.

The office of Police Surgeon is created for the protection of the Police Board.

Received With Old Glory and Roses.

It was a happy home at No. 82 Duer street, Wednesday about six o'clock, when Miss Lillian A. Force arrived from Pasadena, California, where she has been for over five months, visiting her sister aunt, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Dunn and her cousin, Fred S. Dunn, at Echo Mountain. Although she was ill for a week on her homeward trip, at the home of her cousin, Mrs. A. T. Smith, Sacramento, good nursing and a skilled physician soon cured her affliction and she arrived in good health.

OFFICE-SEEKING HORDE.

It Makes the Position of President One of Many Trials.

At the beginning of every administration Washington fills up with persons who desire some office either in the states, in the departments or in the foreign service, writes ex-President Harrison in Ladies' Home Journal, discussing "The Presidential Office." Many of these persons have a limited purse, and as the days pass on this is exhausted and impatience and ill-temper come in. Many of these persons are deserving and well-fitted to fill the offices they desire. But it is impossible to find places for all the deserving, and the position of the president is full of trial. The suspense and uncertainty that the office seeker suffers is illustrated by the case of a man from my own state who thought he had good reason to expect an appointment from President Garfield. After he had been sweated at Washington and had brought to bear all the influence he could command. I met him one day on the street and asked him how he was getting along. His answer was: "Very well, very well, but there is nothing local in it." His whole manhood expressive, and has remained in my memory as a type of the state of uncertainty which accompanies office-seeking. "Nothing local yet," but a hope that is hard to kill.

There are few offices at Washington the salaries of which enable the incumbent to save any money, and the average experience of those holding places in the departments, I am sure, is, if they would confess it, that private business offers better returns and gives better chances for advancement.

AN ALL-NIGHT SCARE.

A Young Englishman's Experience with a Stuffed Bear.

Young Englishmen visiting the United States have as many absurd and amusing experiences as Americans have when in foreign countries. The Washington Star tells of an English traveler who was assured that west of the Missouri river the entire country was infested with bears, some of which were so bold that they came into the towns.

He stopped in a Kansas village, and in the evening started out for a walk. The stores were closed, but the moon was shining brightly. He rambled about the place for a couple of hours, and started down the business street for the hotel. Suddenly he saw before him on the sidewalk a big bear, sitting on its haunches, with open mouth and paws extended.

In a moment he was on top of a porch, crying for help, but no one heard him, and the bear sat and watched him. All night long he stayed there, trembling for fear brute would climb the post, but comforting himself with the idea that it was too small to be used by a bear.

At daybreak some men came along and one of them wheeled the bear back to the doorway with the remark: "I wonder who put that sign in the middle of the walk."

The tourist descended from the porch without detection, and had he not subsequently enjoyed the story so much that he told it himself, it would never have been known.

HARDY COFFEE PLANTS.

They Live and Are Fruitful Sometimes for a Century.

Coffee plants, says the New York Observer, are usually raised from seeds sown in beds upon the mountains, where the thermometer varies from 60 degrees Fahrenheit in winter to 80 degrees in the height of summer. When they are two years old the small shoots are set out in rows six feet apart each way. In three years they begin to yield. They are increasingly fruitful for 15 to 20 years and live for a century. The trees bloom in February in Guadeloupe, the first ripens from August to December, but blossom and green fruit and the ripened berry may be sometimes seen at once during the latter part of the year. The berry is red, of the size and color of a cherry; the coffee is made from the kernel seed, which is divided into two hemispheres.

This seed goes through a variety of processes before it becomes the coffee of commerce and is prepared for use in the delicious beverage which is known all over the world. Most of the coffee of the French islands goes naturally to France, but it is not so cheap as the South American product, and its cultivation is encouraged by governmental bounties. The coffee and sugar interests do not conflict, for the former occupies the highlands and the latter the lowlands.

Strange Requirements.

The Neue Wiener Tagblatt, of Germany, prints the strange will of a wealthy and eccentric old man who lately died. "I give all my property," he says, "to my six nephews and six nieces, but under the sole condition that every one of my nephews marries a woman named Antonie, and that every one of my nieces marries a man named Anton." The 12 are further required to give the Christian name Antonie or Anton to each first-born child, according as it turns out to be boy or girl. The marriage of each nephew and niece is also to be celebrated on one of the St. Anthony's days, either January 17, May 10 or June 13. Each is further required to be married before the end of July, 1896. Any nephew or niece remaining unmarried to an Antonie or an Anton after that date forfeits half of his or her share of the property.

Naming the Baby.

A mother recently said to her five-year-old daughter: "What shall we name the baby, sister?" "Call her Early, mamma; that's a pretty name." "Early! That's not a girl's name." "Oh, yes, it is. Don't you remember you read to me about the little girl who was to be May queen, and who wanted her mother to call her Early?"

AN EVEN THING.

A Duel in a Dark Room—Both Men Proved Cowards.

It has been said that all men are cowards in the dark, and there is doubtless some truth in the statement. A correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat gives an instance in illustration. Two officers of the British army in India had a difficulty which resulted in a duel.

The colonel, the challenged party, was an old campaigner who had won his laurels in the Crimea and was a most gallant soldier. The choice of weapons being his, he named pistols, and elected that the affair should occur in a dark room.

We secured a room 20 feet square, says the narrator of the incident, closed every crevice that would admit light, placed our men in corners diagonally opposite, and withdrew.

Each man was provided with three charges, and when these were exhausted we rushed in to gather up the mutilated remains.

Each man stood erect and soldierlike in his corner, untouched; but directly behind the officer to whom had given the challenge were three bullet holes made by the colonel's pistol.

"How is this?" said a grizzled major, "that you been standing here when these shots were fired, you would have been killed."

The culprit was forced to admit that he had dropped to one knee.

"You are a coward, sir, and unfit for the company of officers and gentlemen!" cried the major.

"Hold on, major!" said the colonel. "It is a stand-off. While he was on his knees in one corner, I was on my stomach in the other."

"WHOSE SHOT WAS IT?"

A Difficult Question Which Often Confronts Sportsmen.

When two men are hunting together, either for large game or small, there frequently considerable difficulty in determining to which one the dead game belongs, especially when the shots are fired simultaneously, or when shot or bullets of the same size are used by both hunters. Dr. J. W. Hall in Recreation discusses at considerable length the question: "Whose Game Was It?"

When two persons standing side by side shoot with shot of the same size at a bird in question, it practically unanswerable, though if both hit the bird the number of shot in the game would, of course, have to be considered. Courtesy gives the doubtful game to the one whose leg is lightest.

An experienced hunter can usually tell when he presses the trigger whether it is a killing shot or not, and when two such men shoot together there is rarely any difficulty, as each knows whether he killed or not, and does not hesitate to say so if he feels that he missed.

When hunting with a man who claims everything it is best to quit. Some men, even if their second shot misses, will contend that they killed two birds rods apart. They can make marvelous shots around corners, over hilltops and through trees, and they quite spoil an honest man's sport.

GETTING A SEAT IN A CAR.

Cute Trick of a Pretty Girl—Obtained by False Pretenses.

"Have you ever noticed," said a young man about town, "the foxy game that some girls work in the street cars for the purpose of getting a seat? No? Why, they've worked it on me several times during one month. The first time it happened was one night around Christmas time. I boarded a car and got a seat. The car soon filled up, with women principally, the majority of whom carried Christmas bundles. I was very tired, and, of course, I became interested in my paper to the exclusion of everything else. A moment or two later, however, I glanced up from my paper and looked around at the rather pretty young woman, who stood just in front of me, bowed very sweetly and said: 'Why, how do you do?' I tipped my hat, but for the life of me I couldn't place—didn't know her at all. But she seemed to know me, and, of course, it was only proper that I should give her my seat. I did it, making some idiotic remark about the weather as she took my place. 'Oh,' she said, bowing at me, critically, 'I'm afraid I've made a mistake. I took you for an acquaintance.' She turned away with a look of well-feigned embarrassment. But she had my seat and kept it."

DECLINE OF THE "BAD MAN."

The Old-Time Tough Has for the Most Part Disappeared.

In the evolution of modern civilization the bad man, namely, the desperado and tough, who flourished in the old Hollowayan days, is said C. B. Jenkins, of California. "A few years ago we heard a great deal of characters like Sam Bass, Jesse James, Ben Thompson and Rube Burrows, but to-day the bad man in the United States as a single individual with a national reputation for wickedness and dare-devilry such as any of these acquired. There are a few men left who have records for desperate deeds and nerve in trying emergencies, men of the Bat Masterson order, but they can be counted on the fingers of one hand. Masterson never figured as a bandit or reckless taker of human life. He is a peaceable man, and if left alone will harm no one. In Dever and all over the west and south he has a host of friends. The day of the desperado is ended, and monstrosities like Thompson, who boasted often in his cups of the number of victims he had slain, will henceforth cease to afflict humanity."

Keep Off the Grass.

It is said that the following sign is posted in a public park in England: "Notice—All persons are cautioned to keep off the grass, cattle and poultry included."

AN AGED LOVER.

Wooed When 123 Years Old, Was Jilted, Yet Lived Seven Years Longer.

Two remarkable cases of longevity were recalled recently by a conversation between several gentlemen in this city, says the Shelbyville Gazette. They were discussing the death of Rev. George McCall, the veteran Baptist preacher, when it was authentically stated that Mr. McCall's great-grandfather lived to the ripe old age of 127 years. He was a bachelor at 100 and took a notion to get married. He carried out his idea and was married. Three sons were born to him, and he lived to see the oldest son old enough to vote.

This was considered remarkable, but a gentleman in the crowd, whose character and standing religiously and socially are above reproach, told an authenticated story of the life of his great-uncle, who was one of Georgia's pioneer citizens. This old gentleman lived to be 130 years old. He lived in a log cabin, in the northern end of which was a corn crib. One night a wild mad turned the head of his bed to that hole, and slept that way in the warmest and coldest weather. His wife died when he was about 90 years old, and for many years he lived as a widower. At the age of 118 he cut an entirely new set of teeth, and at the age of 123, one morning, he saddled his own horse, sprang into the saddle, and rode 30 miles to address a widow and to ask her to be his wife. He evidently was refused for he rode back that day and lived seven years longer.

THE BOSS OFFICE CLERK.

How He Sells Tickets to Make a This House Look Full.

The box-office men of one of our theaters let me into a little secret the other day that proves the existence of gray matter and science behind the theater window. We were speaking, says the Boston Traveller, of the depressing effect on managers when it is remarked: "I assure you that it is a fine art to distribute a small audience so that the people in it will not feel isolated. If the ticket seller knows his business he will so apportion a small audience that the house will be made to look full. This is done by a nice acquaintance with his chairs and the science of distribution, four or five people being seated here, as many more there, and twice as many there, the object being to make a little collection of heads visible in whichever direction one looks, and the squads so grouped as to cover the beggarly array of empty benches by bringing the heads in range of one another.

"A clever man will seat an audience of 300 so that it will look like one of 600 or 700.

TRIED TO BRIBE THE COURT.

Gave the Judge the Cheap Cigar He Had Bought for Himself.

A down-east lawyer had a tough case on hand at a recent term of court, and before it came on he laid his forefinger to his nose and evolved an idea. The presiding judge loved a good cigar, and the lawyer's happy thought was to propitiate him and make him friendly to his case by treating him to the best the market afforded. The disciple of Blackstone was not in the habit of smoking good cigars himself, so when he bought a 25-center for the court he bought a cheroot for his own use. Armed with these he sauntered into the judge's room and after a little chat passed out a cigar, asking the judge if he smoked. The court accepted gracefully, but before many whiffs were drawn the horrified lawyer discovered he had given the judge the cheroot and was puffing the Havana himself. The judge politely tried to look pleased as the smoking proceeded, but the lawyer has since made no attempts to bribe the court.

How John Bull Got His Name.

"John Bull, the mythical personage supposed to represent the English people, and now figuring largely in editorial writing and in cartoons, was, says the Baltimore Sun, the invention of Dr. Arbuthnot in one of his satirical sketches ridiculing the great duke of Marlborough. In the opinion of Dr. Johnson, Arbuthnot was "the first man among the eminent writers in Queen Anne's time." He drew John Bull as the typical Englishman—a stout, red-faced old farmer, far too corpulent for comfort, choleric, but withal an honest and well-meaning fellow. He clothed him in leather breeches and topboots, put a stout oaken cudgel in his hand and a bull dog at his heels, and set him up for all time to serve as the representative Englishman.

How He Bought Geese.

It was one of Platt Evans' pleasures to teach his friends how to purchase under geese, though he could not always get them in the market. One morning he saw a lot and inquired how many there were. "About a dozen," was the reply. "W-w-well," said Platt, "I k-k-eep a b-boarding-house, and my b-b-boarders are the biggest c-heaters you ever s-s-saw. P-p-pick out n-nine of the t-toughest you've g-g-got." The farmer complied, and laid aside the other three tender ones. Platt picked them up carefully, and, putting them in his basket, said: "I b-b-believe I'll take these three."

This Is Diplomacy.

For grave speeches of importance delivered with weight Bismarck was, of course, most celebrated. When annoyed he nearly always adopted a jesting tone, which must have sounded to his frightened friends much as if the tiger in the menagerie had greeted them with a cordial handshake before devouring. "Do you mean to break the convention of Gastein?" bluntly demanded the Austrian ambassador of Count Kuroly, the Prussian minister-president. "No," replied the latter with great directness, "but even if I did so do you think I should be such a fool as to tell you?"

PROPOSED PLAN FOR A GARBAGE DISPOSAL SYSTEM.

A Stock Company Wanted to be Organized —To Erect a Crematory With a Capacity for a City of 30,000 Inhabitants.

Some time ago a committee was appointed by the Council to look up some sanitary method for the gathering and final disposition of garbage and other city refuse.

The result of the results of their labors a form of plans was submitted to the Board of Health at their meeting on Tuesday night that meets the approval of the Board.

The Town Improvement Association and citizens in general should join with the Health Board in their efforts to establish a more systematic sanitary system, for Plainfield surely needs great improvements in this matter. The following is the plan submitted:

It is proposed to form a company with a capital stock of $30,000, under the title of "The Plainfield Sanitary Company."

To erect a crematory with a nominal capacity to meet the requirements of at least 30,000 inhabitants.

To establish a thorough sanitary system of gathering garbage, ashes, and all other refuse.

SYSTEM OF CREMATION.

The system to be used is known as the Vivarttas.

The most putrid animal or vegetable matter and animals of any size can be incinerated without emitting the least particle of odor or smoke, and is thoroughly sanitary in every way.

COLLECTING AND CARTING.

It is proposed to divide the city into four collection districts and establish a regular system as to time for collecting in each district. For the garbage it is proposed that the company will furnish each house with a thoroughly sanitary tight can (the designs of these cans to be approved by the Board of Health) to have a duplicate set of cans numbered in duplicate. The gatherer when he leaves the plant will have on his wagon the same number of empty cans that he is supposed to gather on his route. He will take the can from the house that contains garbage and leave in its place an empty can; this will avoid the agitation of dumping the garbage from one can into another receptacle on the street in front of the house, which always causes a nuisance, particularly in hot weather, and also avoids any fumes escaping while in transit to the crematory.

The cans as soon as emptied at the crematory will be thoroughly cleansed by steam at a high temperature, so that when they are returned they will be free from any sour, disagreeable smell and disease-breeding germs.

This method carried out in a systematic manner will undoubtedly prove to be a great sanitary improvement over the present crude and antiquated system.

It is proposed to adopt tight carts with covers; this will avoid the sifting of ashes and the blowing of fine sediments while being carted through the streets.

The ashes and rubbish to be taken to the crematory and there separated and treated so as to remove all organic matter and render it thoroughly sanitary for filling in purposes.

It is proposed that the Board of Health shall adopt rules and regulations governing all methods for a sanitary disposal, printed notices of which shall be sent to each householder by the company as often as may be required.

It is also proposed that the company shall make the following charges: For gathering garbage from ordinary residences, 50 cents per month; for gathering garbage from hotels, boarding houses, restaurants and markets, the price to be arranged according to services required. For gathering ashes and rubbish, 10 cents per barrel. These are the prices that are now charged. The incineration of the sludge from the sewers, subject to arrangement with the city.

By treating the sludge from the sewer beds by this method it surely will remove all fancied or real nuisances that may be generated from it.

The company, if it should be desired, would enter into an agreement with the city that after a reasonable number of years, say ten years, to sell its plant to the city.

Pleasantly Surprised.

A very pleasant surprise party was given to Miss Lee, of East Fifth street, last evening, in honor of her birthday. It was arranged by Miss Lambert and Miss Fillmer. After the first excitement of the surprise was over, instrumental and vocal music and dancing made the evening pass very quickly. A wonderful birthday cake with candles on top of it, caused lots of fun, and refreshments were served toward the close. Among those present were the Misses Griffin, Billings, Lambert, Fillmer, Sims, Chelton, Low and Mabelle Force, Mr. and Mrs. Will F. Williams, Harry Coward and Frank Howland.

Beautifying His Property.

W. J. Buttfield has a number of improvements in progress on his property at Rockview and West End avenues. A tennis court is being laid out and the wooded portion is being transformed into small parks. B. W. Hand is doing the work.

LEGS BEAT THE WHEEL.

UNDERESTIMATED AN OLD MAN'S SPRINTING ABILITIES.

Bicyclist Green Gave Fireman Jones a Handicap in a Foot Against Bicycle Contest and Loses His Wheel Thereby.

An exciting bicycle and foot race was witnessed last Monday on South avenue, between Engineer Harry Green and Fireman S. Jones of the Netherwood station. Mr. Green wagered that he could beat Jones on his wheel and give him a good handicap. The agreement was made that if Green should win, Jones was to give him $10 and if the latter came out ahead, the former was to give up his wheel. The race was arranged and Green stationed himself at Giese's lane below the Netherwood hill and Jones was given from that point to the top of the hill as a handicap. The terminus was fixed at Richmond street. A referee was placed on the hill and he gave the signal to Jones when Green started. The race was a lively one, with the result that Jones reached Richmond street first.

In view of the fact that Green is a young man and that Jones is nearly 60 years of age, the event was quite remarkable.

Jones was given the wheel and in turn presented it to his son. Mr. Green will be more cautious in the future how he makes bets with older men.

READY FOR WORK.

The Town Improvement Association to Start Spraying Trees.

The following is contributed by the Town Improvement Association:

Owing to the non-arrival of the proper hose the work of spraying the trees was not commenced Tuesday. Everything else is in readiness, Mr. and Mrs. Mall kindly loaning their spraying apparatus and the required number of subscribers having been obtained. Mr. Tobin will begin the work at once. The necessity of prompt effort if anything was to be done this season to exterminate the elm beetle, has occupied the attention of the Association rather to the exclusion of the work of the other committees. Some of the committees are not fully organized, but it is hoped that by the next meeting every committee will be at work.

Quite a number of suggestions have been sent to the Association in regard to certain matters. Notoriously the careless manner in which the garbage is collected; also the number of apparently ownerless dogs roaming at sweet will through the streets. One thinks if the dog tax was collected thoroughly that Plainfield would be able to pave all its streets, and lay out parks, judging from the number of dogs in the city.

The interest of bicyclist is desired. They are all over and must see much that would make like suggestions of value to the Association, and it is to be hoped that they will report to the Outlook Committee. The following is a list of the various committees and the names of the ladies who have consented to serve on them, viz:

Committee on Cruelty to Children, Mrs. Horace Kimball, chairman, Mrs. Aaron Powell, Mrs. Stephen Cahoone, Mrs. H. C Bowen, Miss Edith Leonard, Miss Heviland; committee on cruelty to animals, Mrs. D. W. Pond, chairman, Mrs. George Mellick, Miss Carrie Havland, Miss Annie Murphy; committee on streets, chairman not appointed, Mrs. F. H. Andrews, Mrs. J. T. Baker, Mrs. D. N. Groendyke, Mrs. W. W. Howland; committees on trees and parks, Mrs. E. D. McCarthy, chairman, Mrs. J. K. Maxson, Mrs. K. T. Titsworth, Miss Mary Browne, Mrs. P. Mall, Miss Kate Martine; sanitary committee, Dr. Ida Hunt, chairman, Mrs. H. P. Robinson, Mrs. Dr. Simpson; humane committee, Mrs. J. K. Meyers, chairman, Miss Isabelle Tweedy, Mrs. Dr. Murray; committee on railways, stations, etc., Mrs. M. H. Eton, chairman, Mrs. Charles Ellis; young peoples auxiliary, Miss E. E. Taylor and secretaries of all committees; finance committee, chairman not appointed, Mrs. J. C. Tracy, Mrs. W. Tyler, Mrs. E. L. Walz, Mrs. C. J. Fisk, Mrs. H. Tracy; outlook committee, Mrs. S. R. Krom, chairman, Mrs. S. Haff, secretary, Mrs. O. R. King, Miss Emma Brown, Mrs. G. H. Frost, Mrs. Charles Schemerhorn, Mrs. D. P. Hall, Mrs. Edgar Smith, Mrs. W. B. Maxon, Mrs. C. Draper, Mrs. Edgar Mumford, Mrs. C. Reed, Miss Mary Martine.

Proposed Hotel for Elizabeth.

Several capitalists and real-estate men have formed a temporary organization and are discussing the subject of erecting a first-class family and transient guest hotel at a cost of $100,000. A number of sites on Broad street have been looked at and $30,000 has so far been pledged. A. D. Mulford is among the number of projectors. Forty suits of rooms with as many more single rooms will be provided, while the structure will be built of brick and stone.

TICKLED THEIR PALATES.

STRAWBERRIES AND ICE CREAM AT THE SEVENTH-DAY CHURCH.

The Ladies Aid Society Conduct a Festival and Sociable in a Successful Manner—Variation for the Blind Also Provided.

Strawberries and ice cream were the principal attraction at the closing sociable of the Ladies' Society for Christian Work of the Seventh day Baptist church held last Monday in the church parlors. It was something on the line of a festival but, whatever it was, it certainly made a very pleasant evening for those that attended.

An informal programme was rendered during the evening. First came a song, "May," by a chorus of small children. Then Miss Myrtle Randolph recited "When Strawberries are Ripe" in a pleasing manner. The Messrs. Miller, Mosher and Knapp gave "Grasshopper Green" very well and the programme ended with another song by the children's chorus, "Forget Me Not." D. E. Titsworth acted as master of ceremonies in his usual amusing manner. The programme was arranged by Miss Mabel Maxson. The decorations, which were principally ferns and cut flowers, were arranged by Miss Lena Tomlinson and Miss Ida Spicer. A lemonade booth occupied one corner of the room and was presided over by Miss Lulu Clawson and Miss Ernestine Smith. The strawberry table was looked after by Mrs. W. C. Hubbard and Mrs. Chas. Dunham. A number of tables occupied the other rooms at the side and here the delicious ice cream, cake and strawberries were sold. The waitresses were the Misses Anna Wooden, Lizzie Allis, Ida Spicer, Lulu Lewis, Grace Lewis, Ida Randolph and Etta Randolph.

Hurrying Up the Work.

The guage of one track between Grant avenue and Somerset street, on West Front street, has been changed, and work was started at Watchung and North avenues this morning and will proceed through Front and Somerset streets to Johnston's drive, after which the other track on West Front street and Grant avenue will be changed.

A RATTLESNAKE DEN.

Accidental Discovery of the Subterranean Home of Many Reptiles.

Rattlesnake creek, a small stream that empties into the Wabash river from the north a few miles from Lockport, is one of the most beautiful and picturesque streams in northern Indiana, says the Indianapolis News.

One of the descendants of a pioneer settler in that region recently related the story that gave the name to this stream. Several miles up from the mouth of the creek, near where the two main branches which form the stream meet, lived Mort Ellis, about 50 years ago. The pioneer's cabin stood on the brow of a long sloping hill at the foot of which was a spring which supplied the family with water.

In those early days rattlesnakes were quite numerous and especially so in the Ellis neighborhood, and the father cautioned his four little girls to be very careful in their play lest they be bitten. One Sabbath afternoon, as the children were playing in the yard, one of the little girls, now Mrs. Alice Wilson, of Kokomo, suddenly broke through the ground and fell into an aperture up to her arms. Her cries soon brought out the family, and, in drawing her from the cave, three rattlesnakes were found hanging to her clothing. Down in the small cave could be seen many other poisonous reptiles. Although it was the Sabbath and Mr. Ellis was a devout Quaker, yet he deemed the occasion one of moment and sent for several of his neighbors, and with them attacked the den of snakes, and when they got through with their work 521 dead rattlers were piled up in the yard. An examination disclosed the fact that the spring at the foot of the hill from which the family used water was connected by a passage to the snake's den.

THE FISH HAWK.

One That Was Drowned with the Fish It Was Trying to Catch.

"The fish hawk," said a fisherman, "almost always carries a fish with its head in the same direction as its own. An ordinary fish hawk will pick up and carry off a four-pound shad without any great difficulty, and nothing less than a charge of shot will make him let go. I've stood under a fish hawk flying not more than 75 or 80 yards high with a fish in his claws and shouted at him until the neighbors thought I was trying a new fog horn, and yet never disturbed him a bit.

"But the fish hawk doesn't always lose in this way. Sometimes he gets caught. I once saw a big hawk, with a four-foot spread of wings, that was sailing along Monmouth beach. Suddenly he made a dive and fixed his claws in a fish's back. The fish sounded. The fish hawk's claws were not quite strong; they sink far and hold fast. The fish was a 30-pound striped bass, a good deal bigger, in fact, than the hawk had calculated on and far more than he could carry away. He could not free his claws nor could the fish free itself. So they struggled there in the water until both were dead. They were cast upon the beach, the fish hawk's claws still fast in the fish's back."

Spending the Vacation.

The entire Smith family took a fortnight's vacation during the summer. It was an unusual thing for them all to go away together, and they talked about it, individually and collectively, for weeks beforehand. They were going to do and they were not going to do all sorts of things during the precious vacation period. Big sister said that she meant to ride the bicycle. Little sister said that she meant to make mud pies all day long, and big brother said that he meant not so much as to look at a Latin grammar.

"I tell you what I mean to do," cried small brother, all on fire at the prospect of so much do-as-you-pleaseness, "I'm not going to say my prayers."

Japanese Noses.

In Japan the nose is the only feature which attracts attention. The nose determines the beauty or ugliness of the face, according as it is big or small. This is probably due to the fact that differences in noses constitute about the only distinction between one Japanese face and another. In Japan a lady who has a huge proboscis is always a great beauty and a reigning belle.

An Old Bequest.

An eccentric old bachelor, who died lately at Odessa, Russia, bequeathed 4,000,000 rubles (about $2,000,000) to his four nieces on condition that they first go into service as chambermaids, washerwomen or cooks for 15 months. The local police are charged with the duty of seeing that the conditions of the will is strictly complied with, and the heiresses have received 963 offers of marriage.

Reclaiming Welsh Wastes.

Large tracts of land in Wales are now being reclaimed along the Welsh coast. Series of parallel fences are put up seaward, closely interwoven with wires and furze, and spaces between these posts are filled with earth and road scrapings. In these various trees, such as sycamore, willow, pine and alder, are planted, while the ridges are sown with gorse and broom seed and planted with briar.

Early Prejudice Against Gas.

When it was first proposed to light the streets of London with gas great objection was made by the public and newspapers on the ground that the people would be poisoned, that the trees and vegetation would all be killed and that domestic animals could not possibly survive the deadly fumes.

Mexico's Greatest Temple.

The great temple in the City of Mexico was a stone structure of five stages or stories, 300 feet square at the base and 130 feet high. There were eight similar structures of almost equal size in the city, and nearly 2,000 much smaller.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.

Hints Which if Remembered Will Not Come Amiss.

If a dish of cold water is kept in a cake box it will keep the cake fresh and moist. The water should be renewed every 24 hours.

In making a mustard plaster take a piece of lard and stir the dry mustard in to the lard until it is a thick paste and will just spread. Spread on a piece of lawn and apply to the affected part. This will not blister.

The pretty little two-tined forks intended to be used for strawberries are now seen decorated with the berry encrusted in the pioneer's cabin stood on the brow of a long sloping hill at the foot of which was a spring which supplied the family with water.

In polishing silver that has been laid away for a long while and is badly tarnished, it is a good plan to wet a soft cloth in sweet oil and then with a cleaning powder rub the silver until the dark places have disappeared. Then rub with the powder and a dry chamois skin before finishing with a polishing brush.

Kerosene oil added to the water with which mirrors, windows, or anything of glass is to be washed, will give a luster. A pint of water and three tablespoonfuls of oil will wash four large windows. First dust the windows carefully, then rub well with kerosene and water, wipe with a cloth, and polish with old newspaper.

Have you ever tried a hot pancake for an invalid's side or back? Mix flour and water together until you have a thick batter, and cook on a hot griddle with very little grease. Place it between thin muslin and apply to the aching part. A pancake applied to the base of the brain will often relieve a headache, and is recommended for congestion of the lungs.

Get out your last season's straw hat and try freshening and cleaning it at home with lemon. Remove the band and lay the hat on a flat surface to keep the brim in shape. Cut a lemon in two crosswise and rub the hat with it. Wipe the hat with a soft clean cloth, and the dirt and stains will be lifted off and removed, repeat the operation with a fresh piece of lemon. Allow the hat to dry thoroughly before it is worn in the sun.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

TOGETHER IN THE GRAVE.

Mary Stuart and Elizabeth Tudor—Not Loving in Life.

Perhaps the queen who has the most company with her in the grave is Mary Stuart; for the vault which received her body when she was removed from Peterborough cathedral to Westminster abbey afterward served for the interment of her descendants and was reopened full often last inspected.

Of sovereign corpses, Elizabeth Tudor and her sister Mary rest together within a very limited space. Though it cannot be truthfully said that they were loving and pleasant in their lives, yet dead they are not divided. In another compartment of the same floor repose Charles II., William III. and Mary II., Queen Anne and Prince George of Denmark—uncle, nieces and nephews-in-law.

Probably the oddest combination is one which must have been planned by James I. before his death, so that people who might seek him afterward should not find him too easily. Instead of being properly entombed with his queen, Anne of Denmark, he preferred to be stowed away with Henry VII. and Elizabeth of York, and this arrangement must have been carried out privately and the record withheld from the abbey annals.

On the whole, English sovereigns have been fairly indifferent to family tombs and memorials, neither troubling about their own nor those of their predecessors or relatives.

Henry VII., while building a fine chapel as a mausoleum and James I. had a sentimental taste for erecting monuments over his kindred, which tends to redeem his general character from utter odiousness, but neither one of which can be named in the same breath with Queen Victoria as a customer for sibilitary sculpture and masonry.—N. Y. Mercury.

More Bulls.

One occasion Sir George Campbell had been calling attention in the house of commons to some abuse in Indian administration, and Disraeli proceeded to observe that he had further revelations to make concerning other scandals, in comparison with which this one was a "mere flea bite in the ocean." Another time, when speaking about military affairs in India, he declared that "the pale face of the British soldier was the backbone of our Indian army." I heard John Mill tell this to amuse my brothers some 70 years ago. The defendant's counsel, Erle, K. C., pointing to the plaintiff, said: "There he sits walking up and down like a motionless statue with the cloak of hypocrisy in his mouth trying to withdraw three oak trees out of my client's pocket."—London Spectator.

A Task Into the Future.

"Jane Weggens hasn't the spirit of a mouse," said Miss Cayenne, lighting a cigar and the paste diamond.

"No?" said the fat lady with the double chin and the veined nose.

"Not a bit of spirit; not a bit. That red-headed scullion of hers keeps a boarding-house, you know, and she actually has to peel the potatoes for the boarders' meals."

"Oh, well, I don't know but what that settles her right. I would get out and shovel mud in the street before I would let my husband keep boarders. A man is meant to adorn the home, not to be a slave."—Cincinnati Inquirer.

What She Would Say.

"What would you say," she asked her dearest friend, "if I told you that I was engaged to the count?"

"I am sure I don't know," replied the dearest friend, absent-mindedly. "I wouldn't be exactly surprised, you know, because I never did think much of his taste."—Chicago Post.

HAD BEGUN TO PROSPER.

A Pathetically Humorous Story Told of a Cumberland Mountain Farmer.

A writer in the Detroit Free Press tells a pathetically humorous story of a friend of his, Jack Negly, a Cumberland farmer. The writer had lent Jack a few dollars, with which to buy a pair of steers, and had received from him many visits of apology; for Jack was an honest man, and did not enjoy being in debt.

He was a renter, and at least every other season he was occupying a different farm. By my advice, he had moved the year before into an entirely new field, a dozen miles from his usual haunts, and I had not seen him for several months. When I did see him, at last, it was by accident as business called me into his neighborhood. As I rode past his place he hailed me from the corn-field and came put to the fence.

"Hello," I exclaimed. "Is this your farm?"

"Yes, and I jist come over to tell you, colonel, that I'll be ready to pay part of that debt in ye yourn the time long."

"You don't say. Doing well?"

"I think I'm doing fust-rate, and I'm powerful obleeged to you, colonel, fer headin' me this way."

"I'm always glad to help, if I can."

"I wanted you, colonel, and that's why I come away over here so far from home. Hit's kinder strange to me, but es long es I'm doin' ez well ez I am I'm a-goin' to stand hit."

"Are you making any money?"

Jim's face clouded perceptibly.

"No, I ain't, colonel," he replied, hopefully; "but I'm losin' it slower'n I ever done in my life afore."

It struck me as rather odd at first, but upon reflection I concluded that Jim might have reason for his hopefulness.

ANOTHER ICE PERIOD.

A Predicted Result of Cutting the Isthmus of Panama.

The best scientific authorities predict dire effects from the cutting of a canal through either the Isthmus of Panama or Tehuantepec. The late George R. Marsh said of this that "a new ice period might be introduced by the withdrawal of an important source of warmth from the northern zones," and Sir John Herschel wrote: "Were the Isthmus of Panama broken through there is no doubt that the whole climate of our island (Great Britain) would undergo a most notable deterioration." The sum of $9,000,000 has been voted by the legislature of the State of New York for improving the Erie canal system the Hennepin canal has received $1,000,000 and work has stopped until new appropriations can be made. Matt Quay is using his influence for the construction of a ship canal from Pittsburgh to Lake Erie, to cost $16,000,000, and a bill from Texas to connect the Red River, besides advocating the expenditure of $50,000,000 in canalizing the Ohio and Mississippi rivers. One of the most stupendous of these engineering works is the Chicago drainage canal, now in process of which to cut the "divide' which bars the way between Chicago and the Mississippi river. The distance is only 30 miles between Lake Michigan and the Illinois river, and one can easily see the sailing nature of a canal to "the great lakes" and the "father of waters."

HUNG IN MIDAIR.

The Perilous Flight of a Soldier in Cabinet Timber.

An amusing story is told of the English officer who determined to enter Chinese Thibet by stratagem. He managed to cross the frontier at night, and so escaped the guard.

On the following day, however, while the officer was journeying deeper into Thibet, the Thibetan soldiers overtook him, and informed him that as the country was unsafe because of robbers, they would go with him in order to protect him, to which arrangement the traveler was compelled to agree. In a few hours they came to a river, which was crossed by a rope bridge.

The Thibetans passed over first in order to see that the bridge was safe, and then the official got into the noose and was pulled along by the Thibetans. Suddenly, however, they ceased pulling, and left the Englishman hanging in midair above the rushing torrent.

The officer shouted angrily to the Thibetans to pull. They merely smoked and nodded their heads. The hours passed, and still the officer hung above the torrent. At last the Thibetans agreed to pull him up if he would leave Thibet immediately. This, of course, he was compelled to do, and took his departure from the forbidden land.

Old-Time Accomplishments.

The following extract from the Biddeford Times gives us an idea of the accomplishments of the ladies of our mothers in household arts, of importance in every girl's education:

Mrs. Ann Emery, of Saco, died at the advanced age of 93 years. When she was married, in 1832, her accomplishments were stated as follows: She could cook all kinds of food in an expert manner; sew and knit, spin and weave cloth, make her own clothes from cloth made in the house, make soap, butter and cheese, make sour-dy and thicker,—this was long before the days of friction matches,—dip candle, sing and dance."

All excepting the two last were essential and indispensable requisites in beginning the married life and when to these were added the two last, the bride was regarded as very highly accomplished.

Quit the Pipe.

The death of Janet Livingstone, younger sister of the explorer, recalls a story concerning the doctor's father. One day David brought home the news that a heavy duty was to be put on tobacco. Neil Livingstone—who was not a rich man—was just lighting his pipe as the news was broken. He put it down until, "If we have got to give it up," he said, "we may as well begin now." He never smoked again.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

—Photographic plates are not affected by light at a depth of 553 feet in the ocean.

—It is asserted by local surveyors that the government survey located about 4,500 acres of "good farming land" inside the limits of Klamat lake, Oregon.

—Two men intoxicated and driving a large gray horse hitched to a wagon loaded with dynamite were arrested in Willimantic, Conn., the other day while driving to a gallop.

—Wooden trestle structures in the United States aggregate 2,000 miles in length and represent an expenditure of $60,000,000. As they must be replaced about once in nine years the annual outlay is about $6,000,000.

—A cow has been known to recognize the picture of a calf; and the tiger is said to be drawn to a trap by a picture of a companion. The timid horse, however, takes no notice of a picture, and the cat will not spring at a painted bird.

—Mrs. Hugh Allen Spencer, a young woman of Jackson, Ky., was busily engaged in her household duties, when some children rushed in and announced that a fire was burning in the kitchen. The excitement was too great for the woman and she passed into insensibility, dying in a short time.

—The shark, which is the most voracious of all fishes, will, if opportunity offers, readily devour a bird. Even sea birds are far too wary to be often caught napping, the shark's diet in this form is practically confined to birds that have been wounded, or which have fallen into the water from exhaustion, such as migratory and other land birds.

—An old liquor bill against Ethan Allen is in the possession of a resident of Fairhaven, Vt. It is dated April 15, 1789, and goes to show that, like some other struck men of revolutionary fame, Ethan Allen had a fair capacity and liking for liquor. The bill contains a number of items of "three pence for dip," and "two shillings" for bottles of rum.

—A cat belonging to a resident of Cameron, Mo., is nursing a litter of wild rabbits and caring for them with motherly solicitude. Several kittens were born to the cat a week or so ago, but the day after a neighbor found a nest of very young wild rabbits about the same time and they were put in charge of the cat, with the happy result.

SOME OF THE NEW HATS.

Tulle Is Used for Trimming and, of Course, Flowers Are Plentiful.

There are plenty of picture hats among the new styles, and the tulle ties and loops come in nicely as artistic additions to the costume. You can have tulle tied around the back of a hat if not necessary to have a bonnet to put them on. Green and violet tulle are the prettiest colors. An exquisite little hat is made of yellow straw—straws, I was going to say, for there is a delicate shelving of little straws, set side by side, with a violet at the end, forming an edge of violets all around the brim. Tulle loops almost conceal the crown. A golden rod is a quite especially appropriate term for a tulle hat; has a combination of two shades of green tulle. There is absolutely nothing on the hat—a round, black straw—but some stand-up tulle loops of dark green, and tulle around the crown. Almost anybody can have a hat like this. All that is necessary to do is to buy an untrimmed hat and cover it over with tulle. A flower or two may stand up at the back or at the left side of the front is a great addition. The tulle ties are knotted in a large bow under the chin. Flowers underneath the brim are set at the back, where most of the hair turn up. In the case of a large hat the tip down over the face, the brim is not always bent up at the back, but instead the whole hat is propped up, as it were, with a bank of flowers and ribbon. Small button roses are very pretty for this purpose, I guess.

Flower hats are fashionable for women of all ages. A violet bonnet is suitable for an elderly lady with white hair, but made in another shape it befits a golden-haired lassie quite as well.—N. Y. Mercury.

A Warning to the Gents.

The annual ball of the Occidental Lyceum and Sporting society was at its height when the following notice was posted on a gentleman in full dress vest and trousers and sacque coat, and four breastpins in his shirt front, vaulted airily into the middle of the ballroom floor and said, with an ominous glitter in his eye:

"I am informed by some of the ladies present that some of the gents from over Dead Man's Gulch way sir just a little bit too exuberant in carrying out the figgers of the dances and when I sing out 'Swing your partners' and 'Promenade!' these gents swing their ladies clear off'n their feet. Now we want things to go off happy and harmonious here tonight, but if any more complaints of this sort are made by any of the Dead Man's Gulch gents 'll be likely to go home on a shutter; ye hear me! Choose yer pardners for the next kadrille an' all set a-standin'!" and they all "set" to the tune of "Strangy, Will Yer Dog Bite?"—Detroit Free Press.

An Apology.

A man who has a reputation for being very careless as to his toilet was elected town clerk in one of the small towns in this state some time ago, and the local paper thought it would be a good joke to announce that: "Mr. Makeup will wash himself before he assumes the office of town clerk." On reading the notice Mr. Makeup was furious, and demanded a retraction, which the paper accordingly made the following day, in this fashion: "Mr. Makeup requests us to deny that he will wash himself before he assumes the office of town clerk." And still Mr. Makeup was not pleased. How hard it is to satisfy some people!—Our Boys and Girls.

FAITHFULNESS OF A DOG.

Saved the Life of a Seriously-Wounded Officer.

Mrs. Jessie Benton Fremont, in her story of "The Guard," a body of young men who followed "The Pathfinder" into the civil war and made a brilliant record for their courage and gallantry, tells a pathetic story of a dumb beast who also was loyal and courageous:

While the guard—a body of cavalry—was drilling one day near St. Louis, a little fox-terrier followed one of the men, Herr Wiss, a Hungarian officer, going with him to camp. He could not be driven away.

The men all made a pet of him, and named him "Corporal," but though he was affable to them all, he made the Hungarian soldier his companion and friend, sleeping at his feet at night, and following him by day.

When the guard made their memorable charge at Wilson's creek, Mo., Corporal charged with them, keeping beside his master's horse throughout the battle. Herr Wiss was wounded, and fell, apparently dead, in a thicket. The battle swept past, the horses fled, wild with terror, but the little Corporal nestled close beside him, licking his face and trying to rouse him.

There the dog remained through the bitter cold night. When morning came he ran to the camp, and by his frantic barks and cries induced a passer-by to enter the thicket.

The man, seeing only a cold, stiff body, supposed the soldier to be dead, and could have forgiven me but the Corporal furiously drove him back, and would not be silenced until he saw his master move and speak, when he crouched, dumb and contented, at his feet.

TREES AND MORALITY.

The Park System as Related to the Higher City Life.

The city of the future will not be treeless and shadeless. When a city has practically all outdoors to lay its new streets on, these should be wide enough to allow a row or more of trees in the middle, with green grass and comfortable seats, with open spaces where roots could get air and receive water, says Dr. Rothrock, the forestry commissioner. When we come to city trees as related to city morals, we open a wide subject. We have denounced the saloon none too hard, but just here let me halt a moment to say that those who frequent the saloon so inherently bad and besotted that they go there because they prefer it to anything else it is possible to offer them? I do not believe it. If a man has no other resting place when weary, worried, overheated, untidy home on the one hand, or an open, more comfortable saloon on the other hand, is it strange he takes the latter? I do not justify the tendency, but I am strongly in favor of more open air parks in your cities would save many a man and woman who is not already depraved. Those who bring about betterment of tenement-houses and those who secure small parks within a desert of brick and mortar will still receive the gratitude of their fellow men. Don't put a premium on vice and intemperance by any lack of public comfort. A distinguished philosopher once said that the nature which had lost its fondness for the woods has lost its manhood."

BAD FOR THE NERVES.

Life in Sky Scrapers Responsible for a Peculiar Disease.

A nervous exhaustion bordering on prostration, to which the doctors have not as yet given a name, has lately been observed to affect persons who work many hours a day high up in the modern sky scrapers. The ailment, says the New York journal, includes nervous prostration, except in the principal symptom, which is a condition of intense restlessness, and, as one of the victims to the new complaint expressed it, "a singular desire to scream or to get down to the earth quickly."

A sensation of relief is noticeable when the patient is taken to grass, so to speak, which leads some physicians to the belief that the change in the rarity of the air, slight as it is, has a particular effect upon certain very sensitive organizations. Others think that the constant trips in the elevators cause a slight disarrangement of the nerve centers, which brings on the condition referred to. In any case there is no doubt that the ailment has come among us with the advent of the sky scraper.

Second-Hand Sermons.

A brisk trade, so it is stated by a church contemporary, is driven in the supply of second-hand sermons to young clerics. Should these clerics decline to deal further with the vendors, the latter threaten to bring the matter before their superiors. Because of these threats, it is alleged that many clergymen prefer to pay any sum that may be demanded from them in a manner more practically Arts and Crafts than heretofore. Accordingly,

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County.

[OFFICIAL.]

Adjourned meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, held on Tuesday, May 12th, 1896, at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

Roll-call showed the following members present:

Director Hubbard, Freeholders Badgley, Clark, Ehrlich, Halliday, Farrell, Hulskamper, Krause, Littell, Miller, Ogden, Roll, Tier, Westcott, Woodruff—15.

Absent—Morrell, Swain—2.

The minutes of the previous meeting were on motion (reading of bills being omitted) approved as read.

No communications being presented, Freeholder Halliday moved that the rules be suspended, and that the Board proceed to the payment of the bills, which motion was adopted.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

By County Road Committee:

Elizabeth, May 12, 1896.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Gentlemen:—The Committee on County Roads to whom was referred the matter of damages claimed by Justus Morris, etc., would report that that they have inquired into the matter, but are not able at this time to report any recommendation in the same.

J. Martin Roll,
James C. Ogden,
Geo. W. Littell,
Henry Krouse,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Miller, received and placed on file.

By special committee on N. J. and Staten Island Ferry Co.:

To the Honorable Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union:

Gentlemen:—Your special committee, appointed at the meeting of May 7th eighteen hundred and ninety-six, to consider the petition of the New Jersey and Staten Island Ferry Company, in which said company requests this Board to fix the rates lawful for them to charge for ferriage, would most respectfully report that on the 8th day of May they visited and made a thorough investigation of the site of the proposed new ferry.

We find that the ferry slip on the New Jersey side is partially completed and that the dredging for the slip on the Staten Island shore is nearly done. We have also ascertained that the authorities of Richmond county, Staten Island, the terminal for said ferry in New York State, through the County Court there have fixed and determined the ferry rates for said company on that side of the ferry, and after due consideration and keeping in view the large amount of capital the company have been obliged to expend for terminal facilities at Elizabethport, have decided to recommend the following schedule of rates; subject, however, to a provision that the Board of Chosen Freeholders may from time to time revise the same as provided by law.

The following are the rates:

For each passenger, five cents.

For each one horse buggy or sleigh, and driver, twenty cents.

For each one horse wagon and driver, twenty five cents.

For each one horse wagon loaded and driver thirty five cents.

For each two horse wagon and driver, forty cents.

For each two horse wagon loaded and driver, fifty cents.

For each man and horse, fifteen cents.

For each horse or mule, ten cents.

For each neat cattle ten cents.

For each sheep, lamb and swine, ten cents.

For all other kinds of merchandise, fifteen cents per one hundred pounds.

Respectfully submitted this twelfth day of May, eighteen hundred and ninety-six.

W. H. Hulskamper,
James C. Ogden,
E. D. Badgley,
John M. Halliday,
John H. Tier,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Farrell, received and placed on file.

By Committee to settle with the Sheriff:

To the Honorable, the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, N. J.:

Gentlemen—Your committee to settle with the Sheriff beg leave to report that they have audited same to the amount of $15,951.91. Of the above amount the Sheriff has paid the County Collector the sum of $2,441.90 on Prosecutor's fees and fines.

F. W. Westcott,
E. D. Badgley,
John H. Tier,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Halliday, received and placed on file.

From the Committee on Public Grounds and Buildings:

To the Honorable, the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, N. J.:

Gentlemen:—Your Committee on Public Grounds and Buildings would respectfully report that during the year ending May 15, 1896, the amount expended for the following purposes, is as follows, viz: For the painting of, and the making of general repairs in public buildings; also the supplying of fuel, gas and water, electric lighting, telephone service, ventilaters and repairs to Grand Jury room, renovating County Clerk's office, etc., the sum of $6,666.80.

John Farrell,
James C. Ogden,
Addison S. Clark,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Krouse, received and placed on file.

By the Committee on Lunacy:

To the Honorable, the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, N. J.:

Gentlemen—Your Committee on Lunacy would respectfully report that the committee have visited the asylum, according to law, and find our patients are well cared for. On May 1, 1896, we had 200 patients in the asylum. Residence as follows: Elizabeth 123, Rahway 23, Plainfield 22, Westfield 4, Linden 4, Springfield 4, Summit 8, Union 8, New Providence 3, Cranford 1, Clark 1.

The number of patients who died through the year is 6; the number discharged is 2. The total cost for the maintenance of the county patients for the last year has been $34,450.96.

Signed:

Fred Miller.
F. W. Westcott,
Addison S. Clark,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Littell, received and placed on file.

From Committee on County Roads:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen:—In accordance with the custom of the Committee on County Roads, we respectfully submit the following report: There has been 6¼ miles of the old county re-gravel and 1½ miles of gutters cleaned. 2¼ miles has been top dressed with clay and 300 feet on North avenue, Cranford, widened, and depressions on North and Central avenues have been filled with stone. This has been done at an expenditure of $14,832.47, which is $67.53 less than the amount appropriated for that purpose.

J. Martin Roll,
Geo. W. Littell,
James C. Ogden,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Tier, received and placed on file.

From Committee on Legal Questions:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen:—Your Committee on Legal Questions would report that during this year there were expenses amounting to $1,017.70.

Respectfully submitted,

Chas. Ehrlich,
John H. Tier,
Noah Woodruff,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Clark, received and placed on file.

From the Committee on Publication.

Elizabeth, May 12, 1896.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen:—Your Committee on Publication would respectfully report that they have expended during the year for Collector's and Auditor's annual report, publishing minutes of the Board, and for such other work as authorized by the committee, the sum of $1,771.44. Respectfully submitted,

W. H. Hulskamper,
E. D. Badgley,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Halliday, received and placed on file.

From Committee on Stationery:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen:—Your Committee on Stationery would report that the amount expended during the year on said account was $2,284.98, which was for stationery, books of records and account books for the several court officers, who by law are entitled to receive their stationery from the Board.

Geo. W. Littell,
W. H. Hulskamper,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Miller, received and placed on file.

From Committee on Discharge of Prisoners:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen:—Your Committee on Discharge of Prisoners beg leave to report that they held regular meetings during the year for the purpose of granting deductions in the sentence of prisoners for good conduct while under confinement in the jail, upon the recommendation of the Warden and approval of the Presiding Judge of the Common Pleas, as provided by law, and in each case when the allowance was asked it was granted. The number discharged was 324. All of which is respectfully submitted.

Henry Krouse,
J. Martin Roll,
F. W. Westcott,
Committee.

On motion of Freeholder Farrell, received and placed on file.

From Committee on Jail Inspection:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen—In compliance with the rules of the Board, the Committee on Jail Inspection herewith respectfully submit their annual report for the year ending May, 1, 1896. Together with that is a carefully prepared report by the Warden, of the receipts, expenditures, number of prisoners, ages, sexes, nationalities, commitments, discharges and cost of maintenance for each prisoner per day, etc.

The receipts amount to four thousand five hundred and eighty two dollars and ninety cents ($4,582.90). The expenditures for all purposes, viz: salaries, provisions, medical attention, clothing supplies, miscellaneous, etc., four thousand thousand five hundred and eighty dollars and ninety cents ($4,582.90). Number of prisoners in custody at beginning of year, 58; committed during year, 746; discharged, 731; remaining, 73; total number of days board of prisoners, 23,357. The average cost per prisoner is twenty cents per day.

During the year the prisoners are daily employed about the buildings in cleaning and attending the furnace, stoking and being generally useful. The very limited expenditures and general good management of the county jail is wholly due to the efficient services of the Warden, Matron and Deputy Warden, who have conducted proceedings agreeably to the entire satisfaction of your committee. It affords your committee great pleasure to say that the management and general condition of the jail has been highly commended by the State Charities Aid Association, through its efficient Secretary, Mrs. B. Williamson, Jr., and also by the Grand Jury of the county, as expressed in a very complimentary resolution dated Feb. 20, 1896. This condition, in the opinion of your committee, is highly creditable to the county, and no doubt, gratifying to the Board.

Your committee would further report that at their meeting on May 5, Dr. Robert J. Montfort was unanimously appointed physician to the county jail at the usual compensation.

Respectfully submitted,

John H. Tier,
Henry Krouse,
Noah Woodruff,
Committee.

Report of John C. Blore, Warden:

In connection with my report, I would like to state that the general health of the prisoners has been good during the year, and the Jail Physician, Robert J. Montfort, was prompt in his attendance and in every respect satisfactory. With many thanks to the Committee on Jail Inspection for their co-operation with me in the discharge of my duties as Warden, and with special thanks to the Director for his assistance and advice in all matters pertaining to the general good management of the county jail, I remain, respectfully yours.

John C. Blore, Warden.

On motion of Freeholder Littell received and placed on file.

NEW BUSINESS—RESOLUTIONS.

By Freeholder Farrell:

Resolved, That the County Collector transfer from the miscellaneous account to the court account, $864.08; to the lunacy account, $1,460.96; to the bridge account, $693.62; to election account, $54.79; from stationery account to election account, $700; from coroners account to election account, $21.56; from jail account to interest account, $1,917.17; from public building account to interest account, $406.55; from incidental account to interest account, $917.28; from incidental account to members' pay, etc., $354.02.

Freeholder Woodruff moved the adoption of the resolution, and on roll call it was unanimously adopted.

By W. H. Hulskamper:

Whereas, The New Jersey and Staten Island Ferry Company on the seventh day of May, eighteen hundred and ninety-six, filed their petition with this Board praying that the Board would fix the rates of ferriage that it might be lawful for said ferry to charge upon the ferry now in process of construction, and to be operated by them between Elizabethport and Staten Island, running from the foot of East Jersey street, in Elizabeth, to a point on the Staten Island shore nearly opposite; and

Whereas, The said petition was duly referred to a special committee to investigate and consider the same; and

Whereas, The said committee have examined the site of the proposed ferry and have considered the advantage likely to accrue to the citizens by reason of the establishment; and

Whereas, After due consideration of the report of said committee, the Board has arrived at and determined the rates that may be charged upon said ferry; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the following rates of ferriage be and the same are here by fixed as the lawful rates that may be charged and collected by said ferry company for the transportation of travelers, property and effects over and across the said ferry, namely:

For each passenger, five cents.

For each horse and buggy or sleigh, and driver, twenty cents.

For each one horse wagon and driver, twenty-five cents.

For each one horse wagon loaded and driver, thirty-five cents.

For each two horse wagon and driver, forty cents.

For each two horse wagon loaded and driver, fifty cents.

For each man and horse, fifteen cents.

For each horse or mule, ten cents.

For each neat cattle, ten cents.

For each sheep, lamb and swine, ten cents.

For all other kinds of merchandise, fifteen cents per one hundred pounds.

Resolved, That nothing herein contained shall prevent the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county, when in their judgment the interests of the community require it, from time to time revise, alter, amend or make new ferry rates, to be charged upon said ferry.

Freeholder Farrell moved the adoption of the resolution and on roll call it was adopted unanimously.

Freeholder Farrell moved to adjourn, which was carried and the Director declared the Board adjourned sine die.

Prospering Greatly.

At the National convention of the Federated Woman's Clubs, in session at Louisville, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall read a report of the correspondence department of New Jersey. She said: "I will say that our State Federation has prospered greatly, and that it promises to be of great benefit and value to the clubs of our State. We have again nearly trebled our record. Instead of twenty-three, we now have sixty-two federated clubs. Of these, thirteen are directly associated with the General Federation; one of the thirteen, the Elizabeth Union of Literary Clubs, comprises thirteen clubs, with a membership of 308."

A.G. HOOLEY GETS $6,500

TOWN OF MONROE THUS SETTLES HIS SUIT FOR $100,000 DAMAGES.

Mr. Hooley Fell From a Risky Bridge and Was Severely Injured—Held the Town Liable for Hurts Received.

The case of Abraham G. Hooley, of this city, against the town of Monroe, N. Y., was set down for trial in the Orange County court early this week, and a large number of people came to court to hear the case argued. They were disappointed, however, as the case was settled out of court. Last Saturday the Town Board of the town of Monroe and the Trustees of the village came to Goshen and with their legal advisers, Vanamee, Watts & Vail, a settlement was arranged with the plaintiff's counsel, M. H. Hirschberg and W. F. O'Neill, whereby Mr. Hooley is to receive the sum of $6,500 from the town of Monroe.

It will be remembered that Mr. Hooley brought suit to recover $100,000 for injuries received by falling from an unprotected bridge located in the village of Monroe last fall. Mr. Hooley is still in a serious condition as a result of the fall, and probably will never recover. His lower limbs are completely paralyzed and have been utterly useless since the accident. His spine was also seriously injured. He was brought to Goshen on Saturday, May 30th, strapped to a stretcher, and has remained in that condition since. While in Goshen he was cared for at the home of Dr. J. H. Thompson. He was accompanied by his mother.

Monday night Mr. Hooley was taken to Monroe on train No. 2, and for the present he will board with Mrs. B. F. Montanye, in that village. Since the accident and up to the time of being brought to Goshen, he had been under treatment at a private hospital in New York. Mr. Hooley's business is that of a stock broker in New York city.

QUESTION FOR CANDIDATES.

Catholics Want Views of Presidential Aspirants as to the A. P. A.

The Diocesan Union of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Newark met in the Young Men's Catholic Union Hall, in Harrison, Sunday afternoon. Delegates were present from all parts of the diocese. President, Murphy of Jersey City, presided.

The Rev. Peter Bogan, of Rahway, the spiritual adviser of the union, offered a resolution, which was adopted, providing that the following questions be forwarded to every man who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for the Presidency:

In the event of your election to the Presidency of the United States, will you, in the administration of that office, make any discrimination against Roman Catholics on account of their religious beliefs?

The resolution offered by Father Bogan, it is said, was presented at the request of Bishop Wigger of Newark. The Marquette Club, St. Louis, notified the Bishop that it had taken similar action, and requested some organization in his diocese to take it.

As soon as men are mentioned prominently for the Democratic nomination the same question will be asked of each of them.

Larger Pipes Needed.

The work of the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company in substituting four inch for two inch gas mains on West Front street, will be completed as far as Washington avenue, it is thought, by tomorrow night. The old pipes have been laid for thirty years or more, but they were too small to meet the demand. When taken up the pipes were found to be in an excellent state of preservation.

The Culver Trial.

Lawyer Charles VanWinkle went over to New Brunswick on Monday and secured from the Prosecutor of Middlesex County, twenty-five subpoenas for witnesses in the case of the State against Nathan Culver, the old man charged with alleged attempt upon a sixteen-year-old school girl on Park avenue near the county line on March 10th last. The case is set down for trial at New Brunswick on June 17th.

Parade of Sunday-school Scholars.

Crop Report.

John Neagle furnishes the following crop report to the New Jersey Weather Bureau this week: "Sunshiny weather has prevailed, with 0.45 inch of rain on 21st ult. and 0.10 on 7th. Crops generally looking well, except grass, which is short. Ave. temp., 65 deg."

MYSTERY OF MRS. SCOTT

PITIFUL STORY OF DESERTED AND HEARTBROKEN WIFE.

Cast Off by Her Husband She Has Drifted About Until She Has Arrived in Westfield With Two Children.

"Oh, dear Lord, thou art so good!" was the cry that broke from the pale lips of a poor Scotch woman living in the rookery on Central avenue, in Westfield, Tuesday, when two little boys brought her six dollars, and with the tearful prayer she fell upon her knees.

Three years ago in a New York village this woman was a happy wife, and the mother of two children. Her husband, a Scotchman, had a prosperous business. For three years they were happy and contented, and then he cast her off and went away. The deserted wife surmised that he had gone to Scotland, and selling her effects she took her children and followed him there. His welcome was to send her back to New York. She went from the ship to Picton, N. J., on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, and charitable neighbors found her there, occupying a shanty, her bed a pile of straw, a barrel for a table, and without food or fuel.

Mrs. E. L. Massett attended to her wants, and Thomas H. Love became interested in her. She got two rooms over her in a rookery on Central avenue, and the women of the churches furnished them and found her work. Several children arranged a picnic and lawn festival and realized six dollars for her benefit.

Refusing to give her name and known only as "Mrs. Scott," the poor creature is a mystery to the townsfolk. At night pitiful moans are heard to come from her rooms, but the neighbors cannot discover the reason for her sorrow. She goes to the post-office daily, and whispers a name to the clerk at the window. He shakes his head, and she goes out with tears streaming down her face, leading her two little children and telling them that "some time it will come."

POUND OF ANYTHING THE FEE.

Novel Sort of Admission Fee to the Army Meeting Saturday Night.

The meeting of the Salvation Army last Tuesday was attended by about 200 people who witnessed the conversion of one person and the swearing in of another by Brigadier Evans. There was the usual enthusiasm of the soldiers who allowed no dull moments to mark the meeting. The Central Victory Boys are a lively lot of fellows, and headed by Adjutant Taylor, with his "Big Ben" banjo, they are just the sort of workers that will bring life into the local corps. It has been decided to hold a "pound" meeting Saturday night at which every visitor is expected to bring a pound of something to eat. The Victory Boys are naturally strong and hearty and of course it goes without saying that they have to eat. The Salvation Army lassies are not as flush as they might be and this method has been adopted to relieve the treasury as much as possible in the expenditures for the maintenance of the barracks. The meeting Saturday night will be led by F. H. Martin, a well-known Plainfielder.

Col. Higgins, secretary to Commander Booth-Tucker, will accompany Mrs. Booth-Tucker to this city next week and will be one of those to deliver an address. It is the intention to make this meeting a rouser.

GALA DAY FOR SAENGERBUNDS.

The Local German Society to Entertain Visiting Countrymen.

The members of the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein are making great preparations for their forthcoming anniversary on Sunday next, when it is expected delegations will be present from the National Turn Verein of Newark and Brooklyn; from the two societies in Passaic; the Norwegian Society, of Brooklyn, and from societies in other nearby places. In the forenoon there will be exhibition turning until noon, after which a substantial dinner will be served by the ladies of the Plainfield Saengerbund. Early in the afternoon a march will be made to Keller's Grove, and sports will occupy the rest of the day.

Somerset County Treasurer.

The report of E. B. Allen, Somerset County Collector, shows the total receipts to be $233,006.12, and the total disbursements $223,463.30, leaving a cash balance of $9,936.82. The total note indebtedness of the county is $80,205, and the accrued interest makes the total county indebtedness, $81,676.60.

DECKED OUT IN ROSES.

CHARMING FESTIVAL GIVEN IN THE FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The Chapel Decorated With Flowers and Bunting in a Most Artistic Manner—Those Who Served the Good Things.

The women of the First Presbyterian church could scarcely have presented a more pleasing sight than the rose festival which was held in the chapel of the church last Tuesday. With a general committee composed of Mrs. Howard Pope, Mrs. Dunn, Miss Blisch, Miss Harold and Miss Abbott, one can readily see that the affair was sure to be a success. This committee had supervision over the entire affair, as well as the decorations, which were as beautiful as art and good taste could produce. Naturally, there was a profusion of roses, and they were of the choicest variety. During the afternoon the attractive arrangement was the flower booth decked handsomely with a combination of pink bunting, roses and ferns. At this booth Miss Nora Williams, Miss Helen Boice, Miss Margaret Cave and Miss Eva Dayton, were in charge. Another centre of attraction was the lemonade well, arranged prettily with a roof of straw, entwined with roses. Those who looked after the thirsty were Miss Henrietta Blisch, Miss Maag and Miss Bittenbender.

In the corner was a candy table neatly decorated with roses and ferns, while an abundance of delicious homemade candy was the means of attracting many, who had no trouble in being waited on by Miss Bittenbender, Miss Prudence, Miss Agnes Blair, Miss Overton and Miss Remsen. The committee on strawberries consisted of Mrs. Dunn, Miss Herring, and Miss Abbott. Miss Blisch and Miss Flora Petrie had in charge the cakes and Miss Harold, Mrs. Pope and Mrs. Lounsbury the ice cream.

About the rooms, at convenient points, tables were to be found, where one would set down and receive the attention of the charming young women who were only too anxious to be at your service. The waitresses were the Misses Mary Lucky, Grace Overton, Lillian Glein, Eleanor Vanderventer, Edith Pruden, Jessie Pruden, Jessie McKillop, Evelyn Searing, Bertha Wilcox, Miriam Wilcox, Fanny Lee, Lottie Wilbur, Lydia Morrison, Olive Newell, Ada Dunham and Kittie Nevins.

The affair was given for the benefit of the Sunday school and the large number present freely emptied their pocketbooks for the good cause. The success of the festival was due to the earnest and untiring efforts of those who arranged it and assisted.

Suggestion for Railway Magnates.

It has been suggested, and perhaps reasonably so, too, that it would be an excellent idea for the street railway managers to erect neat little and attractive looking waiting places at the corner of Park place, viz: at Watchung and North avenues, at the Somerset street terminus near the mountain, and at Front and Somerset streets. This would be especially beneficial in stormy weather, and all that would be required is a simple awning which may be raised and lowered as occasion demands. Many persons do not care to block the sidewalks and doors of merchants while waiting for a car, but they are neverth eless compelled to do so, or else stand in the rain. Further basis for complaints from merchants care to have their doorways blocked, simply to accommodate the street railway patrons.

Arguing for Unionism.

The Carpenters' and Joiners' Union was addressed last night in their rooms the Exempt Firemen's Hall by P. J. McGuire, one of the most prominent labor men in the country. A strong endeavor is being made by the Union to enroll every journeymen into their order, and Mr. McGuire's address was concerning the benefits to be derived by organized labor. His argument was logical and well-pointed.

Suit Against Cranford.

William Robinson, of Cranford, has begun suit in the Circuit Court against the Township of Cranford for $5,000 damages. The action is based on the fact that the committee ran the sewer through property belong to him without obtaining his consent. He was offered $2.50 to settle his claim, but he refused to accept any sum less than the amount for which he has brought suit.

HOBART THEIR CHOICE.

NEW JERSEY DELEGATES BOOM HIM FOR VICE-PRESIDENT.

And the Majority of the Delegation Are for McKinley for First Place—General Sewell Remains Uncommitted.

Most of the members of the New Jersey delegation to the National Republican Convention will start for St. Louis next Saturday, in the train leaving Jersey City at 2.12 p. m. At Philadelphia, Senator Sewell's private car will be attached to the train. Gov. Griggs, ex-Congressman John Kean, and Elisha B. Gaddis, of Newark, will be the guests of General Sewell on the trip. Chairman Franklin Murphy of the State Committee, who is one of the delegates at large, was invited to become one of the party, but a business engagement in Chicago prevented his acceptance. He will start for Chicago early in the week, but will return in Gen. Sewell's car.

Garret A. Hobart left for St. Louis Monday to attend the meeting of the National Committee, of which he is vice-chairman. Delegates Geo. Hires and Robert E. Hand, of the First District, will leave on Friday afternoon with a party of Trentonians, which will also include Congressmen Loudenslager and Pitney.

The New Jersey delegation, it is claimed, stands sixteen for McKinley to one for Reed, and three who have not declared a preference. One of the latter is General Sewell, who has resisted all attempts to induce him to signify his choice. The McKinley men express a confidence that the whole of New Jersey's twenty votes will go for the Ohioan on the first ballot.

A conference of the delegates will be held on Monday evening, June 15th, after the arrival of the party in St. Louis, to select a chairman and members of the convention committees. General Sewell will undoubtedly be chosen as chairman by reason both of his position of the party in the State and because of fitness and experience. He has been a delegate to every National Convention since and including 1876, and was chairman of the delegation at the last three.

If the New Jersey Republicans can have their way Garret A. Hobart will get second place on the National ticket. All of the delegates except Congress McEwan, of Hudson county, are enthusiastically for him, and the sentiment of the Republican voters is in his favor. McEwan opposition is based upon the fact that Mr. Hobart is a "corporation man."

Hobart buttons made their appearance last week and are worn by all the leading Republicans of the State. A large supply has been secured for distribution among the delegates from other States at St. Louis. The button bears a good picture of the candidate, and surrounding it are the words, "Our choice for Vice-President, Garret A. Hobart." It is expected that ex-Judge J. Frank Fort, of Newark, will make the nominating speech for Hobart.

The general headquarters of the New Jersey delegation will be at the Planters' Hotel, where General Sewell, Vice-Chairman Hobart, Governor Griggs, ex-Congressman Kean, Franklin Murphy and some of the other delegates have secured quarters. A special headquarters for Jerseymen and place for holding conferences will be at Clark avenue and Fourth street, in Mr. Murphy's building.

A Faithful Veteran.

There is perhaps no G. A. R. veteran in the State who is more loyal to the cause than Uncle "Billy" Moore, of Post 73. On Decoration Day he took it upon himself to go to Warrenville on foot and from there to Springdale, Mt. Horeb and Mt. Bethel, where he flagged and decorated the graves of the dead soldiers. In some of the cemeteries he was assisted by the Misses Coddington. Comrade Moore walked over fourteen miles in all and he has not before received public recognition for his services, although this is his annual custom.

Mr. James Perdue, an old soldier residing at Monroe, Mich., was severely afflicted with rheumatism but received prompt relief from pain by using Chamberlain's Pain Balm. He says: "At times my back would ache so badly that I could hardly raise up. I tried various remedies but could not be here to write these few lines. Chamberlain's Pain Balm has done me a great deal of good and I feel very thankful for it." For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

A. L. Wooster, a prominent citizen of Osseo, Mich., after suffering excruciatingly from piles for twenty years, was cured in a short time by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, an absolute cure for all skin diseases. More of this preparation is used than all others combined. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front Street.

STATE MUST ACT FIRST.

H. C. JACKSON MAKES A STATEMENT IN THE JAIL.

Hopes to Have the Prosecutor Move for His Release and Thereby Get an Exoneration—Asks for Better Quarters.

George Bodine, a New Brunswick lawyer, representing Lawyer Ransom, who is acting as counsel for H. C. Jackson, appeared before Judge Strong in the Middlesex County Court, Wednesday, and presented a letter from Jackson asking that he make a request to the Sheriff to remove him from the jail proper to witnesses' quarters, where it would be more agreeable for him. At present he is confined in a cell with Thomas Donlon, who was indicted for the murder of Edward Matterson.

The request will probably be made by the Judge immediately.

County Prosecutor Voorhis announced today that if the experts of chirography announce a favorable decision in the similarity of handwriting on the two letters alleged to have been written by Mrs. Jackson, he will call the case in court Friday and move for the discharge of Jackson.

In an interview this morning Jackson said that he did not want any proceedings brought to release him from custody on habeas corpus proceedings. He preferred, he said, to have any action seeking his release to be brought by the State and then it would be in the nature of an exoneration for him. Otherwise he preferred to remain in custody and await the action of the Grand Jury. He has no fear but what his innocence will be proven.

The question of whether Mrs. C. H. Jackson killed herself or was shot at the hands of her husband does not seem to be determined with any degree of rapidity, although every New York paper is printing everything in Jackson's favor. Some of the papers have even gone so far as to instruct the reporters who are covering the case to write their story in Jackson's favor. The secrecy about the alleged farewell letter was removed yesterday. It reads:

My Darling Jack: Sleep and worry have nearly driven me insane. The cares of motherhood are more than I can bear. Six years ago I thought that all poetry of love was in the natural relation of husband and wife—the awful responsibility. The fear that our children may grow up bad, haunts me, especially as our older darling told me today a soldier's life was the grandest and noblest for it.

It is cheerless to live not seeing one's husband's every day. Forgive me, dear Jack. What I want love, strength, and comfort he is not here to give it to me.

When you get this I shall be beyond your reproaches. Far away in another sphere I may find love. Jack, dear, I have loved you, love, and be good to the boys. Your wife, MARY.

This letter adds mystery to the affair because it is said that Mrs. Jackson seldom used "Mary" as a signature, generally signing "Mae." The letter which is known to have been written by her to her mother concerning the proposed trip abroad, and which has been used to determine and prove a similarity in the handwriting, is signed "Mae."

County Prosecutor Voorhees says he is awaiting expert testimony on the handwriting to determine whether or not there is any reasonable doubt as Jackson's guilt.

ASSESSMENT MAP NOT READY.

Aggravating Delay on the Part of Watchung Avenue Commissioners.

In regard to the Watchung avenue extension on this side of the brook, mention of which was made by Councilman Tolles at the adjourned meeting of the Council last evening, a Daily Press representative, in conversation with a prominent citizen, learned something of interest.

It was stated at the meeting that the report was all ready to be placed in the hands of the Corporation Counsel. This fact is undoubtedly true, but the necessary material had not, up to yesterday, been given to F. A. Dunham, so that he could make the assessment map.

A strange part of the proceedings is that no member of the Council has shown any great interest in the extension, while the borough has been making rapid strides. Another fact is apparent and that is it will soon be time for the Corporation Counsel to take his summer vacation, and then necessity the matter will be laid over till fall. The people are all anxious to have the street go through and quick action will meet their approval.

THE TRAMPS RELEASED.

NO EVIDENCE OF BEING IN THE TRAIN WRECKING ATTEMPT.

By Advice of the Railway Detectives, Who Found they Told a Straight Story, They Were Let Go by the Judge.

Unless "Larry" Wallace can produce some very unexpected evidence, the chances are that he will have to stand trial for the attempt to wreck the Jersey Central train. The railroad company think that they have captured the right man and so make no attempt to have the three itinerant umbrella menders held for the Grand Jury. Justice Nash received word from the railroad officials Tuesday that they did not think the examination set down for today, necessary, so yesterday afternoon the three men were allowed to go on their own recognizance to appear before the Grand Jury when it meets again next September.

There was no evidence against them except that they were in the vicinity when the ties were placed on the track. They all told the same story and declared they had nothing to do with the matter. Wallace's statement, at the time he was captured to Sergeant Kiely and Boundsman Mattox, that they had done the dastardly, act was of little account.

Two days ago the police received a letter from a man in Clinton, N. J., telling how three tramps had entered a house there and carried away everything they could lay hands on, and asking that the three umbrella repairers be examined to see if they might be the tramps in question. Chief Grant replied to the letter, but thought that the men were not the ones wanted for the robbery, as either plunder or money seemed a minus quantity among the three prisoners. As nothing more has been heard from Clinton it is supposed that the authorities of that place thought the same.

The three men, James Emerson, John Donohue and Thomas Burns, were released at about 3.20 o'clock and left town soon after.

RESCUED FROM A WATERY GRAVE.

A Seven-Year-Old Lad Falls Off the Elm Street Bridge.

A narrow escape from drowning occurred last Monday at the Elm street bridge. Roy Coddington, of Linden avenue, aged seven years, together with some other boys, were playing about the edge of the bridge, when suddenly Roy Coddington fell in the brook at a deep point. The other boys were too small to assist him, and it just happened that Chief Marshal Wilson and George Sauers were nearby. The men with some difficulty rescued the boy, and after getting the water out of him he was sent home, none the worse for the accident.

Dr. Smith's Trial Postponed.

Dr. Charles Smith, of Rahway, was to have been placed on trial at noon Monday in the Union County Court of Common Pleas on an indictment found against him at the instance of the Union County Medical Society for practising without a license. The penalty for conviction on a first offense is thirty days in the county jail and a fine of $25. The defendant is about 65. Owing to the absence of a Camden physician connected with the State Medical Board, the trial was put off until tomorrow.

Former Plainfielders Dead.

The death of Miss Caroline W. Jacobus, who formerly resided with her parents on East Front street, occurred at Norfolk, Va., last Wednesday. She was 23 years of age. Interment was at Pittsburg, Pa.

James H. Dederick, who formerly resided on West Seventh street, died Sunday at Bayonne.

Notable Event for Plainfield.

It is now the intention of the street railway company to formally open the lines on Saturday. Officials from both the city and borough have been invited to take a ride and the event will be an auspicious one.

If it required an annual outlay of $100.00 to insure a family against any serious consequences from an attack of bowel complaint during the year there are many who would feel it their duty to pay it; they simply could not afford to risk their lives, and those of their family for such an amount. Any one can get this insurance for 25 cents that being the price of a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In almost every neighborhood some one has died from an attack of bowel complaint before medicine could be procured or a physician summoned. One or two doses of this remedy will cure any ordinary case. Don't delay a case. Can you afford to take the risk for so small an amount? For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

COLLECTING BADGE BUTTONS.

The Latest Popular Craze Started by the Manufacturers of Bicycles.

People are collecting badge buttons nowadays, and there are already collections that number hundreds. The politician gathers in the emblem of party strife and victory, the bicyclist exchanges club buttons with brother bicyclist, the business man keeps a collection to see what his rivals are doing, the small boy to see how many badge buttons he can possess, and the new woman follows suit because every one else is doing it. The craze threatens to become even more popular than the button strings made by children 30 years ago.

The bicyclists started the fad. Every person who buys a bicycle feels himself bound, while the new sense of ownership is strong, to wear a button badge that proclaims the superiority of his particular wheel. The secret organizations of bicycle clubs it had become popular, but with the general public there was apathy. At this show the few manufacturers who gave away badge buttons as souvenirs at the show found by actual rivals to be attracting so much attention that before the show was over everybody was offering buttons to visitors, and hundreds of thousands were given away. Men, women and children came forth decked with numbers of the little disks. This started the craze. To get more than one's neighbor was the universal desire, and from bicycling buttons the rage has spread until every kind of button is sought for. For a long time manufacturers of badge buttons tried to make advertisers see their value, but they met with no encouragement until the bicycle dealers took the idea up. Then the badge button leaped into the swim.

The politicians early saw the value of badge buttons, and the number used for political booming is enormous. One of the leading firms turns out over 500,000 buttons each day, and is behind in its orders. At present the great demand is for political buttons. Whatever the character of the button, the collectors are diligently harvesting the supply as fast as it appears. The demands made by button collectors upon one firm manufacturing badge buttons have become so great that it has prepared a circular enumerating 184 different varieties of bicycle buttons which it has for exchange. The same firm is getting out other lists for general collectors, embracing other buttons besides the bicycle badges. It is not out of the ordinary run for this firm to receive by mail checks ranging from ten to fifty dollars for badge buttons, every one of different design.

The circus is the latest employer of this form of advertising, and the provincial towns are to be well decorated with the novelty. The craze has spread to Canada. The political situation there has seen the advent of the badge button, and on the queen's birthday a vast number of buttons are to be sent forth showing the portrait of the queen on a white ground.—N. Y. Sun.

WOMAN IN SPAIN.

Illiterate and Wretched, Her Lot Is Very Deplorable.

If there be any truth in the statement that the civilization of a country is to be measured by the status of its women the Spanish kingdom is on the verge of barbarism. Educationally it is below Turkey, China, Japan and even Siam. Seventy-two per cent. of its adults are illiterate. As between the sexes the figures are 60 per cent. for men and 84 for women. "A large ladies' library" in Madrid usually consists of 60 or 70 trashy paper-covered novels. If a woman—or man, for that instance —requires a higher education they must go abroad. Very few go. The social conditions make women worse than chattels. A young girl seldom allowed to play in the open air. From the age of eight until at least 30 she never goes alone in the street nor is allowed to speak to or approach a man except in the presence of a duenna. Usually she is married off by her parents, as in France.

Marriage means a change of masters, the husband replacing the father or the guardian. She is raised in ecclesiastical darkness and knows it is her duty to accept her lot as the will of Heaven, no matter how horrible it may be. Divorce from a husband who has murdered her only child would be a mortal sin. Under such circumstances most women in that land grow up mere children in intelligence and knowledge. At 30 few of them know as much as American girls of ten. For those who are discontented with their lot the convent doors are always open. The number of nuns and monks is enormous. As a class they are consumers and not producers, and are therefore a grievous burden on the community. Woman's wages are insignificant, and the fields in which she can labor may be counted on the fingers of one hand. The universal illiteracy is appropriately accompanied by a poverty and a low moral standard. The industrial classes are in despair and are continually immigrating to other Latin lands. The best types of Spanish womanhood are to be found in the South American republics. —N. Y. Mail and Express.

Phenomenon of the Tide Rip.

A "tide rip" phenomenon of the sea was encountered in the Indian ocean recently by the ship Francis, which arrived at this port the other day. The tide ran in many directions, apparently almost at the same time, and the big ship was whirled around by it like a top or took peculiar and erratic sheers until she became uncontrollable and could not be kept on course. It was feared at times that she would go to pieces, for the tide seemed to increase in force. For 14 hours the Francis was at the mercy of this peculiar action of the ocean currents, and soon afterward a cyclone struck her and partially dismasted her, a disaster which has been before reported. — Philadelphia Record.

SAVED BY A FAITHFUL DOG.

Henry Hohlt May Thank His Bulldog for Driving Off the Buffalo.

The next time that Henry Hohlt goes out to interview his herd of buffaloes at Lincoln park he will probably guage it it through the cracks of the fence and not run the risk of having his epidermis perforated by a pair of bovine horns. The other afternoon Hohlt donned a suit of cowboy clothes cut by a pattern approved by Texas Jack Crawford when he was here. Then he mounted a fiery mustang and entered the inclosure where his buffaloes are kept to drive them into pens. They objected vigorously, but Henry was not to be bluffed. One old bull was particularly pugnacious and insisted upon making life a burden for the mustang. Several vigorous lunges at the mustang were avoided by the sensible animal with dispatch.

A bulldog belonging to Mr. Hohlt had been viewing the trouble from afar. Finally he seemed to have decided to take a hand. With a run only paralleled by that celebrated spurt made by Salisbury last fall at the same park, he caught the bull by the nose and performed a few revolutions around his head as the old fellow swung it a time or two for luck. Having shaken the dog loose, the animal made a wild dive for him. He missed his prey, and then started for the horse. The latter stumbled and fell, precipitating his rider to the ground and rendering him unconscious. The bull then attacked the horse and killed him.

The dog appeared to realize the position occupied by his unconscious master. He scented the bull's blood, and so persistently that the animal turned his attention from the horse to the dog. A wild chase followed, in which the dog gave one of the prettiest exhibitions of racing ever witnessed. Behind the bull was rushed in following his little tormentor some assistants of Mr. Hohlt saw his predicament and hastened to his rescue. He was still unconscious, and they were compelled to pick him up and carry him to the park hospital. Antivirus had been applied he was brought to the city. He is at his home on South Eleventh street under the care of a physician. Fortunately no bones were broken, but he has severe bruises and painful bruises on his person which will keep him in bed for several days. He was so sore the other night that he was unable to lift a cup of coffee to his lips.

Mr. Hohlt attributes his escape to the fidelity of his dog, which made it so interesting for the buffalo that he was unable to dispatch his master when he had him down.—Nebraska State Journal.

A LIFE FOR A MATCH.

Factory Fumes Are Pregnated with Fatal Diseases.

It frequently happens that the fumes inhaled by workmen in match factories destroy life within a few months. A man once attacked by the disease lurking in those factories must abandon hope of recovery. Although matches are apparently very simple little affairs, their manufacture necessitates a large and complex manufacturing plant. The little sticks undergo a long treatment and must pass through many hands before they are capable of striking a light.

The apparently harmless sulphur tips are in reality a deadly poison and the fumes arising from this mixture when in course of preparation cause terrible suffering and ultimate death. Although called sulphur matches, the little sticks are in reality tipped with a complex mixture composed of glue, chlorate of potash, phosphorus and whiting—a combination frequently used for suicidal purposes.

The poisonous fumes first attack the teeth which decay. Although all sorts of devices are employed to keep them from getting in the mouth, they generally manage to do so. If all the teeth are perfectly sound the fumes soon start the decay. As soon as this action has commenced the decayed part spreads rapidly toward the jaws. All the teeth are affected in a short time and the disease, when it has once taken root in this way, can never be driven out.

The effect of this action is to rapidly loosen every tooth in the sufferer's head, so that they will fall out of their own accord. Before this happens, however, the poison has spread to the jaw and taken a firm grip upon it. The pain which the victim suffers in the meanwhile is exceedingly sharp. The course of the disease never varies. Having reached the jawbone, it soon covers it and the bone becomes in this way actually coated with a deposit of sulphur.

The only possible way to give the victim any relief is to remove the bone. This heroic measure has been tried several times in New York city, with more or less success. The operation is exceedingly painful.—N. Y. Journal.

The Earliest Sword.

In the early ages, before men knew aught about civilized ways, they lived in caves and had to protect themselves not only from the attacks of animals, but from those of their human brothers as well. The first weapon was the unsurround fingers shaped was a war club. Experience, however, soon taught them that a deadlier blow could be delivered with a weapon that would cut rather than crush, and they made the hatchet. Some day some one discovered a substance in the secret stores of the good brown earth on which he finally learned to put a keener edge than he had ever been able to chip on his stone hatchet, and the sword was made.—Chicago Chronicle.

The Force of Habit.

Teacher—Your additions are wrong every time; is there no one to help you at home?

"Yes, father does."

"But he always makes the answer too big; what is he, then?"

"A waiter."

"Ah! I see."—Schone Blaue Donau.

UNION COUNTY POLITICS

THE ELIZABETH JOURNAL SUMS UP THE SITUATION INTELLIGENTLY.

There is a Possibility That Both Parties May Come to Plainfield for the Senatorial Nominees—Other Gossip.

The Elizabeth Journal Thursday had the following concerning the political situation in Union county:

The time has not yet arrived for very serious consideration of the candidates who are to be chosen to add strength and popularity to the Republican ticket in this county, but it is not too early to record a few of the suggestions that are in the popular mind.

The Congressional nominee comes first on the list. So far as has been learned, there is but one candidate before the Republicans in this county for this honor, Hon. Charles W. Fowler, the present representative from this district. He is the only one named thus far, and there does not appear to be any desire to name any other man. Party prestige insures a renomination, but, in addition, there is general approval of his record and generous appreciation of the successful manner in which his official duties have been performed. The Republican district convention unanimously endorsed him at Orange, and the nominating convention will do the same.

The question of State Senator is not so easy of solution. The friends of Senator Voorhees are vigorously insisting that he must again accept a nomination. If he finally yields to their wishes the matter will be closed at once in his favor.

But if Senator Voorhees will not again accept a nomination, the situation will become complicated. Who, then, will be the choice of the Republicans? The city of Plainfield may come to the front with a request for recognition, and there is not a Republican in the county but will admit that Plainfield has claims worthy of the utmost consideration and respect. Mr. Charles J. Fisk, alternate from this congressional district to the national Republican convention at St. Louis, is well and widely spoken of in connection with the senatorial nomination. Another who is named as a strong candidate and a worthy man is Assemblyman J. Martin Roll, of Sprinfield, and a third of no less prominence is Sheriff Kyte of Fanwood.

The next office of importance to be filled in this county is that of sheriff. The law does not permit an incumbent to serve two terms in succession, and, therefore, Mr. Kyte cannot be renominated. Several candidates are in the line of preferment in this city. Freeholder Hulskamper, ex-Freeholder Houston, ex-Sheriff Glasby and Captain J. C. Ogden are among the leading aspirants. If the senatorial nomination goes out of Elizabeth the shrievalty nominee will come from this city, and there will be a lively contest for the honor. Whom the chances favor at this time it is impossible to determine.

Should Assemblyman Roll be named for Senator, someone else would have to be selected to succeed him. No contingency seems likely to arise to call for for any other change in the assembly ticket, unless one or more of the present members should decline a renomination.

On the Democratic side there is much haze, with little or no distinct centres of condensation. Some have mentioned Hon. John T. Dunn as the possible Congressional nominee. Prosecutor Marsh is apparently the Democratic choice for Senator, and James E. Martine is also suggested as a possible candidate. The whole question of Democratic nominations is likely to be determined by Senator Smith, of Essex. He will undoubted exert every effort to succeed himself in the United States Senate, and will doubtless insist that the Democrats put up their strongest men. The State Senators elected this year will vote for the next United States Senator, hence Mr. Smith's deep interest in Union county politics.

STRUCK BY A TRAIN, BUT NOT KILLED

A Raritan Citizen Severely Injured on the Track Yesterday.

Thomas Lahey, aged 56 years, a resident of Raritan, was walking along the tracks of the Central Railroad at that place yesterday noon and, becoming absorbed in conversation with engine No. 80, Conductor John Long, and thrown to the side of the track. He fortunately escaped death, but sustained severe injuries about the head, and two of his ribs were fractured. No blame is attached to the railroad company, as he was warned by a man at the station of the approaching train.

A Novel Flag Arrangement.

Among the many novelties manufactured by the United States Cartridge Company, of Lowell, Mass., who are so ably represented by Thomas H. Keller, are a line of college, national and political pocket flags. The flag is rolled on a staff and carried in a tube, and when unfurled makes a handsome decoration. They are bound to become popular, especially the college colors, and every college man should have one.

AGAINST A WAR SPIRIT.

A FRIEND SAYS PATRIOTISM IS NOT A DISPLAY OF MILITIA.

The Highest Idea of an American Citizen Should be the Love of His Country and Institutions, Rather Than War Thoughts.

The Young Friends' Association held their last meeting for the season at the Watchung Avenue meeting house last Friday. After the opening silence, Henry G. Adams read the first chapter of John.

An account of the society in London and Bristol during the years of 1654-56 was reviewed from Janney's History of Friends.

After a discussion of current events, Edwin Hutchinson, formerly of New York, read an able and interesting paper on "Patriotism." He said, in part: "I think the people of today need not to be incited so much to patriotism as to a better understanding of the word. True patriotism means not only love of country, but also a regard for the best interests of that country, and it has been well said that patriotism is a blind and irrational impulse unless it is founded on a knowledge of the blessings we are called upon to secure and the privileges we propose to defend.

There has recently been a movement all over the land in the name of patriotism, to give the children in our public schools a military training, a bill to that effect having been passed by the New York Legislature a year ago, but failing to receive the Governor's signature, it did not become a law. The highest idea of patriotism of the promoters of this bill seems to have been to teach the children military tactics, rather to instill in them that true love of home country which is founded on a liberal education, a birth right to the rights of citizens, a correct knowledge of the institutions of their country, and an appreciation of their obligations as citizens.

"General Grant, probably the greatest general this country has ever produced, is on record as having said, 'Though I have been trained as a soldier, and have participated in many battles, there never was a time, when, in my opinion, some way could not have been found of preventing the drawing of the sword'."

Margaret F. Hall presented a most encouraging report of the work of the association during the past year.

A committee was chosen to nominate officers for the ensuing year.

After the members had responded to the roll-call with sentiments on truth, the meeting adjourned until the first Wednesday in October.

PLAINFIELD'S SONS HONORED.

They Have Passed Creditable Examinations in New York Hospitals.

It makes little difference whether its medicine, law, surgery or science, when it comes to honors with Plainfield's sons, for they usually secure a large portion of them.

Plainfield is now represented at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia College, by several young men who have been studiously applying themselves to the prescribed course, and in addition to the fact that they have passed their examinations with credit they have also won further honors. Every year there are vacancies at the various hospitals in New York and the students who get through college have the opportunity of entering the competitive examinations at these hospitals. The examinations are exceedingly difficult, and in view of the fact that there are a large number of contestants, it is all the more noteworthy that Plainfield boys should win the honors. Those who completed the course are Robert Tracy, A. V. Rockwell, Eli Long, Charles Borden, Aug. W. Mawson and Robert Tracy entered the contest at the New York Hospital and won with honors, as did also A. V. Rockwell at the City Hospital. This will give them both an experience and practice which is incalculable in their profession, and Plainfield certainly congratulates these young men who have honored the city in which they live.

The graduation exercises will be held Wednesday, June 10th, at Columbia College.

A FOUR MILE RIDE.

When the Street Railway is in Running Order You Can Take Such a Trip.

The narrowing of the tracks of the main line of the street railway is rapidly nearing completion. The connections with the Dunellen branch were completed this morning and the branch is now ready for traffic. By noon today the narrowing of the tracks had been pushed as far as Grant avenue and Fourth street.

When the entire line is completed and in running order, the cars which start at Dunellen will run direct to Netherwood, a distance of four miles. The cars which run on West Fourth street will also run through Somerset street, thus necessitating only one transfer. The stretch of track on Grant avenue, between Front and Fourth streets, will only be used to run the cars of the Dunellen branch to and from the car house.

DEATH OF SAM'L P. DUNN

OCCURRED SUDDENLY AT HIS SUMMER HOME IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

Had Just Got Settled in His Summer Home When Death Came Suddenly—Was Born in New Jersey 56 Years Ago.

As time in its hurried flight is passing into history, so is the grim reaper working with mighty rapidity in removing from Plainfield her valued citizens, and thus it will ever be. Like a thunder bolt from a clear sky, word was received in this city Thursday afternoon of the sudden death of Sam'l P. Dunn, which occurred Thursday noon at his summer home in Newfoundland, N. J. When the news became known it was scarcely realized by the large circle of friends in this city. Mr. Dunn and family had only been at their summer home a few days and were just about getting settled for the summer. Mr. Dunn had never been ill and always enjoyed good health. No particulars accompanied the telegram, which was received by his brother, James M. Dunn.

Mr. Dunn was born in this State fifty-six years ago, and was the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson R. Dunn. In early life he attended school at New Brooklyn, after which he entered the grocery store conducted by his brother on Park avenue. He served several years as clerk, and then secured a position with Randolph & Tucker, New York, flour and grain merchants. He remained there for many years.

Another change followed when he engaged himself in the same business with J. S. Sutphen, also of New York. A few years later he formed a partnership with a Mr. Clark, of New York, under the firm name of S. P. Dunn & Company, and the business is now being conducted under that name at 56 Whitehall street.

About a year ago he sold his property on East Seventh street, and together with his family took up a residence in New York. It has been there custom to spend the summer at New Foundland, where his death occurred so suddenly.

When a young man he was married to Miss Nellie Gardiner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alva Gardiner, of this vicinity. She still survives him together with three children, Miss Nellie Dunn, Miss Evelina Dunn and Harry Dunn. The latter is married and living in the west. One brother, James M. Dunn, of this city, and one sister, Mrs. Stelle Blackford, of Piscataway, also survive him.

Mr. Dunn was a staunch and faithful member of the First Baptist church. He was a man of domestic tastes and loved to be at home surrounded by his family.

PRACTICAL LEGAL LECTURE.

Craig A. Marsh Talks to the Students of a Business College.

The students and friends of Plainfield Business College were favored last evening with a thoughtful and valuable lecture by Craig A. Marsh on several practical features of commercial law. He discussed such subjects as property rights, the law of liens, transferring property, covering up property, constructive frauds, collecting claims, verbal and written contracts, landlords and tenants, the rights of debtors, the rights of mechanics, and the importance of making wills, deeds, or contracts in proper motives. All present seemed deeply interested, and went away feeling that the speaker fully understood his subject. Several of the visitors inspected with genuine the paintings and drawings of the art studio, which is now a regular department of the college.

A PAPER ON HAZELTINE HOUSE

Mrs. George F. Updyke's Interesting Feature of a Missionary Meeting.

The quarterly meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Baptist church was held in one of the class rooms of the church yesterday afternoon, and was well attended. The feature of the meeting was the reading of a paper by Mrs. George F. Updyke, on the "Hazeltine House," at Newton Centre, Mass.

The house is used as a training school for those who desire to become missionaries, and was founded by Mrs. Anne Hazeltine. Several large gifts of money have been given to the house by John D. Rockfellow and other staunch Baptists, and the house has been the means of accomplishing much good. Each room bears an honored name and the New Jersey room is named after the late Mrs. Wm. C. Butler. Following the reading of the paper an informal discussion of the subject was enjoyed.

A False Report

The Dunellen Call says that the report published that Mr. Meresole, of Greenbrook, had been arrested on the charge of theft from his employer, the American Grocery Company, New York, was false.

Helping the Summer Camp.

Contributions in aid of the summer camp for sick children have been received from the Rasores Club and Mrs. H. E. Bowen.

CAMP FOR SICK CHILDREN

KING'S DAUGHTERS TO PROVIDE A PLEASANT AND HEALTHFUL SPOT.

A Place to be Selected on the Watchung Mountain for the Recreation of Weary Mothers and Sickly Babies.

The King's Daughters of Plainfield with hearts filled with sympathy for ailing children, are preparing to care for these sick little ones during the sultry days of the coming summer by sending children with their mothers to the Watchung Mountain, where elevation, a purer atmosphere and a lower temperature is obtained, and where their trained nurse will give gratuitous care to the sick child following the orders of the family physician, and where the weary mother can rest and be relieved from anxiety.

Their effort is meeting with a hearty and cheerful response, but they want to interest the children of Plainfield in this good work. They want the help of the children in caring for these sick babies, and to this end they ask mothers to carefully explain to their children the great good that the contribution of even the smallest amount may do. Contributions, no matter how small, will be gladly received by The Press, The News, or either member of the nurse committee. The names of the contributors will be published, though only the total amount received will be stated, and not each individual offering.

The nurse committee is Emily B. Tracy, Mary S. J. McCutchen, Josephine H. Lapsley.

Wanted at the Boys Camp.

I should like to see five hundred young men in camp at Northfield through July and August. The college students have enjoyed coming here for the past ten summers, and I should like to welcome a large number of young men from the towns and cities who want to spend their vacation where they can have the best of good times. We have tried to plan for the camp so that the expense would be within reach of all. Come for one week or more, as you are able, and we will do our best to make you want to come again. D. L. Moody.

HEALTH BOARD REPORT

TO BE A MONTHLY FEATURE IN THE BOROUGH COUNCIL.

Secretary Honeyman Tells of the Condition of Health Across the Brook—Many Little Matters Also Acted On.

The lobby of the Borough Council chamber was filled with distinguished citizens last Friday, who were interested in the proceedings of the council. Mr. Peck was the only member absent, and after the reading of the minutes of several meetings, both regular and adjourned, the clerk's financial report was presented as follows:

	Balance
Borough	$1,114.36
Fire Department	199.99
Light	391.99
Road	264.37
	$1,994.99
Poor account deficit	87.18
Total balance	$1,868.86

There was also reported $194.20 collected from licenses, fines, etc.

W. J. Buttfield in a communication asked the council to instruct the night marshal to extend his beat to West End avenue, in view of the fact that recently some persons had caused considerable trouble in removing crosswalks, etc., from property in that vicinity. He also asked for a light on the north side of Rockview avenue between Cedar and West End avenues. Mr. Lounsbury stated that the necessary instructions had been given the night marshal as requested. The other matter was referred to the proper committee. A new feature was introduced at this time. It was the presentation of a report from the Board of Health. This body will report each month from now on. Secretary W. E. Honeyman for the board reported that since March, 1896, 215 cases of illness had been treated and reported to the State Board of Health. During that time there had been 5 deaths of children under 3 years of age. There had been 3 cases of scarlet fever, and at present there is 1 case of diphtheria. The inspector is making a house to house canvass, and this work is not yet completed. The Inspector reports several cesspools n very bad condition and has served notices on 30 owners to clean the same. Fifty permits h.s been issued to persons to have their cesspools cleaned. For violations of the health rules 3 persons have been arrested and several parties are now being watched. Both the borough and city inspectors have examined Green brook this week, and a report will be ready soon. The North avenue sewer at the outlet has been examined and put in good condition. The sanitary condition of the borough was reported to be good, and with the exception of the one case of diphtheria there is no contagious diseases.

Julius J. Stahl, of the fire department, reported to the council that J. D. Anderson and George H. Fairchild had served seven years in the department. The matter was referred to the fire, water and lamp committee.

Charles Place, of Grove street, asked the council to replace the board crosswalk at the corner of Grove street and Craig place, with a stone walk, also to have a stone walk laid in front of the First Church of Christ building as far as the Grove street bridge. These matters were referred to the street committee.

Mr. Woolston reported that George Wise, of Scotch Plains, was willing to cart stone to any part of the borough for 38 cents per ton. T. J. McGanns' bid was 37½ cents per ton. The bid of Robert Rusher for furnishing crushed stone was 50 cents. The last two bids were accepted.

The regular batch of bills, including one presented by J. W. VanHorn for $61, were presented ordered paid.

Mr. Woolston reported for the Board of Health that the new dumping grounds had been secured on the outskirts and were now being used. He also reported that a crosswalk had been ordered replaced on the Buttfield property from which place stones were recently removed by some malicious persons. Mr. Woolston also reported specifications, agreements, grade, map and estimates for the opening of Watchung avenue. They were received and taken charge of by the committee.

Resolutions were offered by Mr. Valiant and adopted by the Council, confirming the election of officers in the fire department, also the election of Walter B. Bennett to membership. Another resolution offered by Mr. Valiant providing for the placing of a light at the corner of Grove and Howard streets was adopted.

Mr. Lounsbury offered a resolution that a suitable place be secured for a pound and that the dog ordinance be advertised. It was adopted.

Dr. Cooley stated that many owners of dogs object to paying a license for the reason that there are many other owners who do not pay. The object of the ordinance was to get rid of worthless curs and not to enrich the treasury. He suggested that the dogcatcher be authorized to demand $2 from all owners who were not paying.

Mr. Valiant thought the resolution offered by Mr. Lounsbury providing for a pound would answer every purpose.

Mr. Lounsbury thought it not an easy matter to catch dogs, and that it was difficult to get a competent person, but the Mayor dispelled his doubts by stating that he had an excellent man in view.

Mr. Schutt's resolution that the action of H. N. Spencer in paying street bills to the amount of $143.12 be confirmed, was adopted. The same Councilman reported in the matter of securing $30,000 for the opening of Watchung avenue. He stated that the finance committee had been in communication with several institutions and was of the opinion that the money could be secured at a slight premium of five per cent. in sums of $1,000, payable semi-annually. He read letters from the Fidelity, Title & Deposit Company, of Newark, and W. F. Arnold, of the City National Bank, in which both offered the loan at five per cent.

On Mr. Valiant's motion the cycle ordinance was passed on second and third readings and the same will become a law June 19th. Mr. Woolston voted in the negative. At this time Mr. McLaughlin offered a motion, which was adopted, giving objectors to the vacating of Sycamore avenue, an opportunity to speak on behalf of the same. DeWitt C. Brokaw was the first to speak. He stated that personally he was in favor of having the street opened. The intended action would preclude its going through at a future time. Mr. Brokaw urged careful thought on the part of the Council before anything was given away. He thought that opening the street would benefit all and he was willing to pay his assessment for the same. Harold Serrell stated that he understood an effort was being made to raise money by subscription to carry on the work. He thought it would be wise to suspend action for the present, until it could be seen what would result from the subscriptions. He stated further that should the street be opened it would give direct communication through the Park to Front street, and that would be an advantage. There being no other objections the regular order of business was taken up. Mr. McLaughlin offered a resolution that the plans submitted by F. A. Dunham for the opening of Watchung avenue, be referred to the street committee. The resolution was adopted. Mr. Woolston offered a resolution which was adopted that A. C. Lazzie's bid to furnish crosswalks be accepted. Another resolution by the same member provided for the borrowing of $1,000, the same to be charged to the road account. This was also adopted. Mr. Woolston said that the thirty days limit for laying sidewalks was about up, but as most of the work had promised to put down walks he suggested that the matter be deferred for another month. The suggestion was adopted.

Mayor Hegeman stated that Counsel Charles A. Reed had prepared a contract between the Street Railway Company and the borough and that the same had been executed and was now on file. He also stated that the Plainfield Water Supply Company, had consented to run a main through Front street and several branches would be located through that street, which would give better fire protection. The fire, water and lamps committee, he said, now have under consideration plans for the erection of a house to be used for the old hose carriage now out of use and it is their purpose to secure hose and have a company organized in that locality and thus lessen the risk of fire. Mr. Hegeman expressed his gratitude to the water company for their good will toward the borough and he felt sure that when the plan was in operation he would sleep much better, as the present condition of things was causing him much anxiety. Mr. Lounsbury remarked that the method of running trolley cars was not in strict accordance with the agreement. He did not refer especially to the present condition of affairs but previous to the changes. He said that people had been obliged to wait from fifteen to seventeen minutes overtime for cars, and that they were run on different time most every day. He cited two cases where women waited a half hour for a car. The Mayor suggested that he write to the company, but Mr. Lounsbury said that he had written once and no attention had been paid to his letter.

Mr. Woolston offered a resolution that Dr. J. H. Carman be appointed borough physician, and the resolution prevailed. On Mr. McLaughlin's motion the council then went into executive session to consider the specifications, maps, grade and estimates for opening Watchung avenue, after which the Mayor appointed Julius Stahl to look after the electrical apparatus in connection with the fire department. The council then adjourned.

On a resolution offered by Mr. Lounsbury, Mr. Stahl's salary was fixed at $150 per year.

Justice Karet's Court.

Justice Karet issued summons today in the cases of the Commonwealth Rubber Company against John J. Schorb, Jr., on contract; and the Plainfield Produce Company against Wm. Uhrhahn, on contract, both returnable June 12th.

PARK'S JUNIORS DANCE.

A DELIGHTFULLY INFORMAL AFFAIR GIVEN LAST EVENING.

Attended By Many Young People, Who Gayly Glided O'er the Floor to Sweet Music—The Committee in Charge.

Although it was unusually warm last Friday, the Junior dance of the Park Club was largely attended, and it was not until after midnight that the dancers were satisfied to stop. The warm weather tended to make the dance one of those delightful informal summer events for which the Park Club is famous. Some of the young men appeared in evening dress and others in sack coats, outing shirts and white duck pants. There was also a great variety of gowns among the young ladies.

The dance was gotten up by the regular Junior committee, S.C. Cook and Edmund Rushmore. Mrs. Eli Long filled the position of patroness, assisted by some of the other ladies of the club. Miss Helen A. Hasbrouck presided at the piano.

Among those present were Mrs. Charles A. Reed and Mrs. Ball, the Misses McClure, Kyte, Elsberg, Tyler, Woltmann, Anna Miller, Procter, Shreve, May Shreve, Barlow, Alice Brokaw, Genivieve Daniel, Van Deventer, Hallo Van Deventer, Sarah Long, Laura Long, Alice Thompson, Overton, Ball, Fanny Dryden, Marie Dryden, Howell, and Frost, and the Messrs E. F. Beardsley, Max Munger, Edward Waring, W. L. McClure, John Byers, Jr., Frank Thompson, H. E. Timpson, Chas. Stillman, McCready Sykes, Henry C. Wells, George Ryder, Allen Laing, John Brower, Frank E. Richards, E. Albert Sprowl, A. Willis West, James Leonard, Percy Sandford, Fred. H. Freeman, Arthur Freeman, Lesley B. Daniel, George Schoonmaker, John W. Kirkner, Peter B. Matthews, H. B. Reed, Charles Dupee, Fred P. Taylor, Clarence Peck, Frank Frost, Charles Faber and the Messrs. Ball.

TEMPORARILY BLOCKED.

Borough Council Divided on the Payment of Assessments.

Those who have watched in the hope that at an early date they would see Watchung avenue opened up to the mountains, had better put on eye glasses and save their optics, for what appeared to be a quick and satisfactory settlement of the affair, has disappeared into the misty future and the end is not yet. The Borough Council members went into executive session last evening for the purpose of examining and discussing the plans, grade, map and estimates for the opening of the above named thoroughfare. The session was a heated one for their was a division of great importance. Messrs. McLoughlin, Valiant and Schutt took the stand that the assessments on the property owners should be collected before the street is opened, while Messrs. Lounsbury and Woolston held that the street should be opened first and the assessments be collected afterwards. The question was argued pro and con in a lively manner and the council adjourned standing three to two. Councilman Peck, who was absent, holds the key to the situation by his vote.

The following resolution was offered by Mr. Valiant:

"Be it resolved by the Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield, That it is the sense of this Council that we do not proceed with the opening of Watchung avenue until the assessments are made and collected."

The resolution was adopted 3 to 2, as recorded above. In the session Mr. McLaughlin stated that he had consulted a prominent New York lawyer who had informed him that the assessments would have to be collected first.

A Daily Press reporter interviewed several property owners this morning and they said that they would not pay their assessment before the street was opened if the work was never done.

ART AND MUSIC.

A Pleasant Affair Given at The Chestnuts Yesterday.

The artistic and musical ability of the pupils of the Plainfield Seminary was displayed yesterday afternoon when they entertained their friends delightfully for a couple of hours. The musical part of the programme was opened with a well-rendered selection by Miss Marjory Swan. Miss Mary Wadsworth showed much ability in three selections and Miss Kleb won skillful playing. John Hunn gave evidence of real talent in his executive and did great honor to his instructress. After her pupils had finished their part of the programme, Miss May, so well known in Plainfield, consented to play and charmed her audience with her brilliant execution.

Miss Kenyon then introduced Mrs. Sprague Smith, of New York, the teacher in drawing at the Seminary. She told briefly of her plan of teaching, which is to develop the originality of her pupils, and the good results of her training were shown in the numerous drawings and designs exhibited in the music room.

SELECTIONS OF CURRENT VERSE

One at a Time.

One step at a time, and that well placed,
We reach the grandest height;
One stroke at a time, earth's hidden stores
Will slowly come to light;
One seed at a time, and the forest grows;
One drop at a time, and the river flows
Into the boundless sea.

One word at a time, and the greatest book
Is written and is read:
One stone at a time, and the palace rears
Aloft its stately head;
One blow at a time, the tree's cleft through;
And a city will stand where the forest grew.
A few short years before.

One foe at a time, and be subdued,
And a conflict will be won;
One grain at a time, and the sands of life
Will slowly all be run:
One error, another, the hours fly by;
One day at a time our lives sped by
Into eternity.

One grain of knowledge, and that well stored,
Another, and more on them;
And as time rolls on, your mind will shine
With many a rarnered gem.
Of thought and wisdom. And thus will tell,
"One thing at a time, and that done well,"
Is wisdom's golden rule.

The Battle Song of Spring.

Oh, say have you heard how the song of a bird
Slew winter, delaying so wearily, O?
And look, have you seen, on the upland and lea,
How spring leads his armies so cheerily, O?

Oh come, if you will, to the top of the hill,
Where winter's white tents melt away
In a day,
And see through the snow, in the valleys below,
The first tiny banners that herald the May.

The weapons they wield on this glad battlefield
Are sunshine and winds from the blue southern seas;
The wee spears of grass, they present as we pass,
While woodpecker beats his tattoo in the trees.

Oh never, I wis, was a battle like this,
When nature, as if for a feast, were arrayed;
Oh, never, I ween, met a victor his foe,
With daffydowndillies and birds on parade.
—Frank W. Hunt, in N. Y. Independent.

When Peggy Rides the Wheel.

With sweet dimpled cheeks and demurest eyes
She glides along the street;
There is no girl in all the town
Who is more fair to meet.
Far down the road she loves so well
My tender glances steal;
The wind seems bright, my heart is light,
When Peggy rides the wheel.

The pedals turn with lightning speed;
She looks demurely meek;
The rose on her cheek is never coat
Seems pale beside her cheek.
Oh, if I did but know her well,
I at her shrine would kneel;
I look above, and think of love,
When Peggy rides the wheel.

How individual fair she is Within that suit of gray!
I'm even jealous of the winds
That with her sport play.
I've reached my three score years and ten.
And signs of age reveal,
But all the same, I'm young again
When Peggy rides the wheel.
—Edwin L. Sabin, in N. Y. Bulletin.

If I Had Never Met You.

If I had never met you, dear, life would have been unlived, I ween.
The hours had passed unheeded, and the world so fair, the grass so green;
I had not suffered half the pain, nor felt the ecstasy, nor fear.
The longing and the haunting dread—If I had never met you, dear.

If I had never met you, dear, the untroubled breath of life had been
And after me and all around would lie in calm, from shore to shore.
No storm of passion, tempest-rent, grief, had swept me to this waste so drear:
Dim-eyed regret, nor pain be mine,
If I had never met you, dear.

If I had never met you, dear, I try to think how it would be.
To not have looked into your eyes and felt your heart beat to me;
To have no memory of your voice, your hand-touch or your kiss; a drear,
Unbroken calm may have been life,
If I had never met you, dear.
—St. Louis Republic

The Two Tides.

In a vast tidal-wave of rosy light
The morning breaks on the receding shore.
Where sounds the swelling, multitudinous roar
Of life and labor rising in their might:
While, far behind, with scintillant specks of white,
Drowning the tumult which it deepens o'er,
In earth-long curvature, rolls evermore
The black and silent avalanche of night.
O thou of selfish power and fortune proud,
The world revolves. The night shall overshroud
Its face, unabadowed though it be with
O thou from whose sad life all light seems gone,
Beyond the black horizon line the dawn
In rosy tide comes rolling swiftly on.
—Edward Payson Jackson, in Youth's Companion.

Kitty's Crying.

"Now, pray what are you crying for?"
I asked a little maid
Whose reddened eyes and swollen lids
Her grief betrayed.
Her puzzled look seemed searching for
A something that had strayed.

At last—as one who's looked within
Her mind for what is not—
In answer to my questioning
Her cause of grief, the tot
Solemnly said, "I an' cwied an' cwied an' cwied
So long an' I'se tiredo!"
—Mary E. Bradford, in Boston Globe.

Estelle's Astronomy.

Our little Estelle
Was perplexed when she found
That this wonderful world
Was so big round.

How 'tis held in its place
In its orbit so true
Was a puzzle to her,
With no support in view.

"It must be," said Estelle,
"Like a ball in the air
That is hung by a string;
But I can't see it there!"
—Delia Hart Stone, in St. Nicholas.

Cynthia's Moods.

When Cynthia smiles and all is fair,
Her liquid laughter wooes the air!
Her cheeks so round,
And chin so smooth,
End in a dimple made by love.

When Cynthia frowns and all is drear,
Her scolding splits the atmosphere:
Her jaw so strong
And teeth so small,
Appear to have no end at all.

THROUGH SPACE IN A HURRY.

Duck—40 seconds, or 90 miles an hour.

Sound in Air—5 seconds, or 1,090 feet in one second.

Crow—2 minutes 40 seconds, or 25 miles an hour.

Sound in Water—1 second, or 4,500 feet in one second.

Light—0.000005102 of a second, or 196,000 miles in one second.

Electricity—0.00000347 of a second, or 288,000 miles per second.

Earthquake—⅓ second, as calculated by delicate instruments, or around the world in 3½ hours.

Cannon Ball—1 6-10 seconds, if it traveled at the muzzle velocity of 3,300 feet per second, obtained by some guns.

Electric Railway—59 seconds, on the Baltimore & Ohio railway, at the Baltimore tunnel in September, 1895.

Boat—1 minute 45 seconds, torpedo boat Sokol, made by Messrs. Yarrow, of England, for Russia, and which developed in October, 1895, a speed of 34 miles an hour, nominally Lucania 1¼ 2 minutes 13 4-5 seconds.

Railway Train—32 seconds, in May, 1893, the Empire State express, of the New York Central & Hudson River road, drawn by engine "999," with Engineer Hogan, near Crittenden, N. Y., or a rate of 112½ miles an hour.

Birds—18 seconds. It is said the frigate bird flies 200 miles an hour; a mile in 24 seconds by the kestril, or sparrow-hawk, which is said to fly 150 miles an hour; in 1 minute 9 seconds by a pigeon, when flying 200 miles in an actual race; in 1 minute 15½ seconds by a pigeon when flying 400 miles in an actual race.

FROM DAME FASHION'S MIRROR.

The girl whose bodice is not finished with a belt of some kind is not in the swim. The fiat of fashion says belt or girdle.

A cooching parasol of chameleon-green silk is shown with an enameled handle of green, topped by a lotus-bud of purplish hue.

To be really sincere one's underwear must match one's gown. And above all, must her corset repeat the tones of the trimming of her bodice.

Transparent crepons and grenadines are largely in vogue for dinner gowns, and made over chameleon silk of a decidedly lighter shade are most effective by candle light.

Even among the diaphanous affairs of chiffon and mull masquerading as parasols, the oldtime favorite, the coaching parasol, stands out in stylish and serviceable relief.

The smart women's lingerie is distinguished by elegant simplicity and the old-time underwear, made heavy with lace and elaborate embroidery, is a thing of the past.

Tan-colored shoes of a darker shade than heretofore seen will be the correct summer footwear for little folks, a fashion which commends itself to the small boy, as it does away with blacking.

MILE RECORDS ON A BICYCLE.

Bicycle Straightaway—1 minute 25 seconds, John Green, Cheyenne.

Bicycle on Straightaway—40 3-5 seconds, by P. J. Berks, New Orleans.

Sweet apples, cooked, are very easy of digestion, requiring but 1½ hours.

People digest food that they relish better than that which is distasteful to them.

Beets are among the most difficult vegetables to be digested, requiring nearly four hours.

Cocoa is believed to have no effect either in promoting or retarding the digestion of other food.

Never go hungry to bed. A little light refreshments before lying down conduces to healthful sleep.

No flesh is healthy too soon after the death of the animal. Meat should always be kept at least a day or two before using it.

Nearly four hours are required for the digestion of broiled chicken; a somewhat longer time is needed for the same when fried.

BIG THINGS IN THE BUG LINE.

Venezuela is a little republic but she has one thing that is the biggest of its kind on earth. It is a bug—the largest insect in all the world. The creature is known as the "elephant beetle," and when full grown it weighs nearly half a pound.

In tropical America occur certain huge species of bugs that are closely related to the familiar electric-light bugs of this country. Like the latter, which has been popularly known only since the introduction of the electric light, they fly at night, lieing during the day at the bottom of pools.

There is a butterfly of the Malay Peninsula and Malayan Archipelago which has a spread of ten inches. In India and tropical Africa are found giant forms of those remarkable insects known as "walking sticks." They look like twigs of trees. Some of them measure 18 inches in length. They are related to grasshoppers and katydids.

In Europe giant beetles have a considerable market value, commanding prices in proportion to their size. In London are the regular auctions of insects, and a single butterfly has been known to bring as much as $800. A specimen of the rare and very large Goliath beetle is worth $60. This is the largest beetle of the world, and it first became known through missionaries in the Congo basin.

ORIGIN OF FAMILIAR SAYINGS.

"Going to pot" is a reminder of the days when boiling to death was a legal punishment of parricides.

"To be in a brown study" is a corruption of bore study, a study requiring much thought and contraction of the brows.

"Knocked into a cocked hat" is expressive of the ease with which this article, especially when old, assumed almost any shape.

"As dead as a herring" is an expression arising from the fact that herring lie very quickly after being taken out of the water.

"Please the pigs" is a corruption of "please the pyx," a receptacle used by clergy of the Roman faith to contain the host or sacred wafers.

"To catch a weasel asleep" is indicative of the extreme vigilance of these animals, who are disturbed, and made wide awake by any sound, however slight.

"As jolly as a sand boy" represents the hopping to and fro of a marine insect seen everywhere along our coasts, whose leaps give the idea of mirth and jollity.

The Constitutionalist.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

The Evening Star is the name of a new paper that will twinkle for the Democracy in Elizabeth in a short time.

A woman has taken out naturalization papers in Somerset county. She has the progressive spirit.

A newspaper published in an Oklahoma town, where the women recently carried the election, sent the following order to a supply house: "Please send us one small cut of a hen. Women carried the election here, and I suppose we will have to swing out a hen instead of a rooster."

E. H. Bird is to be commended for his act in accepting as final the decision of the Supreme Court in the collectorship contest, even though he could carry it on to further litigation. In all probability it would have resulted no more favorably for him, and would have involved the city in a lot of unnecessary trouble.

It is intimated that Congress will adjourn this week. It will be a great relief to the country to get rid of it. For most of the season it has done little else than to threaten the business interests of the country and create a general distrust in business circles; to alarm foreign investors in our securities and to bring on a business depression. The country will give a sigh of relief when the gavel falls and the curtain drops on its performances.—True American.

McKinley will be the man nominated at St. Louis, and on a platform the essential feature of which will be a demand for a high protective tariff. With such a platform and such a candidate the Republicans will be tempting fate. A four years trial of the McKinley idea had a most disastrious effect on the country, and whether or not the fictious cry of high wages and roastbeef will inveigle the American people in to accepting him as their chief executive remains a question that will only be decided at the ballot box.

And now that the matter of opening Watchung avenue on the borough side has been brought so forcibly before the people, and the sentiment is so overwhelmingly in favor of rapid progress in starting the work, it is an opportune time to ask what the commissioners on the opening of the avenue on the city side have been or are doing along this line of work. The Press is aware of the fact that no owns property that will be benefited by the opening and who says that as soon as it is an established fact that the street is going through, he will put up a block of stores and flats that will be a credit to the city, and in the construction of which a large number of the city's unemployed would gain work.

W. D. Howells says that the summer girl, as she used to be, is almost extinct. "She may still have a good time," he says, "but I do not see how, if having a good time comes from a triumphant association with the summer man. It seems to me that her relations to him are such as might well be termed not only her vanity, but her just pride. I am sorry to say that if he is still pursuing her, the race has gone on so long in a circle that she has the effect of pursuing him." Mr. Howells is not sorry that this butterfly is disappearing. She was a type that we ought not to wish to have perpetuated. However we may agree with or dissent from the novelist's view, the fact remains that even if the "summer girl" is gone or going, the "girl in summer" is still a glorious reality. And long may she wave.—Evening Sun.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. AN OPPRESSED PEOPLE.

REV. S. FAY MILLS TELLS OF ATROCITIES INFICTED ON ARMENIANS.

At the Mercy of the Bloodthirsty Turks and Unless Relief Comes From Civilized People Many Will Die of Starvation.

An audience that filled the Crescent Avenue church to the doors gathered Sunday afternoon to hear Rev. S. Fay Mills talk on the present situation in Armenia. The service was opened by a hymn; reading of the Scriptures Rev. Dr. Richards; hymn; and a few words by Mayor Gilbert, in which he presented Mr. Mills.

The speaker began by telling of the great needs of the people in Armenia at the present time. He said that $500,000 was needed to carry on the relief work contemplated, $100,000 of which had been received. There are 300,000 people in Armenia who will starve before fall, unless assistance is given them. A recital of the facts should be enough to move us in helping along this work. One thing which we should bear in mind is the fact that Armenia is not a country by itself. It is a part of the Turkish Empire. In the principal cities in Armenia the Turks outnumber the Armenians two to one.

The time between 1847 and 1890 has been called the era of persecution. During that time no Armenian has really owned anything, for the Turks would come and steal whatever they wished and if he resisted, the Armenian would pay for it with his life and no report of his death would ever reach the outside world.

The time between 1890 and the present has been called the era of extermination. The Turks seem determined to exterminate the Armenians and to this end they are butchering the men in large numbers while they subject the women to great indignities. The Armenians are not and never have been a warlike people, but have been very progressive and industrious, and these virtues are what have so aroused the anger of the Turks against them.

Armenia, as a nation, was the first to adopt Christianity. They have been followers of Christ for over 1,700 years. Their Bibles and other religious books are written in a language so ancient that no man of the present day can interpret them.

The speaker recited many of the atrocities which have been committed by the turks. The massacres began in August, 1894, and about that time twenty-seven villages were destroyed. 6,000 men and women killed or taken into the vilest kind of slavery and 6,000 or 8,000 more turned out to starve or freeze to death. A favorite pastime with the Turks is to take an Armenian child by the hair, lift it from the ground and hack it to pieces with a sword, before the eyes of its parents.

While these atrocities have been going on, Europe's nations have been idly looking on. On May 1, 1895, the Sultan signed one of the schemes for reform proposed by one of the European nations, and the next day massacres began in fifteen different centres throughout Armenia. In these massacres 60,000 of the bravest and noblest men of Armenia were slain, thousands of women taken into slavery, and 300,000 people left homeless to starve. The latter have been living on roots and leaves since that time, and it is for these latter that the relief is intended and unless relief is sent them, most of them will perish before fall.

Several times in the different massacres the Turks have saturated their captive Armenians' clothes with kerosene and then set fire to them and burned them alive. At other times, the Turks have hung people up by the head and cut them to pieces, picking pieces of flesh from their bodies with pincers, and have places the men in a cell, the floor and sides of which were covered with spikes, and inflicted other tortures which are too horrible to relate.

At the conclusion of his talk, Mr. Mills made a strong plea for money for the sufferers and it is needless to say that after his recital of plain facts, concerning the sufferings of this persecuted people, that the response was a very generous one. The meeting closed with a hymn and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Dr. Yerkes.

PRESIDENT SMITH AGAIN.

Chosen to Preside Over the New Jersey Interscholastic Association.

The annual meeting of the New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association was held at Bergen Point on Saturday evening. George Proctor Smith, of this city, was re-elected president. The other officers chosen were: Vice-president, Charles Howard, of Montclair High School; secretary, Herbert Maurel, of Pingry's School; treasurer, P. Jones, of Newark Academy; executive committee, Walter Serrell, of the Plainfield High School, Harry Lee, of Newark Academy, C. A. Sulzer, of Pingry's School, S. McClave, of Stevens "Prep" School, and a representative of the Montclair High School.

MADE A GREAT FINISH.

PLAINFIELD BALL TOSSERS PLAY A RATLING GOOD GAME.

Won From One of the Best Teams in the Metropolitan District—It Was an Uphill Fight From the Start to the Finish.

One of the most exciting games of baseball ever witnessed in Plainfield took place Saturday afternoon when the Y. M. C. A. team met the Kings County A. C. The latter team is a very strong one, comprising men who have played on the diamond for years. When McIndoe, the old Crescent favorite, made his appearance he met with a hearty ovation from his many friends. Johnson pitched two innings for the home team and after the visitors had made ten runs he was retired to left field and McLaughlin went in to box, and during the rest of the game only six runs were made by the visitors, while in the same time the home team made sixteen runs. Brun was batted freely and only in three innings did they fail to score. There was lots of hard hitting and good fielding throughout the game. Owing to the absence of McKelvey, Schoonmaker was placed on third base and Cory on second. The former put up a fine game both in the field and at the bat, while Cory played an almost perfect game. Dennis put up his best game of the season. His throwing to second base was great and nearly every time the runner was caught when an attempt to steal was made. The Y. M. C. A. team deserve credit for winning the game as they had a hard up-hill fight. Several times the score was close and on the wind-up they made a great finish. In the last inning they made seven runs. At this time Brun went to second and Paasch took the box, but the game was then won by the home team. The score in full is as follows:

THE FRESH AIR CAMP.

A Party of Charitable Men Start the Work of Making it Ready For Use.

In George Huff's bus, Saturday, the following men went to the point on Johnston's drive where the summer camp for sick children is to be located, and with a willing spirit commenced the work of preparing the ground for the uses it is to be put in, providing a healthy recreation spot for sick children and poor mothers: John Thompson, Fred Wharton, Harry Brentwell, William Morris, Robert Schlersh, James Brown, Thomas Brown, George Leighs, Harry Vogel, Harry Connett, Samuel Smith, Joseph Flack, F. McVey, August Grottman and William Gunzleman.

Plenty of axes, picks, shovels, crowbars and the like were taken along, and the party was divided into gangs, each working at some particular thing. Some excavated post holes for the building, others cleared away the underbrush and others followed after them in making the place ready for use by building pathways, stone steps and other rustic surroundings. The work was carried on in a spirit that allowed a good deal of jesting among the party, but it did not interfere in any way with the practical and rapid manner in which they accomplished what they started in to execute. The King's Daughters sent up a liberal supply of sandwiches and lemonade, which were devoured with appreciation by the party after a hard afternoon's work. Rev. C. E. Herring rode to the spot on his wheel, and was much pleased with the work that had been done.

The site is a most beautiful one, and is situated at the second clearing beyond Vail's springs.

Half Rates to San Francisco.

Starving children

There are children without food. They cry for it, and are not answered. The pity of it! But often nature cries out in other ways that her children need nourishment. Is your child thin; actually poor in flesh? Does it get no benefit from its food? Then give something which produces flesh and makes rich blood.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites does more than this. It changes the unhealthy action to one of health, thus removing the cause. It acts on the nervous system, which controls all the processes of the body, toning it up into sound and vigorous activity. It is food for growing bone and brain. It makes the thin plump; the pale, ruddy; the weak, strong; it feeds and cures.

SCOTT'S EMULSION has been indorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. (Ask your doctor.) This is because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

Put up in 50 cent and $1.00 sizes. The small size may be enough to cure your cough or help your baby. All druggists.

JUST AS GOOD IS NOT SCOTT'S EMULSION.

TO SINK WATER WELLS.

Thomas Doud Engaged to Furnish Morristown With a Water Supply.

Thomas Doud, the contractor, of Duer street, left town today for Morristown where he has been engaged to sink wells for the purpose of furnishing a water supply for that place. Should he be successful in finding a sufficient quantity of water he will lay water mains throughout the streets of that town. The citizens of Morristown are to be congratulated upon securing so practical and efficient a person as is Mr. Doud for that kind of work, as he is a master mechanic in that branch and one who has had many years of practical experience. Mr. Doud laid the water plant in this city and his work was first class.

When the water mains were completed the streets through which they were laid were replaced to the satisfaction of the authorities and the public. If the contractors who put in the sewer system had done their work as well as Mr. Doud did his there would not have been so much fault found and the contractors money would have been paid them long ago.

CHILDREN'S DAY EXERCISES.

Held in the Seventh-day Baptist Church - East (Sabbath) Saturday.

The Children's Day exercises of the Seventh-day Baptist church were held Saturday morning in the church. The exercises were given to the Juniors, who creditably executed all that was assigned to them. The pulpit was prettily decorated with choice flowers, and three large American flags were stretched across the front of the organ.

The principal feature of the exercises was a dialogue entitled, "The Christian Armor." Each one who took part recited a verse or two. Those who took part were: Kizzie Naegle, Grace VanSyckle, Stanley Mosher, Edith Titsworth, Harry Rodgers, Ethel Titsworth, Charles Naegle, Charles Titsworth, Bertha Mitchell, Lawrence Miller, Wentel Mosher, George Babcock and Nellie Miller. Rev. Mr. Kelly also made a few remarks appropriate to the occasion.

Complimented on Her Work.

Deputy Supreme Chief L. E. Palmer of the Bathbone Sisters, in a letter just received compliments Mrs. W. J. Ford, M. E.C., of this city, for her excellence in performing the sacred and secret work of the order. The letter also states the pleasure given Sister Rushton who is ill in the Flower Hospital by a visit from Mrs. Ford. Mrs. Rushton is slowly improving from her illness.

FELL INTO TIER'S LAKE.

TWO LITTLE GIRLS NARROWLY ESCAPE DROWNING YESTERDAY.

They Walked Out on a Slippery Plank and Were Thrown Into the Swirling Water.—Three Boys Were Near and Saved Them.

A very narrow escape from drowning occurred near the dam at Tier's lake Sunday afternoon, in which two little girls fell into ten feet of water and but for the heroic efforts of three boys, would certainly have been drowned.

Mamie Long and Florence Wilson, two little girls who reside on East Fourth street, asked permission of their parents to go for a walk about 3:30 yesterday afternoon and upon gaining consent, thought they would stroll along Tier's pond. They gathered flowers on their way and were in a happy frame of mind.

On one side of the dam at the lake are the flood-gates, used to regulate the flow of water into the raceway which runs to French's mills. The lake was full of water as a result of the morning's rain, the gates were open and the water was sweeping through them with great force.

The two girls, hand in hand, walked out on a plank which lays on the framework of the gates, and as they did so, the plank tipped to one side, and threw the little children into the ten feet of black, swirling water.

Their fall had been witnessed by Harry Boyd, a colored lad, and Tommy and Will Mullin, who lost no time in going to the rescue.

At first they could not locate the girls and the fear that the strong current might have swept them down the raceway, and, if such was the case, they were beyond all help.

Finally, one of the girls came to the surface, and the boys fished her out. She was Mamie Long. Florence Wilson was still under the water, and one of the boys plunged in after her. He was successful in his heroic act and brought her safely to land.

There is no question but that if the boys had not been in the near vicinity at the time, a life, possibly two, would have been lost, for when little Miss Long reached the surface, she had strength and presence of mind enough to grasp the framework of the gates and partially lift herself out of the water.

The two little girls soon recovered from their wetting and were playing together again later in the afternoon.

The parents of the children wish to thank the boys for their brave act.

Resolutions of Condolence.

At a meeting of the New York Produce Exchange, resolutions were passed as follows relative to the death of S. P. Dunn, who was a member of the Exchange:

Whereas, We have learned with deep regret of the death of our esteemed friend and associate, Samuel P. Dunn, for twenty-five years a member of the New York Produce Exchange, and

Whereas, We wish to place on the records of this association our appreciation of his worth as a friend and associate, therefore be it

Resolved, That in the death of Samuel P. Dunn this Exchange has lost one of its most worthy representatives of a thoroughly conservative business, a valued member, honorable in all his dealings, and whose personal qualities had endeared him the esteem and esteem of all who knew him.

Resolved, That to his family our warmest sympathy in their sore affliction, we do so realizing that their loss is particularly so to all who knew him.

Resolved, That the president be authorized to appoint a committee to attend his funeral, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased.

Good Health

and a good appetite go hand in hand. With the loss of appetite, the system cannot long sustain itself. Thus the fortifications of good health are broken down and the system is liable to attacks of disease. It is in such cases that the medicinal powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are clearly shown. Thousands who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla, have found great success as a purifier of the blood, its powers to restore and sharpen the appetite and promote a healthy action of the digestive organs. Thus it is, not what we say but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does that tells the story and constitutes the strongest recommendation that can be urged for any medicine. Why not take Hood's Sarsaparilla now?

Half Rates to Milwaukee.

On account of the International Convention of the B. Y. P. U., the Northwestern Line will, from July 15 to 18, 1896, inclusive, sell excursion tickets to Milwaukee and return at one fare for the round trip. The Chicago & Northwestern R'y is the "Lake Shore" route between Chicago and Milwaukee and makes the run between the two cities in two hours. A Narrow Escape.

Frank Smalley, of East Sixth street, had an accident Saturday that came near resulting very seriously and, as it was, left him very sore and bruised. He started to jump on one of the delivery wagons belonging to his father, David Smalley, the North avenue butcher, when his foot slipped and he fell right under the wheel. The wagon was in motion at the time and he managed to drag until it was stopped. Luckily no bones were broken. The accident occurred on North avenue in front of The Press office.

LARRY WALLACE DEFIANT

CLAIMS HE DID NOT PILE TIES ON THE CENTRAL TRACK.

He Prefers to Await the Action of the Grand Jury Rather Than to Have an Examination Before Justice Nash.

Who is the man that made the deliberately attempt to wreck a Jersey Central train? "Larry" Wallace says it was three itinerant umbrella menders, while other evidence points toward Wallace as the probable man. The four men, who were arrested on suspicion early Saturday morning, came up before Justice Nash Saturday afternoon. They appeared separately. Wallace pleaded not guilty and preferred to go before the Grand Jury than have a hearing before Justice Nash. He was sent to the Elizabeth jail to await the convening of the Grand Jury. He did not appear excited in the slightest, but acted in an independent manner that was almost defiant.

The three umbrella menders, Jesse Emerson, Joseph Donohue and Thos. Burns, protested that they were not in the affair at all and asked for a public hearing, which was set down by Justice Nash for Wednesday. City Judge DeMeza represented the railroad company at the appearance Saturday.

The company wish to make an example of the one who maliciously piled the ties on the track, and it will go hard with anyone against whom the charge is proved.

The umbrella menders claim that they were in the woods enjoying a quart bottle of whiskey when someone yelled at them from the top of the bridge, but it was too dark to tell who it was.

Reduced Rates to Denver and Portland.

The Northwestern Line (Chicago & Northwestern R'y) announces the sale of excursion tickets at very low rates from Chicago to Portland, Oregon, and return on June 10 and 11, and from Chicago to Denver, Col., and return on June 13 and 14. For full information apply to ticket agents of connecting lines or address H. A. Grosse, G. E. P. A., 423 Broadway, New York, T. P. Vaille, S. E. P. A., 112 South 4th st., Philadelphia, Pa.

Most Macadamize the Street.

Mountain avenue, from Somerset street to the township line, which is in the rear of A. D. Shepard's property at Scotch Plains, is to be macadamized as soon as the Somerset county Board of Freeholders get down to business and advertise for bids for the same. The decision of the Supreme court on Thursday last makes it mandatory for them to do so.

CITY WILL PAY FOR THE BICYCLES USED BY POLICEMEN.

E. H. Bird Writes the Council That He Will Accept the Collectorship Decision as Final — Other Business.

Several important matters were considered at the adjourned meeting of the City Council last Monday. President See and Councilmen Barrows, Fisk, Dumont, Frost, Ginna, Tolles, Serrell and Westphal answered to the roll call, after which the minutes of the last meeting were approved as read.

After three applications for hack and peddlers' licenses were presented and granted, a communication was received from E. H. Bird regarding the collectorship. Mr. Bird stated that he had accepted the nomination for the office and was elected by a large majority, but Mr. Johnson, the present collector, refused to surrender the office. Mr. Bird stated further that he then took the opinion of Attorney-General Stockton, and the latter gave him an unqualified opinion that he was right and that Mr. Johnson's term had expired. After accepting the opinion Mr. Bird says that he instructed Mr. Stockton to submit the same to the Supreme Court. Last Thursday four judges in that court decided adversely to Mr. Bird. Continuing, Mr. Bird states: "I have been told that I could appeal the case and call for the opinion of the other five judges, the chancellor and six associate justices of the Court of Errors and Appeals. But I feel as though I would be embarrassing the city in so doing. I have decided to accept the decision as final and thus end all further suspense and expense."

The communication was filed. J. B. Dumont, treasurer of the Public Library, then presented his annual report, which follows:

There was put in circulation 15,785 volumes of fiction; 1,961 volumes of religion; 836 of fine arts, making a total circulation of 21,299 volumes.

During the year five books were lost, but were replaced by the borrowers.

Mr. Dumont in speaking about notes coming due, said that the interest on the notes should be paid at the same time principal was. He suggested that the clerk prepare and keep a record so the treasurer could tell when the notes matured. Mr. Fisk stated that if the above matter was neglected the city would have to pay extra. He offered a resolution that hereafter the city treasurer be instructed to pay both note and interest. It was so ordered.

Mr. Barrows said that he thought it would be wise for the license committee to examine all license applications before the money was received for them. Mr. Fisk said that the ordinance provided that the fee should be paid before the license was taken. This he said, obviated considerable trouble. Mr. Barrows stated that when the sergeant and roundsmen were placed on wheels, they were asked if they were willing to take the chances of being reimbursed for their expenditure and they replied in the affirmative. Mr. Barrows then spoke of the good service being done by the men on wheels and offered a resolution, which was adopted, that the three men be reimbursed for the bicycles which they purchased themselves. The bill will amount to about $250.

Mr. Fisk presented the claim of M. Honan & Sons, for $28.85 and J. Siddall for $66.87. They were ordered filed with the city treasurer. Mr. Fisk said that the street committee had found a number of streets which were partially curbed and the committee thought there should be a uniformity in the curbing.

A resolution was then offered by Mr. Fisk, and adopted by the Council, that the property owners be required to curb along the following streets:

Sandford avenue, from Front street to Green brook; Park avenue, from Front street to Randolph road; Watchung avenue, from Front street to Belvidere avenue; Second street, from Richmond street to Liberty street; West Third street, from Madison avenue to Plainfield avenue; East Fourth street, from Washington avenue to Watchung avenue; West Fourth street, from Park avenue to Liberty street; East Fifth street, from Watchung avenue to Park avenue; West Fifth street, from Park avenue to Plainfield avenue; LaGrande avenue, from Richmond street to Watchung avenue; East Seventh street, from Crescent avenue to Park avenue; Franklin place, from East Fifth street to Watchung avenue.

Consulting Engineer A. J. Gavett presented a report of the work done by J. Siddall, and the report was referred to the sewer committee.

The nominations of D. C. Ivins, J. Parker Mason and G. R. Cornwell as sewer commissioners, made by Mayor Gilbert, were read and on motion of Mr. Dumont the same were confirmed.

Mr. Tolles caused a bit of a stir at this time by asking what had become of the Watchung avenue extension matter. The members all professed ignorance, except Mr. Fisk, and he stated that the commissioners were about ready to report and as soon as the report was placed in the hands of the Corporation Counsel the matter was to be pushed rapidly. Mr. Fisk thought that a report would be received at the next meeting.

Mr. Fisk spoke of the matter referred to the street committee regarding the transfers on the trolley road, *and he moved that the same be re*ferred to the Corporation Counsel and the latter advise the Council what to do. The business being concluded Council then adjourned.

FANNED BY MOUNTAIN ZEPHYRS.

Delights of Mountain Park Told by a New York Paper.

The Mountain Park Land Company has made mountain-going from New York an easy matter. It has recently purchased a piece of property on the crest of the Watchung Mountain and converted it into a delightful summer resort. The place is located on the Central Railroad of New Jersey. It is 600 feet above the level of the sea, and can be reached in an hour from New York. Before erecting the beautiful hotel on the park property, the directors of the company made sure that the natural features of the place were such as to appeal to those who seek rest and recuperation. They found that aside from the beauty of the place its pure air and equally pure water and the fragrance of the surrounding woods made it a natural sanitarium. From the park can be seen the beautiful city of Plainfield, from which there are trolley and stage line s to the mountain resort. Further away can be seen the Netherwood Heights, Elizabeth, Newark, Jersey City and Staten Island. The pano*rama of New York Harbor and the* Hudson River are also in the field of vision from the lofty point. The architectural features of the resort, together with the work of the landscape gardener, have made the mountain one of the most attractive places near New York.

On a high point of the park the com*pany has erected the Mountain Park* Inn, and has fitted it with all the appointments of a first-class hotel, and in keeping with the requirements of a high class of summer guests. Every detail as to the comfort of the guests has been looked after. The house is lighted by electricity, and motors are used to force the pure spring water to the inn and to the cottages near to it. The plumbing has been done according to the latest and most scientific plans, and the health and comfort of the guests have been considered at every step.

The amusement of the guests has been looked after as well as their comfort. There are lawn tennis, croquet and ball grounds, and in the hotel proper provision has been made for indoor amusement. The house will be opened for business tomorrow, and is under the management of George S. Moulton, formerly of the Laurel-in-the Pines, Lakewood. Among the members of the company are Chandler W. Riker, Captain Allan B. Wallace, John H. French, J. B. Smith, Louis M. French, Joseph T. Vail, and Elston M. French. In addition to the hotel the company owns a large tract of land on the mountain top, which has been divided into building lots, which will be sold under restrictions, so as to have the settlement which will grow up about the inn first-class in every respect.—N. Y. Tribune.

WORK FAIRLY STARTED.

CHAIRMEN OF IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION COMMITTEES APPOINTED.

Work of Spraying the Trees Has Been Going on Steadily and Great Results Are Expected From the Work When Finished

It is gratifying to report that the chairmen of all the committees of the Town Improvement Association have been appointed, Mrs. Ernest L. Walz, being chairman of the finance committee, and Mrs. D. W. Pond, the street committee. The work of all the committees has fairly started, and the work of the corresponding and recording secretaries, having been hitherto combined, is now divided. Mrs. Harriot B. Ford is corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Stephen Krom is recording secretary. A scrap basket has been presented to the post-office for use at the ladies' desk by the Association.

The interesting work of spraying the elm trees has been going steadily on under the very careful supervision of Mr. Tobin, and already quite a number of trees have cards on them, showing passersby that the Association is at work. All possible despatch is being made so as to be ready for a se*cond spraying, then the first stage of* the work will be completed. The second and final step for the year will be the washing of the trunks and the sprinkling of the adjacent ground with petroleum. This work is to be done by the owners of the trees.

Plainfielders will watch these marked trees with interest. If the at*tacks on the beetles prove as success*ful as Dr. Southwick predicts, the work of another year will doubtless be supported by a much larger number of subscribers.

THE FUNERAL OF S. P. DUNN.

The First Baptist Church Almost Filled With Friends and Relatives.

The funeral of the late Samuel P. Dunn took place Saturday afternoon in the First Baptist church. The edifice was almost completely filled by those who had come to witness the last sad rites over the body of one who was so universally loved.

Rev. Dr. Richards spoke very touchingly of the departed. He told of the steadfast Christian life which the deceased had always lead, and how willing he was to contribute to and help along any work which the church had in view. He also cited many touching incidents of the life of the deceased, where they had come in contact.

During the service the choir rendered "Abide With Me" and "Nearer My God to Thee," two favorite hymns of the departed. The floral offering was an unusually large one, the casket being almost completely hidden from view. When the casket was opened so that those present might take a last look at the departed, almost everyone in the church went forward, and there were few dry eyes in the church Interment was in Evergreen cemete y

FARMER JIM'S AMBITION.

Mr. Martine Says He Would Like to Go to Congress.

Farmer James E. Martine was seen by a Daily Press reporter at his Cedar Brook farm yesterday and in a talk on politics the conversation turned to the statement recently published in the Elizabeth Journal saying that Mr. Martine might be called on to accept a Senatorial nomination. In reply to an enquiry, he said:

"I am not a candidate for State Senator."

"Are you a candidate for Congress?"

"It has been the ambition of my life to represent my district in the House of Congress—but I hold that office should not be too eagerly sought nor to lightly refused. Above all, I am a Democrat, believing in the principles and teachings of my party and in the necessity of party organization and discipline and will willingly obey its behests."

"What do you think of Democratic prospects in the coming campaign?"

"Good! I believe in fighting for principles—I never say stop."

More

Medicinal value in a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla than in any other preparation.

More skill is required, more care taken, more expense incurred in its manufacture. It costs the proprietor and the dealer more but it costs the consumer less, as he gets more doses for his money.

More curative power is secured by its peculiar combination, proportion and process, which make it peculiar to itself.

More people are employed and more space occupied in its Laboratory than any other.

More wonderful cures effected and more testimonials received than by any other.

More sales and more increase year by year are reported, by druggists.

More people are taking Hood's Sarsaparilla today than any other, and more are taking today than ever before.

AMATEUR THESPIANS.

A Plainfield Residence Turned Into a Theatre for a Good Cause.

A thoroughly satisfied audience left the residence of N. P. T. Finch, of Belvidere avenue, Saturday evening, after enjoying the dramatic entertainment and dance held there under the auspices of the Altar Society, of St. Stephen's church. The two plays were given by Elizabeth amateurs, while all the audience took a hand in the dancing. The stage consisted of a raised platform at one end of the spacious parlor, while the rest of the room was crowded with an appreciative audience that heartily applauded the good acting. The visitors were very entertaining, and both plays passed off without a hitch.

The casts were as follows:

Mr Uncle's Will.
(In one act.)

Charles Cashmore	Arthur West
Mr. Barker	Henry Barber
Prevost Mansfield	Miss Marie Prevost
Scene—Drawing room in a house at Brighton.

Love in a Maze.
(In two acts.)

Edward Balestier, "a fellow"	a promising young American, half owner of the Sierra Gold Mine	Henry Barber
Chauncy Balestier, a spendthrift, second son of Lord Doncaster	Arthur West
Mrs. Balestier, who admires parks	Miss Marie Prevost
Sierra Bengaline, her niece, a sprig	Miss Julia Brewerton
Lady Gaylestone Llandudno, a Welsh primrose, only daughter of the Earl of Pyrnaught	Miss Mary Barber
Scene—Drawing room in residence of Mrs. Ondego-Jones, on Fifth avenue.

After the dramatic part of the entertainment was over, lemonade, ice-cream and cake were sold, and then an informal dance followed that lasted until the hour hand of the clock drew dangerously near twelve.

Work of Rachel Mair.

Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson conducted the W. C. T. U. four o'clock service *yesterday afternoon at which time en*couraging remarks were made by the members and visitors. Mrs. W. J. Ford gave an interesting report of a letter received by her from Miss Rachel Mair, telling of the work now being carried on by Miss Mair in Africa. The latter has charge of a small Methodist church, in which two services are held on Sunday and several meetings held during the week. Every Sunday the church is full to overflowing with natives, who enjoy the music on the organ, the singing and the speaking. Miss Mair sent loving messages to her home and asked that they remember her in their prayers for the success of her work.

CHILDREN'S COSTUMES.

New Things in Dress for the Younger Girls.

The shops are filled this year with the most fascinating materials for girls' frocks. Challies in the Dolly Varden patterns, flowered dimities, colored piques, sheer lawns of every color and design, organdies, and even linens and grass cloths, are considered suitable for children's wear, while in the wool goods there is an endless variety.

The challis are by many mothers preferred to silks, for the old-fashioned idea that silk is a material not to be worn by a girl until she is 18 is not quite done away with, although fashion seems to have changed lately, and the silks are used in great quantities, the pompadour and empire patterns and the Dresden flowers being preferred. Still, there are, he has been said, many women who prefer to use challis for children's wear.

There are but two styles of skirts for children's dresses. One is made very full, and with no goring; this is sewed on to the band in gathers, three rows of fine shirring insuring a better hanging to the skirt, and the fullness being kept as much as possible to the back. Some very smart French frocks have a perfectly circular skirt, which of course hangs without any fulness over the hips, and flares out considerably around the bottom. Ruffles are tabooed, and the skirt is finished with a deep hem. Two rows of insertion let in above the hem, or, if the gown be of wool, with lace laid on the material, are the only trimming ever seen, and this but rarely for the plain look is considered much smarter.

Guimpe dresses are worn by girls as old as 12, and they are made with very little variation from last year, the difference lying only in the trimming over the shoulders of the dress. Sometimes this is put on in bands of embroidery rolled over one the other, or in plain bands of pique trimmed with a narrow edge of embroidery. The waist itself is the full baby waist, gathered in at the belt, and an insertion through which ribbon is run finishes waist and skirt. The sleeves are full puffs which reach a little above the elbows, and are finished with the insertion to run ribbon through, and the full stiff look is given to the puffs by means of small tapes inside, which are tied tight or loose, as the case may be. A white dimity with sprays of moss roses made in the style just described is exceedingly dainty and fresh, with its trimming of moss-green ribbon an inch wide, which, put through the different insertions, is finished with a bow on the side of the front, and also at the back, but there has the addition of long ends. Another pretty little gown to be worn with a guimpe is of pink and white striped grass cloth. This has the full sleeve collar edged with embroidery and bright cherry ribbons, which make it look as clean and bright as a new stick of peppermint candy. Another little gown made on these lines is a bright red gingham with a polka dot of white. In this gown the collar and caps over the sleeves are all of the same material, and merely edged with embroidery put on without any fullness, while the little cap pieces are fastened to the waist with tiny white pearl buttons.—Harper's Bazar.

A LEMON CHESS PIE.

Directions for the Making of a Tooth-some Dessert.

This pie is somewhat of a puzzle to housekeepers. If is composed of eggs, butter, sugar and lemon juice, so put together that they form a perfectly light, consistent paste if the directions are followed to the letter. It is possible to expect a successful result unless the directions are implicitly followed, though they contradict the ordinary method of mixing. Measure out three rounded tablespoonfuls of butter, five tablespoonfuls of sugar, the grated yellow peel and juice of one lemon and the yolks of three eggs. Put all these ingredients in a porcelain-lined saucepan, hold the saucepan well on the stove and beat the ingredients together continually for five minutes. Do not let the saucepan rest on the stove, but tip it all the time so that every part of the mixture may be well cooked. Then take an egg whip in beating. Finally, the mixture will have thickened, remove it from the fire and add at once the whites of three eggs beaten to a very stiff froth. Stir this lightly in, and bake with an egg-whip for five minutes. Line a ten-inch pie plate with rich pastry and pour in the filling. Bake the pie three-quarters of an hour in a rather quick oven. The whites will have separated from the butter and sugar if the pie is properly made. Cut the pie as soon as it is taken out of the oven. Serve it cold or hot. If the butter, sugar and yolks stick to the bottom of the stew-pan rise to the top the pie has not been properly mixed. The secret lies in properly beating the butter, sugar and yolks together over the fire to form a slightly thickened mass, which, when mixed with the whites, becomes a species of sponge. It is an improvement to most sponge cakes to be raised with eggs alone and to beat the yolks of the eggs and sugar over the fire while beating them together. The beating must not be stopped a moment or the eggs would be ruined by curdling.—N. Y. Tribune.

Meat Pies.

One pint finely chopped meat, one teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, two teaspoons grated onion, one egg, one tablespoon butter, one teaspoon flour, one-half gill milk; put butter in frying pan and on the fire with flour, then milk; when it boils put in seasoned meat, cook for two minutes and set aside to cool. Pastry.—One pint flour, four tablespoons lard, one teaspoon salt, two of baking powder, one tablespoon sugar, generous gill of water, roll out, divide in ten squares, place prepared meat in each square, roll, place in butter pan, wash each roll with the egg; bake 20 minutes.—Boston Globe.

—Mount Jefferson, 15,500 feet high, is said to be the tallest in the state of Washington.

CHORDS AND DISCORDS.

The Little Things Create Annoyance in Everyday Life.

It is related that a certain eastern king was so disturbed by any misfortune which came to him that he was powerless to look beyond it to say possible pleasure or good fortune fate might still be guarding for him. Present affliction seemed the only reality and nothing in life powerful enough to overcome it. On one occasion a ring was to be engraved for him and those who loved him and deplored his pessimistic moods sought an inscription that should embody the greatest wisdom and consolation in the fewest words—something that coming at once to the mind in hours of depression and despair should ward off the twin demons of fear and melancholy—a sort of talisman to protect him from his own wayward fancies. Many beautiful sentiments were submitted, but nothing which contained such a message of joy as that which his daughter caused to be inscribed in the ring: "This, Too, Shall Pass," was the translation of the tiny cabalistic characters.

It wouldn't be a bad idea to have this motto writ large and hung in a conspicuous place in the homes of many of the moderns, for the poor Persian king has many followers—even among Americans. Most of us don't have to plunge very deeply into the retrospect to recall something that presaged most dismal results—that we worried over by night and struggled over by day, and then when our strength was well nigh exhausted some unforeseen circumstance turned the scale and everything came out right, and better far than we could have planned it.

Don't waste any energy on imaginary battles. Life brings actual warfare enough, and one vigorous fight is better practice with visionary foes won't help you any in real contests. The ills you arm yourself to meet with such show of bravery very likely never come your way at all. It is oftener the unexpected that happens. True, there is an occasional man who goes about unconsciously seeking failure. He reads it between the lines of his morning paper. He sees it in the tiniest purchase for his household. He never dreams he is wooing it with his importunities.

Our motto is not for such men. It is for those to whom there comes times when in spite of every effort the walls seem closing in around them. But sometimes the things we usually pull through, or if they fail the experience proves a stepping stone to something higher.

Is it not almost better to go through the breakers in a fool's paradise of carelessness than by constantly anticipating bad luck make yourself a magnet to attract it?

The motto, however, should not be held sacred to matters of great importance. The unimportant affairs of life often create untold annoyance. Very insignificant trifles cause many a day of sorrowful depression. If we could only hold to that thought: "This, too, shall pass"—we know it does pass. The little fretting things we usually have if they had never been. We forget them; but new ones come, and they will go like the others.

"Every cloud has a silver lining" is no mere flight of speech or poetic fancy; it is a literal truth as well as a law of nature. No matter how black the clouds, how impenetrable the gloom; behind them the sun is shining, and sometime it will burst through in a grand blaze of light. Whether you are foolishly grieving over some petty annoyance or staggering under the weight of inexpressible suffering, I tell you as I tell my own heart, Divine Love is over all—"It, too, shall pass.—Mate Palmer in Banner of Gold.

WIT SERVED HER PURPOSE.

Bridget Had a Happy Way of Getting Assistance from Her Neighbors.

An old Irishwoman who has received many benefits at the hands of a benevolent minister and his wife is so shiftless that occasionally the large-hearted couple lose all patience with her, but she has such a sense of humor and such a ready tongue that she never fails to amuse them and finally to win them back. At one time when money was given her to buy warm underclothing with she wasted it upon a large jug of strong whisky. The minister spoke to her with considerable severity, as did also his wife, and for some time Bridget received no calls from either of them. One afternoon, however, the minister relented and stopped at Bridget's door on his way to see a sick woman. "Shure, and it's mesilf that dreamed about you lost night, Mather Williams," said Bridget, with a broad smile. "Oi dreamed that you and Missus Williams came here to see me, and say you: 'How are you off for tay and coffee, Bridget?' and Oi says: 'It's niver a drop of aither Oi've got in the house, Mather Williams.' And you answered and me wid a pound of tay and Missus Williams wid a pound of coffee on the table. 'Yis, sorr, that was me dream.' 'Well, Bridget,' said the minister, striving not to smile, 'I hope your dreams are said to go by contraries.' "Shure, and that's fwhat Oi said to mesilf," exclaimed Bridget, triumphantly. "Said Oi, 'Mather Williams is the man that'll be givin' me the coffee and Missus Williams the tay!' Thim was my very thoughts, sorr."—Youth's Companion.

Looked Like It.

In a primary school the teacher undertook to convey to her pupils an idea of the use of the hyphen. She wrote on the black-board "bird'seed," and pointing to the hyphen, asked the school: "What is that for?"

After a short pause, a young son of the Emerald Isle piped out: "Please, ma'am, for the bird to roosh on."—Tit-Bits.

MYSTERIOUS SHOOTING.

New Market Again Startled By Pistol Shots.

A WOMAN'S UNTIMELY DEATH.

Mrs. C. H. Jackson Found With Two Bullet Holes in Her Head and Life Extinct—She Was Apparently Happy When She Went to Bed, But it is Said That She and Her Husband Had Quarrels at Different Times—Coroner Investigating.

New Market was startled Saturday morning by a fatality in which the revolver played the principal part, and by whose agency one of its most estimable residents has gone over the great divide which parts this sphere from the unknown.

The residents of Centre street who reside near the boarding house of Mrs. A. S. Titsworth were awakened out of their slumbers this morning at 4:45 o'clock by two sharp cracks of a revolver, and those who live in the house were quickly made aware that the shots were fired within the walls of the dwelling. Before echoes of the shots had died away over in the hills of Piscataway the heart beats in all that was earthly of Mrs. C. H. Jackson had ceased and her soul had passed into eternity.

Mr. and Mrs. Jackson, with their two children, board with Mrs. Titsworth. Mr. Jackson is a reporter on the staff of the New York Advertiser, and Mrs. Jackson is the popular teacher in the kindergarten school at Dunellen. The husband's duties keep him in New York until late in the evening, and he arrives home about 1 o'clock.

This morning he arrived home at the accustomed time and was met by his wife who joined him in partaking of a light lunch before retiring. So far as is known they chatted pleasantly together, and she retired in an apparently happy frame of mind. The couple sleep in different rooms. At 4:45 o'clock this morning the inmates of the house were astounded to hear two pistol shots sound from the room occupied by Mrs. Jackson. Jackson's room is nearby and he rushed to his wife's apartment in great haste and there found her lying on the bed with two bullet holes in her temple, and the blood gushing forth in a little stream, trickling down the side of her face and staining her night garments with its ghastly color.

The shots attracted the attention of everyone in the house, and in an instant the whole household was at her bedside. Jackson rushed to the home of Dr. Whitford and implored him to come to the bedside of his wife immediately. The doctor responded with haste, but by the time he reached the scene of the fatality, life had become extinct in the body of the unfortunate woman.

Soon the whole neighborhood was aroused and many called at the house to learn the particulars and to extend their sympathy to the afflicted relatives and assist them in any way possible. Word was sent to Coroner Brace at Perth Amboy.

Mrs. Jackson had planned to take a trip to Europe during the summer months and it was her intention to start next week. She was twenty-seven years of age. The two children are three and five years of age respectively. They were the idols of their mother's heart.

To those who were acquainted with Mrs. Jackson the act of suicide is an unaccountable one.

County Physician Brace, of Perth Amboy, arrived at 12:30 and in company with Dr. Whitford made an examination. When seen after the examination by a Press reporter, he refused to make a statement, but said he considered the case a serious one.

The grand impanelling a jury was then begun by Constable Dougherty and as the paper goes to press, the Coroner's inquest is in progress. Mrs. Jackson left a note, which is now in possession of the Coroner, but it was impossible to ascertain its contents. They will be made known later.

Those in the house besides Mr. and Mrs. Jackson and children at the time the shooting occurred were Mrs. A. S. Titsworth, Miss Maude Titsworth, Miss Elsie Palmburger and Isaac Titsworth.

All day yesterday Mrs. Jackson had been in attendance at the picnic of the Sunday-schools of Piscataway town ship, where she was one of the principal workers to make a happy time for the children who attended. She was an active member of the Dunellen Episcopal church and taught a class in the Sunday-school of that church. Her work in the kindergarten school brought her in close touch with the sympathies and temperament of children and she was looked upon as a general leader when any event of interest to juveniles was planned in the community. At the picnic she was here, there and everywhere all through the day attending to this and that one's wants and disposition, and in the work she seemed to be especially happy.

PILED TIES ON THE RAIL

Dastardly Attempt at Train Wrecking on the Central.

ENGINEER SAW AND PREVENTED.

Larry Wallace, A Scotch Plains Character, Found in the Vicinity and Arrested on the Charge of Putting the Ties on the Rails—Three Itinerant Umbrella Menders Also Arrested—Arraigned Before Justice Nash Today.

Plainfield nearly saw a terrible disaster early on Saturday, which was only averted by the watchfulness of an engineer of the Jersey Central Railroad. While nearly all of the good citizens were sleeping the sleep of the just, a shadowy form crept along the tracks of the railroad near the Terrill road bridge. Only the sound of the scrubbed stones along the road bed crunching beneath his feet broke the silence of midnight. The track walker was on the western end of his beat, and not even a train was in sight. Carefully the midnight prowler raised one of the ties that lay just at the edge of the wood, and bore it to the railroad and laid it across one of the main tracks. Another and another followed and then the trap set, the fiendish visitor disappeared in the woods to wait the terrible disaster that threatened the approaching train.

Train after train passed by, some passenger and others freight, but the pile of ties had been placed on the eastbound freight track and no accident resulted. Still the author of the trouble waited, seen only by the night birds that hovered about.

A Philadelphia east bound freight train was due in Plainfield soon after 12 o'clock. The train was about on time and came down the passenger track. The engineer of engine 558, of the east-bound freight train, watched the track ahead with his usual care. Suddenly he was all attention. There was an obstruction on the rails. It was not on his track, however, and as he sped by he saw there was a pile of ties on the rails of the east-bound freight track. When he reached Fanwood the officials of the railroad were notified at once and word was sent to Plainfield to flag the fast freight from Philadelphia that was following and notify the crew of the obstruction. The train was stopped at the city and the crew notified. They stopped again at the Terrill road bridge and about 80 feet further on found the work of the would-be train wrecker. Three ties were piled together on the rails and further on there were two single ties. They were removed and laid by the side of the tracks and the train went on.

As soon as Superintendent Peddle heard of the attempt he telegraphed to the Plainfield police, and Detective Ritterbush, of the company's service, left home in the night. Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Mattox were quick to respond to call and sped to the scene of action on their wheels at a three-minute clip. Detective Ritterbush came in a carriage and arrived soon after the police.

The night was dark but the officers noticed, as they quietly made their way from the road to the tracks, that there was someone before them.

A man was leaning over the ties that had been removed, but it was too dark to see what he was doing. He heard the officers approach, but it was then too late to escape, as they were close upon him. Indignantly he protested that he had had nothing to do with it but had just come to the spot. The policemen listened to his objections, but did not release their hold. The face that was turned toward them was a familiar one, and they recognized the features of Lawrence Wallace, Fanwood's well known character, who lives just on the outskirts of that place. Wallace made quite a reputation as an alleged firebug about four years ago, when Fanwood was nearly panic stricken by the fires in barns and residences that followed each other in rapid succession, and were only stopped on the arrest of Wallace.

Sergeant Kiely turned the suspect over to Detective Ritterbush, and he was taken to Plainfield in a carriage and locked up on complaint of the Jersey Central Railroad. But a search revealed that Wallace was not the only one around. There were three itinerant umbrella menders just on the edge of the woods.

Wallace loudly declared that they were the wretches who had attempted to wreck the train. He had been fast asleep until only a moment ago, and tried to prove the last assertion by showing that one side of his clothes was wet, a result, he said of sleeping out in the dew. Wallace's former notorious actions made him a suspicious character from the first. It was learned that he visited Benner's road house last evening and "rushed the growler" for all he was worth. Before midnight, Benner closed his place, ordered him out and refused to sell him anymore liquor. Wallace then disappeared from the neighborhood of the road house, after a visit to the pump where it is supposed he got his clothing wet. His beer can was found near the railroad tracks, where he is thought to have dropped it. When arrested he was found to be considerably under the influence of liquor. The three umbrella menders were also arrested and locked up.

The prisoners will be arraigned before Justice Nash this afternoon. City Judge De Meza will act as attorney for the railroad company.

JOHNSON IS COLLECTOR.

THE SUPREME COURT SO DECIDES THIS MORNING.

His Term Does Not Expire Till the End of the Year—His Running Last Fall Had No Bearing on the Merits of the Case.

After having gone through the judicial mill, the vexatious and much delayed question of whether John Johnson or Elias H. Bird is the legal collector of the city of Plainfield, has been decided. Johnson is the one entitled to the work and emoluments of the office.

Such was the gist of the decision handed down by the Supreme Court in Trenton this morning. The decision was written by Justice Garretson, and was concurred in by all the members on the bench. The result was not entirely unexpected on the part of those who had looked into the legal aspects of the case.

The side of Johnson was conducted by Charles A. Reed, of Reed & Coddington, and the side of Bird, or the city in reality, was conducted by Attorney-General Stockton. The Attorney-General argued in his briefs that the term of Johnson had expired under the Legislative enactment of 1893, extending the terms of all collectors in three years in cities of the third-class, and even if this was not so, the acceptance of the nomination as colector on the Citizens' ticket last fall was a virtual resignation of the office on the part of Johnson.

Mr. Reed claimed that under a strict application of the law the opinion given by Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh that the office of the City Collector was vacant at the end of the last fiscal year and therefore needed to be filled at the charter election in December, was erroneous. The argument was made that the law was enacted in 1893 by the Legislature, that Johnson had been elected for a term of one year to expire in 1894, and that in 1894 he was nominated and re-elected again—this time for the full three years under the provisions of the law; therefore his term did not expire until 1897, and that the election of Elias H. Bird was illegal and void. The fact of his being a candidate last fall could have no bearing on the legality of his term. Mr. Reed's arguments were upheld by the members of the Supreme Court, and Johnson will continue to fill the office undisturbed until the end of the three year term. The incidents leading up to carrying the contest to the highest court in the State are too well known to need repetition in the columns of The Daily Press.

A few minutes after the decision had reached this city, a Press reporter talked with Mr. Bird, who said he was not disappointed with the outcome of the case as he had expected such a decision as had been given. He has no books or papers to turn over to Johnson, as the latter refused to make the transfer when Mr. Bird appeared at his office to take possession after he had been sworn in by the Mayor He has collected some taxes since that time, but they were all delinquent, and as he has been regularly appointed to perform that duty by the Common Council, it will have no tendency to complicate a settlement of the case.

Plainfielders will have to celebrate the glorious Fourth away from home.

THE EXEMPTS' SMOKER.

THE OLD-TIME FIREMEN HAVE A JOLLY GOOD TIME.

Congratulations Showered on Auguste Saltzman Over the Honor Bestowed on Him at the Recent State Convention.

The members of the Exempt Firemen's Association met last Friday, together with their friends, and enjoyed one of their old-time smokers. A short business session was held previous to the social time, at which time E. H. Bird, Edward VanWinkle and Charles Clifton were elected members. The meeting was then thrown open and Alex Unsworth acted as toastmaster. Chief T. O. Doane was called upon and in his interesting and impressive manner told many things of interest to the members regarding the recent State convention of firemen. L. E. Barkalew followed with a few words of congratulation, as did also D. W. Littell. The speeches were all complimentary to Auguste Saltzman, who was elected president of the State Association at Hackensack. Mr. Saltzman, in a short address, thanked all for their kindness and said that he would do all that was possible to advance the association.

Further remarks were made by Borough Clerk Arnold, John Murray, E. H. Bird and J. E. Flannery. Mr. Thorn, the genial secretary, pleased the members by reading several selections entitled "There are No Friends Like Old Friends," "The Bicycle and the Cowboy" and "The Bowery Robbery, or How the Dutchman Lost His Watch."

With all the speeches there were excellent refreshments and cigars as an accompaniment. The meeting adjourned at a seasonable hour to meet June 30th.

After Free Strawberries.

J. O. Stevens, of Clinton avenue, was admiring his strawberry patch last evening just at dusk when he observed a man also surveying it in a suspicious manner. As soon as the man saw Mr. Stevens he ran away. Mr. Stevens told his hired man of the incident and the latter decided to watch the patch during the night with a shot gun. Early this morning the same man, accompanied by another man and a boy, appeared on the scene with a basket, but as soon as the vigilant watcher and his gun were seen they made off in great haste, but not before being recognized. Mr. Stevens avers that if the incident happens again the guilty parties will be made to feel the hand of the law.

HOPE CHAPEL FESTIVAL.

A MONEY AND PLEASURE MAKING AFFAIR HELD LAST NIGHT.

Given by the Ladies' Aid Society Who Worked Untiringly to Make It a Success.—Names of Those in Charge of the Booths.

The interior of Hope chapel never presented a more attractive appearance than it did Thursday afternoon and evening, after the various members of the Ladies' Aid Society had finished their work of decorating it. The occasion for this expenditure of labor was the strawberry and ice-cream festival which the Aid Society had advertised to take place from 4 to 10 o'clock, in order to replenish their treasury.

On entering the door the visitor was met by Mrs. M. L. McComas and Mrs. D. Page, who expected a ticket or ten cents. The flower booth was the next point of attraction. The tables were almost completely hidden under their weight of fragrant and pretty blossoms. Mrs. G. Kennedy Newell, Mrs. L. Bean and Mrs. S. Smith looked after this booth. Visitors who were thirsty enjoyed an excellent glass of lemonade from the hands of Mrs. D. F. Stewart, Mrs. S. A. Ball and Mrs. Frank. Anyone who feared becoming unnerved from the fierce glare of the electric lights might purchase sunbonnets, etc., from Mrs. A. Cox and Mrs. John Hall. A large assortment of all sorts of sweets were offered for sale by Mrs. T. Shephard, Mrs. Chas. Stevens and Mrs. James Radin. Those who were hungry purchased excellent cake of Mrs. J. B. Higgins, Mrs. B. D. DeNise, Mrs. James and Mrs. Millington. Delicious strawberries were served by Mrs. James Randolph and Mrs. A. Campbell. Ice cream was served by Mrs. S. Chancellor, Mrs. M. Sweeney, Mrs. Montgomery and Mrs. W. G. Gray.

Mrs. S. R. Struthers, president of the Ladies' Aid Society, was general chairman of the affair, and to her much credit is due.

During the evening piano selections were rendered by Miss Mabel Benner and Miss Ada Nash. The duet by the little Misses Ada Westphal and Mamie Richards, accompanied by Miss Benner on the piano, entitled, "I Don't Want to Play in Your Yard," was rendered in a pleasing manner and received hearty applause. The society realized a snug sum from the festival.

A more delightful place could not be found Thursday than in Grace M. E. church of Park place, where the Ladies' Aid Society of the church had transformed the rooms into a decidedly pleasing picture through the use of flowers, ferns, greens, etc.

The affair was styled a strawberry and ice-cream festival, but then there were other things such as home made candy, fancy articles and lemonade, to attract the eye and pocketbook. On entering the room the first thing to catch your attention was the booth arranged by and in charge of the Modern Circle, King's Daughters. There was a display of dainty and fancy articles, from which a good sum was realized. Those in charge were the Misses Libby Joseph, Lizzie Hoagland, Mary Hoagland, Bertha Stevens, Emma LaBoyteaux and Miss Stevens.

The next booth contained an array of home-made articles, such as aprons and things of a like nature for use about the house. It was well arranged and Mrs. L. A. Hummer, Mrs. H. K. Carroll, Mrs. Edwin Loomis and Mrs. Andrew Lutkins very carefully looked after their patrons.

Next came the candy table filled with all the best kinds of sweets. Mrs. E. E. Winckler, Miss Grace Carroll, Miss Alice Carroll, Miss Agnes Tingley, Miss Carrie Tingley and Miss Della Voehl were in charge and quickly disposed of the excellent assortment of candies. In the corner was stationed the lemonade well, surrounded luxuriantly with ferns, greens and roses. At this place Mrs. Gerry, Mrs. Wm. Lunger and Mrs. Anna Most kept the thirsty supplied.

One of the prettiest booths was the one devoted to flowers. It was octagon shape and elaborately decorated with ferns, wheat roses and greens. Miss Marguerite Schuck, Miss Mamie Steiber, Miss Clara Steiner and Miss Alice Loomis were in charge and experienced no trouble in making ready sales.

Those in charge of the affair were Mrs. John Valiant, Mrs. A. A. Taft, Mrs. Stevens and Mrs. W. H. Lunger, while Mrs. John Lunger, Mrs. Shepard, Mrs. Schuck, Mrs. Vermeule and Mrs. VanNest looked after the cake. Mrs. Charles Hummer and Mrs. Hoagland were the committee on arrangements and Mrs. H. Carey looked after the wants of all in her efficient manner.

MRS. TUCKER IS COMING

SECOND DAUGHTER OF GEN. BOOTH TO TALK IN THIS CITY.

She Will be Accompanied by a Brass Band and Other Notable Salvation Army Workers Against Old Satan.

An active campaign has been opened in Plainfield by the Salvation Army and the war against sin is to go forward with renewed vigor. Ensign Taylor, "the Golden Musician," has been placed in command and he is assisted in the good work by the "Central Victory Boy's" who number seven earnest workers. Since their arrival here, about a week ago, they have held a number of rousing meetings that have proved very profitable. All of the "Central Victory Boys" are musicians, and music forms a leading part in their meetings. The attendance at the barracks has been good, especially last Sunday evening when the meeting was an unusually good one.

While there is something new introduced at every meeting, the meeting tonight promises to be especially interesting, as Brigadier Evans, who is in command of the Central Division at New York and who resides in this city, will be in charge. He is too well known to Plainfield audiences to need any introduction.

FARMER DUNN'S WRATH.

He Sent a Heavy Shooting to Interfere With a Church Festival.

Farmer Dunn has not been feeling very well lately, and his laundry bill has also been large, so when the young ladies of the First M. E. church, of this city, applied for a pleasant evening for their entertainment at Vincent chapel, he deliberately sent a thunder storm carousing over Jersey, and Plainfield in particular Tuesday evening.

Just at the the time when the people began to make ready, the rain came down. It came down in sheets accompanied by a regular battery of thunder clouds and "pitchforky" lightning. Of course, there were very few who braved the storm, and the management held a consultation to see what was to be done. It was decided that, as some of those that were to take part were also absent, part of the programme should be given and the affair called a "dress rehearsal," while the entertainment will be given entire next Tuesday evening. At the close of the rehearsal the tickets were refunded and everyone was invited to come again next week.

Although it was not the regulular entertainment they saw, the small audience present passed a very delightful evening. The parts given were excellent, especially the "Tableaux Mouvant," which were given by eight young ladies clad in Grecian costume. The poses were well selected, while the calcuim light, sometimes white, sometimes colored, added greatly to the effect.

A Bathbone Sister Afflicted.

The regular meeting of Minerva Temple, Bathbone Sisters, was held last Monday, at which time the nominations of officers for the ensuing term were made. Deputy Supreme Chief E. Palmer, paid the Temple a fraternal visit, and the sisters received with regret the news that it was her last visit for a long time, as she was suffering from a painful affliction of the hand and arm, for which she will soon undergo an operation, which will prevent her from attending to her official duties for some time.

Another Wheelmen's Rest.

Plans and arrangements are making for another new road house and wheelmen's rest near the dividing line of Union and Middlesex counties. The plot of ground, owned by a well-known and responsible resident of the Fourth ward, is soon to be enhanced in beauty by the erection of a neat two-story and attic peaked roof building, and the work on the same will begin in a few weeks. It is not likely, however, that the building will be ready for occupancy before next season.

Corn Planted on Sewage Beds.

The first of the mason work at the sewer beds has been completed and as soon as the cement dries the lower beds will be ready to use. The wooden channels to distribute the sewage matter evenly over the beds are the only things left to be made. Corn has been planted on the beds nearest to Dunellen and only enough sewage will be turned on them to keep the corn in condition.

SAVED BY A FAITHFUL DOG.

Henry Hohlt May Thank His Bulldog for Driving Off the Buffalo.

The next time that Henry Hohlt goes out to interview his herd of buffaloes at Lincoln park he will probably gaze at it through the cracks of the fence and not run the risk of having his epidermis perforated by a pair of bovine horns. The other afternoon he donned a suit of cowboy clothes cut by a pattern approved by Texas Jack Crawford when he was here. Then he mounted a fiery mustang and entered the inclosure where his buffaloes are kept to drive them into a corral. They objected vigorously, but Henry was not to be bluffed. One old bull was particularly pugnacious and insisted upon making life a burden for the mustang. Several vigorous lunges at the mustang were avoided by the sensible animal with dispatch.

A bulldog belonging to Mr. Hohlt had been viewing the trouble from a far. Finally he seemed to have decided to take a hand, so, with a run only paralleled by that celebrated spurt made by Salisbury last fall at the same park, he caught the bull by the nose and performed a few revolutions around his head as the old fellow gave it a twirl or two for luck. Having shaken the dog loose, the animal made a wild dive for him. He missed his prey, and then started for the horse. The latter stumbled and fell, precipitating his rider to the ground and rendering him unconscious. The bull then attacked the horse and killed him.

The dog appeared to realize the position occupied by his unconscious master. He attacked the bull in front and rear so persistently that the animal turned his attention from the horse to the dog. A wild chase followed, in which the dog gave one of the prettiest exhibitions of racing ever witnessed. While the bull was engaged in following his little tormentor some assistants of Mr. Hohlt saw his predicament and hastened to his rescue. He was still unconscious, and they were compelled to pick him up and carry him to the park house. After restoratives had been applied he was brought to the city. He is at his home on South Eleventh street under the care of a physician. Fortunately no bones were broken, but he has some large and painful bruises on his person which will keep him in bed for several days. He was so sore the other night that he was unable to lift a cup of coffee to his lips.

Mr. Hohlt attributes his escape to the fidelity of his dog, which made it so interesting for the buffalo that he was unable to dispatch his master when he had him down.—Nebraska State Journal.

A LIFE FOR A MATCH.

Factory Fumes Are Pregnated with Fatal Diseases.

It frequently happens that the fumes inhaled by workmen in match factories destroy life within a few months. A man once attacked by the disease lurking in these factories must abandon hope of recovery. Although matches are apparently very simple little affairs, their manufacture necessitates a large and complex manufacturing plant. The little sticks undergo a long treatment and must pass through many hands before they are capable of striking a light.

The apparently harmless sulphur tips are in reality a deadly poison and the fumes arising from this mixture when in course of preparation cause terrible suffering and ultimate death. Although called sulphur matches, the little sticks are in reality tipped with a complex mixture composed of glue, chlorate of potash, phosphorus and whiting—a combination frequently used for suicidal purposes.

The poisonous fumes first attack the teeth which have begun to decay. Although all sorts of devices are employed to keep them from getting in the mouth, they generally manage to do so. If all the teeth are perfect sound the fumes soon start the decay. As soon as this action has commenced the decayed part spreads rapidly toward the jaws. All the teeth are affected in a short time and the disease, when it has once taken root in this way, can never be driven out.

The effect of this action is to rapidly loosen every tooth in the sufferer's head, so that they will fall out of their own accord. Before this happens, however, the poison has spread to the jaw and taken a firm grip upon it. The pain which the victim suffers in the meanwhile is exceedingly sharp. The course of the disease never varies. Having once reached the jawbone, it soon covers it and the bone becomes in this way actually coated with a deposit of sulphur.

The only possible way to give the victim any relief is to scrape the bone. This heroid measure has been tried several times in New York city, with more or less success. The operation is exceedingly painful.—N. Y. Journal.

The Earliest Sword.

In the early ages, before men knew anything about civilized ways, they lived in caves and had to protect themselves not only from the attacks of animals, but from those of their human brothers as well. The first weapon their unaccustomed fingers shaped was a war club. Experience, however, soon taught them that a deadlier blow could be delivered with a weapon that would cut rather than crush, and they made a hatchet. Then one day some one discovered a substance in the secret stores of the good brown earth on which he finally learned to put a keener edge than he had ever been able to chip on his stone hatchet, and the sword was made.—Chicago Chronicle.

The Force of Habit.

Teacher—Your additions are wrong every time; is there no one to help you at home?

"Yes, father does."

"But he always makes the answer too big; what is he, then?"

"A waiter."

"Ah! I see."—Schone Blaue Donau.

A MUSICALE.

Pupils of Miss Ada Marsh Give a Creditable Recital.

A delightful musicale was held at the home of Miss Ada Marsh, of Franklin place, Tuesday afternoon by her pupils in piano instruction.

The several children from five to seven years of age, who preceed the main programme, played with accuracy and firmness of touch, and received a generous share of the applause.

Miss Frances Weir played with artistic taste, Heller's Water Sprites, and also four of her own compositions. Miss Virginia Negus, in her difficult selection, gave evidence of careful study. The Grieg Valse was very gracefully played by Miss Louise Fisk, and a prelude of Chopin by Miss Mary Anderson Reinhart, was delightfully rendered. Special praise was given to the brilliant performances of Miss Helen Drake and Miss Edith Arens. Miss Arens executed with ease the technical difficulties of Mendelssohn's Rondo Capriccioso, and showed true musical feeling. The entire programme passed off smoothly, each pupil playing with the assurance which comes when one is well prepared.

The programme was as follows:

Duet	Misses Leberd and Stark
Nathalie Work.	Walter Scott and Miss Marion Grace Marsh.
Duet Solo	Misses Leberd and Stark
Water Sprites	Miss Louise Booth, Miss Frances Weir.	St. Heller

REMOVE THE DEAD WOOD.

Blighted Trees are an Eyesore and Disgrace to the Town.

The Town Improvemen Association furnishes the following for publication:

Plainfield is justly proud of her beautiful trees, but in many parts of the city a judicious thinning out of them would be beneficial in every way, resulting in improved sanitary condition of the neighborhood and the better development of the trees. Sargent says: "Of the implements required to produce a fine tree the axe is certainly the first and most important." The removal of dead trees along the roadways is a public benefaction.

They are sometimes killed by underground gas poison, sometimes by electric wires, and are allowed to remain, an eyesore to all beholders, save perhaps the immediate property owners else why are they not promptly removed?

The familiar, yet ever, mysterious army of green which clothes our trees in spring is thus spoken of by Prof. Halstead, of Rutgers College, in the "Chatauquan" for May.

"This vernal display is essentially the result of a prominent action upon the part of the plant by means of which substinance has been accumulated through the activity of root and leaf and so packed away in the buds that that in the shortest possible time, when conditions favor, it may produce the great change so fresh to our eyes each returning spring. And when leaves are once upon the herb, shrub, and tree, they are for use.

"While foliage is pleasing to the eye it is the garb of work. Green is the color of service and when it is lacking in foliage, either the leaf is sick, or is detailed for some other labor."

An Old Equine Dead.

Mohawk, the sorrel horse belonging to Mrs. Stillman, widow of the late Dr. Charles H., died yesterday in the pasture field on the farm where he had been turned out about two weeks ago. He has been driven on Plainfield's streets every day for over twenty years, latterly by Mrs. Stillman, who was greatly attached to the horse.

In the Spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of—De Witt's Little Early Risers, for they always cleanse the liver, purify the blood, and invigorate the system. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXIX. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, JUNE 18, 1896. NO. 24

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

THE GHOST DIDN'T COME.

BUT THE POLICE DID AND DISPERSED A CROWD OF PEOPLE.

A Half Thousand Curious West Enders Gathered in the Vicinity of the Cemetery Awaiting a View of the White Object.

Just think of it; a ghost in this city! A report spread through the West End Tuesday that the ghost of a well-known old woman, who died recently, had been seen walking in the vicinity of Evergreen cemetery. The mere suggestion that Plainfield had a "really truly" ghost, caused no end of excitement, and early in the evening a crowd began to gather near the corner of John and West Fourth streets, just beyond the cemetery.

The ubiquitous small boy was there in full force, his pockets filled with an extra supply of pebbles, nails, fishhooks and the like, to keep up his courage. The indifferent father, who had turned a deaf ear to all ghost stories, just "happened" around, while the sister and mother had just come out to get a little fresh air.

By 9 o'clock, the crowd numbered fully five hundred, but still no ghost appeared. The younger watchers became impatient and began to make remarks intended for the ear of the shadowy visitor. One lad, braver than the rest, ventured out toward the cemetery.

"Come on out," he yelled, "I a'int afraid of yer!" But the shadow of a tree seemed to resemble a human figure, and the youngster beat a hasty retreat. The boys yelled shrilly, in platoons, companies and regiments, but still no ghost appeared.

The noise had the effect of rousing everybody within several blocks of the place and sulphurous fumes began to rise as some tired workman said unpleasant things about ghost watchers.

There was a special officer there but he was not "in it" with the ghost and the crowd refused to move.

"Cheese it, der cop!" shouted one of the enterprising tots, who was vainly hunting for the ghost behind the fence and hitching posts, and then he fled.

If the ghost itself had appeared, the crowd could not have broken up more suddenly than it did when Chief Grant and Patrolman Cooney appeared on the scene. There was a general stampede and some of those who had not seen the officers went home with a long story of how they had been chased by a terrible ghost of wonderful size.

The ghost watchers were thoroughly disgusted for the evening, however, with the exception of a few adventurous characters who, from behind some tree or fence, waited vainly for Mrs. Ghost to walk.

LEAL'S SCHOOL GRADUATES.

Most of the Students Will Continue Their Education at Yale.

The closing exercises of Leal's School will be held Thursday night at the Y. M. C. A. hall. There will be an address by Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D., a few remarks by John Leal and selections by Conde's Young Men's orchestra and the Lotos Glee Club. The admission will be by invitation.

The graduating class consists of John B. Dumont, Jr., Llewellyn Bull, Gilbert B. Lovell, William Tracy, Joseph Wadsworth, William M. McCutche, Raymond A. McGee, and Benjamin O. Bowers, Jr. The committee in charge of the decorating consists of Messrs. McGee, Tracy, Bull and Dumont. Of all the graduates, five expect to go to college and all have selected Yale. They are Lovell, Tracy, Wadsworth, McCutchen and McGee.

North Plainfield School Alumni Reception

The alumni of the North Plainfield public school will give a reception to the members of the graduating class on the evening of Friday, June 26th, at the public school building. The committee in charge consists of four officers of the alumni association, Clarence Murphy, president; Walter L. Place, vice-president; Robert M. Clark, secretary; Frank J. Blatz, treasurer. An entertainment will be given which will be followed by a dance.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. POSING IN TABLEAU.

CREDITABLE ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN IN VINCENT CHAPEL LAST NIGHT.

Attired in Grecian Costumes, and With Powdered Hair, Face and Arms, Girls Were Grouped Together Prettily.

Instead of the blue skies that had been promised for last Tuesday, it clouded up and the audience at the "League" entertainment at Vincent chapel, already postponed a week on account of rain, was not a large one. It fairly filled the room, however, and certainly enjoyed the programme.

The entertainment was an enjoyable one and the variety of the different selections made it still more pleasant. The first part opened with a march, with hand movements by a number of very little girls who went through the evolutions very well. A well given recitation, "The Three Bells," by Miss Mamie Thatcher followed. Then came a piano solo by two little girls, and an exciting recitation, "The Dandy Fifth," excellently given by Clarence G. Mills. That favorite selection from De Koven's "Robin Hood," known as the "Armorer's Song," was delightfully rendered by Raymond A. McGee in a manner that called for loud applause. Clarence Mills proved himself a pleasing entertainer on the violin as well as at reciting, and rendered "Gentle Zitella," a Swiss air, in a very artistic manner. After a tenor solo from "Martha" given by Lewis H. Bond, in his usual delightful way, a Japanese fan drill closed the first part. Those to take part in this pretty and graceful little drill were: Misses Florence McDonald, Mabel Smith, Nellie Apgar, Mabel Vail, Mabel Jenkins, Cora Harris, Florence Williams, Lottie Montrose, Grace Webster, Emma Lareu, Ida Tallamy, Florence Symons, Nettie Bauersachs, Carrie Mulford, Lucy Casper, Fannie Dodd.

Part two opened with a recitation, "The Settler's Story," by Miss Bertha H. Whitney. The selection was vividly portrayed and the audience was held spellbound as they listened to the thrilling story with its sad ending. After a splendidly executed piano solo, "Polonaise, in E major," by Miss May Vincent Whitney, Austin E. Armstrong, of Dickinson College, gave two short recitations. The first, "The Kitchen Clock," was rather romantic, but it greatly pleased his listeners, and the young romance and humor were included in the second, "So Was I," and everybody laughed, partly at the selection and partly at the delightful manner in which Mr. Armstrong gave it. He is a pleasing entertainer, and the hearty applause he received told plainly that the audience appreciated him.

The entertainment closed with the "Tableaux Mouvant, Poses Plastique," in which the following took part: Misses Etta Raybert, Bessie Cornwell, Margaretta Barnes, Sadie Bliam, C. Florence Barnes, Edna Harris, Bertha Jenkins, Sadie Douglass. The young women were all dressed in white Greek costume, with powdered hair, face and arms. The poses were very artistic and, with the colored calcium lights thrown on, they were very beautiful. A competent judge declared them to be equal to those given in the physical culture colleges. Much credit is due to Miss Bertha H. Whitney, who so carefully drilled and arranged the participants. The different tableaux were Seasons Dancing before Time; Sleeping Ariadne; Apollo and Daphne; Cupid and Psyche; Parting of Orpheus and Eurydice; Niobe Groupe; The Muses; Home Scene from the Greeks; Sacrifice of Iphigenia; Night and the Fates; Toilet of the Bride; A Captive; Frieze—Battle of the Amazons; Frieze—Revel of the Muses; Frieze—Chain Dance; Death of Virginia.

Bound Brook to Celebrate.

Bound Brook is to have quite a celebration on July 4th. There will be a big parade, a flag-pole raising and the usual speechmaking. The parade is gotten up by the J. O. U. A. M. of that place and they have secured the Independent Fife and Drum Corps, who will lead the line. Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., will also take part in the parade. Fireworks in the evening will close the celebration.

Mr. James Perdue, an old soldier residing at Monroe, Mich., was severely afflicted with rheumatism but received prompt relief from pain by using Chamberlain's Pain Balm. He says: "At times my back would ache so badly that I could hardly raise up. If I had not gotten relief I would not be here to write these few lines. Chamberlain's Pain Balm has done me a great deal of good and I feel very thankful for it." For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

EXTRA!

IT'S M'KINLEY!

NOMINATED BY FORAKER.

Reed Named by Senator Lodge; Quay, by Gov. Hastings; Morton by Depew.

THE SILVER MEN BOLTED.

St. Louis, June 18, 6:30 p.m.—The vote against the silver propositions of Senator Teller in the platform was 818 for to 105½ against. The vote on the financial plank as reported was 812½ for to 110½ against. At this announcement of the result the delegates from Montana, Iowa, Utah, South Dakota and Colorado bolted the convention. As they left the hall the band played "Good Bye, My Lover, Good Bye." The delegates stood in their seats and sang "Three Cheers for the Red, White and Blue." The bolt caused great excitement and it was some time before the convention was restored to order.

Reed's name was presented by Senator Lodge. It was greeted with moderate applause.

Gov. Hastings, of Pennsylvania, placed Senator Quay's name before the convention.

His nomination was greeted with tumultous applause. The galleries fairly went wild, and it was fully twenty minutes before the convention could proceed with business.

McKinley's name was presented by ex-Governor Foraker, of Ohio. The demonstration was very loud. The audience broke out into cheers, hats were thrown and yells rent the air. "Dixie" was finally struck up, and the song served to attract the energies and whooping qualities of the delegates for a few minutes. Suddenly a man with a Napoleonic countence appeared on the reporters table clad in a Napoleon hat. This created great applause.

Senator Allison was also nominated. Morton's name was presented by Chauncey M. Depew. He was greeted with a moderate amount of applause. The voting was then commenced and carried right down through the several States.

As one after another of the delegations announced their selection it was seen that McKinley was going to be nominated on first ballot.

At the conclusion of the first ballot McKinley was nominated.

The bolting silver States did not cast their votes.

Banqueted on the Mountain.

The quarterly banquet of the Retail Grocers' Association of Newark was held last night at the Mountain Park Inn. The members of the association drove to this city in a tally-ho, and were a jovial and whole-souled lot of fellows. An elaborate menu was prepared for them at the inn. A liberal amount of wit and humor accompanied the dinner. They greatly admired the natural scenery about the hotel.

Arranging for an Entertainment.

The Germania Beneficial Society held a special meeting last evening. Four new members were initiated. It was decided to have an entertainment with contests on August 17th and 18th. The committee to arrange the details was appointed as follows: M. Mensenbach, P. Postler, Otto Keller, Henry Ruppert and N. G. Reupert. Rudolph Speigel was elected secretary in place of H. Baker, resigned.

Perhaps From the Mount.

Mrs. L. Francis Bishop, who has built a house on the mountain top, near the Mountain Park Inn, has a story published in "The Black Cat" for July, entitled "A Message From Where?"

Young mothers dread the Summer months on account of the great mortality among children caused by bowel troubles. SALVATIONISTS' WORK.

MRS. BOOTH-TUCKER ADDRESSES A THOUSAND PEOPLE.

She But Faintly Alludes to the Recent Break in the Army Ranks, But Talks of the Soul Saving Work Being Done.

The first appearance in this city of Mrs. Booth-Tucker, wife of the Commander of the Salvation Army, and second daughter of General William Booth, was a remarkable one in many respects, and to the outsiders who carefully watched the proceedings at Salvation Army Hall, Tuesday evening, the meeting must have been one of peculiar interest. Over one thousand persons by actual count were present and for nearly two hours were deeply moved by what was said and done.

The "Central Victory Boys" held their usual open air meeting, and at 8 o'clock they marched into the hall playing one of their familiar tunes. They had scarcely taken their places on the platform when Mrs. Booth-Tucker arrived, accompanied by Chief Secretary Col. Higgins, Brigadier Lewis, Staff Captain Dunham and Brigadier Evans. The band saluted several times, and for a few minutes there was a grand reception and ovation to the Consul. After several earnest prayers had been offered by those who accompanied Mrs. Booth-Tucker, Brigadier Evans in a few well chosen words introduced the speaker of the evening. This again called forth a number of salutes from the band and soldiers.

Mrs. Tucker was attired in the customary Army dress and over her right shoulder was thrown a large piece of white bunting interningled with the red and blue. She is tall, erect and of a commanding figure, similar to that of her brother. Her countenance is a striking one and one cannot but feel the earnestness and intensity of her presence. Mrs. Tucker spoke in part as follows:

"God bless you! We are all uncles, aunts, cousins, brothers, sisters, forming one great family, fighting in forty-eight countries. Hail to our Plainfield friends.

"Tonight we are going to meet around the Master's feet and claim a specific, definite and a fresh blessing, and thus secure a fresh enlightenment to all. There is abundant grace for all and no one need starve. This evening while sitting at the supper table at the home of Brigadier Evans, I was helped to some peas, which I remarked were wonderful and remarkable for it had never partaken of such peas before. Mrs. Evans said that everything in Plainfield was remarkable and wonderful, and as the peas were rapidly disappearing from my dish, Mrs. Evans said, 'there is plenty more,' and I thought it would be like the Great Supper, when the Angel would say 'there is plenty more.' For those who are timid and afraid of the enemy, methinks I hear the Angel say, 'there is plenty of courage.' For five years I was just a foreign secretary, and it was my privilege to travel through many countries where the Army has been signally blessed. What the Lord offers me He offers you, and everyone can receive the blessing.

"Those who mourn fail to rise to their full privilege, which is infinitely more beautiful than those please, if I may be allowed the comparison. Whatever your surroundings are you can meet and conquer difficulties. All forty-eight States possible with Him." One of Satan's illusions is that of making one dissatisfied with his surroundings.

"In India the people are a busy set, and our army is obliged to work at night if they wish to reach the working people; and under the beautiful sky, illumined by the moon and stars, our work progresses in a most encouraging manner.

"Americans have got big hearts. They are a wonderful people, and do great things. They are now sending bands of missionaries to all countries, and the time is not far distant when they will send them out by the thousands, for I believe this country is destined by God's grace to do much in all lands. There are times when we become discouraged, and it seems as though our hearts would break, but our Master, who loves us, can bring us through these troubles. The beautiful love of God is so great that we will never be able to comprehend the same.

"I never doubted my father's love, because he loved my brother, and shall we love our Lord any less. We should love all lands and possess that self-sacrificing love which is only perfect in Christ. Love is of little value when it doesn't show itself. I am here tonight to give God the glory, for I have seen some of the grandest manifestations of His love. I have been in the MISSION IN CHINATOWN.

INTERESTING TALK ON RELIGIOUS WORK AMONG CELESTIALS.

Miss Potter From The Morning Star Mission Says That Most Chinese in New York City Live in a Bad Way

The Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church enjoyed a rare treat Tuesday afternoon when they listened with interest to a talk on missions by Miss Potter, of the Morning Star Mission, New York. Mrs. Fish called the meeting to order, after which Miss Mabel Coard sang a pleasing solo, accompanied by Miss Alice Coard on the organ. Miss Potter was then introduced. Her work is chiefly in "Chinatown," New York, and she gave a vivid description of her labors in that locality. The Morning Star Mission was started four years ago and for two years Miss Potter has been engaged in the work. She said that the Chinese were a persistent and business-like race. Some of the stores in Chinatown, she said, were conducted by christian Chinamen who were very respectable. In all, she continued, there are thirty Chinese homes in Chinatown and the rest of the people live in what is called "mess-quarters," where there are no family influences. The speaker said that there were between three and four hundred girls living in Chinatown who are under the most harmful influences. Every Sunday there are about 8,000 Chinese in the neighborhood and that is the time when every effort is put forth to reach them by the christian workers. Miss Potter spoke of the encouraging results of the work and urged those present to lend their aid in support of it. Samples of Chinese dresses and photographs of a number of Chinese were shown at the close of the talk, which was followed by an informal discussion on missions.

SOON TO BE THE ALUMNI.

GRADUATING CLASS OF THE PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL.

For the First Time the Members Are Divided Into Three Different Grades —How the Distinction is Really Made

Plainfield has long been famous for her excellent schools and the graduates from the Plainfield High School are received by many of the colleges without taking any entrance examinations. Every year a large class leaves the Grammar School and enters the fourth class of the High School. Gradually the number diminishes as the class advances, some are left behind, others unable to keep up drop out, some of the young men begin their business careers before they complete the course. It is usually, however, a case of "a survival of the fittest," and the gathering of graduates at the end of the four years represent the conscientious and real workers of the class. Of course there are occasions where even the best pupils fail to graduate through circumstances beyond their control.

The class of '96 that graduates on Thursday, June 25th, has passed through the usual vicissitudes and now numbers twenty-three. Louis H. Rand, one of the most promising of pupils, and then president of the class, left two years ago to enter West Point, securing his appointment in a competitive examination. Volney F. Green, one of the best known members of the class, was taken ill nearly a month ago, and is still confined to his home, unable to take his final examinations. Mr. Green was up in his studies to the time of his illness, but the missing of the finals will probably prevent him from graduating.

Since the class of '95 graduated, the studies at the High School have been arranged in three courses, general, classical and English or scientific, from each of which the pupils graduate. The names of those who will graduate are:

General Course—Julia Francoise Bourgeois, Clyde Barrington Burnett, Elizabeth Mott Cahoone, Annie La Rue Carle, Ida Hamilton Clarke, Frank Wilbur Cornwell, Charles Marvin Dolliver, Felix Layat, Mary Grace Steiner, Mildred Titsworth.

Classical Course—Fred Chester Gaskill. Charles Anthony Squires, Fred Squires.

English Course—Florence May Bowman, Raymond Barnes Carroll, James Hazlewood Craig, Henry Eggerding, Mary Scott Hull, Harriet Isabel King, Minnie Viola Mitchell, Grace Eling Overton, Alden Wagner, Marion Alice Maynard.

There are always some pupils that stand especially high and those have been termed the "honor pupils." They are:

First Honor—Clyde Barrington Burnet, Frank Wilbur Cornwell and Fred. Chester Gaskill. Second Honor—Julia Francoise Bourgeois, Florence May Bowman, Elizabeth Mott Cahoone, Charles Marvin Dolliver, Henry Eggerding, Fred Squires. Mary Grace Steiner and Mildred Titsworth.

The highest honors that can be be given are the awarding of the valedictory and salutatory. The class was allowed to select one valedictorian and and salutatorian from among the first honor pupils and Frank Wilbur Cornwell was chosen for the former and Fred Chester Gaskill for the latter. The selections were approved by the teachers.

The motto of the class is "Non praestania sine labore."

PATHS.

The path that leads to a Loaf of Bread
Winds through the Swamps of Toil.
And the path that leads to a Suit of Clothes
Goes through the Sweatless soil.
And the path that leads to a Loaf of Bread
And a Suit of Clothes is hard to tread.

And the path that leads to a House of Your Own
Climbs over the bowldered hills:
And the paths that leads to a Bank Account
Are swept by the Ice-cold chills.
But the man who starts in the paths to-day
In the Lazy Hills may go astray.

In the Lazy Hills are trees to shade
By the dreamy Brooks of sleep.
And the rollicking River of Pleasure laughs
And gambols down the steep.
But when the days of winter come
The brook and the river are frozen dumb.

Then woe to those in the Lazy Hills
When the blasts of winter moan
Who strayed from the path to a Bank Account
And the path to a House of Their Own.
These paths are hard in the summer heat
But in winter they lead to a snug retreat.

NOW, Martha Ann, you be sure to behave the best you know how."

"Yes'm."

"And don't act like you hadn't had anything to eat for a week."

"No'm."

"And be sure to come home 'fore dark. Mis' Pratt will tell you what time it is if you can't get to see a clock."

"Yes'm."

Little Martha Ann walked slowly and primly down the wide, graveled walk leading to the front gate, followed by the watchful eyes of her grandmother.

"You throw yourself back more, Martha Ann. You'll be all round-shouldered if you stoop over like that."

Martha Ann heard the house door close, and she turned around and looked back. One of the front windows of the sitting-room was open, and a little girl of Martha Ann's own age was looking out. She was Esther Gray, Martha Ann's cousin, and she had been shut up in the house for two weeks with the measles. She was almost well now; but her grandmother didn't think it prudent to let her go out of doors, and so only Martha Ann had been allowed to accept Mrs. Pratt's invitation to tea. Mrs. Pratt was an old lady who lived at the other end of the village, and once a year she invited half-a-dozen little girls to tea, following a custom which her mother had begun many years before. Old Mrs. Hobbs was dead now, but her daughter remembered to do the things she had liked.

"I do wish you could go, Essie," said Martha Ann, wistfully.

"Yes, I wish so, too," replied Esther; "but you can tell me all about it. And if she has lemon jelly as she had last year you can put some in your pocket for me;" and Esther laughed.

Martha Ann laughed too, then turned around toward the gate again and went out into the wide, shady road. She walked along on the grass, so as not to get her shoes dusty, and she held up her pink gingham skirt with one hand. She was conscious that she looked well. She had on the white lawn apron which her grandmother had given her at Christmas. This was the first time she had worn it, and it was now June. It had been kept locked up in a cedar chest in the upper hall. Grandmother Gray had taken it out of the drawer in the old-fashioned bureau which was in the room occupied by the two little girls, and put it away. She thought Martha Ann looked at it too often, and that it might become soiled before a time came to wear it. It had been in the cedar chest four months, and Martha Ann was delighted to have it in her possession once more.

Mrs. Pratt's house stood back from the street, and the front yard was full of roses. Little Martha Ann stopped a moment to smell of a pink one which bloomed on a big bush near the box-bordered walk.

"That's a beauty, isn't it?" said Mrs. Pratt, appearing on the front porch, a big white apron covering the entire front of her black dress. "Come in, Martha Ann; all the rest are here."

There were four little girls sitting on the long hair-cloth sofa in the hall. They all wore fresh gingham dresses and stiffly starched white aprons; but Martha Ann's apron was the only one which had embroidered straps over the shoulders. She noticed this at once.

"Why didn't Esther come?" asked Mrs. Pratt; and Martha Ann explained, adding that Esther had been "very sorry."

"Yes, I guess it was a disappointment," said Mrs. Pratt; "but things will happen that way sometimes. Now all you children talk to each other while I see if supper's ready."

The four little girls made room for Martha Ann on the sofa, and she sat down, taking care not to rumple her dress. They all knew each other very well; but they felt rather stiff and formal on this occasion, and they were all glad when Mrs. Pratt came back and called them into the dining room.

On the table was a large platter of cold chicken, placed on one side by a plate of hot biscuits, and on the other by a dish of stewed potatoes. There were several kinds of preserves, currant pie, a glass dish of apple jelly, and a white china basket of currant jumbles. Mrs. Pratt prided herself on her currant jumbles. She always made them whenever she had company.

The basket stood on a corner of the table close to Martha Ann's right hand. It was full up to the handle.

"Now, children, eat all you want to," said Mrs. Pratt. "I do love to see you get enough."

Martha Ann liked the currant jumbles better than anything else on the table. She knew she never could make Esther understand how nice they tasted.

After supper the little girls went out in the front yard. All except Martha Ann played "Puss in the Corner" among the trees and rose bushes. Martha Ann sat in a low rocking chair on the porch and looked on, but she didn't seem to be enjoying it. She sat very still and didn't smile once. She asked the time as soon as Mrs. Pratt came out on the porch after washing and putting away the tea things, and when she learned it was seven o'clock said she thought she had better go, as her grandmother had told her to come home early.

"Very well," said Mrs. Pratt; "and I will put some of those currant jumbles up for you to take to Esther. You tell her to think of me when she eats 'em, and next time I invite her to tea, she mustn't have the measles."

Martha Ann smiled faintly and said: "Thank you, ma'am," in a very low voice, and with her soft blue eyes cast down, when she took the paper bag containing the jumbles.

She walked to the gate without looking around at all. When her hand was on the latch she remembered that she hadn't told Mrs. Pratt that she had had a pleasant time. But she didn't go back. After hesitating a moment she unlatched the gate and went out into the road. She walked with her head bent, forgetting all about what her grandmother had said about throwing her shoulders back.

About a quarter of a mile down the road she came to a big stone which lay close to the fence. She sat down on it, the bag of jumbles in her lap. Her face was very sober, and after a few minutes she began to cry softly, wiping away her tears with the skirt of her apron.

Presently she put her hand in her pocket and drew out her handkerchief, folded neatly, just as she had taken it from her bureau drawer. Then slowly, one by one, she brought out four currant jumbles. She cried harder than ever as she looked at them.

While at the table she had slipped them into her pocket when she thought no one was looking, and they had lain a heavy burden on her tender little conscience ever since. She knew she ought to go back and tell Mrs. Pratt what she had done; but it seemed as if it would break her heart to do it.

"I can't—I can't," she sobbed, her little face all puckered up with weeping.

But she did.

Mrs. Pratt was rocking on the porch and knitting on a blue yarn stocking when little Martha Ann came humbly in at the gate again. All the little girls who had been playing "Puss in the Corner" had gone home.

"What! what on earth brought you back, Martha Ann?" asked Mrs. Pratt. "Did you leave anything?"

Martha Ann burst out crying. She took the four currant jumbles from her pocket and held them out to Mrs. Pratt.

"I took 'em," she sobbed. "I took 'em when you wasn't lookin' at me. I was goin' to take 'em home to Essie."

Martha Ann's eyes were so full of tears that she couldn't see the expression of Mrs. Pratt's face; but she felt the currant jumbles taken from her hand.

"WELL, WHAT BROUGHT YOU BACK, MARTHA ANN?"

"Shall—shall I give—you—these—in the bag—too?" she sobbed.

"No, you keep 'em. Take 'em to Essie, like I told you. I sin't mad at you, Martha Ann. I felt pretty sure you'd come back. I was just sittin' out here to see. I saw you take those jumbles; but of course I couldn't say a word. An' I knew why you was sittin' out here so solemn after supper, and didn't want to play. But I guess you're all right now. You needn't cry any more. Come in and let me wash your face; it's all smouched up."

It was almost dark when Martha Ann reached home, and her grandmother scolded her. So she had to tell why she had stayed so late. She cried again when she saw how the story shocked her grandmother.

"It does beat all how children will act!" said the old lady. "I'm mortified most to death, Martha Ann. But you did right to go back and tell, though I don't guess Mrs. Pratt will ever ask you to her house again."

But she did. When Esther was able to go out another invitation came for both little girls. And this time when Martha Ann left Mrs. Pratt's house after tea there was nothing in her pocket except her handkerchief.—N. Y. Independent.

A Rush of Business.

"So you say Smith's new store on the avenue is closed."

"Yes. It is shut up."

"Why, I thought it was doing an immense business."

"That's just what busted it up. It was almighty so crowded that nobody could get into it."—Texas Siftings.

—It always grieves me to contemplate the initiation of children into the ways of life when they are scarcely more than infants. It checks their confidence and simplicity, two of the best qualities that Heaven gives them, and demands that they share our sorrows before they are capable of entering into our enjoyments.—Dickens.

OPEN UP THE AVENUE.

THAT IS THE SLOGAN WHICH ALL GOOD BOROUGHITES PROCLAIM.

Interviews With Prominent Officials and Citizens on the Action of Three Councilmen—Delayed But Not Defeated.

Probably there is no question of a local nature that is being discussed more freely at present than the one relating to the extension of Watchung avenue from the city through the borough to a point on Somerset street near the upper part of the Miles property. In fact, it has been the question for sometime past. The borough council has worked patiently in the matter for a long time, and there has been no end to the trouble, which has confronted them. The matter was practically settled and no further trouble was anticipated until last Friday evening, when, in executive session, an unexpected obstacle was presented. It now appears that for sometime members of the council have been considering the question of collecting assessments before the street was opened and whether the resolution as presented by Mr. Valiant and adopted by the council, was brought out for the purpose of ascertaining whether the people wanted the street opened or not, is still an undecided question. Mayor Hegeman was seen last evening by a representative of The Daily Press and learned just where this popular official stands. Mr. Hegeman said:

"The resolution adopted at the council meeting does not in any way effect the opening of the proposed street. It merely states that it is the opinion of the council that we do not proceed to the opening of Watchung avenue until the assessments are made and collected. Now, the first thing to be considered is that the full membership of the council was not present, hence it cannot be the sense of the council.

The resolution authorizing that bids be advertised for to carry on the work was adopted previous to the executive session, and accordingly the bids are being advertised for and everything that can be is being done to open the street. It is most unusual thing to collect assessments before a street is opened and it is not at all likely that anyone assessed would pay before the work was done. It has been said that I would veto the resolution, but that is unnecessary, for I will simply call for a full vote on the question and that will settle the matter. The street will undoubtedly be opened and if everything is in readiness work can be commenced as early as July 10th."

Councilman Schutt, who figured in the opposition, was next seen regarding the matter and spoke as follows on the subject:

"I want the people of the borough, my constituents and the press of Plainfield to know that I am heartily in favor of the opening of the street. The resolution adopted at the last meeting was stronger in its meaning than I realized, as I afterward learned. I have thought that the borough wanted to escape any litigation that might arise in the proceedings and to that end I have acted cautiously. As you know, the Miles property is now in litigation and the question has arisen in my mind how that matter would affect the situation. I am anxious to see the street opened, but I want the work done right, even if we have to go slow to do it. A great deal of property on the upper end of the proposed street has been given to the borough, for instance, about two acres of the Hudson property, which is very valuable, was given, and it is no more than right that the borough should stand the expense of putting the street through at that point. Between Jackson avenue and the brook it will require about $35,000 to open the street as it should be.

"I don't want the people to get the idea that I am an obstructionist, for I am not, and and I am perfectly willing now to vote to have the street put through, providing the borough is not liable to be involved in a law suit."

David Weaver, who lives near the proposed street, was interviewed and he said: "There will be more or less expenses in gaining the present position, and I think the street should go through by all means. Whatever my assessment is I will pay it, but not until the street is opened. I understand that some of the Councilmen are afraid of litigation, but they have gone so far that they cannot expect to escape it if there is any prospect of legal proceedings, and the best thing to do is to go forward."

S. B. Joseph, another property owner living close to the line, remarked that he would pay his assessment, whatever it is, after the street is opened. He thought no time should be lost in doing the work.

Mr. Daley, one of the representatives of the estate of the late Patrick Daley, whose property will be affected, was seen, and he expressed himself as follows: "It makes little difference to me whether the street goes through or not. I will be put to a good deal of trouble in moving the houses off the line. I have no trouble now in renting the houses, and probably would not have if the street was opened. It will require all of the assessments for damages to make the necessary change. In regard to the collection of the assessment, I would not pay one dollar of it until the street was opened."

Tax Collector Spencer said: "I have talked with a number of people about the matter, and they all tell me that after the street is opened they will pay their assessment, and not before. I think the street should go through by all means."

Councilman Valiant was asked what he had to say on the subject, and he said: "I am not opposed to the opening of Watchung avenue, as some people suppose, but personally I have failed to learn that the people are anxious to have the street opened. If the people want the street, we will give it to them. At present it's a question in my mind as to what the people want, and that was the intent of the resolution offered last Friday night."

VERDICT FOR HABERLE.

JURY AGAIN DECIDES AGAINST THE BABCOCK ESTATE.

Were Out For Twenty-two-and-a-half Hours—Strong Argument Made by W. A. Coddington for the Plaintiff.

No civil suit between Plainfield parties has attracted more attention of late years than that of Haberle against the Babcock estate. The facts of the case are well known to Plainfield people. The appeal from the Somerset's court was tried in the County Court before Judge McCormick last week and the summing of the counsel was set down for Thursday. Wm. A. Coddington, of the firm of Reed & Coddington, represented the plaintiff, and Craig A. Marsh represented the defendant. They were each allotted one hour and twenty minutes to make their argument in.

Mr. Coddington made a vigorous appeal for his plaintiff. He claimed that the motive the executors of the estate had in making the agreement to pay him if he continued his work, and Chandler did not pay him, was that some portions of the building were already rented and that if its completion was delayed they were liable to be sued for breach of contract. Numerous other strong points were made.

For the defense Mr. Marsh argued that the contract for the erection of the building was given to John Chandler, and that he alone was responsible for the payment of the wages of the mechanics employed thereon. So far as the administrators promising that they would pay the men if Chandler did not, Mr. Marsh claimed that executors only went so far as to tell the men that if there was any of the contract money left after the work was finished and Chandler did not then pay them, they would become responsible for their wages. Inasmuch as the contract money was all spent, it was held that this relieved the executors from any promise of compensating the men.

The jury took the case at 2:30 o'clock and after being out 22½ hours they returned to court at 1 o'clock this afternoon with a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for the full amount—$81.88. For a long time the jury stood 9 to 3.

During the course of the trial Mr. Marsh took numerous exceptions to the rulings and charge of the Judge, and on these he will file an appeal to the Supreme Court immediately. The papers necessary therefore will be made out this afternoon. Mr. Marsh told a Press reporter this afternoon that the case would be carried to the highest court before the case was settled definitely.

There are fourteen other cases of men whose wages are due them, and on whose collection depends a permanent decision in this case.

S. P. C. A. TO BE FORMED.

Money That Now Goes to the State Society Would Regert to the Local Branch.

There is about to be formed in the borough a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. This matter was recently mentioned and advocated exclusively by The Daily Press. When Wm. Pangborn, who is a State agent, a few weeks ago was the means of having a borough resident fined $50 for cruelly treating a horse, the need of such a society became apparent to all, as one-half of the fine reverted to the State society. If there had been a local society the money would have gone into its treasury. Of late Mr. Pangborn has made complaints against two more violators of the State law regarding the treatment of horses, and these facts have prompted him to organize a society. He has secured a number of the best citizens in the borough and the society will soon be formed. Such people as Mayor Hegeman, ex-Mayor Saunders, Rev. W. E. Honeyman, Elston French, C. Frank French and R. M. Fountain have become interested in the society, and they, with several others, will probably compose the officers.

Everything is about in readiness to form the society and in a few days it will be launched forth with bright prospects.

ON THE BREEZY MOUNT.

A DELIGHTFUL PLACE FOR THE RECREATION OF THE WEARY.

Mountain Park Inn Informally Opened Last Night—Has Every Improvement of an Up-to-Date Hotel—The Guests.

Mountain Park Inn is now open. When the full significance of that statement is realized by the citizens of Plainfield and North Plainfield they will be surprised. Less than a year ago the summit of Watchung mountain, where Mountain Park is located, was unbroken mountain land, stony and overgrown with trees and underbrush. Now a handsome hotel rears its head above the trees while a macadamized road, a telephone and electric light wires connect it with the plain.

The inn is now fully completed and furnished and ready to receive its guests. It is a pretty structure, painted a light yellow with white trimmings and green blinds. That nece-sity of a summer resort, a broad veranda, is there, over fifteen feet wide and almost completely surrounding the house. There are four stories and an observatory above them from which the view is something grand. Even from the wide veranda the view is well worth seeing. Plainfield in all its beauty lies in front of the observer while to the right a view can be obtained of the Washington Valley. Of course, the panorama was all there before the house was opened, but the surroundings have changed wonderfully, even during the last week. The ground in front of the hotel has been cleared and leveled, and the paths and driveways laid out.

Inside the change is even more pleasing, for the manager, George S. Moulton, has not been idle. The large hall is located in the centre with the spacious parlor on the right and the dining room on the left. These rooms occupy the main part of the first floor. The second, third and fourth floors are all devoted to the sleeping apartments, which are light and airy. The hotel is lit throughout with electric lights. The floors are varnished and the entire place has a clean and tidy appearance about it that is very pleasing to the newcomer.

The hotel opened last night and the following were registered on the first evening: Mr. and Mrs. Sherard Depew, child and nurse, of Newark, Hon. and Mrs. Chandler Riker, child and nurse, of Newark, James E. Negus, of Greenville, and Miss Negus, of Bound Brook.

CUPID JOINS LOVERS.

MARRIAGE OF A WESTFIELD BELLE TO A NEW YORK BEAU.

The Event Marked With All the Nuptial Features Necessary to Make it a Very Brilliant Occasion For Guests.

At five o'clock last Thursday, in the Westfield Presbyterian church, occurred the wedding of Miss Bertha Schuckher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Schuckher, to Max Winkelman, of New York. Miss Schuckher is a well-known among Westfield society people, and has many friends in this city.

The church decorations were white and gold and exceedingly beautiful. The Rev. Dr. Cadwell, pastor of the church, performed the marriage service.

The bride was attended by Miss Sara Hopkins, of Rye, N. Y., as maid of honor, and by the following bridesmaids: Miss Ada Bedell and Miss Minna Rode, of New York city; Miss Nellie Ganzell, of Westfield, and Miss Gertie Linden Kohl, of Elizabeth. The best man was G. Plate, of New York city, and the ushers Messrs. F. Hopkins, of Rye, N. Y., E. Huber, J. Benney, and W. Cosmasky, of New York city.

The best known of Westfield's society people were present, and those from out of town were: Mr. and Mrs. Rode, Miss Plate, Miss Posmasky, of New York city; Miss L. VanBoskerck, of this city; J. Hopkins, of Rye, N. Y.; H. T. Huber, of New York; Count Bellegarde, of New York; Charley Charley Hartung, and E. T. Dillenbeck, of New York city; Mrs. H. B. Anderson, of Trenton, N. J.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. George Demler Tendered a Surprise.

Mr. and Mrs. George Demler, Jr., of Washingtonville, were tendered a surprise party by their numerous friends at their home last evening, the occasion being the eighth anniversary of their marriage. Dancing was indulged in and the party broke up in the small hours of morning.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. George Ackens, Liberty Corner; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Blume, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Demler, Mr. and Mrs. Milligan, Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. S. Mantz, Misses Jennie Simpson, Jennie Gordon, Lizzie Milligan, Brooklyn; Mattie Humble, Sadie Cleaves, Rosie Bartels, Annie Spier, Bessie Bullman, Annie Bollier, Rahway; Carrie Spencer and Messrs. Barton, Coddington, Smith, Robert and Edward Clark, Mobus, Titus, Luersson, Spier and Walker.

FAIR SINGER OF BILTMORE.

How Miss Mattison Came to Be Engaged by the Vanderbilts.

"The Fair Singer of Biltmore" is the title given by the New York Recorder this morning to Miss Pauline Mattison, who has been selected as leading soloist by George Vanderbilt for his memorial church at Asheville, N. C. Concerning her good fortune, The Recorder has this to say of how Miss Mattison came to be engaged:

"When Biltmore was formally opened, the entire population of the country side joined in the festivities. Among other luxuries promised, was a handsome place of worship, which should be attended by both the Vanderbilts, their guests and the other residents of the estate.

"Mr. Vanderbilt selected Carl Florio to organize the choir of the church, and, it is said, pays him a very large sum to do just as he pleases, sparing no care or expense in the selection of the singers. Florio arrived at Biltmore early in April, and he had not been there long when he heard of the girl with the wonderful voice, who had charmed every music lover in Asheville.

"Finally, he heard her sing himself and promptly arranged for her to sing privately for Mr. Vanderbilt. This hearing took place at Biltmore and Mr. Vanderbilt was delighted. He invited Miss Mattison to sing for him again, which she did at a subsequent date, and immediately after received a very flattering offer to sing in the choir of the millionaire's church at a salary, it is said, of $250 a month.

"Miss Mattison accepted after due consideration, and subsequently her sister, Jeanette, returned to Plainfield, leaving Mrs. Mattison behind to care for the songstress.

"The church at Biltmore will be dedicated the middle of next month, and Mr. Vanderbilt and a party of friends will proceed thither in his private car."

DISPENSING FRESH AIR.

A MEETING HELD IN AID OF THE CAMP AT WESTFIELD.

All it Costs to Keep a Person for a Day is Eleven Cents—How and Why the Camp Was Started by the Promoters.

The Westfield Camp for mothers and children has been a grand success, and it is with the hope of making the camp a greater success this year that the orginators of the scheme are now preparing for the accommodation of those tenenlent women, who so greatly need a few days outing.

It was in behalf of this branch of mission work that the members of the various Christian Endeavor Societies, of this city, assembled in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church last Friday to listen to the words of explanation from the orinators of the camp.

The meeting was led by Everett Kimball who in well-chosen words introduced the several speakers of the evening.

Rev. E. L. Fox, of New York, was the first speaker, and he gave a description of the class of people who are taken from their homes in the tenements of New York and brought out into the country and there permitted to enjoy the beauties of nature, and, if possible, learn something which may enable them to keep their homes in the city in a more comfortable way. Mr. Fox told of his experience among these people and pleaded strongly for the support of the Plainfield people in this work.

The second speaker was D. M. Torry, treasurer of the Union Fresh Air Mission Association. Mr. Torry's words were spoken for the purpose of explaining last year's work at the camp. Mr. Torry is a New York banker, residing at Westfield, and in course of his speech he said that the Westfield Fresh Air Camp was the best investment for any amount of our money.

The third speaker was George E. Woolfe, of New York, first vice-president of the association. Mr. Woolfe told of his experience in New York mission work, how one thing led to another and how, finally, he was led to start the movement which has developed into the present Fresh Air Camp.

Mr. Woolfe had often noticed the need of outings for women of the tenement houses, and two years ago while spending a few days with friends he be ame acquainted with the fact that a nearby grove with about five acres was for sale, and reluctantly he purchased the piece of land, not knowing at the time for what purpose he really wanted it. Later on, while engaged in mission work, he realized the great need and sufferings of the tenement house life, and what a blessing it might be to those poor mothers and their children who are confined the year round in those close homes, not having the privilege of God's fresh air. For the first time the Master made it clear to Mr. Woolfe why he had purchased the grove. Mr. Woolfe then suggested the idea to other members of the Association, and now every one may see what a grand movement has come out of his scheme. This is the story of the founding of the Westfield Fresh Air Camp. After the meeting adjourned an open conference was held, and any questions which might be asked, were gladly answered by the members of the Association present.

One of the interesting facts brought out by these questions and their answers, was the cost of keeping the inmates of the camp. It costs just eleven cents a day per person to provide for these people, or as one person in the audience said, "a little more than the cost of one good cigar a day."

Miss Curry, matron of the camp, was also present, and spoke personally with all she found an opportunity, but did not make any talk at the meeting.

Arthur N. Pierson, of Westfield, second vice-president of the Association, was also present, and held an after meeting with all officers and committee chairmen of the societies represented, and made further explanation of the work in order that it might be carried to every society of Plainfield.

A Missionary Tea.

A missionary tea was given yesterday afternoon by the Women's Home Missionary Society of the First Presbyterian church. Mr. Leggett, of Elizabeth, a talented speaker was present and gave a thoroughly interesting talk to the society, telling something of her experiences. At the close of the meeting the members of the society were served with tea.

A Bicyclist Falls Over a Dog.

J. King, of Netherwood avenue, was riding his Crescent bike along South avenue on the Netherwood hill, when a big dog ran out and followed the rider some distance. Finally the front wheel of the machine struck the dog fore and aft, and the result was that Mr. King was thrown into the gutter and his wheel badly wrecked. The rider was hurled head foremost into a tree, but very fortunately escaped with a swelled jaw and a couple of bad contusions on the forehead.

A DAILY PRESS MEET.

CHANCE FOR BICYCLE RIDERS TO BREAK SCHOLASTIC RECORDS.

The Meet to be Held at Crescent Oval Next Monday—Tandems to Act as Pacemakers—The List of the Officials.

The beginning of the summer vacation for the Plainfield school boys is near at hand, and some of those who have been doing some fast work on the bicycle track are anxious to ride once more in a scholastic race meet. There are several who think that they can lower the present scholastic records which have been made in competition.

For the benefit of these riders, an informal race meet has been arranged by The Daily Press, open to the bicycle riders of Prof. Leal's School and Plainfield High School, and tandem pacemakers will be used so as to give the riders a chance at the present records.

The race meet will be held Monday afternoon at the Crescent Oval, beginning at 3 o'clock. A sanction has been secured from the L. A. W. Racing Board and the meet will be held under L. A. W. rules. The events will all be scratch and will consist of one-half mile, one mile and a two mile race.

George B. Cobb, chairman of the Crescent Wheelmen's racing board and president of the Jersey Wheel Company, will act as referee. The other officials have been appointed as follows:

Judges, Charles C. Lister, captain of the Crescent Wheelmen. George Proctor Smith, President of the New York Interscholastic Athletic Association.

Timers, W. H. Rogers, ex-president of the Crescent Wheelmen; J. Hervey Doane, of the Crescent Wheelmen; Gus T. Burglund, trainer of the Jersey Wheel Company's racing team; Richard Stevens, of the Crescent Wheelmen; Wilbur F. Cornwell, first vice-president of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association.

Clerk of the Course, Charles Burdette Jones.

Scorers, A. Willis West, president of the Leal's School Athletic Association; Volney F. Green, president of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association; W. E. Probosco, treasurer of the New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association.

Umpires, Thomas U. Smith, E. I. Serrell, George B Schoonmaker, George A. Horne and Henry B. Drake.

Among the best known contestants will be William M. McCahon, Lindley Hillman, Carroll Runyon, and probably Raymond A. McGee. Three tandem teams will do the pacing. They will probably consist of George B. Cobb, Jr., and J. Lake, Ernest T. Hand and Joe Donoghue, and Louis Darling and Bert Hindrichs. Ten cents admission will be charged to the grounds.

WROUGHT WITH DEFT FINGERS.

Creditable Work of the Pupils of Prof. Dalziel in Exhibition.

A private exhibition of the work at the Dalziel Manual Training School was held Thursday afternoon from 5 to 6 o'clock for the benefit of the scholars' parents, and there was a goodly number present.

The scholars of this school have done excellent work throughout the year and the result is that a noteworthy collection was on exhibition. In clay modeling and wood work the result is marvelous, considering the age of the scholars, and the parents were gratified exceedingly over the progress made.

Mr. Dalziel gave a short address on "Educational Work," which was especially helpful to all present. He gave a brief outline of the work, its importance and advantage, and no one present could but feel that his words were not only true but very appropriate.

If the people of Plainfield realized the value of manual training there would be no hesitancy on their part in putting their children where they could get the benefits of such teaching. Mr. Dalziel is a man peculiarly fitted for this particular branch of work and the attainment reached by his scholars gives abundant proof that he is thorough and capable in every detail.

MRS. BOOTH-TUCKER TO TALK.

Big Rally of the Salvationists to be Addressed by the General's Daughter.

Tuesday evening, the Salvationists are to have a grand rally at their hall, 116 West Second street. The principal speaker will be Mrs. Emma Booth-Tucker, Gen. Booth's second daughter, a woman of marvelous ability and second to none as a platform speaker. She will be accompanied by Brigadier Alice Lewis, her private secretary, who has had a wide experience in India and various other parts of the world.

Colonel Higgins, America's new chief secretary, Brigadier R. Evans, of the central chief division, with his staff, several band boys, also officers and soldiers from Bound Brook and Elizabeth will be present. Seats will be free and every one should come early in order to get a seat, as the hall will undoubtedly be packed.

BEST KEPT BACK YARD.

TOWN IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION OFFER A PRIZE OF $5.

Occupants of Houses Along the Railroad Will Have an Incentive to Make Their Backyards Look as Nice as Possible.

The worst view that can be obtained of Plainfield is secured when passing through this city on a train of the New Jersey Central railroad. Disreputable backyards, surrounded by dilapidated fences, present anything but a beautiful appearance, and the action of the Town Improvement Association in trying to improve their present condition, is indeed commendable. The Association does not use the usual means of simply asking people to keep their backyards looking neat and respectable, but has made it to the advantage of everybody living in the vicinity by putting up a prize for the neatest and best kept backyard. The prize will be good hard cash, $5 of it.

A committee has been appointed, who will decide whose back yard is the best kept, and to the owner the $5 will be presented. The contest begins at once, and will continue until November 1st, which will give everyone ample time to put their backyards in good order.

It is to be hoped that this enterprising act of the Association will be successful, and those who pass through Plainfield will not be forced to judge the beauty of the city by rows of unclean and ill kept backyards.

FIVE YEARS OF LIFE.

Somerset Council No. 104, Jr., O. U. A. M., Celebrate.

The rooms of Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., in the Babcock building, were filled last Friday with an appreciative and select audience, when the Council celebrated in an auspicious manner its fifth anniversary. Councilor Frank Howland presided and announced the various numbers on the programme. A pleasant feature was the appearance of the Schubert Ladies' Orchestra. The programme was opened with an overture by the orchestra entitled "Golden Sceptre." This was followed with a few words of welcome by Councilor Howland who introduced the Senior Past Councilor James D. Anderson who gave a brief history of the Council and the objects of the order, and in behalf of Brother G. Thorn he presented the Council with a handsome frame containing the pictures of about sixty of the leading members, it was received in behalf of the Council by Councilor Howland with a few well chosen words appropriate to the occasion. Miss Lillian Thorn then gave an excellent recitation entitled, "Shelling Pease." Another feature was the selections rendered by a phonograph. The machine was made and operated by Alonzo Brokaw, a member of the Council, and he entertained the audience in a novel manner. Following the orchestra rendered a waltz entitled, "Living Whist," in a way that elicited hearty applause. Henry Allen, of Relief Council, No. 2, of Philadelphia, then gave an amusing recitation. A cornet solo by Mrs. J. D. Anderson, was given, also a vocal solo by little Miss Edith GaNun. After a comical recitation by Past Councilor George Allen, the "Broadway Two-step" and "America" was given by the orchestra. The entire programme was finely rendered, and hearty applause was accorded each number. At the conclusion of the entertainment the pressed was invited to the banquet room where ice-cream and cake was served. Thus the fifth anniversary of Somerset Council, No. 104, was celebrated.

Among those present were members of Old Glory and Lucetta councils, Daughters of Liberty, and a number of the wives and lady friends of the brothers.

A BRIGHT YOUNG MAN.

High Honors Captured by Edward J. Patterson, a Plainfield Boy.

A the commencement of the New York law school held in Carnegie Music Hall last Thursday evening, the prize fellowship, which is the highest honor given by the law school after two years' competition, was conferred upon Mr. Edward J. Patterson, of Central avenue, as reported in yesterday's Press. Mr. Patterson received many congratulations on this most auspicious occasion, particularly from his classmates at Princeton, many of whom were together in the law school while at Princeton Mr. Patterson was one of the editors of the Nassau Literary Magazine, and was president of the Plainfield Club at Princeton, being in fact its promoter and ruling spirit. He graduated with high honors, and is at present in the office of Cary & Whitridge, at 59 Wall street, New York. During the winter Mr. Patterson's duties as instructor, incident to the fellowship he has just received, will keep him in New York, where he will divide his time between his faculty work in the law school and the practice of the law 59 Wall street.

A New Fish and Game Warden.

The Bound Brook Chronicle says that Charles P. Sebring has been appointed a Fish and Game Warden for Somerset county.

POTATOES IN PALATABLE WAY.

Potatoes Warmed in Gravy.—Chop a pint of cold boiled potatoes into half-inch dices. Put a cupful of good gravy (beef, veal or poultry) into a spider, and when hot put in the potatoes, stirring until they are thoroughly mixed with the gravy, and serve hot.

Broiled Potatoes.—Boil large potatoes in their skins, peel and cut lengthwise in rather thick slices. Sprinkle with salt and place in the broiler which should be thoroughly greased. Broil nicely, arrange on a hot dish butter, and dust with a little pepper, and serve.

Potato Pasty.—Pare, boil and mast very fine some potatoes. Season with salt, pepper, and add a large lump of butter. Make a good pie-paste and roll out the size and shape of a medium sized pie-plate. On one-half of this place the potato, fold over the other half, pinch the edges closely together and bake in a moderate oven.

Escalloped Potatoes.—Pare and slice potatoes thin. Butter an earthen pudding-dish, put in a layer of potatoes and season with salt, pepper, butter and a little finely-minced onion, sprinkle with a little flour and add another layer of potato; continue till the dish is full and pour a cupful of milk over all. Bake three-quarters of an hour.

Potatoes and Beef.—To boiled and mashed potatoes add some milk, butter and a well-beaten egg. Place a layer of the potatoes on a buttered pudding-dish, then a layer of minced lean beef (cooked), sprinkle with pepper and salt, and repeat layers till dish is full, leaving a layer of potato on top dotted with bits of butter. Bake till top is a light brown.—Ladies' World.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY BITS.

William Morris has been seriously ill, but is once more well enough to attend to his literary and artistic work.

Those who knew the ex-Senator Platt, of New York, assert that it is the ambition of his life to be secretary of the treasury.

M. Laroche, the French resident in Madagascar, though a Protestant, makes it a point to attend mass in the Catholic cathedral every Sunday.

Charles de Lesseps and M. Blondin are said to have left France to avoid fresh proceedings about to be taken for the recovery of Panama money.

Mrs. Louise Chandler Moulton is unable to walk on account of pain in the south, owing to a broken arm, caused by slipping in the street in Boston the other day.

Lord Rosebery is considered one of the handsomest men in England. "You cannot make a caricature of Rosebery," remarked an English cartoonist recently. "His features are too regular."

George Henry Boughton has just been elected to the Royal academy. He had been an associate since 1879. Though his reputation was made in New York he is an Englishman by birth.

A BATCH OF BIG FISH STORIES.

It is reported that the petrified remains of a whale, 80 feet in length, have been found in the hills north of Lompoc, a dozen miles due west from the sea, in Santa Barbara county, Cal.

A 29-pound togue, the biggest fish ever known to have been caught in Moosehead Lake, Me., was hooked by a guide a few days ago. It measured three feet four inches in length, and is thought to be the largest specimen of the trout family ever caught in Maine.

An unusually large octopus, with eight arms, each measuring a little less than six feet in length, was killed at Santa Meda, Cal., a few days ago. The fish fastened its tentacles on a boat which a fisherman was rowing in the harbor. The man rowed his boat ashore, the fish still clinging to it, and killed the octopus with an axe.

A devil-fish, measuring 15½ feet from the tip of one of its eight arms to the tip of another and ten feet from the top of its head to the tip of its longest fin, was killed by a steamer off Santa Barbara, Cal., by two boys a few days ago. It was the largest devil fish ever caught in those waters.

PEN NAMES OF GREAT WRITERS.

"Barry Cornwall" was the assumed name of B. W. Procter. Some of Barry's songs will probably live as long as the English language is spoken.

Robert Southey's pen name was "Espriella Alvarey." It was used in his letters from England. Most of his works were published over his own name.

J. Fenimore Cooper began to write under the pen name of "A Traveling Bachelor." His travels and social condition probably inspired the selection.

Francis Mahoney was long known among his acquaintances as "Father Prout," his best-known book having been entitled, "Reliques of Father Prout."

John Ruskin published his early writings under the pen name "Graduate of Oxford," the selection being obviously influenced by his place of education.

SOME DOGS OF HIGH DEGREE.

In England and Wales there are 155 licensed packs of foxhounds, having 6,239 couples. In Scotland there are nine packs with 326 couples, and in Ireland 17 with 365 couples.

Mulhall says that the largest-known dog was a St. Bernard called "Plinlimmon," exhibited at Birmingham in 1886. The height of this animal was 35 inches, and his weight 214 pounds.

A trained bloodhound has been known to follow the track of a man on horseback, and when the man passed through bushes the animal jumped up and smelled at the leaves touched by the feet of the horseman.

The "shepherd" of North Europe has been known to historians for over 1,005 years, and it is believed that the remarkable dexterity manifested by this animal in caring for sheep is the herd! ary result of training.

BARON HIRSCH'S FUND.

Work That Is Done with the Dead Philanthropist's Gift to America.

The Baron de Hirsch fund in the United States was started in March, 1890, when the philanthropist gave $2,500,000 in cash to a board of trustees, seven of whom reside in New York and two in Philadelphia, for the purpose of educating and Americanizing Russian and Roumanian immigrant Jews to enable them to become self-supporting.

Immediately upon arrival the children of the immigrants are taught English in 12 large classrooms in the Educational Alliance building by graduates of the Normal college, who prepare them to enter the primary grades of the public schools. There are now 750 children in these day classes. A matron is in charge of the lavatory, who sees to it that the children are clean. There are also ten evening English classes, composed of boys working men and women, most of whom come to the classes direct from their workshops.

The fund has also established a mechanical training school in the building erected especially for the purpose and containing all the modern machinery and appliances—where are taught carpentry, house, sign and fresco painting and working in iron, sufficient to enable graduates to become helpers in their respective trades, and in most cases good positions are obtained immediately upon leaving school. The term is six months, and each graduate is given the tools of his trade.

The United Hebrew charities are the almoners of a portion of the fund set apart for immediate relief and the transportation of immigrants to the interior, where places have been previously found for them by the free employment bureau, which also obtains situations for those who remain in the city. An agent is located on Ellis Island for the purpose of looking after the interests of and giving instructions to immigrants who come under the jurisdiction of the fund.

As education in cleanliess is considered of primary importance, public baths were established by the fund in 1891. There are 26 rain baths, besides tubs, in connection therewith, and attached to each is a dressing-room. The charge is 5 cents for adults and 3 cents for children. From 500 to 700 baths are given per day.

In 1891 the fund purchased 5,100 acres of land in Woodbine, Cape May county, N. J., on the West and South Jersey railroads, 54 miles from Philadelphia and 23 miles from Cape May. The land was originally covered with timber and brush, and was divided into 1,600 acres, and divided into 68 farm plots of 30 acres each, and 2,300 town lots. Upon each farm there have been erected a comfortable residence, barn and outhouses, and the houses in the town are principally cottages. There are 12 miles of streets and roads.

Woodbine has four large factories, wherein clothing, pocketbooks, baskets and a variety of iron work and machinery are made, the employes being mainly the young men and women residents of the place. A large electric plant supplies the factories, hotel and streets with an abundance of light. A brick yard is making the best of hard red brick. There is also a kindling wood factory.

Eleven stores and other private enterprises are located at Woodbine.

The finest schoolhouse in the county has been built there, and another one is being erected by the board of education of the county at a cost of $2,000. There are three English day classes, a kindergarten and a manual training class; also an English evening school class. The teachers are appointed by the board of education.

A special building, hothouses and nurseries have been erected for the agricultural school, wherein students are taught by competent instructors from the state agricultural college, and they are now receiving instructions there, it being the intent to graduate competent teachers of agriculture. A brick synagogue is in course of erection and will cost about $10,000. The lower part is to be used for a Hebrew school and for other communal purposes.

The farming population of Woodbine is 890 and the town residents number 200.

The agricultural bureau of information of the fund is located at No. 378 Grand street, this city, where immigrants who desire to become farmers are advised upon the whole subject. There are similar branches in Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, Detroit and Minneapolis.—N. Y. Journal.

The Object of His Curiosity.

EGYPT'S NEW ARMY.

Prejudice Against Military Service Is Being Rapidly Overcome.

In one sense the Egyptian army is being tried in the field for the first time. True, it has already its record of victories. The men who are now concentrating on the upper Nile are a different army from the wretched slave soldiers who broke at El Teb in Baker's disastrous fight, and who followed Hicks to destruction in Kordofan. These were the days when recruits were dragged in chains to the quay or the railway station, the days when parents destroyed their children's sight or crippled a hand or limb that they might escape impressment into the public schools. There are now 750 children in these day classes. A matron is in charge of the lavatory, who sees to it that the children are clean. There are also ten evening English classes, composed of boys working men and women, most of whom come to the classes direct from their workshops.

The fund has also established a mechanical training school in the building erected especially for the purpose and containing all the modern machinery and appliances—where are taught carpentry, house, sign and fresco painting and working in iron, sufficient to enable graduates to become helpers in their respective trades, and in most cases good positions are obtained immediately upon leaving school. The term is six months, and each graduate is given the tools of his trade.

The United Hebrew charities are the almoners of a portion of the fund set apart for immediate relief and the transportation of immigrants to the interior, where places have been previously found for them by the free employment bureau, which also obtains situations for those who remain in the city. An agent is located on Ellis Island for the purpose of looking after the interests of and giving instructions to immigrants who come under the jurisdiction of the fund.

As education in cleanliess is considered of primary importance, public baths were established by the fund in 1891. There are 26 rain baths, besides tubs, in connection therewith, and attached to each is a dressing-room. The charge is 5 cents for adults and 3 cents for children. From 500 to 700 baths are given per day.

In 1891 the fund purchased 5,100 acres of land in Woodbine, Cape May county, N. J., on the West and South Jersey railroads, 54 miles from Philadelphia and 23 miles from Cape May. The land was originally covered with timber and brush, and was divided into 1,600 farm plots of 30 acres each, and 2,300 town lots. Upon each farm there have been erected a comfortable residence, barn and outhouses, and the houses in the town are principally cottages. There are 12 miles of streets and roads.

Woodbine has four large factories, wherein clothing, pocketbooks, baskets and a variety of iron work and machinery are made, the employes being mainly the young men and women residents of the place. A large electric plant supplies the factories, hotel and streets with an abundance of light. A brick yard is making the best of hard red brick. There is also a kindling wood factory.

Eleven stores and other private enterprises are located at Woodbine.

The finest schoolhouse in the county has been built there, and another one is being erected by the board of education of the county at a cost of $2,000. There are three English day classes, a kindergarten and a manual training class; also an English evening school class. The teachers are appointed by the board of education.

A special building, hothouses and nurseries have been erected for the agricultural school, wherein students are taught by competent instructors from the state agricultural college, and they are now receiving instructions there, it being the intent to graduate competent teachers of agriculture. A brick synagogue is in course of erection and will cost about $10,000. The lower part is to be used for a Hebrew school and for other communal purposes.

The farming population of Woodbine is 890 and the town residents number 200.

Prejudice Against Military Service Is Being Rapidly Overcome.

In one sense the Egyptian army is being tried in the field for the first time. True, it has already its record of victories. The men who are now concentrating on the upper Nile are a different army from the wretched slave soldiers who broke at El Teb in Baker's disastrous fight, and who followed Hicks to destruction in Kordofan. These were the days when recruits were dragged in chains to the quay or the railway station, the days when parents destroyed their children's sight or crippled a hand or limb that they might escape impressment into the public schools. There are now no sign of the times—the reservists are coming in without any difficulty, even though they are ordered for service in the once dreaded Soudan. The army is now regarded as an honorable career, and the general feeling is that the Egyptian regiments, if called upon to face a mahdist force on the upper Nile, will behave as well as they did when they attacked and put to flight the fanatic followers of Osman Tonki or broke with steady volleys the Harendowa charge at Afafit, a charge delivered suddenly at close quarters out of a thick bush not 200 yards away. But in this sense the campaign is far more important than the first time since Khartoum fell an Egyptian army is not merely holding back the mahdist invasion, but acting on the offensive and boldly pushing southward the outposts of the khalifa's ill-consolidated power. There will be a higher test of the military organization built up by British officers than any mere guarding of a frontier line. That the test will show how well our soldier countrymen have done their work, I have not a moment's doubt.

There are two elements in the new Egyptian army. The Soudanese battalions have already made themselves a reputation which rather eclipses that of the comrades of the Egyptian or fellaheen, regiments. The Soudanese are keen for a fight; if anything, difficult to hold in, so eager are they to blaze away their cartridges or break into a premature dash at the enemy with a bayonet. But the fellaheen under good leaders though not laving fighting for its own sake, are soldiers of a very serviceable type. Obedient, made for disciplined action, trusting their officers and their own discipline, and then acting without hesitation, they are men who under bad leaders might break and give way, but under good officers are more than a match for half-savage enemies. I have heard it said that though they are good behind ramparts they have not yet been tested in the open; but it was a fellaheen battalion (the First Egyptian) whose bayonets turned the scale in one of the fiercest moments of the fight at Toski. I hear on good authority that the khedive is specially anxious that the Egyptian battalions should have the opportunity in this campaign of showing that they can do their duty as soldiers as well as their darker-faced comrades of the Soudanese battalions. —London News.

CHEATING THE TREASURY.

Attempts Are Frequently Made, But They Are Rarely Successful.

Frauds on the redemption division of the treasury are constantly being tried. What are called "drawer scraps" are frequently sent in every day with demands for new money in exchange. These are the torn-off fragments of notes which are found in tills and cash drawers. A young man employed in a New York bank once sent in a boxful of them, claiming $500. They were the result of many sweepings carefully accumulated. Unfortunately they represented $1,000 or more, if anything, and the youth was lucky to escape prosecution. Not long ago there was mailed to the treasury a number of rolled-up pellets of paper, which she said represented a five-dollar note torn up by a child. The pellets were straightened out and found to be 12 tender strips cut lengthwise from as many five-dollar bills. It is hardly necessary to say that the woman got nothing in return. People seem to think that Uncle Sam is precious green; at the same time the redemption division does get cheated now and then, undoubtedly.

Late in the year 1892 it was discovered in the redemption division that the full number of the notes of the series of 1874 had been redeemed. Nevertheless, notes of this series were still coming in for redemption. At first it was thought that there had been an over-issue by some strange mistake. Accordingly all of these notes from that time were withheld from the customary destruction and their numbers were registered for the purpose of seeing if duplicates would appear. But no duplicates did appear and it is now believed that the republic arose from an error on the part of the officials appointed to act as a destruction committee. They must have made a mistake in their record of notes destroyed, putting down the figures 1874 instead of some other year. —Philadelphia Times.

Whose Whales Had Legs.

The more remote ancestors of whales undoubtedly had legs. The sperm whale possesses a rudimentary thigh bone and tibia. There seems to be no question but that the progenitors of modern whales were land animals, but their descendants took to the sea and ceased to require legs. These remarks apply to hind legs; fore legs of whales are represented by their flippers. The ancestors of all marine mammals were land animals. The intermediate condition may be observed in the seals, which live on the land to some extent. The porpoise is legless, but has rudimentary hip bones. The ancestors of modern snakes had legs and walked. The boa constrictor possesses rudimentary hind legs.—Chicago Chronicle.

Secretary Franklin Dye, of the State Board of Agriculture, estimates the farming population of New Jersey at 200,000, and the number of voters identified with farming at half that number.

McKinleyism was tried for four years and found wanting. It is not to the credit of the majority of the people to think that they have so soon forgotten the declining times when the apostle of high protection was experimenting on their business.

William C. Whitney is still in the public eye as a favorable candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination. Many prominent members of the party in New York assert that he is their selection for the place. James E. Martine, of this city, still believes that he will be the candidate.

W. H. Miles informs The Daily Press that there need be no fear of blocking the Watchung avenue opening by reason of litigation over the Miles estate. He says that the heirs of the estate dedicated the map for the street to be opened a year ago and that the work was filed at the beginning of the year.

Gaius Hoffman, of Bound Brook, is said to be a candidate for the office of Superintendent of Public Instruction for Somerset county, to succeed John L. Anderson, whose term expires in a few months. Other candidates are John S. Haynes, Prof. Mets and John Beger, of Somerville; and J. Newton Voorhees, of Middlebush.

The following unsolicited complimentary letter has been received by The Daily Press:

Every citizen of Plainfield should read The Daily Press. It represents truth, candor, manhood, independence and Americanism. It stands for fair dealing and honest politics. It is neither hysterical nor heroic but firmly and faithfully represents with honor and dignity the cause of pure, patriotic citizenship. If pays American wages to American workmen. It doesn't indulge in low, mean social immorality. Its chief recommendation is that it is the opposite of the News.

Since his retirement from the U. S. Senate the Hon. George F. Edmunds has resisted all the attempts which have been made by his friends to induce him to exercise from time to time his powerful political influence in Vermont. Mr. Edmunds enjoys excellent health, and expresses himself well satisfied that his political career has come to a close.

The people are beginning to waken to the realization that the City Commissioners on the Watchung avenue opening are not working fast enough. Charles H. Hand has taken hold of the matter, and is circulating a petition asking for more rapid progress in the matter. It is being signed by everybody who is solicited. Again The Press reiterates that the people want this improvement and want it right away.

Plainfield's servants of Uncle Sam are in a happy mood today. The Senate yesterday passed the bill raising the scale of their salaries, though it was stoutly opposed by the Committee on appropriations in each House. The bill increases the maximum annual pay of carriers at first-class offices from $1,000 to $1,200, and increases the maximum at smaller offices from $800 to $1,000. The carriers have insisted that the character of their work, the intelligence required, and the cost of living justified a higher maximum for faithful service than is now granted, if the character of the service is to be maintained.

Ordinarily The Daily Press permits the incipient and swelled head editor of The News to carry on his daily attacks against this paper without a reply, but now and then they smack so much of malicious untruth that a reference to them seems irrepressible. And this is one of the occasions. Last Saturday The Press published interesting features in the form of syndicate articles on the Republican National convention and the life of Richard P. Bland, the noted free silver advocate. Immediately the editor of the rat-trap sheet accused The Press of advocating free silver. But it is useless to daily words as to the animus of the accusation made by this example of a disgraced and sordid journalism. Suffice to say that The Press never has endorsed free silver nor given voice to a sentiment that could be construed as such.

TWO DOGS AND A JURY.

MARGUERITO VELASQUEZ was a person of some notoriety on the American side of the Texan frontier. There were two patriots, indeed, when members of his acquaintance, notably sheriff's officers, sought his society with an ardor that was difficult to withstand. The present was one of those occasions, and although Marguerito had shown some coyness about accepting the urgent invitation extended to him and had, moreover, given the state officials some healthy exercise before allowing them to deliver it personally, yet he had eventually given way to force of circumstances.

Fortunately for themselves, the representatives of law and order in Juesbaya knew within one hundred miles or so the localities where Marguerito was likely to be found. His natural modesty would, they were aware, prevent his crossing the American border, where a return had long been awaited with anxiety by certain of his compatriots. Therefore the chase had been short.

Still, while it lasted, like most of the proceedings in which Marguerito was actively concerned, it had proved full of interest to the persons sharing in it. But now the object of all these attentions had recognized the uselessness of further resistance, and feeling that he had done his best, was prepared to rest upon his laurels. Wherein his friend, Don Carlos, agreed with him.

The pair, accompanied by a large proportion of the population, made their way toward the courthouse, a building which, unflatteringly illustrated the quality of the liquid dispensed therein. As a matter of fact, before it became a hall of justice, it had been a loft, and access to it was still gained by means of a ladder. Marguerito, followed by the judge, the jury and the crowd, mounted with impassive slowness, and he was shortly occupying a prominent position in the court.

Don Carlos, who suffered from a constitutional objection to climbing, was elected to remain in the yard below. Knowing from past experience that the trial was likely to be a lengthy process, he gravely seated himself upon the ground and prepared to await events. It should be explained that Don Carlos was not handsome. Neither was he good. Still, he possessed merits which might have been apparent to the casual observer. In complexion he was black and tan, being rather like a dachshund in the face, while he strongly resembled a greyhound in the figure. His tail, however, was impossible to classify, for it belonged to no species or epoch. Owing to his having been dropped by his nurse when a baby, it had a break near the tip, which caused it to curl back in coquettish manner far from exemplifying the real solidity of his character, while its length would have done credit to a cat.

Don Carlos himself seemed to be aware that it was not the latest fashion in tails, and he habitually underwent many things in a vain endeavor to sit upon the whole of it at once. He was thus engaged upon the present occasion when, glancing up, he chanced to catch sight of a bull mastiff which was strolling into the yard apparently in search of stray refreshments.

Don Carlos pricked up his ears and blinked his eyes into which the light of battle gradually crept, until the bystander, unconscious of danger, drew nearer every moment.

In the meanwhile the sonorous tones of the judge, mingled with the drawl of the witnesses, sounded clearly from the open window of the loft above. It appeared that Marguerito was accused of horse stealing this time, and as he listened to the details of his career, as described by the sufferers from it, he felt by no means certain but that this might be the last of his many adventures.

"Judge Hopper's got a banging look about him this morning," he meditated, with an unemotional face. "If I get off this time I will go home to Conchita, and they shall find me no more."

The last witness for the prosecution finished his tale of woe, and a feeble effort was made at defense, while Marguerito wondered idly if he really were as great a ruffian as the evidence seemed to imply.

Silence broken only by the buzzing of flies fell upon the close room, as the judge seated himself in his wooden chair and prepared to sum up. The culprit, who was looking through the window at his side, appeared to be the only uninterested person present. A deputy standing near was about to call his attention to the proceedings when, following for an instant the direction of the prisoner's gaze, he, too, became absorbed.

The sheriff himself then glanced at the window, through which short barks were beginning to make themselves heard, and after one look he rushed to the door and commenced hurriedly descending the ladder. The audience gazed at each other in amazement for an instant, and with a simultaneous movement they took a hurried survey of the yard. Having looked, they wasted no more time, but, with an expression of rapture stealing over their faces, they made for the ladder, accompanied by the prisoner and his guard.

The judge, being left alone in the loft, frowned severely at the empty benches, as he said with impressive dignity: "I guess this court will now adjourn." Then he tucked up his sleeves and made good time for the yard. A vigorous struggle for the best view took place between Marguerito and himself, without either man being in the least aware of the identity of the person by whom he was foiled. Nor would it have made any difference if he had known, because not even for a free pardon would the accused have consented to forego the enthralling sight on which he was feasting his eyes.

Affairs were just at their most exciting stage. The bull mastiff, it appeared, had drawn quite close to Don Carlos before perceiving his presence. He had, then, instead of apologizing for the intrusion, critically examined Don Carlos' tail, afterward giving vent to an insulting bark. This brought Don Carlos to his senses, and in less time than it takes to tell the two dogs were so inextricably mixed up that but for the appendage in question waving over the scene like a flag of battle, it would have been impossible to distinguish one combatant from the other.

There was no necessity for the haste displayed by the spectators in reaching the seat of war, for the fray promised to be as long as it was sanguinary. No quarter was asked or desired. The stranger possessed a vast amount of staying power, inasmuch as when he once took hold little short of extracting his teeth made him let go again. But the artful tactics of his opponent were new to him, and prevented his getting an opportunity to show what he really could do.

Don Carlos dashed underneath him and sent him sprawling in the mud; he jumped over his back and gave him a perfunctory bite in passing, and he harried his front and rear guards both at the same time, until the bull mastiff felt that for all the good he was able to effect, he might as well be a toy terrier. The ironical cheers of the crowd incited him to fresh endeavor, and he spent himself in frantic efforts to gain the mastery.

At length, however, he saw a chance. Making a sudden dash while Don Carlos was in the act of executing one of his wonderful leaps, the bulldog set him in mid-air, and at last obtained a grip on the enemy's throat. Both dogs fell to the ground, the stranger savagely worrying his apparently vanquished antagonist.

Don Carlos uttered signs of a desire to interfere, but Marguerito waved them back. "Let 'em alone," he said, placidly, "and bet your boots upon old Carlos."

The intelligent animal, as he lay beneath his conqueror, appeared to understand and to be encouraged by the faith reposed in him by his master. He gathered his long legs together, planting them firmly against his enemy's body, and the next development of the case was that the bull mastiff was seen to be taking an entirely involuntary flight through space.

Don Carlos, meanwhile, slowly arose, shook out his tail, and—yawned.

The discomfited interloper, after a short period of meditation in a dust heap, picked himself out of the dirt. He looked back at the field of battle, glanced at the open gate which he had entered, and then in a depressed manner he evidently made up his mind that it was time to leave. He accordingly did so, and not until he had slowly lurched out of sight around the corner did Don Carlos creep up to his master for congratulations. That gentleman muttered something in their native Mexican that was clearly intelligible to his companion, for Don Carlos' eyes and plaintive bark he found life a very satisfactory thing. With unlooked for docility Marguerito turned to ascend the ladder leading to the loft.

Brought back so everyday life by his movement, judge, jury and audience followed suit in a silence too blissful for breaking.

The prisoner, impassive as ever, resumed his careless survey of the room, letting his gaze rest longest on the benches occupied by the jury.

The judge took his seat, scrutinized the faces of the crowd, and, apparently satisfied by what he read there, cleared his throat and began.

"Gentlemen of the jury," he said, "when we were interrupted by unforeseen circumstances a short time ago I was in the act of saying that I was about to declare that accordin' to the best of your belief the pris'ner was innercent of the charge agin him."

"You've struck it, judge," unblushingly responded the jury.

The judge frowned down an attempt at speech on the part of the sheriff and turned to Marguerito.

"Pris'ner," he said, "you heerd the remarks of them gentlemen opposite, so you may take it that the proceedin's is concluded. But don't get up to any more of your tricks in this country, for it 'pears likely that next time you won't get off so easy. And now, what'll you take for the dog?"—Pall Mall Gazette.

She Was Grateful

The plain tailor-made costumes so much in vogue with young ladies are occasionally the cause of amusing mistakes. A young lady in a street car gave up her seat to an elderly woman. The old lady, near-sighted but grateful, was prompt in her acknowledgments. "Thank you, sir," she said; "thank you very much. You are the only gentleman in the car."—Youth's Companion.

PROFIT AND LOSS.

It Is Not Enough to Merely Hold Your Own.

Hard Times in Health as Well as Business. How to Attain Physical Prosperity.

Every successful merchant keeps two columns, one for "Profit" and another for "Loss." At the close of each year a balance is taken and the true condition of things revealed.

Unwise purchases or too many charges on the books may easily make the balance show on the wrong side. In dull and hard times the merchant often thinks he is fortunate if the books do not show a loss, even if there is no gain. He is almost satisfied if he "holds his own."

A great many young people, especially school girls, seem to be living in "dull and hard times," for they do not improve and develop as they should. They just hold their own, and that is all. They should be growing and making advances all along the line. Every day should show a balance on the Profit side of the health column. They should gain in weight, increase in height, and fully develop in muscular and mental strength.

If there is a stand-still, just holding your own, then an effort should be made to aid nature. You only have to give her a little start in the right direction. Some good old-fashioned exercise will ruddy her cheeks, fill them out, and repeat layers till dish is full, leaving a layer of potato on top dotted with bits of butter. Bake till top is a light brown.—Ladies' World.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY BITS.

William Morris has been seriously ill, but is once more well enough to attend to his literary and artistic work.

Those who best know ex-Senator Platt, of New York, assert that it is the ambition of his life to be secretary of the treasury.

M. Laroche, the French resident in Madagascar, though a Protestant, makes it a point to attend mass in the Catholic cathedral every Sunday.

Charles de Lesseps and M. Blondin are said to have left France to avoid fresh proceedings about to be taken for the recovery of Panama money.

Mrs. Louise Chandler Moulton is unable to make an intended visit to the south, owing to a broken arm, caused by slipping in the street in Boston the other day.

Lord Rosebery is considered one of the handsomest men in England. "You cannot make a caricature of Rosebery," remarked an English cartoonist recently. "His features are very regular."

George Henry Boughton has just been elected to the Royal academy. He had been an associate since 1879. Though his reputation was made in New York he is an Englishman by birth.

A BATCH OF BIG FISH STORIES.

It is reported that the petrified remains of a whale, 80 feet in length, have been found in the hills north of Lompoc, a dozen miles or so back from the sea, in Santa Barbara county, Cal.

A 29-pound tarpon, the biggest fish ever known to have been caught in Moosehead Lake, Me., was hooked by a guide a few days ago. It measured three feet four inches in length, and is thought to be the largest specimen of the trout family ever caught in Maine.

An unusually large octopus, with eight arms, each measuring a little less than six feet in length, was killed at Alameda, Cal., a few days ago. The fish fastened its tentacles on a boat which a fisherman was rowing in the harbor. The man rowed his boat ashore, the fish still clinging to it, and killed the octopus with an oar.

A devil-fish, measuring 15½ feet from the tip of one of its eight arms to the tip of another and ten feet from the top of its head to the tip of its longest arm, was killed in the channel at Santa Barbara, Cal., by two boys a few days ago. It was a horned devil fish ever caught in those waters.

PEN NAMES OF GREAT WRITERS.

"Barry Cornwall" was the assumed name of B. W. Proctor. Some of Barry's songs will probably live as long as the English language is spoken.

Robert Southey's pen name was "Espriella Alvarey." It was used in his letters from England. Most of his works were published over his own name.

J. Fenimore Cooper began to write under the pen name of "A Traveling Bachelor." His original and social condition probably inspired the selection.

Francis Mahoney was long known among his acquaintances as "Father Prout," his best-known book having been entitled, "Reliques of Father Prout."

John Ruskin published his early writings under the pen name "Graduate of Oxford," the selection being obviously influenced by his place of education.

SOME DOGS OF HIGH DEGREE.

In England and Wales there are 155 licensed packs of foxhounds, having 6,229 couples. Scotland there are nine packs with 326 couples, and in Ireland 17 with 365 couples.

Mulhall says that the largest-known dog was a St. Bernard called "Plinlimmon," exhibited at Birmingham in 1886. The height of this animal was 35 inches, and his weight 214 pounds.

A trained bloodhound has been known to follow the track of a man on horseback, and when the rider passed through bushes the animal jumped up and seized the leaves touched by the feet of the horseman.

The "shepherd" of North Europe has been known to historians for over 1,000 years, and it is believed that the remarkable dexterity manifested by this animal in caring for sheep is the hereditary result of training.

POTATOES IN PALATABLE WAYS.

Potatoes Warmed in Gravy.—Chop a pint of cold boiled potatoes into half-inch dices. Put a cupful of good gravy (beef, veal or poultry) into a sauce, and when hot put in the potatoes, stirring until they are thoroughly mixed with the gravy, and serve hot.

Broiled Potatoes.—Boil large potatoes in their skins, peel and cut lengthwise in rather thick slices. Sprinkle with salt and place in the broiler with about one previously greased. Broil nicely, arrange on a hot dish, butter, and dust with a little pepper, and serve.

Potato Pasty.—Pare, boil and mash very fine some potatoes. Season with salt, pepper, and add a large lump of butter. Make a good pie-paste and roll out the size and shape of a medium sized pie-plate. On one-half of this place the potato, fold over the other half, pinch the edges closely together and bake in a moderate oven.

Excellent Potatoes.—Pare and slice potatoes thin. Butter an earthen pudding-dish, put in a layer of potatoes and season with salt, pepper, butter and a little finely-minced onion, sprinkle with a little flour and add another layer of potatoes until the dish is full and pour a cupful of milk over all. Bake three-quarters of an hour.

Potatoes and Beef.—To boiled and mashed potatoes add some milk, butter and a well-beaten egg. Place a layer of the potatoes on a buttered pudding-dish, then a layer of minced lean beef (cooked), sprinkle with pepper and salt, and repeat layers till dish is full, leaving a layer of potato on top dotted with bits of butter. Bake till top is a light brown.—Ladies' World.

THE SEMINARY CLOSES.

ANNUAL EXERCISES AT THE CHESTNUTS THIS MORNING.

Owing to the Illness of One of the Graduates the Exercises Were Private—Sheepskin Diplomas Were Presented.

The commencement exercises of the Young Ladies' Seminary took place at The Chestnuts last Friday at 10 o'clock. Owing to the ill health of one of the class the exercises were strictly private, only the school and a few friends of the graduates being present. The Seminary Hall was made beautiful by a profusion of roses and honeysuckle, and the chairs of the graduates were tied with pink ribbons and a spray of pink rosebuds.

There was but one essay read, and this was an interesting and carefully written thesis on "The Growth of the Library," prepared by Miss Edna Howell. The diplomas were presented by Miss Kenyon with a few words of earnest and practical counsel. The Seminary is one of the few schools that still present diplomas made of genuine sheepskin, and stamped with a genuine seal. One of the pleasant customs of the commencements at this school is the singing of "Rock Me to Sleep, Mother," a farewell song of the students to the graduating class. The words of this song were written by a member of the school, and set to a serenade of Beischtett.

WILL MAKE A HARD FIGHT

JAMES E. MARTINE IS OPTOMISTIC OF DEMOCRATIC SUCCESS.

The Farmer Orator Believes That the Action of Cleveland and Whitney Will Warm Up Democrats to Action.

James E. Martine was one of the first men in New Jersey to favor Wm. C. Whitney as a candidate for President, and all along the Farmer Orator has maintained that he should and would probably be the candidate. Mr. Martine was seen by a Press reporter this morning and asked what he thought of President Cleveland's letter and the decision of Mr. Whitney to stay at home and make a fight for his party. He said:

"Most opportune to the cause of true Democracy and success of the Democratic ticket this fall, is the letter of Grover Cleveland and the action of that patriotic citizen and Democrat, Wm. C. Whitney. The action of Mr. Whitney will stay contention and strife in the councils at Chicago, and the Democratic hosts will go forth to battle in November not as a solid phalanx, contending for free raw materials, cheap necessaries of life, and honest money.

"Mr. Whitney's action has brought dismay to the Republican ranks. It has been their hope alone that through internal dissensions in our party they would triumph.

"Men will not be deceived by empty platitudes. 'By their fruits he shall known them' will be the motto that will control the votes of freemen. The fact remains that under the McKinley tariff, mills and workshops throughout the land were closed and wages reduced to the lowest level, while under the Wilson tariff law wages have been voluntarily increased. Broader markets for the products of our handiwork have been opened, and the necessaries of life cheapened to every family. It is defending this record that has won such champions as Grover Cleveland and Wm. C. Whitney.

"I have so much faith in the principles and teachings of my party that I believe the exponents of true Democracy will triumph at the polls."

CHILDREN'S COSTUMES.

New Things in Dress for the Younger Girls.

The shops are filled this year with the most fascinating materials for girls' frocks. Challies in the Dolly Varden patterns, flowered dimities, colored piques, sheer lawns of every color and design, organdies, and even linens and grass cloths, are considered suitable for children's wear, while in the wool goods there is an endless variety.

The challis are by many mothers preferred to silks, for the old-fashioned idea that silk is a material not to be worn by a girl until she is 18 is not quite done away with, although fashion seems to have changed lately, and the silks are used in great quantities, the pompadour and empire patterns and the Dresden flowers being preferred. Still, there are, as has been said, many women who prefer to use challis for children's wear.

There are but two styles of skirts for children's dresses. One is made very full, and with no goring; this is sewed on to the band in gathers, three rows of fine shirring insuring a better hanging to the skirt, and the fullness being kept as much as possible to the back. Some very smart French frocks have a perfectly circular skirt, which of course hangs without any fulness over the hips, and flares out considerably around the bottom. Ruffles are tabooed, and the skirt is finished with a deep hem. Two rows of insertion let in above the hem, or, if the gown be of wool, with lace laid on the material, are the only trimming ever seen, and this but rarely, for the plain look is considered much smarter.

Guimpe dresses are worn by girls as old as 12, and they are made with very little variation from last year, the difference lying only in the trimming over the shoulders of the dress. Sometimes this is put on in bands of embroidery, or of one color on other, or in plain bands of pique trimmed with a narrow edge of embroidery. The waist itself is the full baby waist, gathered in at the belt, and an insertion through which ribbon is run gives a pretty soft effect. The sleeves are full puffs which reach a little above the elbows, and are finished with the insertion to run ribbon through, and the full stiff look is given to the puffs by means of small tapes inside, which are tied tight or loose, as the case may be. A white dimity with sprays of moss roses made in the style just described is exceedingly dainty and fresh, with its trimming of moss green ribbon an inch wide, which, put through the different insertions, is finished with rosettes on either side of the front, and also at the back, but there has the addition of long ends. Another pretty little gown to be worn with a ruffined is of pink and white striped grass cloth. This has the batiste collar edged with embroidery and bright cherry ribbons, which make it look as clean and bright as a new stick of peppermint candy. Another little gown made on these lines is a bright red gingham with a polka dot of white. In this gown the collar and cape over the sleeves are all of the same material, and merely edged with embroidery put on without any fullness, while the little cap pieces are fastened on the waist with tiny white pearl buttons.—Harper's Bazar.

A LEMON CHESS PIE.

Directions for the Making of a Toothsome Dessert.

This pie is somewhat of a puzzle to housekeepers. It is composed of eggs, butter, sugar and lemon juice, so put together that they form a perfectly light, consistent paste if the directions are followed. It will not be possible to expect a successful result unless the directions are implicitly followed, though they contradict the ordinary method of raising. Measure out three rounded tablespoonfuls of butter, five tablespoonfuls of sugar, the grated yellow peel and juice of one lemon and the yolks of three eggs. Put all these ingredients in a porcelain-lined saucepan. Hold the saucepan over the stove and beat the ingredients together continually for five minutes. Do not let the saucepan rest on the stove, but tip it all the time so that every part of the mixture may be moved by the beating. Use an egg whip in beating. Finally, the mixture will have thickened, remove it from the fire and add at once the whites of three eggs beaten to a very stiff froth, and beat in the same egg whip with an egg-whip for five minutes. Line a two-inch pie plate with rich pastry and pour in the filling. Bake the pie three-quarters of an hour in a rather quick oven. The whites will not separate from the butter and sugar if the pie is properly made. Cut the pie as soon as it is taken out of the oven. Serve it cold or hot. If the butter, sugar and yolks sink to the bottom and the whites rise to the top the pie has not been properly mixed. The secret lies in properly beating the butter, sugar and yolks together over the fire to form a slightly thickened mass, which, when mixed with the whites, becomes a species of sponge. It is an improvement to most sponge cakes to be raised with eggs alone and to heat the yolks of the eggs and sugar over the fire while beating them together. The beating must be stopped a moment, or the eggs would be ruined by curdling.—N. Y. Tribune.

Meat Pies.

One pint finely chopped meat, one teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, two teaspoons grated onion, one egg, one tablespoon butter, one teaspoon flour, one-half gill milk; put butter in frying pan and on the fire with flour, then milk; when it boils up put in seasoned meat, cook for two minutes and set aside to cool. Pastry.—One pint flour, two teaspoons lard, one teaspoon salt, two of baking powder, one tablespoon sugar, generous gill of water, roll out, divide in ten squares, place prepared meat in each square, roll, place in butter pan, wash each roll with the egg; bake 25 minutes.—Boston Globe.

JACKSON DISCHARGED!

ALL THE TESTIMONY IN ACCUSED MAN'S FAVOR.

The Evidence Thus Far Offered Makes Plausible the Story Told by Jackson—Jackson is Now Free—Applause in Court.

At 3:10 o'clock Prof. Carvalho, expert of chirography, testified that the two letters were written by Mrs. Jackson.

Jackson was immediately discharged.

Jackson left the court room amid great applause.

On motion of Prosecutor Voorhees the case of the State against Charles H. Jackson, who was accused of the crime of killing his wife at New Market on the morning of June 6th, was called in the Middlesex county court at New Brunswick before Judge Strong last Monday at 10:30 o'clock. There was a large number present, many of whom were from New Market and Dunellen. All the witnesses who were called at the Coroner's inquest were subpoenaed and were in court.

Jackson was there looking pale and careworn. He was represented by George Ransome, of Jersey City, and George Berdine, of New Brunswick.

The first witness called was Dr. Whitford. He testified to the fact of Jackson calling him after having found his wife on the morning of the fatality. After telling him of the shooting he says that Jackson exclaimed: "I am to blame for this; I was cross to her." Jackson also told the doctor that his wife was despondent.

Rev. F. E. Peterson, of New Market, was the next witness and he testified also to the fact of Jackson calling him and telling him that his wife had shot herself. He said that Jackson was in a very excited frame of mind. When they arrived at the scene of the fatality and Jackson found the alleged farewell letter written by Mrs. Jackson, he turned the letter over to the minister.

County Physician Long, who made the examination of remains at the inquest, testified that the first wound was not serious enough to cause death, and that after it was inflicted Mrs. Jackson would have been able to have walked and talked. He stated that he told the Prosecutor last Monday that it was his opinion that it was a case of suicide.

Mrs. Titsworth, in whose home the shooting took and who was an aunt of Mrs. Jackson, stated that Jackson called her and told her of the suicide, and was in an excited mood at the time.

Miss Palmsberg, who resided in the same house, was called and testified to overhearing a conversation between Jackson and his wife, in which the latter asked where the revolver was kept. Jackson refused to tell her. She also testified to having heard the little four-year old son tell about putting the revolver under the pillow of the bed on which his mother had shot herself, the circumstance which made it look as though it was not a case of suicide.

Wm. Maynard, of the Winchester Rifle Company, New York, offered expert testimony. Other witnesses were Lillian Gaskill, of Dunellen; J. P. Mosher, of Plainfield; J. P. Carter, of New York, brother of the dead woman; T. Ely Schenck, of New Brunswick. The last three testified to the handwriting of the farewell letter being that of Mrs. Jackson.

An adjournment was taken at noon, the case being called again at 2 o'clock.

Lack of Power Now.

The delay in opening the street railway lines is now caused by the inability of the Plainfield Electric Light Co. to furnish a sufficient amount of power to run ten cars. A new dynamo has been secured, and it is expected that the armature will arrive today. It is thought that possibly the lines may be opened tomorrow. Yesterday afternoon two trips were made on West Front street as far as Clinton avenue. Men are now at work clearing the tracks from Clinton avenue to Dunellen. One trip was made Saturday afternoon to Netherwood.

An Old Democrat Dead.

William Ball, the oldest clothing merchant in Elizabeth, died yesterday at his home on Broad street, aged eighty-eight. He was the first Democratic candidate for Sheriff when Union county was set off from Essex in 1837, and was defeated by Meline W. Smalley, Republican. Mr. Ball served as a member of the old borough council of Elizabethtown. He was in business up to the time of his last illness.

Nervous

People often wonder why their nerves are so weak; why they get tired so easily; why they start at every slight but sudden sound; why they do not sleep naturally; why they have frequent headaches, indigestion and nervous

Dyspepsia

The explanation is simple. It is found in that impure blood which is continually feeding the nerves upon refuse instead of the elements of strength and vigor. In such condition opiate and nerve compounds simply deaden and do not cure. BIG THINGS IN THE BUG LINE.

Venezuela is a little republic but she has one thing that is the biggest of its kind on earth. It is a bug—the largest insect in all the world. The creature is known as the "elephant beetle," and when full grown it weighs nearly half a pound.

In tropical America occur certain huge species of bugs that are closely related to the familiar electric-light bugs of this country. Like the latter, which has been popularly known only since the introduction of the electric light, they fly at night, living during the day at the bottom of ponds.

There is a butterfly of the Malay Peninsula and Malayan Archipelago which has a spread of ten inches. In India and tropical Africa are found giant forms of those remarkable insects known as "walking sticks." They look like twigs of trees. Some of them measure 18 inches in length. They are related to grasshoppers and katydids.

In Europe giant beetles have a considerable market value, commanding prices in proportion to their size. In London there are regular auctions of insects, and a single butterfly has been known to bring as much as $800. A specimen of the rare and very large Goliath beetle is worth $60. This is the largest beetle of the world, and it first became known through missionaries in the Congo basin.

THINGS STRANGE AND CURIOUS.

ORIGIN OF FAMILIAR SAYINGS.

"Going to pot" is a reminder of the days when boiling to death was a legal punishment of patricides.

"To be in a brown study" is a corruption of brow study, a study requiring much thought and contraction of the brows.

"Knocked into a cocked hat" is expressive of the case with which this article, especially when old, assumed almost any shape.

"As dead as a herring" is an expression arising from the fact that herring die very quickly after being taken out of the water.

"Please the pigs" is a corruption of "please the pyx," a receptacle used by clergy of the Roman faith to contain the host or sacred wafers.

"To catch a weasel asleep" is indicative of the extreme vigilance of these animals, who are disturbed, and made wide awake by any sound, however slight.

"As jolly as a sand boy" represents the hopping to and fro of a marine insect seen everywhere along our coasts, whose leaps give the idea of mirth and jollity.

NOTES OF EUROPEAN ROYALTY.

The prince of Wales will have a sale at Sandringham on July 3 of short-horn cattle and Southdown sheep raised by him on his Wolferton farm.

Pierre Loti is said to spend more of his time before the camera than any man in Europe, except Kaiser Wilhelm and the prince of Wales. He has a mania for being photographed in fancy costumes.

Don Antonio Canovas del Castillo, the prime minister of Spain, is an aristocrat of aristocrats and ultra-conservative. "My policy," said he on one occasion, "is to continue the history of Spain, not to reverse it."

The queen regent of Spain has conferred a decoration upon the composer, Don Federico Chueca. Chueca is the composer of the famous march "Cadiz," now the most popular one among the Spanish soldiers. The influential Imparcial, of Madrid, suggests making it the national march, and offers a prize of 1,000 pesetas for a hymn to accompany it.

PICKINGS OF POPULAR SCIENCE.

The eye of the blind fish in the Mammoth cave is a true eye, having all the parts. It is, however, covered by a membrane, and it is probable that the fish receives no more than a mere impression of light.

The beaver has more skill than a government engineer. The dams constructed by beavers are never washed away, while every freshet witnesses the destruction of a portion at least of the government's works on the rivers.

The alligator never leaves fresh water, while the crocodile frequently travels long distances by sea. It has been seen 1,000 miles from land, and it is possible that these sea-going crocodiles have given rise to sea-serpent stories.

The planet Neptune, which had for countless ages revolved in the heavens unseen by anyone on earth, was discovered simultaneously and independently in 1846 by Prof. Adams and M. Leverrier, the two most brilliant astronomers of the day.

CHORDS AND DISCORDS.

The Little Things Create Annoyance in Everyday Life.

It is related that a certain eastern king was so disturbed by any misfortune which came to him that he was powerless to look beyond it to any possible pleasure or good fortune fate might still be guarding for him. Present affliction seemed the only reality and nothing in life powerful enough to overcome it. On one occasion a ring was to be engraved for him and those who loved him and deplored his pessimistic moods sought an inscription that should embody the greatest wisdom and consolation in the fewest words—something that would bring at once to the mind in hours of depression and despair should ward off the twin demons of fear and melancholy—a sort of talisman to protect him from his own wayward fancies. Many beautiful sentiments were submitted, but nothing which contained such a message of joy as that which his daughter caused to be inscribed in the ring: "This, Too, Shall Pass," was the translation of the tiny cabalistic characters.

It wouldn't be a bad idea to have this motto writ large and hung in a conspicuous place in the homes of many of the moderns, for the poor Persian king has many followers—even among Americans. Most of us don't have to plunge very deeply into retrospect to recall something that presaged most dismal results—that we worried over by night and struggled over by day, and then when our strength was well nigh exhausted some unforeseen circumstance turned the scale and everything came out right, and better far than we could have planned it.

Don't waste any energy on imaginary battles, but bring actual warfare enough, and ever so vigorous a target practice with visionary foes won't help you any in real contests. The ills you arm yourself to meet with such show of bravery very likely never come your way at all. It is oftener the unexpected that happens. True, there is an occasional man who goes about unconsciously seeking failure. He reads it between the lines of his morning paper. He sees it in the first purchase for the home—but he never dreams he is wooing it with his importunities.

Our motto is not for such men. It is for those to whom there comes times when in spite of every effort the wish seem closing in around them. But somehow they usually manage to pull through, or if they fail the experience proves a stepping stone to something higher.

Is it not almost better to go through the breakers in a fool's paradise of carefree lessness than by constantly anticipating bad luck make yourself a magnet to attract it?

The world, however, should not be held sacred to matters of great importance. The unimportant affairs of life often create untold annoyance. Very insignificant trifles cause many a day of sorrowful depression. If we could only think thoughts like "This, too, shall pass"—we know it does pass. The little grievances go by and are as if they had never been. We forget them; but new ones come, and they will go like the others.

"Every cloud has a silver lining" is no mere figure of speech or poetic fancy; it is a literal truth in life as well as in nature. No matter how black the clouds, how impenetrable the gloom; behind them the sun is shining, and sometime it will burst through in a grand blaze of glory. Whether you are foolishly grieving over some petty annoyance or staggering under the weight of some crushing sorrow, it is just as I tell my own heart, Divine Love is over all—This, too, shall pass.—Mate Palmer in Banner of Gold.

WIT SERVED HER PURPOSE.

Bridget Had a Happy Way of Getting Assistance from Her Neighbors.

An old Irishwoman who has received many benefits at the hands of a benevolent minister and his wife is so shiftless that occasionally the large-hearted couple have all pathos with her, but she has such a sense of humor and such a beguiling tongue that she never fails to amuse them and finally to win them back. At one time when money was given her to buy warm underclothing with she wasted it upon a large plush photograph album. The minister spoke to her with considerable severity, as did also his wife, and for some time after received no calls from either of them. One afternoon, however, the minister relented and stopped at Bridget's door on his way to see a sick woman. "Shure, and it's mesilf that's dreamed about you most noit, Misther Williams," said Bridget, with a beaming smile. "Oi dreamed that you and Missus Williams came here to see me, and say you: 'How are you to-day, Bridget, tay and coffee, Bridget?' and Oi says: 'It's mitter a drop of tay Oi've got in the house, Misther Williams!' And this you presinted me wid a pound of tay and Missus Williams said a pound of coffee on the sphot! Yis, that's what you did, ma'am." "Well, Bridget," said the minister, striving not to smile, "you know dreams are said to go by contraries." "Shure, and that's thrue, Oi said to mesilf," exclaimed Bridget, triumphantly. "Said Oi, 'Misther Williams is the wan that'll be givin' me the coffee and Missus Williams the tay!' Thim was my very thoughts, sorr."—Youth's Companion.

Looked Like It.

In a primary school the teacher undertook to convey to her pupils an idea of the use of the hyphen. She wrote on the black-board "bird's-nest," and pointing to the hyphen, asked the school: "What does this mean?"

After a short pause, a young son of the Emerald Isle piped out: "Please, ma'am, for the bird to roosht on."—Tit-Bits.

WAS FOR SWEET CHARITY

"THE FATAL VOW." WRITTEN BY MISS MARGARET M'CUTCHEN.

Produced by Local Talent For the Benefit of the Summer Camp—Great Credit to All Those Who Participated.

They counted themselves happy who were so fortunate as to enjoy the entertainment last Friday at the home of Charles W. McCutchen, of Rockview avenue, where an original drama was given for the benefit of the Babies Camp. The play was under the auspices of the Christian Relief Society" composed of Misses Margaret McCutchen, Dorothy Wells, Cora Haviland and Francis Phillips. They were assisted by Misses Helen Phillips, Francis and Helen Weir, Catharine Dwight, Dora and Orville Waring. The tragedy, in four acts, was entitled "The fatal vow; a tale of Bohemia." The dramatis personnæ were Misses Margaret McCutchen, Cora Haviland, Dorothy Wells, Helen and Francis Phillips, Francis and Helen Weir, Catharine Dwight, Dora and Orville Waring. The story was full of romantic and tragic situations like the devotion of the princess, the anger of the king, the parting of the princess from her lover, the Prince of France, the crusader's fatal son, and the happy meeting of the hapless pair, terminated by the death of the Prince. Some of the scenes were very effective, notably, the court festivities, the bar-room episode at the sign of the Golden Goose, the crusader's son in the church of the Knight Templars and the battlefield with the ministrations of the Red Cross society.

Between the acts, Miss Catharine Dwight gave some delightful recitations, and music was rendered by Miss Emma Haviland, Miss Francis Weir and Edward Waring.

Miss Cora Haviland showed unusual dramatic ability in her ready changes of character from the haughty, angry king, to the coy barmaid and grave, grandmaster of the Knight Templars. Miss McCutchen made the most possible out of the small parts which she undertook and the audience was plainly disappointed not to see more of her.

Miss D. Wells, as Frederika, was loveliness personified. Too much can not be said of the manner, passionate or pleading, as occasion required, in which Miss Francis Phillips filled the difficult role of Bertrand.

The story is of a Princess of Bohemia, who angers her father, the king, even to disinheritance, by insisting on going to the battlefield as a nurse against his commands, and in spite of the pleadings of her fiance, the Prince of France. The Prince gallantly refuses to accept the offered inheritance of the outcast princess and in despair over the course she has taken, and on hearing the report of her death, joins the sacred order of the Knight Templars, swearing never to marry. Later on the field of battle, after the smoke has cleared away he recognizes in the figure of a nurse easing the last moments of a dying soldier, his beloved Frederika and rushes to her only to recall his solemn vow never to marry, and cursing his fate, stabs himself to the heart, when Frederika falls dead over his prostrate body.

The young actresses were called before the curtain many times and praise was heard on all sides for the author of the play.

After the fall of the curtain Mr. and Mrs. McCutchen entertained their guests in their usual hospitable manner. The spacious halls and parlors were crowded to their utmost capacity. Many tired mothers with their babies will enjoy the mountain camp as result of the sum which was received at the door.

The play was written by Miss Margaret McCutchen, and at the fall of the curtain, persistent calls for the author brought Miss McCutchen to the front for an instant. Refreshments concluded the unique and charming entertainment.

Miss Tessie D. Munger was the efficient stage manager. The light effects were manipulated by W. J. Buttfield. The costumes worn by Mesdames McCutchen, Weir and Evan. The scenery was designed by Mrs. McCutchen. Mr. Buttfield impersonated the corpse "super" to perfection.

A Wonderful Instrument.

J. VanEps, of Park avenue, has almost completed a wonderful musical instrument, the like of which has never been equalled. It is primarily a zither, but can be used as a harp or piano, and has a harmonic attachment. It has 55 strings, and would cost $300 to duplicate, not counting time or labor. It can be used as zither, a solo instrument or for duets, and its light weight, only 15 pounds makes it easy to carry around.

Helping the Camp.

The following young people have contributed to the fund for the King's Daughters' Summer Camp in the mountain: Rosa Woltman, Harold Robert, H. Pendleton Rogers, Jr., Georgianna H. Smith; Willie Smith, Lawrence Smith, Anna Richards, Elsie Goddard, Wilhelmina Paton, Norma Northrope, Bessie A. Richards, Mary D. Richards and Leuli F. Richards.

FAMOUS FOUR NOT IN IT

PARK CLUB'S WHISTERS NOT TO PLAY AS A TEAM AT THE CONGRESS.

Robert Weems, secretary of the American Whist League, Expresses Great Regret at the Park Team's Adverse Decision.

The sixth American whist congress under the auspices of the Brooklyn Whist Club and the fifteen social clubs of Brooklyn, which are members of the American Whist League, is to be held at the Oriental Hotel, Manhattan Beach, from June 22d to 27th, inclusive.

A few days ago George P. Rogers, chairman of the whist committee in the Park Club, wrote Robert H. Weems, secretary of the American Whist League, telling him of the determination of the famous four of the Park Club not to enter the contest as a team. These players have established a National reputation as experts in the game, and were looked upon as likely to add strength to the contesting clubs who will contest against the western clubs in the Congress. How well the Park Club are rated and how disappointed the other players are to learn of the adverse determination is best exhibited in the following letter received by Mr. Rogers:

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 9, 1896.

My Dear Rogers—

I am very, very sorry that the Park Club will not have its team at the Congress. In this you are making a mistake, but I presume that it is unavoidable, but if you cannot be induced to change your decision I trust by all means have your players come down there as a great number as possible. In regard to the contest between the east and west, I am sure a fine contest will be the result produce. This is an open contest and I hope to see a great many entries in it. This is going to be a Congress and I am very sorry that your club will not be in it.

Yours truly,
Robt H. Weems.

Mr. Weems is also chairman of the committee of arrangements for the Congress. Though the regular team of the Park Club will not enter the contest, a number of the individual players will attend and join hands with the representatives of the New Jersey Whist League who are to contest the players of the New England Association on the evening of June 23d. Members of the Park Club who desire to take part in the contest are asked to give their names to any member of the whist committee.

The first congress was held at Milwaukee in 1891, the second in New York in 1892, the third in Chicago in 1893 and the fourth at Philadelphia in 1894. Each year the congress which is the great whist event of the year in America, was held in Minneapolis. It seemed at each succeeding congress as if every man and woman who handed a card and played low and followed their partner's lead had attended the congress. The meeting grew in national importance every year until it occurred to Robert H. Weems, who is the corresponding secretary of, the American Whist league, that Brooklyn ought to have the congress once in awhile.

There will be many distinguished visitors at the congress, including Kate Wheelock, the famous whist queen, as she is popularly known. Miss Wheelock is a very pretty woman and one of the keenest enthusiasts and ablest experts of whist in America. Among the guests she will probably divide the honors with the king expert them all, "Cavendish" Henry Jones, who has announced his intention of traveling from London to attend the congress. Of course, the business of the congress will be whist, but the Brooklyn club has arranged a score of attractions with never a dull moment in any of them.

Entertained Their Friends.

Nine years ago, yesterday, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wedemeyer were united in the bonds of holy matrimony by Rev. Edward Koechli, and last evening they celebrated the event by entertaining their friends and the members of the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein by holding a lawn party About thirty of the members and friends of Mr. Wedemeyer gathered on the lawn adjoining the Arlington Hotel, at Somerset street and Green brook road, and spent the evening in a very enjoyable way. Besides it being their wedding anniversary, Mr. Wedemeyer intended to give a reception to those who went to Scheutzen Park, Newark, on Sunday last and participated in the bowling contests there between the Actions of that city and members of the Plainfield Saengerbund. During the contest Mr. Wedemeyer scored the highest up to 4 p. m., when the match closed.

BOY'S STORY OF CRUELTY.

Tells A Peculiar Tale of Abuse, But It Lacks Corroboration.

A story of cruelty to a child was told to Judge Conant, of Westfield, by the alleged victim, Thursday. Mr. and Mrs. John Bacon are English people, and reside on Chestnut street. They are members of the Baptist church, stand high in the community, and are noted for their fervent religious character and large liberality. Mr. Bacon has a vegetable and fish market on Elm street.

Some time ago the couple took a boy of twelve years from a New York institution for adoption. The lad, Robert Richardson, is a remarkably bright child. Several days ago Robert went to Judge Conant and told his story. He stated that Mrs. Bacon had deluged him with water in order to get him out of bed in the morning, and that Mr. Bacon had kicked him unmercifully.

The Judge and Rev. Mr. Francis, the Baptist pastor, had a talk with the Bacons, and Robbie was taken home again. Sunday morning the boy says, the Bacons gave him a severe beating and locked him in a bare room, telling him that he must remain there. They then drove to church, and during their absence the boy says he managed to escape. He fled to the residence of J. W. Bennett, agent for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and begged for protection. Mr. Bennett has given him shelter, and will take measures to find him a home. The Bacons deny the stories altogether, and declare the boy invented them. The neighbors are not disposed to credit the boy's statements unless there is stronger evidence than has yet been furnished.

FATE OF NOT BEING VOTERS.

Governor Griggs Scored For Not Signing the Anti-Cigarette Bill.

Mrs. S. R. Krom, of this city, who is superintendent of the narcotic department of the State W. C. T. U., has issued the following letter:

Dear Co-worker—Since writing last week I have received official information with regard to the reason why the Governor declined to sign the bill amending the cigarette and tobacco law. The reason given was that

He did not consider the bill of sufficient importance to be worthy of a place on the statute books ! ! !

Is it not surprising that anyone with intelligence enough to win so high a position as Governor should consider the welfare of the youth of his State of so little importance as not to be worthy of a law for its protection? I do not doubt that if our organization, which asked for the amendment, had been an organization of "voters" the fate of the bill would have been different.

Repeating my advise of last week to do the best we can with the present law and urging you to push on the work with renewed vigor, I remain, etc.

Fire Alarm Bell Arrived.

The new fire alarm bell for the borough, arrived last night, and will be placed in position next week. It weighs 2,500 pounds, and bears the names of Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., President of the Council H. B. Lounsbury, Councilmen Peck, Valiant, Woolston, McLaughlin. Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed and Borough Clerk James E. Arnold. The names of Mr. Valiant and Mr. Reed are incorrectly spelled, and a mistake was made in omitting Chief Engineer G. H. Fairchild's name from the list.

Inventive People.

F. W. Hammond, of the borough, has been granted a patent on a cover for culinary dishes. St. B. Field has been granted a patent on a toy.

CHURCH FIGHT STILL ON.

Pastor Preaches to Empty Pews and His Church is Going to Ruin.

Rev. Joseph B. Jennings, of Westfield, is exultant. The second Sunday in June has passed and Grace Protestant Episcopal church remains closed. Mr. Jennings still styles himself the rector, but the church is practically out of existence.

The pastor went there four years ago. He was talented, energetic and aggressive, and the church attained high prosperity. Trouble arose however, and the dissatisfied faction made charges of drunkeness against Jennings before Bishop Scarborough. He was acquitted, but the congregation declined to further recognize him. The bishop was appealed to ousthim, but he declined to interfere. The rector held the fort and for months had service regularly, without a soul attending.

No salary was paid him and he sued the church for it. He won the suit, although Alfred Mills, who had given the ground for the church, put in a counter claim and carried the case to the appellate court. It was hoped that with the opening of June, a compromise might be affected, and the parish be given possession. But the authorities could do nothing and Mr. Jennings will take the suit to the court of errors and appeals, and if decided in his favor, the edifice, now falling in ruin, will be sold by the sheriff.

SCHOOL DAYS NEAR AN END.

Names of Graduates of the North Plainfield Public School.

Following are the names of those who will be graduated from the North Plainfield School Thursday evening, June 25th: Misses Sadie Holmes, Adelle Kirby, Emma Stevens, Bertha Stevens, Lydia Lolzeaux, Libby Joseph, Mabel Conover, Edith Cooley, Nellie Martin, and Messrs. J. H. Van-Winkle, Jr., James K. Arnold, Jr., Rowland Western, Charles Barlow, Jr., Lolzeaux, Wm. Pierson. The class motto is "Soar Not so High as to Fall, but Stoop to rise Again."

Wm. E. MacClymont is now teaching the scholars several selections to be rendered at the commencement exercises. Only two members of the graduating class take part in the exercises, and they are Miss Adelle Kirby and Miss Emma Stevens. One will give a recitation and the other an essay.

Half Rates to San Francisco.

NOT ENOUGH DISCIPLINE

ONE OF THE FAULTS OF THE NORTH PLAINFIELD PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Recommendations of the Board of Education Committee Appointed to Investigate the Condition of That Institution.

Some time ago President McCutchen of the North Plainfield Board of Education appointed J. H. VanWinkle, A. V. D. Honeyman and Robert M. Fountain, of the board, a committee to examine the condition of the school, and within the past few days the committee has made a partial report of their work to the board. The report is one of considerable interest, and while it is only a partial one it certainly covers the ground in a satisfactory manner and should be received with close attention by the board, and every citizen in the borough. A substance of the report is as follows:

Generally speaking, the text-books are appropriate, up-to-date, sufficient in quantity and efficient in quality. A new work for grammar is recommended in grades 8 and 10. The discipline of the school appears to be up to the average, and good order seems to be the rule. The general work of the school indicates a spirit of dignified attention to duties and a good will between the pupils and teachers, which is pleasant to commend. In one or two rooms, however, there are those who are inclined to be noisy and who are not always under good discipline. We desire to call the attention of the principal to the fact that the board will sustain him in laying down rules. If necessary severe measures must be resorted to in maintaining order. We allude to the listless habit formed in reciting. In a general manner the teachers as a rule, as well as the principal, appear to be putting forth their best efforts to make the school a success. The Tuesday afternoon teachers' meetings are to be commended and they should be continued, and if they could be attended by members of the board it would be wise and profitable. We take it for granted that the principal and teachers aim at the best results regardless of pet theories or plans, and will cheerfully accept suggestions from the board. As to whether there should be any change next year in the present corps of teachers, your committee place that delicate matter in the hands of the full board for its better judgment, and we do not make any recommendations, not having fully investigated the subject.

In seven classes the number of pupils exceed forty and in three exceed fifty. It would be better if each class did not exceed thirty pupils. We recommend that the Board adopt a policy of limiting the number to forty, also that as soon as possible separate desks be provided, for hygenic reasons. It is also recommended that the janitor be required to wipe off the desks with cloths every morning, as the pupils clothes are now soiled for want of attention to this duty; also that the floors should be cleansed with water at least once every two weeks in winter, and at least once a month in summer, and the floors should be mopped off every few days, both summer and winter. The committee recommends that the Board take up the question of extending the school hours. The noon intermission of one hour and three-quarters seems unnecessary, and it is suggested that a recess be given in the morning. It is also recommended that the latter subject be taken up separately. The subject of studies in the various grades have been considered, and it is learned that geography, penmanship and end with the seventh grade, civil government with the eighth grade and grammar with the ninth grade. In the tenth grade, arithmetic, grammar, spelling, writing, civil government, English and American history is not specifically taught, while ancient history, physical geography, reading of standard works, language lessons three times a week, bookkeeping once a week by principal, essays once a month and Latin, optional, one hour a day, four days a week, seem to be thoroughly taught, but do these studies meet the requirements? Your committee recommends that physical geography, ancient history and algebra take up less time. Civil government should be taught in the ninth and tenth grades and not in the eighth grade; also that some place should be assigned to a continuing study of penmanship, spelling, grammar and higher arithmetic in grades nine and ten.

It is also recommended that modern instead of ancient history be given the preference. Botany has a place, but reading, writing and spelling is more essential than to be able to tell the calyx of flowers. When a pupil reaches the ninth grade he is supposed to have quite a thorough knowledge of the elementary branches. This is good theory but is not a fact. The dropping of studies is not a wise thing, and pushing scholars too fast, so that they may reach higher places of learning is not recommended. It is suggested that the committee on text-books, with the principal, re-arrange the curriculum in the eighth, ninth and tenth grades, submit the same to the board, and that it be given at least one year's trial. It is thought that too much time is given to Latin in the place of more important studies. It is recommended that below the eighth grade, writing be taught by actual Spencerian copies of the adjustable kind, also that written compositions be required more frequently in all the higher grades and that bookkeeping be given more attention in the eighth grade. Astronomy is suggested as a substitute for civil government. It is also recommended that a bi-weekly course of lectures on practical subjects be given. There are a number of Plainfield and North Plainfield men and women who would be glad to tender their services gratuitously, at least once a year, and this would instill into the young minds proper habits of thought and correct knowledge of business. For 1896-7 it is recommended that a course of twenty lectures be given at three o'clock every other Friday afternoon on such topics as "Methods of Banking," "Everyday Principles of Law," "The Uses of Electricity," and "Hints upon Health." This would aid to inspire the young mind with proper motives and ambitions and to some extent influence their lives.

JUNIORS' CLOSING EXERCISES.

Young Endeavorers of Trinity Church Have an Interesting Meeting.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the Trinity Reformed church held its closing exercises for the summer Thursday afternoon. The Juniors turned out well and the meeting was a very successful one. The superintendent, Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, presided.

The meeting opened with prayer by the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, followed by the Ten Commandments recited in concert. The Juniors then united in singing "Youthful Workers," after which the reports of the secretary and treasurer were listened to. The secretary reported the society in excellent condition, with a membership of 70, and an average attendance of 41. The treasurer told of the offerings for missionary purposes—foreign missions, $16.50; Indian mission, $22.50.

Eleven questions on the Bible, reviewing the winter's work, were answered in concert, after which came a piano solo by Miss Lucy Coriell; recitation, Miss Emma Line; autoharp solo, Miss Bessie TenEyck; recitation, Miss May Anthony; vocal solo, Fred Dunavan; violin solo, Mrs. George Saums; all of which were well rendered. Gifts in the shape of pretty books were presented to the Misses Gertie Tier and Lottie Ebel for regular attendance at church services. Refreshments and a social time followed. The lecture room, where the meeting was held, was prettily decorated with daisies and ferns, which were arranged by Miss Ollie Wikoff, assistant superintendent, Miss Minnie Wyman and Miss Ella White.

The social committee, which arranged the meeting, consisted of Miss Grace Emmons, chairman, and the Misses Gertie Tier, Grace TenEyck, Martie Anthony, Bessie Martin, Edna Devere and Fred Dunavan.

A SUMMER FESTIVAL.

Congregational Church Members Furnish Delicacies and Mirth.

A very pleasant strawberry and ice cream festival was held on Friday by the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Congregational church.

In the early part of the evening an enjoyable little informal programme was rendered. The first number was a dainty little recitation by Miss May Hooley, entitled "The Guests at the Flowers' Jubilee." With her pretty, light gown, decked with long sprays of roses, she looked a fit guest for such an occasion. Miss Cornelia Bockfellow next played a spirited piano solo, "Raymond's Kill Galop," after which there was another recitation, this time by Miss Marie Newman, "The Family Drum-Corps," a very difficult selection, which was well rendered and thoroughly enjoyed. Miss Margaret E. Meredith then sang "The Proposal," which was much applauded. The programme was ended with another song, "Because I Love You," by Hawley, charmingly sung by Miss Kathryn Krymer, of Brooklyn.

The audience then adjourned to the supper room, where little tables were artistically arranged, and prettily decorated with flowers. Long sprays of woodbine gave a summery look to the apartment, while the light gowns of the young girls who acted as waitresses, added to the pretty effect. Ice cream, cake and strawberries were served, and a social time was enjoyed by all. The social committee, of which Miss Julia Belknap is the efficient chairman, may certainly feel that this closing sociable of the season has been a successful one.

Goes to Claim a Fortune.

Charles H. Francisco, of 125 New street, expects to sail for Liverpool, on July 15th, to be gone about six weeks. Mrs. Alice Moore, his housekeeper, will accompany him to look after an estate left by her late husband. Mrs. Moore has been in this country for the past nine years, and some two weeks ago she was notified by letter that a small fortune was awaiting her there.

LITTLE ONES DID WELL

CLOSING EXERCISES AT PARK CLUB OF MISS FAWCETT'S SCHOOL.

The Event Attended by the Best Families in the Borough—All the Scholars Acquitted Themselves Nicely.

There was not even standing room at the Park Club last Friday when the closing exercises of Miss Fawcett's School and Kindergarten were held. The parents and friends of the young pupils literally packed the dainty little hall of the Park Club and they appreciated the great progress of the children, as was shown by their enthusiastic and hearty applause. The best families in the borough were represented, but Washington Park furnished most of the throng.

The programme was an excellent one and told plainly of the faithful and patient labors of Miss Fawcett and her able assistant, Miss Harriot. The French selections were unusually well rendered and showed that the teachings of Mademoiselle Ballu had not been in vain.

The exercises opened with the One Hundredth Psalm, recited by the pupils who were gathered in the front of the hall. Then came three songs by the school. "Father Who Art in Heaven," "A Beautiful House," and "Wildwood Flowers. A long recitation, "Papa's Letter," was given by Miss Louise Saunders without a mistake, after which Raymond Lyman gave a recitation in a very amusing manner. A solo, "The Child's Good Bye," by Reginald Fawcett was sung in his original manner. His voice is very sweet and should be cultivated. A cute little dialogue was "Not Quite a Bargain," rendered in a most happy manner by the Misses Bessie Van Arsdale and Mabel Hooley. A handsome bouquet was presented to Miss Hooley. Then came a French song, "Les Petits Musiciens" by the Misses Louise Saunders, Gladys Peck, Margaret Townsend, and Master Martin Fawcett. The little tots of the Kindergarten next showed some of their little games. They sang and went through motions representing scissors grinding, skating and the like.

The recitation "The Minuet," by Miss Margaret Townsend, was especially good and was heartily applauded. The first part closed with a march, during part of which the children sang "Follow Me With the Arch," while some formed arches with the hands for the others to pass under.

Part second opened with one of the best selections of all. It was the recitation with solo, "Cuddle Down Dolly" given by Miss Gladys Peck. Seated in her little chair she rocked her dollie to sleep in the sweetest manner imaginable. A witty little dialogue, "Johnny White's Mental Arithmetic Class," was well spoken by Neal Compton and Russell Pond. Wand and dumbbell drills and exercises by the school, followed and then came a French recitation, "L'Omelette Soufflu," by Miss Louise Saunders. Another French recitation, "La Petite Mere," was given by Miss Margaret Townsend and Martin Fawcett. After a French recitation, "La fin du Conte," by Miss Gladys Peck, and another, "Ne lis pas ton journal," by Neal Compton and Martin Fawcett, there was a French dialogue "L'Ecrigneul et le fauvette," by the Misses Virginia Hegeman and Sophornia Barlow. Master Charles Lyman next sold "How the Little Bee Learned to Fly" in a way that brought down the house. "The True Story of Little Boy Blue" was most excellently recited by Miss Ray Hooley, after which she was presented with a handsome bouquet. The programme closed with a little play, "Uncle Moreton's Gift." It was well given for such young actors and elicted loud applause. The cast was as follows:

Miss Allen Jackson	Miss Grace Osgood
Miss Annie Carter	Miss Sophie Barlow
Miss Lucie Jackson	Miss Blanche Holdcroft
Miss Basil Carter	Miss Marguerite Sorrell
Master Arthur Jackson
Master Martin Fawcett
Jimmie White	Master Reginald Boome
Miss Bibbie Meredith	Miss Eugenia Hampton
Bridget Dolan	Miss May Faber

The room was artistically decorated with cut flowers and presented a very pretty appearance.

Miss Hallian A. Moree, who has been Miss Fawcett's accompanist for many years, again presided at the piano.

Objected to the Moving Process.

An Italian, named Sam Vilello, of Watchung, went to the house occupied by Raefel Venezea, while the latter and his family were away from home temporarily, and started to move out the furniture, as Vilello, who rents the place to them, wanted the house. While the moving-out process was going on Venezea returned home, and there was a pitched battle. Vilello struck Venezea on the head with a hatchet, making a cut about three inches long in his scalp.

Madison Avenue Commissioners Finish.

The work of the commissioners appointed for the widening of Madison avenue has been completed, and the report and list of the assessments and damages has been turned over to Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, who will go over them in order to ferret out any legal defects before they are presented to the Common Council, which will probably be at their next meeting.

A HAWKSHAW GONE MAD

GERMAN GARDENER WHO IMAGINED HIMSELF A GREAT DETECTIVE.

When Officer Hartpence Went After the Crazy Man, He Mistook Rev. Mr. Klonka for Him—Straightened Out Later.

Loss of work is the supposed reason for the insanity of Wilhelm Kempl, who was taken to the New Jersey State Hospital at Morris Plains, by the city authorities, Thursday. For nearly a year he has been acting somewhat irregularly, but lately he has grown rapidly worse. He was not violent unless opposed, when he grew angry, and had a hallucination that he was was a famous detective, earning $200 a month.

Kempl came to this country four years ago from Germany. He soon learned the language, and about two years ago obtained a situation as gardener for a family named Porsums at Netherwood. After being there fourteen months he lost the position in some way. He had saved about $150, which he managed to squander in about three weeks. The thought of it preyed on his mind and his fellow members in the German Lutheran Church began to notice that he was acting rather strangely. Rev. E. Klonka, the pastor of the church, looked after him to some extent and last Monday brought him to the same boarding house at the corner of Central avenue and West Second street, of which John Jansen is proprietor. Kempl has been working off and on during the past few days at the occasion of gardening, and managed to lay up $60 in the bank, but as he gradually grew worse he thought it beneath his dignity as a detective to work in the garden.

He would come into his boarding place and tell wonderful stories of how he and the chief of police held long conferences on important cases, and how he was working up some remarkable clues. Rev. Mr. Klonka tried to discourage him as much as possible in that wild talk, but he still persisted. His last idea was that he was going to get married. When opposed in this by the reverend gentleman, he became quite violent. Mr. Klonka was afraid that his fellow countryman might do something desperate, so an examination was made.

Drs. Fritts and Tomlinson were called and examined Kempt, and declared he was undoubtedly insane.

Arrangements were therefore made with the police to take him to Morris Plains, and put him in the State Asylum there. Yesterday morning Patrolman Hartpence was detailed to go around to Jansen's house, and persuade his crazy boarder to go for a ride with him. Hartpence went to the house in citizen's clothes, while a detail of policemen waited around the corner to be ready should Kempl resist forcibly.

When the officer stood in the hall, Rev. Mr. Klonka came down the front stairs. He had just gotten up and his eyes looked sleepy in consequence. "You'll take a ride with me this morning," remarked Hartpence, who did not know Mr. Klonka, and he grasped the minister of the Gospel by the arm and started to lead him off. Of course, there was a lively protest, and it was sometime before the other occupants of the house could stifle their laughter long enough to explain that Hartpence's prisoner was not the man bound for Morris Plains.

The right one was finally found, and taken to the asylum without opposition. Kempl is a short, thick set man, dark complexion and hair, looking more like an Italian than a German. He has a small, narrow head, the upper part of which receeds. His mustache is a large one and curls up at the ends.

RECEIVED HIGH HONORS.

Edward J. Patterson Receives a $300 Fellowship in a Law School.

Edward J. Patterson, of Central avenue, who was graduated with honors from Princeton in 1894, was graduated "Cum Laudal," yesterday, from the New York Law School, and was awarded the $500 Fellowships, attaining thus the highest honors of his class.

Mr. Patterson was graduated from the High School Class of 1890. He is well known and very popular among the young people of this city. He is a son of A. D. Patterson.

Big Real Estate Deal.

The S. D. Drake Real Estate Co., of Bound Brook and New York, have secured 200 acres of land on the Central Railroad of New Jersey, belonging to John D. Voorhees, of Bound Brook. This property is situated half way between Bound Brook and Dunellen, on the north side of the railroad, and having over one mile frontage on railroad. This is a very important deal, from the fact that a new manufacturing town will be located here, in the near future.—Real Estate News.

DIED.

MOYNIHAN—At Dunellen, June 11th, 1896, Frances Maria Moynihan, aged 21 years, 3 months 3 days.

Funeral from her parents residence, Main street, Dunellen, Saturday June 13th, at 9:30 a. m. and 10 o'clock at St. John's church, Dunellen, where requiem mass will be said for the repose of her soul.

Interment in St. Mary's Cemetery, this city. Relatives and friends are respectfully invited to attend.

"I DON'T believe in love in a cottage," said Kate Mayo, looking defiantly round. "I mean to marry rich."

"Oh, Kate!" cried Helen Dewey, reproachfully.

"Well," said Kate, "I mean it. Who wants to be a drudge, in an ill-fitting dress and last year's style bonnet, just because some idiotic young man asks you to be his wife? My taste is for lace and moire and bonnets that look as if they had come across the sea on a Parisian zephyr! Moreover, I have a fancy for brown stone houses and coupes, and a box at the opera and a maid."

Kate Mayo spoke as if fate were at her own command, as if she were crowned queen of her destiny. And she was, in so far as wit and beauty may constitute the scepter of one's own existence. Tall and gracefully formed as a Greek statue, her loveliness took you as it were by storm. She was fair as the waxen leaf of a white rose, with pure, straight features, cheeks just tinted with the faint delicate pink that comes and goes like a fleeting shadow, and a little ripe mouth that made one think of the crimson sugar hearts that little children delight in. And Kate Mayo was sent up from the old Mayo farm to see what a winter in New York would do for her, in the way of a life establishment; and Kate had some very decided ideas of her own upon the all-important subject.

"My dear," said Aunt Dewey, solemnly, "all this sounds very mercenary."

"I can't help it, aunt," was Kate's rejoinder. "I am mercenary."

"At your age, Kate?"

"What difference does it make?" said the beauty, with a peculiar shrug of her shoulders. "I'm going in for diamonds and a coupe to Sarouge. Sentiment is very well in a novel, but in real life it doesn't work."

And Aunt Dewey's face of horror only made Kate laugh.

Miss Mayo decidedly a "success" in metropolitan society that winter. It was not entirely her faultless beauty, nor her readiness of repartee, nor yet the bewitching confidence with which she seemed to take the world's favor for granted, but a mixture and mingling of all three—a something which could hardly be expressed, save by the word "fascination." But notwithstanding her triumphs, Miss Mayo had, as yet, made no election in life.

"My dear," said Aunt Dewey, solemnly, "what was the reason you refused Harry Pelham?"

"The reason? Why, he's a custom house clerk, as poor as can be."

"Mr. Ryerson, then?"

"I've no idea of coming to the poor house before my time!"

"Mr. Ryerson is well off, I'm sure."

"The positive degree won't suit me, aunt; I must have the superlative."

"You will die an old maid, Kate."

"Better an old maid than a care-worn old wife."

"Kate! Kate! there is such a thing as going through the woods and picking up a crooked stick. What do you value yourself at, pray?"

"A hundred thousand dollars, at least, and from that up to half a million!" laughed Kate, as she put the last rose into the vase of flowers she was arranging.

"Where will you get such a price as that?"

"Not here just now, to be sure, aunt, but its representative will be here yet."

"Whom do you mean?"

"I mean Mr. Emmett."

Aunt Dewey sat down with uplifted hands and eyes.

"What! the millionaire?"

"Yes, aunt."

"But he is in Europe."

"N'importe—he is coming home soon."

"You have never seen him!"

"I dare say I never shall see him."

"Kate, you are crazy!"

"No, I'm not, aunt; you yourself will own it when you see Mrs. Emmett!"

The audacity of the girl fairly bewildered her sage relative; it was as if a little French grisette had aspired to share the august throne of the Napoleons.

"Well, I never!" gasped Mrs. Dewey.

"But that's no sign you never will, aunt," said Kate.

"But, Kate," suggested little Helen, who had sat demurely listening, "suppose you fall in love with somebody else?"

"Me fall in love?" said Kate, with a mocking laugh. "Rest assured, Helen, that I never commit any such absurd piece of folly as that. Haven't I told you that I intend only to marry for money? It may sound a little conceited, but I mean to do the thing. Helen, you shall be my bridesmaid when I marry Lawrence Emmett."

Things were at this interesting juncture when one moonlight evening Miss Mayo went up to the park to skate, and came back under the convoy of a tall, handsome young man who had been introduced to her there.

"Did you say his name was St. John?" asked curious Helen, when the cavalier servente had gone. "Oh, Kate, how handsome he is!"

"Nothing of the kind," said Kate, tartly, "only rather pleasant looking."

"But who is he, Kate?"

"Oh, I don't know; a clerk in some bank, I believe."

"Poor fellow!" said Helen, reflectively.

"What do you say that for?" asked Kate, suddenly turning round upon her cousin.

"Because, Kate, if he is poor and obscure, and has come within the magic circle of your fascinations—"

"Nonsense!" said Kate, almost angrily. "Do you suppose every man I look at must of necessity fall in love with me?"

Little Helen looked amazed. This was rather an unexpected mood on Kate's part.

As the winter days went by Kate changed more and more. Sometimes she was strangely soft and lovable; sometimes capricious and given to sudden gusts of tears, like April showers, succeeded by brief sunshine.

"Kate," said Mrs. Dewey, coming one evening into the room where Kate sat, gazing out into the twilight, "have you thought about your dress to-morrow evening?"

"To-morrow evening?"

"Yes; at Mrs. Allaire's. Don't you remember? Mr. Emmett is to be there—your rich husband."

Aunt Dewey spoke almost jocosely. She had come to look upon Kate's case en Espagne as an actual reality.

"Yes," said Kate, absently, "I remember."

"He saw you at the opera last night and asked who you were."

"Who did?"

"Mr. Emmett."

Kate looked up with a momentary interest.

"Did he? Then perhaps I will wear the blue."

Kate looked lovely as Venus of old in that same blue dress with pearls, and Mrs. Emmett, a short, stout man, with a very ruddy face and glassy blue eyes, evidently appreciated it all.

"Oh, Kate!" cried Helen, gleefully, as they were rolling homeward in the carriage, "all the girls are envying you. Mr. Emmett is certainly in love with you."

"He is a clumsy old clown," said the ungrateful Kate.

"But he's so rich."

"Yes," said Kate, "he is rich."

And that was all that was said.

"Kate," said Mrs. Dewey one morning, coming in with a sort of triumphal air, "I've got a grand piece of news for you!"

"And I've got one for you, aunty," said Kate, looking up with eyes that were unwontedly bright.

"Mr. Emmett has called to see me. He requests the privilege of paying his addresses formally to you."

"Tell him he can't have any such privilege."

"Kate!"

"I'm in earnest. Mr. St. John has asked me to be his wife, and I have said—yes!"

"Lawrence St. John—a clerk in a bank, at a salary of $1,500 a year."

"We can live on fifteen hundred dollars a year, aunt, and he is the dearest fellow that ever breathed. As for being a clerk in the bank, I don't care if he was a street sweeper!"

"But, Kate, I thought you were so bent on marrying rich."

"Oh, don't remind me of that! I have been a silly goose, but I have learned my own folly."

"I THOUGHT YOU WANTED TO MARRY RICH."

"And do you mean to say you will reject Mr. Emmett, a man worth a million of dollars at the very least, in favor of this young St. John?"

"Yes, aunt, I love Mr. St. John."

And in the last words, spoken very quietly, Aunt Dewey learned the folly of further remonstrance. Miss Mayo, with an inconsistency which is not unusual in girls of eighteen, had decided to set all her previous declarations totally at defiance. She had laughed at love all her days. Love was having his revenge at last.

But Mr. Emmett was not to be put off thus. He insisted on a personal interview, not satisfied unless he learned his fate from Miss Mayo's own rosebud lips.

"So you won't have me?" he said, brusquely.

"I am very much obliged to you, sir," said Kate, falteringly, "but—I—would rather not."

"Like another fellow better, eh?"

"Yes, sir."

"St. John, eh? Penniless chap, with nothing on earth but a handsome face!"

"You are wrong, sir," said Kate, firing up. "He has a noble nature and a loyal heart."

"All humbug!" commented Mr. Emmett. "However, do as you like. I've nothing to say. Only I thought you wanted to marry rich."

Kate colored scarlet—the old folly coming back to taunt her.

"We shall be rich, sir," she said, softly—"rich in love and mutual confidence."

"I suppose, now," said the ruddy-faced old gentleman, "you would not believe me if I told you you were going to be Mrs. Lawrence Emmett after all?"

"No, sir; I should not, most certainly."

"It's the solemn truth, notwithstanding. Lawrence Emmett will be your husband!"

Kate looked at him—was he going crazy?

"He is telling you the truth, Kate," said a gentle voice behind her, and she turned to feel her hand in the clasp of Mr. St. John. "When you are my wife you will be the wife of Lawrence St. John Emmett."

"And my daughter-in-law," chuckled the old gentleman, gleefully. "You little fortune-hunter, you've promised to marry a bank clerk. Just because you fell in love with him, and you'll marry the millionaire, after all!"

Kate kept her word, and Helen Dewey was bridesmaid to Mrs. Lawrence Emmett after all.—N. Y. News.

A WOMAN'S HEART.

IT WAS Helen Hoyt's third revolution in the fashionable maelstrom called "society," and as yet, though slightly giddy, she had not lost her head.

Neither had she lost her heart, albeit she was twenty-two, and there are young women who think if they still retain possession of their hearts up to that advanced age they are destined to hold them forever.

It may be doubted if she had a heart to lose. She had a heart, but her head went with it, and when a woman's head goes with her heart she seldom loses it. She may let it go into the keeping of a man, but that is not always losing it, as the term is generally applied among sentimentalists. She knows where it is, and it is never beyond recall. These are the sensible women of the world. Never enthusiasts, but always reliable, and steady to the end, come weal or come woe, if so that the holders of their hearts are worthy. Heroines they may be, sacrificing everything to motives higher than mere sentiment.

That Helen Hoyt was such a woman could not be said definitely, but there was evidence to that effect in the circumstance that three men were swinging uncertainly in the balance before her. This is beyond the power of the emotional enthusiast. She may have three men in the balance at three different times, but never three at one time. She chooses first, and the man puts himself in the balance afterward.

As young as she was, she had reasoned these things out for herself, aided and abetted somewhat by the counsel of the colonel, a man twice her age, a veteran of many emotional battles, and a ripe experience, which had never been rudely shocked by matrimony.

She had seen him much oftener than the three men in the balance, and she had discussed them with him, not always directly, as if she were the interested person, but oftenest under the thin veil of a supposititious case, as is the custom of men and women whose experience needs a remedy which they are too diffident to ask for openly. Fortunately for such, there are those who will humor them.

This afternoon Miss Hoyt sat in the quiet drawing-room thinking. The colonel and she had talked a long time the day before on this, to her, all important subject, and he was to come again at five o'clock. To add to the interest of the colonel's visit of counsel their last talk had not been of a supposititious case, but he had made it directly personal, and she had not decided that she was the previously supposed young woman whose destiny was to be determined by question, analysis and reason.

"Ah, me," she thought, "what a steady the heart is. I wonder if all women's hearts are as mine will persist in being? I know many men, but of them all it seems there is not one that fills it, and Alice, who is the dearest of girls, says there can be but one. And the colonel—well, the colonel tried to point out the way, but he seems to obscure it by his own presence. Of them all, three stand out distinctly, asking me to choose.

"My head says 'choose,' but my heart remains dumb. If it should speak, I wonder what it would say? I wonder if in all the world there is no magic touch to break its sacred silence. There stands the professor, a man much older than myself; a grave man, noble-hearted and good, devoted to his scientific studies and rising in his profession; ill at ease and slow of speech in the tumult of society; manifesting his brilliancy only in some philosophical or scientific discussion with men; reserved, yet loving me, he says, with an ardent and absorbing love which would be the pledge of a happy, comfortable future.

"But is it true? Does a woman find in science and philosophy what her heart craves? Will the man who is so profoundly interested in these subjects find his wife a substitute for them? His sweetheart may be for the time, but the colonel says there is much difference between a sweetheart and a wife in most men's minds, and I wish I didn't half believe the colonel."

She laughed a short, hard laugh, and looked out of the window a moment at a man and maid on a tandem sliding slowly along, very intent upon each other.

"Sweetheart," she said, almost cynically, and became thoughtful again.

"And next is the artist," her thoughts whispered to her. "The colonel says an artist is lovely to hang on the wall for ornament, but he is of uncertain value as a piece of domestic furniture. Still I like the artist very much indeed. Of course, he is youthful, dreamy and an idealist, with the gaze and locks of a poet, but such things appeal to most young women as they appeal to me.

"Not to my everyday sense, perhaps, but to the artistic longings that move every human soul, and I hope I am sufficiently refined to appreciate the ideal, although I don't want to neglect the real. His slightest attention is as graceful as a sonnet; so different from the clumsy, well-meant efforts of the professor; but is it sincere? Does he not study it as he would study and fashion a love ditty to me—possibly to some other girl? Men are deceivers ever. With wealth and luxuries lavished upon him he lingers upon the retrospective glimpses of the past; his eyes, dimmed by the subdued, fading tints of rare old tapestries, shrink from the glare and the bustle of the present.

"A career! the word has a brusque and martial sound that disturbs his reveries! Ah, if life were only a sunny morning; a peace afloat upon a placid stream with a volume of linen and no clocks to tick away the flight of time. Would it not be wiser to accept the bread, somewhat thickly cut, but well buttered, with all that science offers? The colonel says it would; and, really, I begin to think the colonel is a valuable counselor. The fact is, I like the colonel, and when a woman likes a man she likes his advice, and likes to take it, if for no other reason than to please him. Which I think is the height of unselfishness, for advice is so hard to take.

"The colonel smiled at me Sunday when the third man came down to see me. He smiled, too, as if he had found something. But he said nothing directly. I wonder if he thinks I like the third man best. John Franklin, that's a good substantial name, but John isn't quite up to it. He's a Harvard kind of a man, of the sunny, dashing, class-day-in-June type; physically perfect, handsome, stunning, I might say, and much more, he stands at the university gates with empty pockets, half soberly, half gladly, and all problematically, gazing into the great unsolved future.

"It is my mission to help him solve the problem? Does he love me because he is young, and love is the light of youth, shining whither it will? Would he be the same in the aftertimes? Would his promise meet the fulfillment I expect—that any woman would expect? More; that any woman has the right to demand of the man to whom she gives her heart? Is he as sure as the older man? As the sweetheart of his youth fades before him, in his wife, withered by the years that wreck the beauty of so many women, will he in his strong manhood be as tender and loving as he now is?

"The colonel says a woman should not marry a man so near her own age that she should grow old before he does. The colonel, I think, is arguing for himself, because he has waited so long that he must either marry a woman twenty years younger than himself or fill a bachelor's grave. I know it, for he has told me so himself, and he says it is a dreadful thought to thus perpetuate his loneliness.

"Sometimes I feel real sorry for the colonel because he is such a congenial, companionable, honest kind of an old fellow, who would be so nice to have around all the time. Not much romance, of course, but what's romance after the wedding day? Heighe, I wish

"THEN FATE MUST HOLD A ROYAL FLUSH."

I were like Alice. She didn't have to make a choice. The man simply appeared and the choice made itself."

Miss Hoyt arose from her chair and stretched herself as one does when walking. She hadn't thought so much in months, and it made her tired, without accomplishing the purpose sought. The three men were still in the balance, and it showed no variation in favor of any one as against the other two. She stepped to the window as the colonel came up and rang the door bell.

"Oh," she exclaimed, as he entered the room, "I don't know whether I've been asleep or not, but I have surely had an attack of nightmare."

"Three of a kind still in your hand, eh?" he smiled as he shook hands with her.

"Yes," she sighed.

"Then fate must hold a royal flush," he said, "to win the game."

"Can fate hold such a hand?" she asked, hopelessly almost.

"Fate makes its own decrees."

"Then why doesn't it do it in my case? It seems to leave it all to me to do."

"My dear Miss Hoyt," he said to her, more gently than his usual tone of lightness and jocularity, "it is not three men you should have in your head, but one in your heart."

"But which one?" she asked nervously, for she saw the colonel's hand trembule and his eyes were turned from her.

"I cannot tell you if you do not know," he replied, and this time his eyes looked straight into hers and she felt a heart-throb she had never felt before.

"Isn't it funny," remarked Miss Hoyt an hour later, "that I never thought of you?"

"It's a blessing to me that you didn't," he answered, "for if you had ever taken me into your head I would never have got into your heart. A woman," concluded the colonel sententiously, but with infinite satisfaction, "doesn't need a head anyhow; the man is the head of the family."

And Miss Hoyt only smiled and was content with this early assumption of authority, for her heart was at rest, and when a woman's heart is at rest it is easy to smile and be contented.—Detroit Free Press.

He Sniffeth the Earthquake.

It is a well-known fact that horses can scent winds that are not perceptible to human ears. For days previous to the great earthquake in the Riviera the horses of that locality showed every symptom of abject fear, which continued without change of character, unless it was in the direction of greater frenzy, till the fury of the great convulsion broke forth. Not until a few seconds, however, before the earth began to tremble did human beings hear the subterranean rumblings. One writer from the scene says that in his opinion the horses knew that the great quake was on the way from seventy-two to one hundred hours before their masters heard or felt the first jar.—St. Louis Republic.

SALVAVIONISTS' WORK.

north, south, east and west and have seen a good deal of what is being done through the efforts of the Army in dear America. Despite certain difficulties, of which you will not expect me to speak, the sympathy of our friends has become more helpful than ever as it has been extended to us. Our officers have stood firm, thoroughly believing in the Army's principles. They have dedicated themselves to its mission, which is a beautiful fact. We are not discouraged in the least for our eyes are fixed upon God. When I left old England my father bade me good-bye and said, 'Give my love to all the dear soldiers.' Take their eyes from the controversy and place them upon a bleeding Christ." We are going on with the mission to which God has called us, and we ask you to help us."

At this time Adjt. Taylor was called for and the audience were earnestly asked for a large contribution to carry on the work in Plainfield and help clear the present indebtedness. The response was very generous. While the collection was being taken the band furnished some soul-inspiring music. After remarks had been made by Brigadier Lewis, Col. Higgins and Adjutant Taylor an earnest prayer was offered by Col. Higgins and the meeting was brought to a close.

Mrs. Tucker, in conversation with a Daily Press representative, said: "The press has been very liberal and kind to us at all times, and I believe they now understand the situation perfectly. For a time we were at a standstill, but now we are moving along grandly. In all we only lost about fifty officers, and their places have been filled satisfactorily. I understand that many who left us are now anxious to come back. We are in better condition and stronger than ever at the present time."

MARRIED AT RAHWAY.

Miss Gertrude Tier the Bride at a Fashionable Nuptial Event.

One of the most fashionable weddings ever witnessed in Rahway was celebrated last evening when Miss Gertrude Tier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Washington Irving Tier, of Rahway, and niece of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Tier, Sr., of this city, was married to William Drumpelman, also of Rahway. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride at 8 o'clock by Rev. Mr. Leggett, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of that city. The house was exquisitely decorated with palms, ferns and flowers, and the prevailing colors were green and white.

The bride was charmingly gowned in white silk, trimmed with duchesse lace, and the bridemaid, Miss Drumpelman, sister of the groom, wore a gown of green silk and white organdie. The flower girl was Ida M. Tier, of this city, a niece of the bride. She was gowned in white silk, which was also trimmed with duchesse lace. Fred Tier, brother of the bride, was best man. The ceremony was witnessed by a large assemblage of guests from New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City and Newark. Those present from this city were: Mr. and Mrs. John H. Tier, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Williiam N. Tier, Mrs. Ira Vail and granddaughter, Miss Lulu Vail, Mrs. J. M. Tier, Miss Gertrude Tier and Miss Elsie Tier.

Among the handsome presents received were a complete silver service and a china set.

Mr. and Mrs. Drumpelman left during the evening for a bridal trip to Niagara Falls and Canada, and on their return will reside on William street, Rahway, where a nicely furnished home awaits them.

YOUTH OF THE CHURCH.

CHILDREN'S DAY EXERCISES POSTPONED FROM LAST SUNDAY.

An Ideal Day Made the Observance a Very Happy One—Churches Decorated and Special Programmes Rendered

PARK AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH.

It was a real June day Sunday and everybody realized the fact, but nevertheless there was quite a large turnout for the Children's Day services of the Sunday-school of the Park Avenue Baptist church, which were held yesterday morning. The programme was a pleasing one, especially the addresses, which were short but to the point, and the emblematic piece, in which was introduced a solo by Miss Adelia Bunyon. A real little boat, with latteen sail, was on the platform, typical of the "Ship of Faith." It was equipped with the cross for a flag, hope for an anchor, the Bible for a guide, and the star of Bethlehem for light. It was manned by Virtue, Knowledge, Temperance, Patience, Godliness, Kindliness and Charity. And finally Jesus was chosen as its pilot. The exercise was a very pretty one.

The decorations consisted mainly of ferns, which were arranged about the front of the platform, and daisies, placed on the tables.

The exercises were in charge of Superintendent Skaden and were as follows:

The Lord's Prayer; Scripture reading; singing, "Bring Garlands of Love;" recitation, "Truest Wisdom," by Miss Lizzie VanWinkle; recitation, "Abou Ben Adhem and the Angel," Miss Grace Purdy; singing, "Crown Him;" recitation, "A Little Heart and How it Grew," Miss Lillian Richardson; singing, "Scattering Precious Seed." Primary department exercises were as follows:

Song, "Little Blossom;" recitation, "When and How," Florence Cuming; recitation, "Nature's Voices," eight little children; duet, Retta Nash and Grace Giles; recitation, "If I Were a Boy," Harold Appenzellar; "The Floral Cross," by nine little girls; song, "Little Friends of Jesus;" Scripture reading; emblematic piece "The Voyage of Life" by the Misses Addie Runyon, Lizzie Van Winkle, Emma V. Fish, Fannie Brokaw, Helen Cuming and seven little boys; address by Rev. Dr. Lowry; singing, "Tell the Glad Tidings;" remarks by Rev. J. Richardson; offering for Baptist Publication Society; singing, "We March to Victory." Benediction.

TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

The postponed Children's Day exercises of the Sunday-school of Trinity Reformed church took place yesterday morning and were witnessed by a congregation that filled the edifice. The programme, which was a very interesting one, was given up to the primary department and they carried it out successfully in every detail.

At the opening of the service, the young scholars of that department marched from the lecture room through the several aisles of the church, occupying seats in the very front, the main school taking seats directly back of them, and the rest of the congregation filling the sides and rear.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with choice flowers and plants. Across the organ front were suspended festoons of daisies, which hung in graceful curves. In the centre of the organ front was suspended a large American flag, arranged in a pretty and artistic manner, and on either side and above which was suspended a sheaf of wheat, held together by dainty shades of ribbon. The pulpit was almost hidden by banks of daisies, intermingled with fragrant flowers and pretty palms and other plants. Another large American flag was suspended in front of the pulpit and still another back of the pulpit and the bright colors of these flags, with the background of flowers, presented a very charming spectacle and gave the church an appearance that it never had before, as it never looked more beautiful than it did yesterday morning. A charming feature of the service was the fourteen canary birds which were suspended in cages from the ceiling, and filled the air with their sweet music. This is a new idea as far as Trinity church is concerned, but the success of the experiment certainly reflects much credit upon the committee, of which Harry Van Emburgh is chairman.

Mr. Van Emburgh, who arranged most of the other decorations, was ably assisted by Mrs. H. W. Marshall and Miss May Sheppard.

All the daisy roping for the organ front was made at the home of Mrs. J. C. Van Dyke, who also assisted in the work of decorating.

At the opening of the service eight little infants were baptized by the Rev. Cornelius Schenck.

As has been before stated the primary department of the school had most of the service given up to them, and following is their portion of the programme: Recitation, "Prophecy," Anna Randall; recitation, "Fulfillment," Hazel Martin; object exercise, "The Shepherd's Symbols," Albert Yaeger, Willie Luckey, Morris Brokaw, Raymond Martin, Johnnie Yose, Arthur Caleen, Hervie Dobbs, Chrissie Mobus, Cornelius Schenck, Jr.; recitation "Providence," Bessie Randall; recitation, "The Saviour's Praise," Anna Holder. The little folks also sang several carols in an excellent manner, which spoke very well for their superintendent, Mrs. J. M. Tier, who so successfully drilled them, assisted by Miss M. Van Aradale. They were accompanied on the organ during the singing by Miss Nettie Krietling.

During the service Rev. Cornelius Schenck delivered a short address to the children, taking for his subject, "The Good Shepherd."

After the service many gathered in the front of the church more closely to admire the decorations, and to compliment those who arranged them, and one and all were convinced that they were the most beautiful and exquisite that the church has ever had.

The choir, which consisted of Mrs. H. E. Rider, soprano; Miss L. Dunn, alto; Robert Clark, tenor; F. S. Cutter, bass; and their instructor, Organist A. L. Titsworth, also came in for a generous portion of the praise, for the excellent manner in which the music for the exercises was rendered.

At the evening service the pastor gave a very interesting sketch of his visit to Rome several years ago, and exhibited several photographs of historic places visited by him.

CRESCENT AVENUE CHURCH.

The annual Children's Day service of the Crescent Avenue church Sunday-school was held yesterday morning in the church at 10:30. The order of service was as follows:

Prelude.....Selected
Organ, Frank J. Smith; flute, Walter Sercil; violin, Chas. Davis, Dudley Hillman and Gilbert Lowe.
Old Hundred and Lord's Prayer.
Hymn—The Blood of Jesus Wessel.
Sunday-school choir
Psalm C, responsive.
Hymn—Brightly Gleams Our Banner.
Congregation
Chant.....Choir
Recitation—Little Children to Come, Hope Miller.

Recitation—Grace Kaufman, Jessie Patton, Elsie Goddard, Florence Beebe, Edna Long, Gladys Kaufman.
Hymn—I Love to Tell the Story.....Congregation
Gloria
Benediction
Recessional.....Selected
Organ, flute and violins.

The decorations consisted of a large central piece composed of greens and daisies. The fount was filled with daisies and ferns, while on either side of the pulpit were several bouquets of white lilies and American Beauty roses. The combination of colors and the artistic way in which they were arranged was exceedingly beautiful. Dr. Richards' sermon was preached from the text: "And going on from thence He saw other two brethren, James, the son of Zebedee, and John, his brother, in a ship with Zebedee, their father, mending their nets; and He called them."

GRACE M. E. CHURCH.

At the Grace M. E. church yesterday morning the Children's Day services were exceedingly interesting. The pretty church was filled with the scholars and friends of the school. The platform was artistically decorated with flowers by the ladies of the church, and a feature was a large floral cross which had a prominent position surrounded by a choice collection of flowers. The following programme was rendered: Organ voluntary; anthem by the choir; prayer, Rev. Mr. Johnston; singing "Over the Fields and Valleys Gay," school; Scripture reading and musical responses, school; recitation, "Floral Voices," primary department; recitation, "Sunny Lives," Lottie Benner; singing, "Happy, Happy, Children's Day," children's choir; recitation, Miss Grace Clark; recitation, Miss Mabel Garey; singing, "Children's Day," school; recitation, "Fifth Commandment," primary department; recitation, "June Roses," Miss May Fairchild; singing, "Children of Light," school; recitation, "Floral Cross," primary department; recitation, Miss Hoagland; offering, taken by primary department scholars; singing, "God Knows," primary department; address, Rev. Mr. Johnston; singing, "Seeking Jesus," school.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Children's Day exercises at the First Baptist church were held in the Sunday-school room at 9:30 yesterday morning. The programme, which was in charge of Mrs. Powlison and Mrs. Harold Serrell, was as follows:

Hymn No. 1.....School
Psalm 24.....School
Hymn No. 10.....School
Prayer.....Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes
Vocal duet.....Miss Harris and Mrs. Ward
Vocal solo.....Miss Harris
Recitation—"A Little Heart and How it Grew."
Anna Morrison

Hymn No. 324.....School

After the above had been rendered an adjournment to the church was made where the following programme was given: Organ voluntary; doxology; invocation, Dr. Yerkes; anthem, "Praise the Lord," choir; hymn, school and congregation; responsive reading of Scripture; anthem, "The Lord is my Shepherd," choir; Scripture reading and prayer; response, choir; hymn, school and congregation; sermon and prayer, Dr. Yerkes; offertory, vocal solo, "Saved by a Child," Miss Harris; hymn, school and congregation; benediction; organ postlude.

The decorations consisted of a bank of choice flowers arranged about the front of the pulpit platform. The members of the Sunday-school occupied the entire gallery.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The First Presbyterian church presented a cheerful appearance yesterday morning when the Children's Day service was held. A large congregation was present in addition to the Sunday-school. The decorations consisted chiefly of American flags which were well arranged about the upper part of the organ. Superintendent H. B. Lounsbury had charge of the service and was assisted by Rev. C. E. Herring, pastor. The latter gave a very interesting illustrated talk to the children from the text "The Blood of Jesus Cleanseth Us From All Sin." During the service the baptizing of five infants was a feature. The programme of the service, entitled "The Good Shepherd," was as follows: Organ voluntary; opening chorus, school and congregation; prayer, Rev. C. E. Herring; singing, school and congregation; responsive reading of scripture; singing, school and congregation; singing, primary department; singing, school and congregation; responsive reading of scripture; singing, school and congregation; reading of Dr. Worden's Missionary letter, Miss Mary Lacky; offertory; singing, "Peterkin," school and congregation; benediction. During the offertory Miss Glen, soprano and Miss Messersmith, alto, rendered vocal solos in a pleasing manner.

MT. OLIVE BAPTIST CHURCH.

The following excellent Children's Day programme was rendered at the Mount Olive Baptist Church yesterday afternoon by the members of the Sunday school: Recitations, "Sweet Peace," Maude Green; "The River," Hattie Wood; "The Woodland River," Etta Kingsland; "Contentment," Anna Conkett; "One Violet," Mable Fisher; "The Death of a Daisy," Birdie Green; "Mother," Ora Gibson; "Baby," Ella Lewis; "Lily Bells," Catherine Mitchell; song, Gertrude Henrietta Martin; recitation, Serah Scott.

The above was followed with short remarks by the teachers of the School. The attendance was very large.

DEATH OF EDWARD VIEHLBIG.

An Old Washington Valley Farmer Passed Away Yesterday.

The death of Edward Viehlbig, aged 73 years, occurred Tuesday at his home in Washington Valley, after a short illness from pneumonia.

About three years ago Mr. Viehlbig purchased the Zimmerson farm and has lived there with his only son Edward and family. He was born in Germany and came to this country when a young man. Later he married and settled in Washington Valley. About twenty-three years ago, when the small-pox was so bad in this locality, he lost his wife and six children. After that he traveled a great deal and finally came back to his former place where he secured the Zimmerson property.

Mr. Viehlbig was a brother-in-law of J. A. Beck, of Somerset street. The funeral services will be held Friday morning from the Stony Hill church, at 9:15.

Tuberculosis in Middlesex County.

Tuberculosis has manifested itself among cattle in Middlesex county. A. V. D. Polhemus, of Franklin, who keeps fine blooded cattle, last week suspected the presence of the disease in his herd and immediately requested the State authorities at Trenton to investigate. It was found that five of his cows were afflicted, and they were killed. Three of the ten cows on the farm of George Voorhees, at Blackwells Mills, have also been killed.

SOON TO ACT AS A HOST.

PLAINFIELD'S DUTY TO THE STATE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS.

It is Expected That 5,000 People Will Attend the Convention Each Day and a Great Reception Should be Given.

Plainfield will shortly act as the host of one of the largest conventions ever held in the State and its plain duty is, therefore, to make it a notable success.

Our city is so situated that more than one-half of the population of the State can leave their homes in the morning, attend all the meetings of the day, and return to their homes at a reasonable hour at night. We, therefore, confidently expect fully 5,000 people in daily attendance at the service.

Preparations have been made for a practical convention—methods of work being the main thought of the programme. The practical results, we expect, will be felt throughout the States, as it is to be a mass convention rather than a delegate one.

The co-operation of all the churches, of the officials, business men and citizens is needed and expected, for we all have committed ourselves to this convention. The invitations having gone not only from the Christian Endeavor Society, but all departments of our city life. Plainfield has a reputation for hospitality, and we naturally expect great things for a convention of such magnitude, which we have invited to partake of our hospitality. The co-operation of all is essential.

From a business point of view this convention will be beneficial to the city. $10,000, at least, will be spent here.

Plainfield, as a place of residence, will become known.

From a moral point of view, such conventions have always been helpful. It is expected that the citizens will open their homes to receive the delegates, but in no case will they be expected to receive them free of charge. The iron clad rule of the C. E. Society is every delegate must pay his board. If those who entertain do not care to keep the money, it can be used for charitable purposes or turned into the committee for convention expenses. As to the financial aid from the members and other public spirited citizens, an appeal will shortly be made by the finance committee.

DIVERSION FROM THE HEAT.

Pleasing Entertainment Given in Church of Heavenly Rest Last Night.

An enjoyable entertainment was given in the parish house of the Church of the Heavenly Rest last night. The attendance was enough to fill the room, and although the atmospheric conditions were rather oppressive, no one wearied, as the programme arranged proved a most pleasing diversion from the heat.

The programme rendered was as follows: Part first—Overture, the Young Ladies' Orchestra; bass solo, "A Son of the Desert Am I," Bertram F. Tallamy; banjo solo, T. Beardsley; baritone solo, "'Tis I Alone Can Tell," C. K. Badger; selection, orchestra; tenor solo, "The Grave on the Heath," William J. Tallamy; banjo solo, T. Beardsley; selection, orchestra. Part second—Selection, orchestra; recitation, Walter Sherwin; and a farce in one act entitled, "First Aid to the Injured." Those taking part in this farce were: Miss Yaeger, Miss Kate Graves, Mrs. Upson, Miss Mary Graves, Bert Tallamy and Mr. Upson.

The entertainment concluded with a selection by the orchestra, the players of which were as follows: First violins, Mrs. Buckley; Mrs. G. S. Saums, Miss Emma L. Nelson, Miss Carrie Davis, Miss Fanny Smith; second violins, Miss Ella H. Boice, Miss Mabel Wilson; 'cello, Miss Lizzie Evans; piano, Miss Irene Day; first cornet, J. D. Anderson; second cornet, Mrs. C. V. D. Corle.

Had No Evidence to Hold Them.

On complaint of Golden Smalley, of Greenbrook road, Justice Mattison issued warrants Tuesday for the arrest of Wm Purnell and Thomas Howland, colored, of Dunellen, charging them with stealing tomato plants from his farm. Constable Stewart arrested the boys last night at Dunellen and brought them before Justice Mattison at a late hour. Owing to a lack of evidence the boys were discharged.

AT THE GOLF COURSE.

PLEASANT RECEPTION TENDERED BY THE HILLSIDE CLUB.

Preceding the Arrival of Guests Some of the Members Indulged in the Game of Golf—Names of the Guests Present.

A few scattering rain drops threatened to bring the opening tea of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, held on their golf links Saturday afternoon, to a sudden end, but finally the clouds broke away and the sun came out. Toward the close of the afternoon the little grove on Sherman avenue in which the reception tent was pitched, was the centre of a gayly-dressed crowd while the golf players, some in the regulation golf suit and others in the white flannel, rested for refreshment and a little chat.

Light refreshments were served inside of the shelter tent, and here the guests were received by Miss Gertrude Walz and Miss May Evans, assisted by the Misses Mary Anderson Reinhart, Katherine Reinhart, Sarah Schuyler, May Waring, Annie Stewart, Daisy Van Boskerck, and Mrs. John Doull Miller.

The invited guests to the reception did not appear until nearly 5 o'clock, but a number of the members were out early and spent the afternoon playing golf. Next Saturday will be the last of the medal play and all the members were anxious to lower their averages before the close of the contest. Among those who tried their hands were: H. D. West, H. W. Beebe, J. S. Anthony, Thomas Van-Boskerck, J. W. Reinhart, J. H. P. Wharton, W. T. Kaufman, Evarts Tracy, Fred. Walz and L. H. Van-Buren.

During the afternoon, H. H. Beebe and Fred Walz tried their hand against W. T. Kaufman and Evarts Tracy in "foursomes." In the first round Kaufman and Tracy were four holds ahead of their opponents. By careful play Beebe and Walz reduced the lead to one hole at the close of the second round. The former won, however. The two rounds were completed by Beebe and Walz in 136 strokes, and by Kaufman and Tracy in 127 strokes.

Among the guests at the reception were: Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Smith, Misses Tracy, Mr. and Mrs. John Doull Miller, Carl Pfeiffer, E. Louis Walz, Dr., and Mrs. Cready Sykes, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Hand, Miss Daniel, Mrs. A. D. Shepard, Edwin H. Frost, Francis W. Frost, Reve Stockton, Joseph Wadsworth, Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Herring, Miss Katherine Wood, R. A. Beebe, Roger Erickson, Harry Patton, Mrs. George Patton, C. W. Burton, H. D. West, Sherwood West, Howard W. Beebe, James S. Anthony, Thomas Van Boskerck, Howard Huntington, J. H. P. Wharton, Mr. and Mrs. William T. Kaufman, J. Evarts Tracy, Fred W. Walz, Laureat H. Van-Buren, Misses Tweedy, Mrs. Meaker, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brooks, Mrs. Ford, Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D., A. S. Patterson, Misses Patterson, Misses Bushnell, Miss Eisie Pfeiffer, Arthur Talmage, Dr. E. W. Hedges, Miss Munger, Harry Munger, Mr. and Mrs. James DeGraff, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Walz, Josiah Browne, Dr. F. C. Ard, Walter Murray, Mrs. D. P. Hall, Miss Daisy Shepard, Mrs. Mary Miller, Miss Gilbert, Mrs. Street Hare, Misses Harte, Misses Miller, Mrs. Huntington, Miss Kittie Stewart, Miss Clark, Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Waring, William Palmer Smith, Miss Florence Waring, Miss Weller, H. P. Talmage, Mrs. Herman Simmonds, Miss Josephine Simmonds, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Andrews, Miss Gertrude Andrews, J. W. Reinhart, George Chapman, James Murray, Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Slauson, Percy Stewart and Mr. and Mrs. J. Parker Mason.

New Physical Director.

C. E. A. Heywood, who has accepted a call to the physical directorship of the Young Men's Christian Association, was in town yesterday looking over the field. Mr. Heywood was for three years class leader at the Twenty-third street branch, New York city, and during a considerable part of the time was under the direction of Dr. McCurdy, now instructor in physical training, at the Springfield, Y.M.C.A. training school. He comes strongly recommended by Dr. Gulick who is at the head of the Springfield school, where Mr. Heywood has been a student. Mr. Heywood begins his engagement here September 1st.

Great Thing For Bible Students.

E. E. Squires, canvassing agent for the Royal Scroll, has arrived in this city and will present this work to the citizens. Mr. Squires comes with the highest kind of a personal recommendation as to his character and honesty from Thomas Hanlon, D. D. L. L. D., president of Pennington Seminary, and others, and considering the high standard of the work which he is introducing, Plainfielders will not regret if they give him an audience when he calls. The Royal Scroll is a panorama of the principal events in the life of Christ and other prominent Biblical characters and scenes, and is of great practical value to every church member. The artistic merit of the illustrations is superior to the usual publication of this class. The maps and references which accompany the illustrations are particularly desirable to the student of the Bible. Mr. Squires says that every clergyman who has seen the work is high in its praise.

The Royal Scroll is an art work. The productions of Hoffman, Dore, Raphael, etc., such as are found in the twenty masterpieces, are accounted the treasures of the world. Art springs into life only when nourished, and the home is its fireside.

Wm. M. McCutchen, of Rockview terrace, goes to New York tomorrow, Friday and Saturday to take his entrance examinations for Yale.

AT M'KINLEY'S HOME

The Successful Candidate Receives Many Messages from Friends.

SUPPORT PLEDGED; VICTORY ASSURED

Many Distinguished Callers from All Parts of the Country—Delegations from Neighboring Towns Enliven the Scene at Canton.

Canton, O., June 20.—The telegrams and messages of congratulation with assurances of support and success at the polls next fall are still pouring in at the McKinley residence by the hundreds from all parts of the country. Several enthusiastic delegations, numbering from 100 to 1,000 persons, from neighboring towns, with brass bands and banners, have visited Canton and paid their respects to the republican nominee. Numerous distinguished republicans from a distance have also visited Major McKinley to extend their congratulations and leave their assurances of hearty support. Mrs. McKinley has also received many congratulations at the success of her distinguished husband from women in all parts of the United States. Major McKinley expressed particularly hearty satisfaction over the numerous messages from the far west approving his nomination and the platform and promising support. Among the delegations that called at the McKinley residence was a body of commercial travelers representing nearly every state and territory, which happened to be gathered in Canton. The delegation was under the command of Capt. H. F. Weston of Pennsylvania. Col. J. H. Keating of Michigan and Lieut. G. Gaskill of Ohio. Capt. Weston presented the club to the major. The losses by theft Thursday night are greater than at first reported. Eleven rifled pocket books were found on the grounds about the house, and one man had a valuable diamond stud torn from his shirt front. A grand reception was accorded the returning Cantonese last night. With delegations from neighboring counties they completely filled the lawn surrounding the McKinley residence. Speeches congratulating Major McKinley were made by spokesmen of the delegations and the major, mounted on a dry goods box, with great emotion, fittingly replied. Later the New York McKinley delegates arrived on their way home from St. Louis and complimentary speeches were exchanged. Incidents more or less interesting have not been wanting, as for instance the arrival of J. W. Bookwalter, a colored man of Ohio, who insisted upon seeing the major to present in person an application for a position. He failed to see him, however.

J. S. ROBINSON DROPS DEAD.

Ontario's ex-Lieut.-Governor Expires While Attending a Platform at a Meeting.

Toronto, June 20.—Hon. John Beverley Robinson, ex-lieutenant-governor of Ontario, dropped dead just as he was stepping on the platform at Sir Charles Tupper's great conservative meeting held in Massey Music hall last night, which he was to have addressed. The sad occurrence was not made known for more than a dozen persons in the hall and the meeting proceeded in ignorance of the tragic event. Lady Robinson died three years ago.

Judgment for a Railroad Company.

Hartford, June 20.—Judge Robinson in the superior court has rendered judgment in favor of the defendant in the suit of John Pinches of New Britain against the Central Railway & Electric company of New Britain. Mr. Pinches sued to recover $8,000 as special damages because the trolley laid several tracks in front of his residence. The judge finds that there are no special damages accruing to the plaintiff.

Trinity Athletic Association Officers.

Hartford, June 20.—The Trinity College Athletic association has elected officers as follows: President, A. M. Longford, '97; secretary, Cook, '98; treasurer, Cartwright, '98; junior director of advisory committee, Secour, '98; sophomore director advisory committee, Baxter, '99; senior director of baseball, Cogswell, 97; manager of baseball team, Cartwright, 98.

Transfer of Connecticut Priests.

Hart ford, June 20.—Bishop Tierney has made the following changes of priests: Rev. J. Senesac, formerly of Voluntown, will take charge of St. Anthony's church, Bridgeport; Rev. J. L. Desaulniers of Putnam is promoted to the pastorate of Voluntown; Rev. F. Pappillon of St. Ann's, Waterbury, is transferred to Putnam.

Appointed by Gov. Coffin.

Hartford, June 20.—Gov. Coffin has appointed the following officers in the Second regiment: Assistant surgeon, Joseph B. Townsend of New Haven, to be major and surgeon; Dr. F. T. Graves of Waterbury to be assistant surgeon, with rank of first lieutenant.

Suicide of David O'Brien.

Chicago, June 20.—David O'Brien, who committed suicide in his office by asphyxiation, was one of the foremost lawyers in Cook county, but had been despondent for several weeks and had frequently threatened to take his own life.

Struck by a Train and Killed.

Providence, June 20.—Peter Cody, who was struck by a train at Woonsocket, is dead at the hospital here. His father, Stephen Cody of Webster, Mass., has claimed the remains.

New Bank for Saranac Lake.

Washington, June 20.—The Adirondack National bank of Saranac Lake, N. Y., capital $50,000, has been authorized to begin business.

HANNA THE LEADER

His Election as National Committee Chairman Was Expected.

NEW YORK CITY TO BE HEADQUARTERS

The Resolution Making the Ohio Manager Also Chairman of the Executive Committee Came as a Surprise and Is a New Venture.

St. Louis, June 20.—The election yesterday of Mark Hanna as chairman of the new republican national committee was no surprise, but the resolution making the chairman of the national committee ex-officio chairman of the executive committee is a new departure. It is said to have been suggested by Mr. Hanna himself. It has always been the custom in the national and state committees of all parties to elect a party leader as chairman of the executive committee, but this year Mr. Hanna will take the lead in all matters in the campaign. After Mr. Manley had called the national committee together yesterday it was announced that Senator Quay had positively refused to permit his name to be used in connection with the chairmanship. Then, on motion of Committeeman Payne of Wisconsin, seconded by Pennsylvania and New York, Mr. Hanna was unanimously elected chairman of the committee. J. H. Manley of Maine was elected temporary secretary, James S. Burke of Pennsylvania assistant secretary, and Thomas Taggart of Indiana was re-elected sergeant-at-arms. Behind closed doors there was an animated discussion of the question of the location of the permanent headquarters for the campaign. Chairman Hanna was opposed to Chicago and Cleveland, but there was an emphatic protest by the members from the east and south. They warned Mr. Hanna that the Ohio idea could be carried too far. Chicago also made a bid for headquarters. But the vigorous objections of the committees from New England and the south convinced Mr. Hanna, and he finally agreed that the headquarters should be located in New York city. The only formal action taken in reference to the matter was to refer it to the executive committee when appointed, but after the meeting had adjourned it was stated by several members of the committee who were in the confidence of the chairman that the question is as good as settled, and New York will, as usual, be the campaign headquarters. The next meeting will probably be held in New York city after Chairman Hanna has consulted with his associates and appointed his executive committee. Cornelius N. Bliss of New York will probably be reappointed treasurer of the committee if he will accept the place.

LAURELS FOR LODGE.

The Young Massachusetts Senator Won Honor for Himself at St. Louis.

St. Louis, June 20.—One of the men who has carried off honors at the convention and goes home to his constituents strong in power and prestige is Senator Lodge of Massachusetts. He came here almost a stranger to the republicans of the west. His sturdy manhood and determined and successful fight for the gold standard won him respect and confidence. From the beginning of the fight for sound money he has stood in the front ranks of those who were its champions, and he soon became one of the popular figures of this convention. Whenever and wherever he appeared he received enthusiastic applause, and the gossips predict that the young senator from Massachusetts will continue a conspicuous figure in the republican national politics.

ADDICKS STILL A REPUBLICAN

Wants To Be a United States Senator and Not Governor.

Wilmington, Del., June 20.—The defeated Addicks delegation returned from St. Louis last evening. "We are all republicans," Mr. Addicks remarked, but further than that he would not comment on the recent national convention. Regarding the move of his friends to run him for governor, Addicks said: "I would not accept the office of governor. I am a candidate for but one thing—United States senator."

Praised for Not Bolting.

Cheyenne, Wyo., June 20.—The action of the Wyoming delegation at St. Louis in refusing to bolt with Colorado, Idaho and other western states meets with almost general approval and praise by the republicans here. Under the instructions voted by the state convention which elected the delegates there was nothing for them to do but to stay in the convention. The instructions as to silver were merely to use all honorable means to secure its recognition in the national platform.

Wanamaker Pleased.

Philadelphia, June 20. — Ex-Postmaster-General Wanamaker, who returned from Europe yesterday, is pleased with the nomination of McKinley and Hobart. He said that the nomination of McKinley for president was irresistible and proved that the people were anxious for protection. He thought the ticket was an excellent one.

Indorses Pettigrew's Bolt.

Sioux Falls, S. D., June 20.—The non-partisan silver club which was organized Thursday night has indorsed Senator Pettigrew's bolt at the St. Louis convention.

Instructed for Stanchfield for Governor.

Oswego, N. Y., June 20.—The democrats of Tioga county instructed their delegates to vote and work for J. B. Stanchfield if he is a candidate for governor at that time.

READY FOR THE COLLEGE

PUPILS FINISH THEIR STUDIES IN PROF. LEAL'S SCHOOL.

Addressed by Rev. W. R. Richards on the Right Place in Life—They Will Fill in the World's History—Honors Bestowed

The usual commencement exercises are dull and uninteresting except to those specially interested, but excellent music and a short and very interesting address made the commencement exercises of Leal's School, held in Y. M. C. A. Hall Thursday, a very pleasant exception to the rule.

The hall was comfortably filled with an enthusiastic audience. Most of the pupils sat together in a space in the front of the hall, partitioned off for them with maroon and old-gold bunting. Maroon and old-gold were the colors of the class of '96, and bunting of those colors was used in decorating the room.

The exercises opened with a pleasing selection overture to "Jesando," by the Young Men's Symphony Orchestra, led by P. Ludwig Conde. Then followed a well-rendered selection, "The Chapel," by the Lotos Glee Club, of which William E. Macclymont is leader. In response to the loud applause, "Who Built the Ark" was delightfully given as an encore.

Rev. William R. Richards, D. D., was introduced as the speaker of the evening. After a few introductory remarks, in which he referred to the history of progress as his topic, he said in part:

"That history is the history of a favored class of people, one class rises and pulls the other classes after it. If you go back to the beginning of modern history you will find a sort of class from which a settled order is emerging.

"That is the feudal system. Many of its products are lost, but one in particular remains; that is the gentleman. He was raised above the rest. The trades and professions were not open to him, but he had one thing that he loves better than life, his honor. That has pretty well passed by, the traces of the feudal system are rapidly disappearing. We do not have that kind of gentleman, and I believe we do not need him.

"The question remains, who shall be the favored class? If all are the same and there is no favored class, then we shall be falling back into chaos. There should be some who will shape the careers of the rest. This is said to be the age of the townsman. We could, by no means, afford to lose him at the present time, but the world is shaped too much to his commercial ideas, and our ideas are becoming monitized. If this is the aristocracy, the privileged class of the present age, we need another. That class is not capable of guiding the world. This class may be supplied by our own educated men and women. The scholar should take the place of the gentleman, of the olden time. The universities and colleges have taken the place of the castles, the former are now flourishing, while the latter are in ruins. It is the college men that are to step into the place of the gentlemen. Of course, there are other ways of gaining an education, some men and women lift themselves up to the educated class, but most of them take the way that these young men are going to do.

"The scholar is the only one left to fight against the arrogance of wealth. Every high minded man should assist in keeping the world from valueing everything by a monetary standard. It would be a fatal mistake if the higher education of colleges should separate us from the rest of the world. We should draw up those who have not had the same advantages as ourselves. The question comes, what are these young men going to do with these privileges. I cannot answer better than in the words of the Great Master who, says: 'He, who would be great, let him be your servant.'"

The Lotus Glee Club then rendered "Hark, the Trumphet Calleth" in a delightful manner and gave "The Maid of the Valley" as an encore. The orchestra gave "Etiquette Concert" by Boustel and then as an encore, played than inspiring march "The Handican."

John Leal, the principal of the school spoke a few words, referring to persistency as a needful quality in a young man for success. He then announced the names of the following as having completed their work at the school this year: J. Frank Boone, B. O. Bowers, Jr., F. P. Condit, H. G. Johnson, Gilbert Lovell, Wm. M. McCutchen, Raymond A. McGee, Leo Sewell, Wm. E. Tracy, Joseph T. Wadsworth and A. Will de Wet.

Of these Lovell, McCutchen, McGee, Tracy and Wadsworth go to college and all to Yale. The others have taken courses more or less extended to fit them for business careers.

The Problem Solved.

Mrs. Rulem—Your husband is still as devoted as a lover. I don't see how you manage.

Mrs. Kissem—It's very simple. When he comes home late, I always pretend to be asleep; when he has a headache in the morning, I tell him he is overworked; when he leaves his hat in the parlor, his overcoat in the dining-room and his overshoes upstairs, I quietly gather them up, and put them in the front hall, and when we go to the theater, I never forget to suggest that he should improve the shining hours between the acts by going out and talking business with his customers. Oh! it's easy enough to keep a man devoted, if you only know how.—N. Y. Weekly.

An Old Bachelor's Excuse.

"You were never married, I believe."

"No, I was never married."

"That's singular, isn't it?"

"No, not at all. You see, the first time I fell in love I said to myself: I'll marry her or no one."

"Why didn't you marry her then?"

"Well, you see, after I had become better acquainted with her, I said to myself I'll marry none rather than her. Since then I've got along very well with none."—Texas Siftings.

Not a Monotonous Trip.

Old Lady—Don't you think this work rather monotonous?

Elevator Boy—No, indeed, ma'am, it's real exciting. Only yesterday a man started out too soon an' got his head smashed, and last week the hull machinery an' went down kerchug, an' Eilfed everybody but me. That there rope looks sort o' weak. Hope she'll last till we're up. The engineer is drunk to-day, too, and that sort o' makes things interesting.—Good News.

Like His Dad.

Parson Johnson—How's yo' son gittin' on in de city, Mrs. Jackson?

Mrs. Jackson—Misabuil misabuil. He hain't got no mo' sense dan his fader had at de same age.

Parson Johnson—W-wot's he be'n doin'?

Mrs. Jackson (with magnificent disdain)—He's b'n gittin' married to a low-down brack wench.—Judge.

Called Down.

Miss Penna—If his lordship should propose, I shall not have you to thank.

Penna—What have I done to retard your courtship?

Miss Penna—Even if you are in the pork business that is no reason why you should always refer to him as "Me Lard."—N. Y. World.

A Letter Day Proposal.

Chauncey (nonchalantly)—I lay my heart and my future at your feet. Both are yours if you will only accept them.

Miss Cheque—If you will submit a certified statement of the latter, papa and I will take it under consideration, and will advise you of our decision in a few days.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Liked His Church.

Little Boy—I like our church better than any other.

Fond Mother—Bless his heart! Why?

Little Boy—We are always changing ministers, and every time we change, there's most generally three or four Sundays when there isn't any church.—Good News.

Resolution Ware.

Caller—That vase is perfectly lovely. What do you call it?

Hostess—Resolution china.

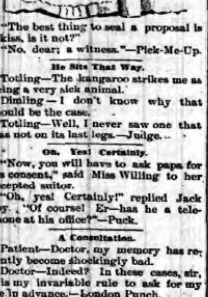
Caller—What a peculiar name.

Hostess—Yes, but it's so easily broken.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Callers Given Warning.

He entered the editor's sanctum
And spoke with fierce intonation,
And the next day was hanged as a bandit
For wrecking a train of thought.
—Argonia Chronicle.

MORE BINDING.



"The best thing to seal a proposal is a kiss, is it not?"

"No, dear; a witness."—Pick-Me-Up.

He Sits That Way.

Tooling—The kangaroo strikes me as being a very sick animal.

Dimling—I don't know why that should be the case.

Tooling—Well, I never saw one that was not on its last legs.—Judge.

Oh, Yes! Certainly.

"Now, you will have to ask papa for his consent," said Miss Willing to her accepted lover.

"Oh, yes! Certainly!" replied Jack Coy. "Of course! Er—has he a telephone at his office?"—Puck.

A Consultation.

Patient—Doctor, my memory has recently become shockingly bad.

Doctor—Indeed? In these cases, sir, it is my invariable rule to ask for my fee in advance.—London Punch.

BRIDES OF A JUNE DAY.

TWO WEDDINGS SOLEMNIZED IN THIS CITY YESTERDAY.

One Was a Pretty House Affair and Was Followed by a Reception—The Other Couple Wedded at St. Mary's Parsonage.

A quiet wedding was celebrated Thursday afternoon at 5:30 at the rectory of St. Mary's church when Miss Lucy Rafferty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Rafferty, of East Fourth street, and William Feiring, of the borough, were united in marriage by Rev. Father Smyth. Miss Margaret Rafferty, sister of the bride, was the bridesmaid and John P. Powers acted as best man. The bride's gown was white silk with pearl trimmings and lace. She carried a beautiful white ivory prayer book. The bridemaid was gowned in blue crepe de chene trimmed with applique lace. She carried a large bouquet of pink and white roses.

Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party were taken to the home of the bride's parents on East Fourth street where a reception was held. Preceding the reception a pleasing supper was served, after which an evening of sociability followed.

Miss Rafferty, Miss Anna Feiring, of this city, and Miss Conley, of Bayonne, favored the guests with several well rendered instrumental solos. Later in the evening dancing was enjoyed. Mr. and Mrs. Feiring were the recipients of a large collection of valuable presents.

The guests present at the reception were: Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Rafferty, Miss Margaret Rafferty, Joseph Rafferty, Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Feiring, Miss Anna Feiring, George Feiring, Louis Feiring, Edward Feiring, Gustave Feiring, Jr., Miss Kittie Muilhearn, George Muller, of this city, and the Misses Conley, of Bayonne.

After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Feiring left for their newly-furnished rooms in the Voehl building on East Front street where they will reside.

Thursday afternoon a quiet but beautiful home wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Burr, of Sandford avenue, when their daughter, Miss Helen Ackley Burr, was married to W. Miller Bauchelle, of Elizabeth. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. MacKubbin, of the Westminster Presbyterian church, of Elizabeth. The bride was attended by her two young sisters, the Misses Florence and Frank Burr. J. Fletcher Bauchelle, brother of the groom, was best man. A reception followed, at which guests were present from Philadelphia, Elizabeth, Trenton, New York and this city. The house was beautifully decorated by Mrs. H. J. Dunn, and a collation was served by Max Wiertz in his unexceptional way. After their return from their wedding journey the young people will begin housekeeping in Elizabeth.

AN EXCITING RUNAWAY.

A Horse Goes Tearing Through Crowded Streets But Does No Injury.

People on West Front street, Park and North avenues, witnessed a most exciting runaway Friday night about 6 o'clock. The horse and phaeton which figured in the incident belonged to School Commissioner F. C. Lounsbury, of Plainfield avenue.

The rig was standing in the driveway at Mr. Lounsbury's home, when the coachman attempted to get into the wagon for the purpose of driving to the North avenue station for Mr. Lounsbury. The horse started before the man could get hold of the reins, the animal made a short turn into the street and upset the wagon, throwing the occupant into the road. The horse continued through Front street and North avenue and North avenue at a terrible speed and was finally caught at the North avenue station.

A remarkable thing regarding the runaway is that there was no serious damage, in spite of the fact that the streets were crowded with wagons and wheels.

All that was left of Mr. Lounsbury's wagon was the wheels. The top and body were completely wrecked. The horse escaped with a slight cut on the leg. The coachman was not injured.

CONCUSSION OF THE BRAIN.

A Bicycle Rider Badly Hurt at the Crescent Oval.

Fred Adams, of Netherwood avenue, sustained serious injuries about dark last evening about dark while riding his wheel at a rapid pace on the Crescent Oval. The front forks of his wheel gave way, and he was violently thrown to the ground. When picked up by friends Adams was found to be unconscious, and it was learned on examination that his head, face and body was severely cut and bruised.

He was taken to Dr. Davis' office on Park avenue, where he was treated. The doctor learned that there was a slight concussion of the brain. Adams was taken home later, and is now somwhat improved though he is in a critical condition. It is not believed that his injuries will prove fatal.

—The new chapel at Mt. Pleasant has been completed and services will be held there next Sunday afternoon.

IT PORTENDS WAR

St. Louis Cuban Plank as Viewed by the Spaniards.

TROUBLE WITH UNITED STATES SURE

Rothschild Loan To Be Expended for Warships and Naval Supplies—Suit in Spanish Senate Censuring the United States.

Madrid, June 22.—The platform of the St. Louis convention causes uneasiness here. It is feared that a conflict with the United States may result. The loan of 100,000,000 pesetas made by the Rothschilds on the guarantee of the Almaden quicksilver mines will probably go to increase the navy, and will be employed in buying immediately such warships as may be for sale. The government is responding to national sentiment and, trusting probably to the help of other powers, it seems resolved to resist American aspirations when the time comes.

To Censure the United States.

Madrid, June 22.—The liberals have introduced in the senate a motion censuring the United States for their attitude regarding Cuba.

Col. Nunez Arrested.

Jacksonville, Fla., June 22.—Col. Nunez, the Cuban patriot, arrived here late on Saturday night and was arrested by U. S. Marshal McCoy on a warrant sworn out by Spanish Vice-Consul Mariategui, charging him with aiding in fitting out the expedition which sailed from this port on April 27 on the steamer Bermuda. Col. Nunez came here to surrender himself. He will have a hearing before United States Commissioner Locke to-day, and will at once leave for New York to surrender to the federal authorities there to answer to a charge of aiding in fitting out the Laurada expedition.

VICTORIES BY THE CENSOR.

Spanish Reports of Severe Losses by the Patriots in Some Sharp Fights.

Havana, June 22.—The Spanish gunboats Satellite and Ardilla, while making a cruise of inspection along the coast near Vertiente, close by the terminus of the Jucaro-Moron trocha, were attacked by insurgents from the shore. With the assistance of the garrison of the fort the enemy was repulsed after a sharp fight. The insurgents lost seventeen dead and many wounded. On the Spanish side two soldiers and six marines were wounded. Commander Baura of the Ardilla was also wounded, but not seriously. General Bernal, governor of the Pinar del Rio province, reports that he has dislodged a party of insurgents from their position in the hills in that vicinity, capturing their camp and destroying 100 huts. In the engagement previously mentioned the taking of the camp eighteen of the insurgents were killed and two of the Spanish force were wounded. Gen. Gasco reports that a band of insurgents near Sierra de Agramonte, in the province of Matanzas, attacked a party of guerrillas on the road from Manzanillo to Bayamo, a long and fierce fight ensued. The guerrillas were reinforced by 200 troops and the insurgents were defeated and driven toward Peralejo. Six of them were killed and a captain and fifteen privates wounded. The Comercio squadron, which was organized last year by merchants, has been disbanded because of the lack of funds and the seven vessels of the squadron persons connected with it for feats committed.

Says It Will Be Close in Nebraska.

Chicago, June, 22.—Senator Francis Warren of Cheyenne, Wyo., is at the Auditorium, having just arrived from St. Louis. Regarding the situation in Wyoming, he said: "Wyoming is a republican state and by not less than 5,000 will carry it this fall for the republican national ticket, although the contest will be fiercely fought, especially if Henry M. Teller is indorsed by the Chicago convention."

Another Storm in St. Louis.

St. Louis, June 22.—A sharp reminder of the recent disastrous tornado struck this city at 3:30 p. m. yesterday. From the same quarter whence came the great storm the wind blew at a forty-mile speed, and the rain fell in sheets. Many of the houses that were partly restored after the tornado were again damaged.

Killed by Lightning in New York.

New York, June 22.—During a severe storm here yesterday afternoon Charles Telentz was killed by lightning near Van Cortlandt avenue, in the upper part of city. A young woman who was with him at the time received a shock and had to be sent to Fordham hospital.

To Abandon the Educational Bill.

London, June 22.—The Times to-day says that at the cabinet council held Saturday it was decided to entirely abandon the educational bill and to introduce in 1897 a bill increasing the financial assistance given by the government to voluntary schools.

Cholera in Egypt.

Cairo, June 22.—The official cholera statistics show that yesterday there were reported throughout Egypt 149 new cases and 114 deaths. The disease is decreasing at Cairo and Alexandria and increasing in the provinces.

London, June 23.—A special dispatch to the Chronicle from Rome says that the report of the pope being very ill is officially denied at the vatican.

PRAISE FOR LUDWIG

Congratulated for His Position in the Moscow Banquet Incident.

KAISER REKINDLES THE EXCITEMENT

Bestows a Decoration Upon the President of the Banquet Whose Words Evoked a Violent Protest from Prince Ludwig.

Berlin, June 22.—The excitement which prevailed throughout the south German states over the incident at the banquet of the Deutsche verein in Moscow upon the occasion of the czar's coronation when the president of the banquet alluded to the German princes as members of the suite of Prince Henry of Prussia was subsiding rapidly, but it has now received a fresh impulse by the bestowal of the order of the Red Eagle by the emperor upon the chairman whose words evoked a violent protest from Prince Ludwig of Bavaria, who resented the president's words by indignantly declaring that the princes alluded were neither members of Prince Henry's suite nor vassals of the German empire. The Bavarian press in commenting upon the act of the emperor in decorating the president of the banquet interpret it as a new act of provocation on the part of the Prussia, although it is a clearly customary action toward an official receiving a representative of the kaiser, in which capacity Prince Henry went to Moscow. Prince Luitpold, regent of Bavaria, has accepted to wash up the uproar caused by the words of the president of the banquet and the resentful speech of his son and the heir to the Bavarian throne, Prince Ludwig, but popular feeling has been too strong to allow the usual official demonstration at the closing of the session of the Bavarian landtag in Munich when President Von Walther thanked the royal house for watching and jealously preserving the independence of Bavaria and her guaranteed treaties. This expression was received with cheers, which were plonged many minutes. In addition to this the patriotic associations in all parts of south Germany are sending congratulatory messages and addresses to Prince Ludwig in great profusion.

Catholic Party Taking the Lead.

The Catholic party are especially taking the lead in the resurgence of the particularistic agitation, and the Catholic press are vehement in their denunciation of the persistent attempts to force the Prussian regime upon the independent states of Germany. The Berlin government in the meantime watching the agitation in south German states very quietly, and the Berlin newspapers treat the matter lightly, as though the particularist sentiment in the south of Germany were a quantity not worthy of serious consideration. The National Gazette characterizes the excitement as puerile, but however lightly the government and the press may view the agitation it cannot be dismissed in that fashion. The fact is that the present outbreak is due to a feeling which has long been in the air in south Germany, where the people and the princes alike have silently resented the autocratic acts and speeches of the kaiser. Legislative proposition after proposition has in south Germany hard without touching Prussia, the vexatious treatment of south German lines by the Prussian railways and the dealings between the postal authorities of Prussia and the south German states have combined to keep particularism alive. The agitation which is giving free vent to long-restrained sentiments is likely to do good to the whole country, and, after all, it is a family quarrel which can not in any way affect the unity of the empire.

Prince Ludwig Goes to Hungary.

In the meantime, Prince Ludwig, whose violent words at the banquet were the signal for the popular outburst of indignation, has found it prudent, or at least convenient, to go to his hunting estate in Hungary to remain until the excitement is allayed. It is said by those who are in a position to know that his departure for Hungary was taken with a view of avoiding the rousing ovations which the people of Munich and other places were preparing to give him.

Nebraska Silver Party.

Reno, Nev., June 22.—The state central committee of the silver party of Nevada met Saturday afternoon and elected John J. Jones, William Stewart and Francis G. Newlands delegates-at-large to the national silver convention to be held in St. Louis. Twelve district delegates were also elected. A resolution was passed inviting the populists of Nevada to fuse with the silver party.

Damaged in Collision.

Philadelphia, June 22.—The schooner E. T. Whitmore, which arrived in this port yesterday St. John, N. B., was badly damaged by colliding with the schooner J. S. Manning early on Friday night off the Northeast End lightship. The accident happened during a very heavy fog.

Delegate to the Great Irish Convention.

Toronto, June 22.—At a meeting of prominent Irish citizens here, yesterday Archbishop Walsh was appointed a delegate to the Great Irish convention to be held in London Sept. 1.

Sir Augustus Harris Critically Ill.

London, June 22.—Sir Augustus Harris, the well known theatrical and operatic composer, is critically ill at Folkestone.

Treasury Gold Reserve.

Washington, June 22.—The treasury gold reserve at the opening of business today stood at $100,441,120.

RUN DOWN AT A CROSSING.

Three Men and Two Horses Killed and One Man Fatally Injured.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 22.—The 8 o'clock express from Philadelphia for this city over the Pennsylvania railroad struck a team and wagon at Absecom station, about eight miles from here, shortly after 5 o'clock yesterday morning and killed three men and fatally injured another. The men were bound on a picnic trip and had descended a steep hill leading to the depot without knowing of the proximity of the train which was speeding along at the rate of sixty miles an hour. They realized their danger when it was too late, as the momentum of the wagon carried the team out on the track, where the vehicle was struck by the locomotive. One of the horses and one man were hurled through the air forty feet and fell side by side dead. The other horse was also killed outright and carried along by the tender 100 yards. Two of the men were thrown under the wheels of the locomotive and ground to atoms. The dead men, who are all relatives, are George Huber, his son, Frederick Huber, and Henry Getzmer. Joseph Sahl, another son-in-law of Huber, is believed to be fatally injured and is now at the City hospital. The men belonged in Galloway township and were prominent in the county's affairs.

TWO WOMEN MURDERED.

Killed by Burglars, Who Split Their Heads Open with Hatchets.

New Orleans, June 22.—Mrs. T. Landry and Miss Madeleine Hebert, her niece and adopted daughter, members of a leading family in Iberville, were found in their house with their heads split open with hatchet. Mrs. Landry was dead; Miss Hebert was speechless and fatally wounded, and died soon after. It was evident that two burglars had broken into the house. They aroused Mrs. Landry, who was instantly killed, her head being cut open from behind. Miss Hebert probably heard the noise and came to the rescue of Mrs. Landry. One of the burglars held her while the other struck her several blows on the head with the hatchet. After robbing the house the burglars escaped in a skiff to the other side of the Mississippi. Two negroes are suspected of the crime.

THIRTY FISHING CRAFT LOST.

Destroyed by a Hurricane Which Swept the Labrador Coast.

St. Johns, N. F., June 22.—A hurricane has swept over the Labrador coast, doing immense damage. Thirty fishing craft were destroyed at Blanc Sablon, and it is feared that other vessels were lost at more northern points. The fishery reports from all parts of the coast are very unfavorable. Trouble is feared at French Shore owing to the operation of the recent proclamation preventing the use of certain fishing appliances.

Yale Baccalaureate Sermon.

New Haven, Conn., June 22.—President Dwight yesterday preached the Yale baccalaureate sermon. The academic and scientific seniors to the number of 600 were present in the full dress of the degree, and hundreds of visitors and alumni crowded the galleries. The sermon was unusually impressive and contained many references to President Dwight's college career. This year in his tenth as president of Yale. He selected as his text Matthew x., 8: "Ye having freely received; Freely give."

Great Damage by Mail Storm.

Bellefonte, Pa., June 22.—One of the severest hail and rain storms known in a generation passed over this county last evening. Hailstones as large as peas fell until the ground was covered. In the county the damage to grain is beyond computation. Entire fields were lain prostrate. Many fruit trees were also completely stripped, and though the storm lasted but a half hour it is estimated that the rainfall was fully one and one-half inches.

Off for Europe in a 30-Foot Boat.

New York, June 22.—Frank Charlian, formerly a sailor in the employ of John Roach, sailed last evening from Battery basin in a twenty-foot cedar boat for Liverpool. His brother, also a seafaring man, accompanied him. The men expect to get to Liverpool in their little craft in sixty days. A mainsail, jib and flying jib are fashioned to the boat.

Trouble Among Fishermen.

St. Johns, N. F., June 22.—The British warship Mohawk left here suddenly before daylight yesterday upon receipt of urgent telegraphic orders from Commodore Bourke, commanding the Bagahip Cordelia, directing her to proceed to Fortune bay, where trouble has arisen between British and French fishermen along the celebrated French shore.

Venezuelan Matter.

London, June 22.—The Daily News, in an article which it will publish today, laments the delay in the settlement of the dispute with Venezuela, and urges Lord Salisbury to settle the matter before the American commission makes its report.

WILL MACADAMIZE NOW

SOMERSET BOARD OF FREEHOLDERS DECIDE TO STOP LITIGATION.

Have Concluded That it is Best to Make the Mountain Avenue Improvement— Spent $1,900 in Fighting the Case.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders transacted important business, Friday, at their meeting in Somerville when they decided to abide by the recent decision of the Supreme Court, which upheld the mandamus compelling them to macadamize Mountain avenue in the Borough of North Plainfield, and the road between Bound Brook and Somerville. The case has been in litigation for over a year, and has created a great deal of interest not only in Somerset county, but throughout the State at large.

Over a year ago the abutting property owners on Mountain avenue, North Plainfield, petitioned the Free*holders to macadamize* that street from Somerset street to Terrill road, a distance of two and a quarter miles. Under the State Road Act, when a majority of the property owners thus petition, the Freeholders are compelled to make the improvement. But the Somerset Board is made up largely of members from the country districts, and they were averse to complying with the requirements of the law, as a portion of the expense of the improvement devolves on the county. The rest is paid by the State and the benefited property owners. As soon as the Freeholders refused, action was commenced by the interested parties to compel them comply with the conditions of the State Road Act. The mandamus was issued. The Freeholders employed counsel, and have spent $1,200 in litigation over the case, but were decided against.

At the meeting yesterday there was a disposition on the part of some of the obstinate members to carry the case to a higher court, but the conservatism of some of the other members prevailed, and it was decided to let the proceedings drop and commence the improvements.

Freeholders Barkalew and Lutkins were in favor of making the improvement, and it was largely through their influence that the action was taken yesterday. The vote of the Board on the question was seven for to three against.

TUMBLED FROM HIS BIKE.

Billy McCutchen Sustains Injuries Which Keeps Him Off the Track for a Time.

William M. McCutchen, the Crescent Wheelmen's crack rider, returned from Norwalk, Conn., Thursday, in a rather demoralized state. A section of his face, arms, side and knees had been cut and bruised while his shoulder blade had been dislocated. In consequence, it will be at least a month, so the doctor says, before he will be able to ride in a race again, and now he is just able to move around. The cause of the trouble was a tumble on the track at Norwalk.

The races were held on Thursday instead of Wednesday, on account of rain, and McCutchen started in the one mile handicap from the eighty-yard mark, having the race almost in his grasp. He caught the limit men in less than a third and started to pass the bunch when his fork-crown gave way and he was thrown forward striking on his neck and shoulder with the results above mentioned.

The track was clay, but had it been gravel McCutchen's physiognomy would have been effectively spoilt. As it was he came out remarkably lucky.

HELPING THE FRESH AIR CAMP.

Young People Conduct a Profitable Festival on Ninth Street.

Several of the young people living on and in the vicinity of Ninth street gave a very successful lawn festival on the lawn of the property situated on the corner of Ninth street and First place Saturday afternoon and evening. The proceeds were for the benefit of the Plainfield Fresh Air Camp, and amounted to $30.

The candy table was presided over by the Misses Grace Peck, Elma Thayer, Nellie Langdon and Daisy B. Kline. The fancy table was looked after and its articles sold by the Misses Marguerite Leal, Roxie Love, Mildred Thayer, Wilhemina Patto, and Elsie Goddard.

William Nash, Henry Leal, John Jackson and Stanley Peck had charge of the ice-cream, glace and soda stand, and managed to dispose of twenty-four quarts of ice-cream and several glasses of soda. Harry Sianson spent his time very profitably with a grab bag, taking in the sum of $3.50.

Hanna Thayer, dressed in Japanese costume, spent the afternoon selling fans.

At 8:30 o'clock Stanley Peck auctioned off the remaining articles. Miss Florence Kline acted as cashier. Wilbur Jackson was the head waiter, and the Misses Dorethy Langdon and Grace Wilcox acted as waitresses.

—The petition for the opening of Watchung avenue in this city is growing rapidly, which gives unmistakable evidence that the people want the street opened.

ENDEAVOR CONFERNCE.

PLAINFIELD SPEAKERS ADDRESSES MIDDLESEX COUNTY UNION.

A Party From This City Drove to Metuchen in a Stage and Participated in the Interesting Features of the Meeting.

A very interesting and helpful Christian Endeavor Conference was held Thursday afternoon and evening at Metuchen, by the Middlesex Local Union. The programme included the names of several Plainfielders, and the Plainfield Endeavorers were cordially invited to be present.

The afternoon session included addresses on Junior Endeavor, by speakers from New York and New Brunswick, and various committee conferences, one of which the missionary conference was conducted by Miss Alice B. Spangenberg, of Netherwood. Between the sessions the visiting Endeavorers were entertained by those of Metuchen.

A large party of Plainfielders composed of the Park Avenue Baptist Endeavorers and their friends drove over to Metuchen in a large stage to attend the evening session. The stage was crowded, and the evening warm, but Endeavor songs shortened the way, and the drive was very pleasant one. The song service was nearly ended, as the Plainfield delegation entered the Reformed church, already well filled. They were just in time to listen to Miss Alice B. Spangenberg's address: "Every Christian Endeavorer a Missionary." In her usual earnest way, Miss Spangenberg pleaded for a deeper consecration to the work of missions, for the sake of Him who had commanded His followers to disciple all nations. Rev. T. E. Davis, of Dutch Neck, *next made some state*ments concerning New Jersey's accommodations at the Washington '96 Convention.

Then came an address by Miss Florence G. Hawkins, the earnest young secretary of the Plainfield Union. Her subject was "What relation should exist between society and union?" and her talk was a very pra*ctical and helpful one, showing that if* the right relationship did exist it was because the Endeavorers, as individuals, were living the true Christian Endeavor life. Very pointly she said of the responsibility that rests on each one, and with heartfelt earnestness she begged the Endeavorers to go forward in the Christian life, seeking each day to do more truly "whatever He would like to have them do."

The last address, "Feeding upon heavenly manna," a plea for devotional Bible study, was by Rev. John Howard Raven, pastor of the church at which the conference was held. He also conducted the closing consecration service, in which a number of Endeavorers took part. Then, with a farewell song and the Mizpah Bene*diction, the company separated.* The Plainfielders packed themselves into their stage and drove home through the moonlight, singing nearly all the way, the sound of their young voices stealing far over the silent fields. In spite of the hot night and the long drive they had thoroughly enjoyed themselves and received many helpful thoughts from the conference.

PALISADES' CAUSE GAINING.

State Riparian Board to Grant No More Leases to Quarrymen.

Another important step toward the preservation of the Palisades has been taken by the New Jersey Board of Riparian Commissioners. At the last meeting Governor Griggs said he hoped they would pass a resolution to the effect that no more leases of State lands should be given on the Hudson River within the vicinity of the Palisades.

Promptly following up the suggestion of the Governor, the board passed the resolution.

EXCHANGED SHOTS.

Two Policemen Fired at by Tramps and Return the Compliment.

Roundsman Mattox and Patrolman Vanderweg had an exciting experience early Sunday morning when two unknown individuals fired several shots at them. Bendix Frederickson, son of Roundsman Frederickson, was going up South avenue to his home at Netherwood and noticed two men acting in a suspicious manner. When he reached Netherwood, he found two the two officers there and told them of the circumstance. They started down South avenue and had reached the manufactory and the foot of the hill when they saw in the thick mist, the figures of two men. Vanderweg walked toward them and the two strangers jumped the fence. "Hold on there,' shouted the policeman. A reply came back that sounded like "Get out you son of a ——!" and the mysterious characters blazed away with their revolvers. Vanderweg ducked and heard a bullet fly unpleasantly close to his head and then returned the fire.

The officers pursued them to the railroad embankment on the other side of which they disappeared in the bushes and could not be found.

—The opening services at the new Mt. Pleasant chapel will be held next Sunday afternoon.

CRISIS IS AT HAND

Wm. C. Whitney Points Out Danger to Democrats.

FREE SILVER MEANS DISSOLUTION

An Inopportune Time To Take Such a Step When International Action Favorable to the Joint Standard Seems Assured.

New York, June 22.—William C. Whitney has sent the following to the press: "I find it necessary to make a public statement embodying my views of the situation, to correct misconceptions, and to save the time now occupied in answering questions. Far too much importance has been attached to my decision to go to the convention. I have practically been out of politics for four years, and there are now many eastern democrats who can do much more than I can for the party. I shall not assume any position of leadership. My decision to stay was simply based on the duty of every person who believes in the party, for its principles, to stand by and lend his aid and take his chances when a great crisis is upon it. There can be no question but that a great crisis is upon the democratic party. Fundamental differences of principle exist between the party, almost by sectional lines. The great question to my mind is whether the party meets in convention now as in 1860, with issues and differences that are for the moment irreconcilable. For the sake of the country and of public opinion in the south and west have been advocating, as the great remedy for existing ills, the free coinage of silver at 16 to 1, with or without the co-operation of other nations.

Would Disrupt the Party.

"It has come to be believed there quite generally and conscientiously. A large majority of the delegates to the coming democratic convention have been elected by the people for the purpose of incorporating that doctrine in the platform as the doctrine of the party. Our people, on the other hand, entirely disagree with these views, and believe, almost universally, that it will bring general ruin to business and prosperity of the country. It is feared a new doctrine when proposed to be incorporated into the platform of the national democracy. It is true that in no previous platform of the party can it be specifically found. Consequently the party obligations heretofore assumed oblige them to subscribe to it. Under these circumstances if the results of the democratic convention should be to establish as the issue of this campaign the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, independent of other nations, in the intensity of feeling likely to arise, it is to be seriously apprehended that a disruption of the democratic party might ensue. Certainly no substantial following could be secured for the doctrine among eastern democrats. They might not vote the republican ticket for other reasons (believing that republican party stands for other issues that are detri*mental to the country*), but the democrats in the east would not, in my opinion, vote for it.

Inopportune Time for Silver Agitation.

This movement purporting to be in the interest of silver, which would come at a most inopportune time, in my opinion. There has never been a time when the prospects of international action favorable to the joint standard were as promising as at the present moment. But an ill-advised, unsuccessful attempt here would discredit the cause the world over. What is the situation as regards this? From the discussion of the last twenty years it has come to pass that among the leading statesmen who are trained, recognized scientists upon monetary and economic questions, scarcely one is not at the present moment advocating the desirability of the joint standard and the advantage of the monetary difficulties of the world. This includes every professor engaged in teaching or lecturing on these subjects in the universities of Great Britain. They are agreed upon the desirability of it, and it is entirely practicable, if established and sustained by agreement of the principal commercial nations.

Would Discredit the Cause.

"Into this logg and now just to be successful struggle for the establishment of this standard it is proposed that we should intervene by assuming to establish it alone. Against this proposed action on our part these earnest believers in and workers for the cause strenuously protest. They say to us you cannot succeed, and your failure will discredit the cause. It is a question not what we wish, but what we are able to do. A strong man may undertake a task for his strength and break down. It cannot be denied that the feeling among the people is that this free coinage by the United States alone will not give us the gold and silver money at a parity with each other, which is the assumption which it is understood will bring us to silver monometallism and a change in our standard of values. And that change, it is believed, means immediate ruin to our industries and no permanent good to any one. This feeling is intense. Whether these differences can be reconciled, it is impossible to anticipate. If the delegates from this locality should go to convention and represent that the rank and file of the party would follow the lead of the southern brethern and vote for the free coinage of silver by the United States alone he would be misrepresenting the state of public opinion here. Whether it is so or not, it is considered a proposition to debase the existing standard of values. And the same feeling of indisposition to compromise with that matter for votes or anything else, is as active and dominant here in our party as it was found in the republican party when it bore down and overpowered the McKinley machine.

Would Mean Disastrous Defeat.

"Personally, it is my opinion, if the democratic party goes on to that platform at this time they will meet the most disastrous defeat that any party has ever had in this country. I understand it is honestly believed in, and the people think it will bring relief from their present troubles; but between now and election day it will be pretty thoroughly sifted and the people of this country will not face the disturbance of values, the loss of confidence, the general distress and ruin which would come to their business interests in such a change in their standard of value as would arise from such action.

Would Not Serve If Elected.

"It ought not to be necessary for me to say anything of a personal nature. I find myself, however, spoken of here and there as a candidate—not very seriously nor prominently, but sufficiently to attract attention if I should fail to notice it. It sometimes affects one's influence in cases like the present. I have no personal motive in entering this fight. I have said that I would not be a candidate. I will add, copying the emphatic language once used by the late Gen. Sherman, I think I remember it correctly—'I will not run a nomination would serve if elected.' I am not foolish enough to suppose that any eastern man could be nominated by the convention—much less that I could. If sympathies with the feeling in the south which has caused this uprising and will find its expression at Chicago, but with the principles which the uprising has brought forth and the issues being framed I entirely disagree.

M'KINLEY'S NOMINATION.

His Success the Cause of Delight and Fear in Germany.

Berlin, June 22.—The nomination of McKinley for the presidency by the republican convention held in St. Louis is hailed here with satisfaction so far as the security of a gold currency is concerned, but there are fears that his election means the enactment of a prohibitive tariff by the American congress. Several Berlin exporters who have recently visited the United States for the purpose of studying the situation with a view of devising means to give impetus to German trade have returned home with the conviction that no improvement can be expected within a measurable time. However, it is only German dress, colors and chemicals that are stationary. Kid gloves and paper goods find a ready market in the United States.

M'ADOO'S SUMMER CRUISE.

To Sail on the Dolphin To Inspect the Naval Militia Organizations.

Washington, June 22.—Assistant Secretary of the Navy McAdoo will leave Washington to-day on the United States dispatch boat Dolphin for an official inspection of the naval militia organizations on the Atlantic coast and the great lakes. He will be accompanied by Lieut. H. N. Nixon, in charge of naval militia affairs at the navy department, and William Howell, his private secretary. The Dolphin will proceed first to Philadelphia, stopping to-morrow on the way up the Delaware river at the Raritan Island navy yard to inquire into the condition of the monitors for which requests have been made from the naval militia. McAdoo will inspect Ajax and other government property now in the possession of the New Jersey militia at Camden, and will also meet and confer with the officers regarding the condition of the organization in that state. From Philadelphia the Dolphin will proceed to New York, where the assistant secretary will inspect the U. S. S. Portsmouth and the Eastern naval battalion of New Jersey militia. Hoboken will then proceed to Gardiner's bay to select a joint camp site for the naval brigades of New York, Connecticut and Rhode Island. The surgeon on board of the Dolphin will advise as to the sanitary condition of the camp, which is entirely practicable point Mr. McAdoo will go by train to Detroit, Mich., to witness the departure of the Michigan naval militia on board the U. S. S. Michigan, and will then go to Chicago to inspect the Illinois naval militia. Mr. McAdoo will leave Chicago in time to attend the camp at Gardiner's bay, whence he will return to Washington.

Chinese Coolies for Germany.

Berlin, June 22.—The Vorwaerts, the leading socialist newspaper, asserts that a number of Silesian landowners are entering into a combination with the object of obtaining coolies from China to replace native German laborers and the Russians and Poles now employed in farm and field work. According to the Vorwaerts a Berlin agency has arranged to supply the required number of coolies at a mark (about twenty-five cents) a day per head, all expenses included.

The Cretan Trouble.

Berlin, June 22.—According to the Magdeburg Zeitung the powers have addressed a collective note to Turkey advising an immediate meeting of the Cretan assembly, the revival of the Halepa treaty and the promise of the eventual autonomy of Crete under a system similar to that of Samos.

Winner of German Derby.

Berlin, June 23.—The German Derby, a race that is worth 70,000 marks to the winner, was run here yesterday and won by Trolhetta. Dandar was second and Ganaache third.

Chinese Emperor's Mother Dead.

Pekin, June 23.—The mother of the emperor of China died on Friday.

The Constitutionalist.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

The property of the Salvation Army in the United States is valued at nearly $5,000,000.

Franklin Murphy, of Essex county is now most prominently spoken of as the next Republican candidate for Governor.

It is said that ex-President Harrison refused a newspaper offer of $10,000 to go to St. Louis and write up his impressions of the Republican Convention.

People who have business with the Governor may expect a pleasant session for the next few days. A little Miss Griggs came to grace the home of the Governor on Saturday last.

Within a week Governor Griggs has been honored by the two leading educational institutions of New Jersey. Last week Princeton gave him the degree of LL. D., and yesterday Rutgers conferred the same title.

The report of the largely increased business, of the street railway company must of necessity mean that the more of the trolley we have the more of business Plainfield merchants will enjoy—an argument which The Press has always maintained.

So William C. Whitney is to stay his trip over the briny deep and use his endeavors in leading the Democracy to a safe and solid stand on the great money question. Even if it is a trifle vulgar, people will be inclined to lenient if we say, bully!

There will be no report by the Watchung avenue commissioners at the next City Council meeting, owing to the absence of W. T. Kirk, who is in St. Louis. The other two commissioners are ready, but Mr. Kirk has been unable to meet with them on account of business interests.

Attorney Genera John P. Stockton was yesterday appointed a member of the Equal Taxation Commission in place of former Senator George H. Large, who declined his appointment on the ground that his business engagements would not allow him to devote the time to the purposes of the commission. The appointment of Attorney-General Stockton changes the political aspect of the commission, the Democratic members now being in the majority. The commission will meet at the State House next Tuesday for organization.

The Republican papers are just now devoting much space to the joyful contemplation of reports of the prosperous condition of manufacturers abroad, especially in England. It is a remarkable fact that they derive satisfaction from either prosperity or adversity in Great Britain. If times are bad there the depression of business is due to free trade; if they are good it is because a reduced tariff lets the products of their mills and factories into the American market. Just now it is the latter point on which stress is laid.—Louisville Courier Journal.

Of all the representative men who will attend the annual convention of Chief Engineers to be held at Salt Lake City for several days next month, none would more thoroughly represent their interests than Chief T. O. Doane, of this city. Mr. Doane is a thorough, up-to-date fireman and his attendance at the convention would be of incalculable value to him, should the city decide to send him. Mr. Doane is entitled to a vacation and it seems as though it would be a good way for the city to show its appreciation of his services. It also seems that when such places as New Brunswick can send a representative, surely Plainfield ought to do as much.

The New York Evening Post thinks it knows why a Jewish Rabbi was selected to make the opening prayer for the representative body of the g. o. p. assembled at St. Louis and composed almost wholly of Christians, saying: "It is well-known, and is highly characteristic, that the choice of the Jewish Rabbi to deliver the opening prayer at the St. Louis convention was due to a wish not to offend the A. P. A. by employing a Catholic, nor the Catholics by employing a Protestant. In fact, the prayer was to be part of the general defensive humbug for which the convention has been held. We doubt if any similar body has met in the United States with less sincerity."

From this time forward William C. Whitney will continue to grow in popular favor as a candidate for President on the Democratic ticket. For several months there has been a quiet sentiment prevalent favoring Mr. Whitney's name for the honor, and that sentiment is bound to develop into a strong demand for him to accept the place. He hasn't said that he wants the nomination nor has he said he don't want it, but his act of yesterday in declaring that he intended to remain in the country and contribute his influence in having the party avoid a fatal financial declaration has served to popularize him at this time more than anything else. All things considered, he would be the strongest man that the party could put in the field.

When one considers the high tax rate in this city and the many modern improvements which the residents are beneficiaries of, and then views the condition of Dunellen in the same respect, the taxation in Plainfield does not seem so onerous after all. Here in Plainfield the tax rate is $2.32 on the $100, and we enjoy a new and valuable sewerage system, a superb fire department, an excellent police force, a creditable public library, and many other little municipal conveniences which are a source of satisfaction and pride to the Plainfielder. In Dunellen none of these improvements are maintained, and yet their tax rate is $2.31 on the $100—just one cent lower than that in this city. The comparison of rates of the two places is as follows:

Plainfield.		Dunellen.
County tax	.33	County tax	.66
State school	.39	State school	.30
Fire	.10	Borough	.66
Library	.06	Poor	.08
City	.90	Special school	.05
Poor	.12	Bond tax	.14
Free sch'l bonds	.32
	$2.32		$2.31

The Press believes that the Salvation Army is doing good and effective work in the Christian course of uplifting the world's unfortunate, but it is to be regreted that the location of the Army's barracks in this city is within one hundred feet of an old established church like Trinity Reformed, on West Second street, because the methods of worship of the two societies are so widely divergent. Last night the noise of the brass band, which has been a part of the Army services for some weeks past, was such an annoyance to the congregation of the church that all the windows on the North side of the edifice had to be closed before the words of Rev. Mr. Schenck's sermon could be heard. As a consequence the attendants were left to sweiter in the oppressive heat. The same disagreeable conditions for the church members exist during the two week day prayer meetings. It is to be deplored that the two religious societies should be in such close proximity to each other, since the accompanying noise of the Army service occasions such an unpleasant situation as marked the service at Trinity church last.

The nomination of Hobart for Vice-President means that here in New Jersey the Republicans will make a great effort to carry the State for their party than they have even in the last two years, when they were successful. The political deals and consequences which will depend on Hobart's success infect the party ranks all over the State. Something at stake in which they are directly interested in a political way will drive the leaders into making more of an aggressive fight to bring the State into the Republican column than would be the case if both candidates were removed from the close affiliation with the interests which a New Jersey man's candidacy makes possible. Ordinarily the Republicans in this State have been content to perform their duty to the party in the perfunctory way of casting a ballot for the standard-bearers, but this year they will not only vote but will bring into play every influence to get others to contribute their support to McKinley and Hobart. For years the New Jersey Republicans have been a nonentity in party councils, but now that they have at last gained some prestige it is a natural conclusion that they are going to apply every method of political warfare to maintain that potency, and since the two successive victories in State elections they have become intrenched sufficiently to possess a good fighting ground. New Jersey has never cast a Republican electoral vote, except in '72, and the result of the late spring elections showed that the Democrats are waking from the lethargy which has characterized them for the two years, during which their opponents gained the ascendancy. Therefore, there is no reason for Democrats to be other than optimistic of the result in this State. The party has been reorganized, new and fighting material has been infused into its ranks, and they will go into the campaign, if a rational and popular candidate like William C. Whitney is nominated, to make a successful fight.

To Kill Thistles

It is not necessary to kill all the seeds of the thistles in order to exterminate these undesirable weeds. You can so cultivate the ground that they will not thrive; and at last will disappear altogether. It might be better to kill the seeds, but we cannot do it. It would be the wisest course to destroy all the germs, or seeds, of consumption, could we do so. But this cannot be done. So we must keep the tissues of the lungs, the soil, in such a condition that the germs will not thrive the

Those who patronize the trolley cars at night should remember that the Front street cars carry a green light and the Somerset street cars a red light. A little care will save lots of trouble in this matter.

To Go to a New York Y. M. C. A.

John C. Whiting, of East Sixth street, who was formerly general secretary of the Westfield Y. M. C. A., has accepted a position as one of the assistant secretaries at the Twenty-third Street Branch of the New York Y. M. C. A. He will begin his duties July 1st.

A Little Daughter Dead.

Death entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Doane, of Nor wood avenue, last evening, and carried away their little nine-weeks-old daughter, Edith Laura Doane. The child had been ill for some time with heart disease, but the parents felt the loss very keenly Entertained on the Mountain.

Mr. and Mrs. John French entertained a party to dinner at the Mountain Park Inn Tuesday evening. The company consisted of Mr. Keep, of Boston; Mrs. Flanders, Greenville, S. C.; Miss Ida Yerkes, Miss Mary E. French and Ha.. y Yarnell.

Good Example for Others to Follow.

George W. Cole, who owns the livery establishment on the corner of Exchange alley and West Second street, has decided to macadamize his half of the roadway of the alley, so constructing it that the water will run to the centre of the alley and thus properly drain off. It would be the proper thing for all the property owners to join in the enterprise and have the alley graded and macadamized its entire length, and sidewalks built on each side.

Where Teachers Will Summer.

The majority of the teachers of the Irving School have decided where they will spend their summer vacation. Miss C. E. Reynolds will go to Geneva, N. Y. Miss E. S. Scott will spend a portion of her time at Gloucester, Mass., and the rest at home in Oswego, N. Y. Miss Alice Lee will enjoy part of her vacation at Gloversville, N. Y., and the remainder at her home in Sheffield, Mass. Miss Mary L. Allen goes to Central, N. Y., and Miss Genevieve M. Schute will spend her outing at Fredonia and Chautauqua in New York State. Miss Hattie Filmer will remain at Gloversville, N. Y., the entire time. The remaining five teachers have not yet decided where they will go.

Laid at Rest.

The funeral of Emily Anna Elizabeth Freeman, the three-year old daughter of Abram and Celia Freeman, took place yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence of her parents, 203 Prescott place. Rev. Dr. Yerkes, of the First Baptist church, conducted the services. The house was completely filled with relatives and friends. There was a large floral offering. The pallbearers were four little boys. Interment took place in Hillside cemetery.

CONVENTION SOCIABLE.

EFFORT MADE TO SEND A C. E. DELEGATE TO WASHINGTON.

Rev. A. I. Martine Talks on the Features That Will Mark the Convention and the Accommodations to Be Provided.

Black and yellow, the State Christian Endeavor colors, prevailed in the decorations at the "convention" sociable held in the lecture rooms of the Trinity Reformed church last evening by the Christian Endeavor Society of that church. The object of the sociable was to raise money to send a delegate to the Washington National convention, and a voluntary offering was made for that purpose.

The room was prettily draped with the black and yellow bunting and on the wall in the front of the room hung a large yellow banner with the motto "For Christ and the Church" in black letters. Beneath was a large C. E. of the prevailing colors, and on each side a similar banner with "Washington '96" on one and "Plainfield '96" on the other. Daisies and other flowers gave the room a pretty appearance. The decorating was done by the flower committee which is composed of Miss May Sheppard, chairman; Miss Josephine Kissam, Miss C. J. Smalley and W. F. Dunn.

The programme opened with a well-rendered violin solo by Martin A. Korff, accompanied by Prof. Carpenter. Pleasing vocal solos by Horace J. Martin and Fred Cutter followed, and then the programme concluded with another excellent violin solo by Mr. Korff.

Refreshments were then partaken of and then the visitors settled down to listen to a few remarks by Rev. J. A. Martine, of Dunellen, a member of the transportation committee, who gave an informal talk on the Washington convention. He told of the arrangements that have been made for the transportation of the New Jersey delegation and of their headquarters at Washington, the National Hotel. The cost of the trip, including board, lodging and everything, will amount to $19.91, and he urged all to go or at least be sure to send delegates, as the committee had been forced to promise a delegation of 330 from New Jersey to secure necessary low rates and privileges.

The social committee that arranged the sociable and served the refreshments was: Rev. H. W. Marshall, chairman, Miss Hattie Powelson, Miss Carrie Mehl, Mrs. E Weaver, Miss Ella Fenner.

A Distinguished Honor.

Superintendent Henry M. Maxson, of the Plainfield public schools, will spend his summer in Vermont. He will visit the State Summer School for Teachers of Vermont and is under engagement to lecture there on school management and arithmetic. The honor is quite a high one as only the most experienced are secured to instruct Vermont's teachers. The summer school is a great institution.

COUNTRY CLUB CHANGES.

Extensive Alterations Being Made in the Casino of the Clubhouse.

Quite extensive alterations are being made in the clubhouse of the Union County Country Club on West Seventh street. The gallery of the Casino is being changed into a ladies' room, all furnished and carpeted, instead of the regular rows of seats. It will be a place where the ladies can witness anything that is going on in the Casino. The greatest change will be in the restaurant which is to be located on the top floor, while a sort of roof-garden or open-air restaurant will be arranged over the rear wing. The rooms on the first floor now occupied by the restaurant will be fitted up to suit the ladies.

M. J. CASHIN TAKES A WIFE.

The Popular Plainfielder Married at Wappinger's Falls.

A very pretty wedding took place at St. Mary's church, Wappinger's Falls, N. Y., this morning, when Matthew J. Cashin, of this city, and Miss Elizabeth C. Crook, of Wappinger's Falls, were united in marriage by Rev. C. V. Mahoney, of that place. The ceremony was held at 10:30 o'clock, and was largely attended by the friends of the bride, who was becomingly gowned in white. Miss Mary Hanlon, of Wappinger's Falls, acted as bridesmaid, and Wm. E. Cashin, of Ellicott City, Maryland, brother of the groom, acted as best man. A wedding dinner at the home of the bride followed, and then the newly-married couple started off on their wedding journey to an unknown destination. Mr. and Mrs. Cashin will reside in North Plainfield on Prospect place.

PUBLIC SCHOOL WORK.

CREDITABLE EXHIBIT OF SCHOLARS OF THE BRYANT SCHOOL.

Evidence That the Pupils Are Made Self Reliant by the Method of Teaching Now in Vogue in Schools.

It has been said "We are builders, and each one should cut and carve as best he can," and to one who witnessed the public exhibition given at the Bryant School yesterday afternoon, the above words seem doubly true.

When it is considered that all of the classes are primary, there is only one thing to be said, and that is that the work is remarkably fine in every detail. Miss Shattuck, the principal, with a corps of ten teachers, who all thoroughly understand their duties, have worked hard and faithfully to produce the best results with the children. The average age of the scholars range from 4½ to 12 years. The work commences in the kindergarten department and the little ones are taught to make small things, chiefly in paper, with the idea of impressing indelibly upon their minds the fundamental principles upon which a grand and useful education can be secured. Miss Cadmus has charge of this work and the progress is noteworthy. From the above departments the scholars are taught more advanced principles and subjects.

A feature of the work is that the children are taught a great deal from objects. They are required to think, and from their thoughts they are required to place their impressions on paper. The study of language, arithmetic and geography is taught in a thorough, systematic manner and the evenness of the written work for primary grade is beyond a doubt the finest ever seen. One very amusing piece of work was performed by a boy five years old. It was a true representation of Barnum & Bailey's great circus parade held in this city. It certainly would do credit to a boy more advanced in years. Another feature is an illustration of two pumpkin pies. One is whole and the other is minus one quarter. This was the scholars idea of fixing the principle of whole and quarter quantities in his mind. It would be unfair to specify excellence in any one department, as there is a uniform excellence throughout that is commendable. Miss Shattuck and her corps of teachers deserve praise for their earnest efforts, and to the scholars is due great credit for their most excellent work. At 5 o'clock in the afternoon State Superintendent of Schools, Mr. Baxter, arrived and was received by a committee consisting of Florence Disbrow, May Anthony, Nellie Clarkson and Mary Line. Mr. Baxter was highly pleased with the exhibition, which fact was gratifying to the teachers and scholars.

MINERVA'S SECOND ANNIVERSARY.

Rathbone Sisters Pass the Two-Year Mark in Their History.

The second anniversary of Minerva Temple, No. 4, Rathbone Sisters, was celebrated last evening in K. of P. Hall, West Second street, in a most pleasant manner.

The following programme was rendered: Vocal solo, Mrs. A. D. Pope; recitation, Arthur Philo; vocal solo, Miss Pauline Philo; piano solo, Mr. Menzel; dialogue, "A Nobleman in Disgrace;" recitation, Miss Lillian Haberle; vocal solo, Eli Odam; recitation, Miss Pauline Philo; dialogue, "A Boy's Plot." The following subjects were represented in tableaux by the members: Spring, Miss Lillian Duckworth and Miss Pauline Philo; Friendship, Mrs. Haberle; Purity, Mrs. Thatcher; Night, Mrs. Bellis; Day, Mrs. Wakefield; Charity, Miss Mabel Ford, assisted by Miss Mabel Wakefield and Miss Lillian Duckworth; In Harvest Time, Miss Alice Kennedy; Rock of Ages, Mrs. Thatcher; Virgin and Time, Mrs. Bowman and Otto Kellar; Immortality, Mrs. Moore; Goddess of Liberty, Mrs. Boehm.

After the rendition of the above programme, Mrs. Boehm was presented by Mrs. Moore, on behalf of the Temple, with a handsome Past Chief jewel. Most Excellent Chief Mrs. W. J. Ford offered a few remarks in the good of the order. The committee were: Mrs. Boehm, Mrs. Thatcher, Mrs. Haberle, Mrs. Bowman, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Pope, Mrs. Stephens and Mrs. Bellis.

At the close the above committee served all present with delicious refreshments, and thus the second anniversary of this prosperous lodge was celebrated.

Not a Place for Consumptives.

Dr. Townsend, the specialist, who claims to have a cure for consumption, is no longer connected with the enterprise which recently assumed control of the Hotel Netherwood. The hotel is not to be made a sanitarium for the treatment of consumptive patients, but will be conducted principally as a summer resort for those who desire quietude and rest.

—An additional story is being built on Mrs. L. A. Smalley's house on East Front street, and other improvements are also being made.

Crop and Weather Conditions.

The following is Weather Observer John Neagle's report of the condition of crops this week: An abundance of rain, in many places corn fields were flooded; hay cutting commenced; crops in general have improved. The rainfall for twenty-one days is 2.23 above the average for that time for the last five Junes. Average temperature, 67.8. Rainfall, 1.76 inch.

A Fine Ad.

The entire New Jersey delegation to the recent Republican convention, including Hobart, were a grand walking advertisement for the Wheel Company. Everyone wore a Jersey button, which was quite appropriate with the large "Jersey" across the middle.

Escaped Being Struck By a Blue Flyer.

Peter Sneiderwind, one of the boilermen of drill engine, No. 30, stood not near a Royal Blue line flyer as it rushed through this city this morning, with the result that he was knocked down by the suction of air. He escaped injury.

Fell Through a Hatchway.

Gilbert Murray, a driver for Frank Day, accidentally fell through an opening in the hay loft in the West Sixth street stables yesterday afternoon and severely sprained his right ankle. Dr. Simpson is the attending physician.

Charged With Robbery.

Caros Aguilre, aged eighteen, of Westfield, was committed to the Union County Jail yesterday on the charge of breaking into and robbing the store of his uncle, William Gale, of that place. His uncle made the complaint against him.

Customer— I want a remedy for catarrh.

Drug Clerk—All right, sir. Here's a blood tonic that is advertised to build up the constitution.

Customer—Young man, do you think I'm going to dose myself with a blood tonic for months, just on the chance of it doing me some good? Not much! I want immediate relief; besides, catarrh is a local affection, and no tonic or blood purifier ever made can cure it. Here's 50 cents. Let me have Ely's Cream Balm. It's the only thing I know of to cure catarrh.

SHETLAND PONIES.

D. H. Nash's Herd Contains Some of the Best Stock in the Country.

On the broad acres of Duane H. Nash's farm in Millington, N. J., are quartered a herd of Shetland ponies that are the admiration of hundreds of visitors each year. Mr. Nash has almost a National reputation with fanciers of this breed of the equine, and is known only as man of reliability Whatever he says about an animal that he sells can be depended upon. His experience of many years in handling the little ponies has especially qualified him to forsee their good points. Millington is six and a quarter miles from Plainfield in a Northwesterly direction, and Mr. Dean states to the Constitutionalist that visitors are always welcome to inspect his stock. Many Plainfielders no doubt will take advantage of the offer during the summer, as it is a delightful carriage ride for an afternoon.

Of the animals of Shetland Islands the horses and the sheep are the most useful and valuable. The Shetland horse is the smallest of the equine race, scarcely largely than its prototype existing ages ago, when the horse was a five-toed creature not larger than the smallest sheep of the present time. This miniature size of the animal is the effect of the climate and the result of it on the food naturally provided for the animal, by reason of that amazing fitness of things which we find prevailing throughout the universe.

So the small sheep of Shetland yield the finest, softest, and warmest wool, of which the noted Shetland shawls are made; and the ponies of the islands —little horses of the most graceful figure—miniature Arabs they might seem, of such perfect build and form and action—are highly valued for their uniqueness as well as for their special usefulness. There is an aristocracy, and a condition of low degree, too, of these little animals, the finer bred ones being much more highly valued on account of their style and action due to inheritance through selected parents during many years; while the plebeian of the race are used for working in the English coal mines, down in—to them—eternal darkness and blackness; for they never rise to the surface again after going down, but live and die in this ignoble condition.

It has been said that these animals have a special usefulness. And this is the fact, and it is one that gives to the Shetland pony a distinct and pleasing significance. For it is the child's pony—this essentially. It has every requisite and desirable character for this use. It is small, ranging from some thirty to forty-five inches in height. They are sturdy little fellows, solidly built, with a small, fine head, round body, graceful limbs, and action of them; they are exceedingly hardy, never sick or ailing, never off their feed, whether it be the best the stable affords, or the heather on the mountain side, or the solidly made hay bale which they may be seen making a hearty dinner of when newly landed from their ocean voyage.

This is a good quality, but more than this may be said of them. Docility and good temper are the very first requisites of any animal for the use indicated. It has been the habit of this long bred race, as it is of the equally so Arabian, to have been trained to be the friend and companion of its keeper. Thus its docility and submisiveness are natural characteristics, which hard usage even does not obliterate from its disposition.

Of course, this applies only to the pure breds, for there are crosses that have been made with other ponies, which have not had the long domestic breeding and training of the real "Shelite." So it is indispensable that one must be sure he is getting a strictly pure bred ponp when he is about to give the most valued and cherished present to his children.

Stamina is one of the requisites of any horse. One cannot have patience with a horse that is on the sick list whenever it gets—what often happens —a little too much feed, or does a little extra work. These ponies have been trained, and necessarily the breeding of the pure race perpetuates this training, to go on a steady trot covering 50 or 60 miles a day, while many of them that have been trained to speed will drive a mile in four minutes with a light carriage and driver behind, and pairs trained to speed have been known to take a phaeton two miles in a hurry to catch a train in eight minutes, with two in the carriage.

Nerve is another invaluable characteristic of these ponies. They are fearless even when first introduced to the blasing locomotive. They look amazed but exhibit no fear. They consequently do not shy on the road, and in short there is perfect safety in trusting a child on one of them after the first introduction between the rider and the pony.

*Beauty in such an animal goes with*out saying. It is indispensable for its use. And these little horses, perfect in form, graceful in build, so compact, without the least heaviness, clean-limbed, smooth and neat in every way, with a bright, intelligent eye, every feature expressing lightness, agility, strength and gracefulness, take, as it is said, on sight, and the little beauty is fallen into love with by the child at once.

J. E. MARTINE APPEALS TO WHITNEY.

The Plainfielder Urges Him to Stand For Democracy's Success.

James E. Martine yesterday wrote the following letter to Wm.C. Whitney anent the latter's announcement that he would not accept the Democratic Presidential nomination:

Cedar Brook Farm,
Plainfield, N. J., June 23d, 1896.

Hon. Wm. C. Whitney:

My Dear Sir:—I have read with much profit and pleasure your letter in the New York papers of this date. It must be productive of much good to our party and will tend to harmonize opinions that would seem to be at wide variance.

The Democratic party, of which I have been a life-long and active member, owes to you a debt of gratitude, but to use your own words, "almost any man" is the choice of Democrats for the sake of the party and they would cheerfully accept him. This feeling unanimous party will ask of you. The grand old party will ask of you lead on in the contest that is put at hand. The welfare of our country demands it, our party will ask it. A patriot cannot hesitate. You will not refuse.

Very respectfully,
J. E. Martine.

Somerset st., North Plainfield.

If you have not engaged your work I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to do up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ none but first-class workmen, and am able to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work and look upon business in this light, that good work and good material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertise for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe in warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

DINED BY GOV. MORTON.

Genuine New York Commissioners Entertained at Elfreide.

Rhinecliff, N. Y., June 20.—Gov. Morton entertained at dinner last night at his Elfreide house the members of the Greater New York commission. The dinner was intended as a social affair, Gov. Morton desiring to bring the commissioners together in a pleasant way and introduce those who were not already acquainted. Just before the dinner was served it was discovered that there were thirteen in the party and the famous "hoodoo" number alarmed the superstitious guests. Gov. Morton, however, came to the rescue and announced that his daughters, the Misses Mary, Alice and Helen, would grace the banquet board with their presence. Invitations for the dinner had been extended to the fifteen commissioners. Andrew H. Green, who has been called the "Father of Greater New York," was unable to be present, owing to his serious illness. Seth Low sent word that a sprained knee still kept him in-doors, and Mayor Wurster of Brooklyn said illness would prevent his attendance. Gov. Morton sat at the head of the table, and at his right hand sat Mayor Strong of New York, and at the left Mayor Gleason of Long Island City. After the dinner the commissioners informally discussed the Greater New York prospects. It was the opinion of those present that there was none too much time in which to complete the labors of the commission and it was agreed that a meeting should be held at the earliest possible moment. Gov. Morton showed his guests about the estate before the dinner. Mayor Gleason was particularly delighted with the place. Standing on the porch and looking over the beautiful scenery he turned to Mayor Strong and said: "Think of a man wanting to be president with such a grand place to live. Oh, sure a man's happier here than in the White House."

FIRE BRIGADE.

The International Tournament Successfully Opened in London.

London, June 20.—The International Fire Brigade tournament was successfully opened at the Royal Agricultural hall, London, last evening. Chiefs Hosmer of Manchester, England and Kion of Hartford, Conn., were present on behalf of the International Fire Engineers' association of the United States, and representatives from the New York, Illinois, Michigan and Florida associations were also in attendance. Messrs. Atchison and Litchfield represented respectively the Hamilton, Ont., and the New York fire underwriters. Capt. Simonds of London delivered an address of welcome to the visitors, to which Mr. Litchfield responded. Chief Beasley introduced Messrs. Benoit and Stevenson of Canada to Capt. Simonds, and the Canadian team drove around the arena and were heartily cheered. Mr. Benoit in conversation with a representative of the United Press expressed himself as greatly pleased with the reception accorded the visiting delegations. He also said he considered the British department's steamer and manual work excellent, but did not think their ladder work compared favorably with that of the Canadians.

Milwaukee Car Strike Declared Off.

Milwaukee, Wis., June 20.—The street railway boycott is at an end. It was formally declared off last night by President James Flint of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes; that is, it was declared off so far as it was within his power to do so. He said this morning that his organization has discontinued running busses and no longer asks the public to refrain from riding in the cars.

NEW WAY OF TEACHING

FRANKLIN SCHOOL PUPILS EXHIBIT THEIR WORK.

The Details of the Work Showed Aptitude on the Part of the Scholars and Credit to the Instructors.

The education of the young is one of the most important duties of the country and Plainfield is especially fortunate in that direction. Her schools have been famous throughout the country on account of their thoroughness and completeness, but while many of the citizens of Plainfield have heard about the school system, there are very few comparatively that really understand the details of the work. Many think that their children are taught the same as they were twenty or thirty years ago, but a visit to the exhibition of the work of the pupils in the lower grades, held in the Franklin School building yesterday afternoon and this afternoon, would soon convince them to the contrary.

The exhibition was a very interesting and showed the work of the children from the Kindergarten up to within three grades from the High School. It was not an exhibit from all of the Plainfield schools, but just the grades in the Franklin building.

Temporary tables were arranged around the sides of the assembly hall and on these and fastened to the walls was the work of the children.

One long table was devoted to the kindergarten, and the pharaphernalia and materials used by the teachers were displayed, as well as the little mats, paper figures and embroidery work of the children. The work of the different grades was placed side by side, and gradually changed in character. The writing books of the youngsters were shown the vertical hand, the latest method being used. The rudiments of science, of a very simple sort, are taught in the lowest classes, and the children told something of the common birds and flowers of this vicinity.

The first compositions of the pupils, usually written about a picture pasted on the top of the paper, were, many of them, very original. The drawings of some of the children were quite amusing, especially several of the circus and the circus parade.

Much of the work was exhibited without revision or correction, so that the real work of the children could be seen. There was one change from the old method of teaching that was very apparent and very pleasing, and that was the much more interesting way in which the lessons were presented. From the work of the children it was easy to see that they were getting an intelligent idea of some of the principles of science.

As yesterday was the anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill, the hall was prettily arranged with American flags. Early in the afternoon, a chorus of young girls sang patriotic songs. Miss Bullock, the very capable principal, and her efficient corps of teachers, were present, and received the guests, of whom quite a number came despite the rain. Lemonade was served by the following pupils: The Misses Murray, Dunham, DeLong, Burr and Evans. The exhibition will be continued this afternoon.

MISS MANNING WEDDED.

A Former Plainfield Girl Becomes the Wife of a Hartford Man.

Cards have been issued announcing the marriage of Miss Laura B. Manning, of Elizabeth, to Howard W. Smith, of Hartford, Conn., Wednesday, June 17th. The marriage took place at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Brown, of Elizabeth. Miss Manning is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Manning, deceased, who formerly resided on West Front street. Her grandfather, Jacob Manning, was a prominent citizen of this city, holding the positions of the first President of the First National Bank and Postmaster from 1853 to 1861.

HER RELIGION A BAR.

Alleged Reason for the Failure of a School Board to Reappoint a Catholic Teacher.

The announcement that the Bound Brook Board of Education has rejected the application of Miss O'Connor for reappointment in the faculty of teachers in the public school has caused a sensation. It had been expected for some time that Principal Hoffman and his full corps of assistants would be retained. But the Board met and by a vote of three to five rejected Miss O'Connor.

Rev. B. T. O'Connell, rector of St. Joseph's church, was visibly excited, but spoke of the incident with sorrow and regret. "Was it because of her religion?" he asked pointedly.

Popular opinion replies in the affirmative. Miss O'Connor is a Roman Catholic. She was born and reared in Bound Brook, and took up teaching as her profession. For several years she taught in nearby towns, and went to Bound Brook at the solicitation of those who knew her experience and abilities. Her faithfulness and care have earned her general praise, and no teacher in Bound Brook is credited with maintaining a higher standard.

SIX UP BEFORE THE CADI

TWO CASES OF WHERE CULPRITS COULDN'T CURB THE TONGUE.

One Woman Objected to Being Called "An Old Thing," and Her Tormentor Was Warned to Keep a Quiet Tongue.

There was the usual Saturday morning batch of cases in the city court this morning but the humid weather made everyone in a hurry to get through with the cases and depart. There were three adjournments.

The case of James McCann, who attempted to shoot his brother several weeks ago, as was told at the time in The Press, came up before City Judge DeMeza and was adjourned two weeks.

The case against Chas. Fry, for using profane and indecent language, was adjourned for one week, as was that of Chas. Saunaker, who was charged with fighting and using indecent language.

Frank Buck, a man with a family, indulged in too much fiery liquor last evening and was arrested on Richmond street for being drunk and disorderly. Sentence was suspended on him.

Thomas Marley and James White were arraigned on the charge of quarrelling and fighting on the morning of June 5th. The story told by the two combatants was substantially the same. White was walking along near Goff's saloon on Liberty street and looked at Marley who passed by.

"What the —— are you looking at?" growled Marley.

"You're a —— big bluff," was White's reply. Next morning they met near the same place and Marley punched White. They clinched, and John Goff, hearing the sound of the scuffle, appeared and separated them; City Judge DeMeza decided there was no case against White and dismissed him, while he fined Marley $3.

Maggie Webster, a colored maiden, was ordered to appear at 9 o'clock this morning to answer to the charge of using indecent language, but it was 9:45 before she entered the courtroom, fanning herself.

"I've been looking for the court, but I couldn't find it," she explained in answer to the Judge's query. The complaint was made by Mrs. Maggie Connett, who charged Maggie with remarking to Mrs. Connett's sister-in-law on June 16th, "What do you want to put that thing for; she's nothing but an old thing." and then Mrs. Connett told the Judge "I don't care to go to church any more because she makes so much fun of me."

While the sister-in law was on the stand testifying that she had heard no insulting remarks, Mrs. Connett confided to Roundsman Frederickson and Will DeMeza, to the latter's evident amusement, all her troubles, and she wanted to know why it was that she couldn't talk when she wanted to.

Maggie Webster claimed that it was all untrue, but the Judge differed with her and found her guilty. He suspended sentence on her with a warning. As Maggie reached the sidewalk after the trial she was heard to remark: "I'll catch her at church next Sunday."

MYSTERY OF DARK LANE.

Mission Board Secures the Simmens House and Will Educate Chinese Boys.

On the old road just south of Ash Brook, near Westfield, there is a long, narrow section of highway which has long been known as Dark lane. For nearly a mile the road is shaded on either side by thick woods. Then there is a clearing, and beyond that the forks where the Metuchen district begins. In the clearing is the Simmens house, built several years ago and well appointed and commodious.

A month ago a company of strangers came on and visited the house with a carpenter, who was engaged to put it in order. Except that the strangers appeared to be clergymen nothing was known of them, and in all of the surrounding country there was much speculation as to the tenants. Last week the repairs were completed and today the villagers and country people had their curiosity intensified when two of the gentlemen returned, accompanied by a Chinaman and twenty-eight Chinese lads.

It transpired that the Chinaman is the Rev. Hui Kiu, a Chinese Presbyterian clergyman, who was educated in Cincinnati. His companions, who have taken the house are from the Presbyterian Board of Missions, and the children are the sons of wealthy mandarins who have sent them here to be educated. The parents bear the expense, and as they are all Christians, it is their purpose that the boys be educated to become missionaries. During the summer they will reside here together, under the tuition of Rev. Kiu, who will be assisted by teachers furnished by the Board. In October they will be entered in schools and academies and fitted for college.

The Simmens place was selected at the instance of Miss Carolyn McFarlan, of New York, who, when visiting her sister, Mrs. Charles Ayres, of Metuchen, had seen the house, and considered its secluded location as rendering it appropriate for the purpose for which it is taken. The project is an experiment on the part of the Board and has enlisted much attention.

FREE SILVER'S FIGHT

Democrats Getting Ready for the Chicago Convention.

WHITE METAL MEN LEAD IN OHIO

Will Control the State Convention Which Meets To-morrow — Administration Democrats Hard at Work for the Gold Standard.

Columbus, O., June 22.—The democratic state convention meets here tomorrow, and the entire fight centres on the currency, with the silver men largely in the majority. Four-fifths of the delegates are already selected, and there are few gold men among them. The convention will no doubt stand for free silver, although the action of Cuyahoga, Lucas, Montgomery, and Butler counties, in declaring for the single gold standard, has created a clueless around which opposition of goodly proportions may gather. John A. McMahon of Dayton, who was selected for temporary chairman, has declined on account of the evident free-silver tone in the convention. He is in favor of maintaining the present gold standard. The state central committee will choose another person to take his place. Probably forty out of the forty-six delegates from this state to the democratic national convention will be for free silver.

To Steer the Silver Men Today.

Washington, June 22.—Administration democrats here are co-operating with W. C. Whitney of New York in his effort to stem what is termed the silver tide and to change the apparent silver complexion of the Chicago convention into one for gold. The first practical move in that direction made here has been to secure a list of all the delegates-elect to the Chicago convention. More than two-thirds of these has been chosen. All the delegates chosen who are either instructed for silver, or are believed to incline to silver, will at once be communicated with personally. These delegates for weeks past have been receiving "sound money" literature from New York and Boston reform clubs, but they will, it is asserted, be solicited by letter. Efforts will also be made to ascertain their standing in their communities and what influence, if any, of a local or national nature can be brought to bear on them to change their views on the money question. To this end prominent bankers and merchants in the communities in which the delegates reside will be written to for information and when in hand this information will be used to secure that can be brought from their fellow democrats locally or nationally will be utilized in the direction of the well known views of the administration.

To Battle for the Gold Standard.

Albany, June 22.—At the assembly district conventions here Saturday the following resolution was adopted, resolved that the delegates from this assembly district be and they are hereby instructed to use all honorable means to secure an unequivocal declaration in the democratic platform to be adopted at Saratoga in favor of sound money and the election of delegates to Chicago who will be in favor of the maintenance of the gold standard in the national democratic platform."

Ex-Governor Campbell Called Down.

Washington, June 22.—Ex-Governor Campbell of Ohio left here yesterday afternoon for his home. Near the close of his speech Saturday night, when he declared for the money of the constitution, he was interrupted by cries from the audience—"No straddle, Jim. Say 16 to 1. Now's your chance"—but he made no response.

Drowned in an Old Mine.

Plattsburgh, N. Y., June 22.—Geo. Haggerty, aged 14 years, son of M. Haggrefty, who has been hall keeper at Clinton prison, Dannemora, for thirty years, was drowned yesterday in the old iron mine in the rear of the prison. Young Haggerty, in company with several other lads, was wading in the water at the edge of the mine and stepped off the ledge and disappeared from sight in 300 feet of water. The body was recovered.

In Honor of Diaz's Reconciliation.

City of Mexico, June 22.—There was a great demonstration here yesterday in honor of President Diaz, who has been renominated for a fifth term. There was a procession of about 8,000 persons, including 4,000 full-blooded Indians from neighboring villages, carrying banners and flags. The bells were ringing all day, and last night there was a display of fireworks.

Allegheny College Commencement.

Meadville, Pa., June 22.—The annual baccalaureate sermon of Allegheny was preached by President W. H. Crawford. The college love feast occured in the afternoon and the evening Dr. S. D. Huntington of Erie, Pa., preached the annual Christian association sermon. The commencement exercises will be held Thursday.

Off on a Fishing Trip.

Washington, June 22.—The president last night, accompanied by Secretary Carlisle and Dr. O'Reilly, left this city for a brief fishing cruise along the south Atlantic coast. The party will probably spend two or three days on this excursion.

Death of Levi Putnam.

Meadville, Pa., June 22.—Commissioner Levi Putnam of this county died in Spencer hospital in this city Saturday night after a brief illness. He was 63 years old and a lineal descendant of Israel Putnam of revolutionary fame.

Berlin, June 22.—Herr Rosenthal, the pianist, will begin a professional tour of the United States on Nov. 10

M'KINLEY'S CABINET.

Politicians Already Discussing Its Possible Personnel.

St. Louis, June 22.—The few republican politicians who had not left the city last evening discussed the personnel of McKinley's cabinet, in the event of his election. As a vigorous foreign policy will be one of the features of Mr. McKinley's administration he would manifestly give much care to the selection of his secretary of state. Gen. Benjamin F. Tracy of New York, who was President Harrison's secretary of the navy, is well regarded by some of the men whose influence with McKinley will be very great. Gen. Tracy is a brilliant lawyer, and it was an open secret in Washington that at the time of the Chilian complications, growing out of the Baltimore incident, Gen. Tracy was the president's trusted adviser on all the changing phases of that very embarrassing problem. There is also talk of Senator Sherman for the place, but the objection is made that the work of that department under a new administration is of a too routine character for a man of Mr. Sherman's age, notwithstanding he is still in the full possession of all his mental and physical faculties. Henry Clay Evans of Tennessee will, it is thought, be tendered the postoffice portfolio in the event of his failure next autumn to be elected governor of Tennessee. The McKinley managers also think well of Senator Mitchell of Oregon, who has been a staunch supporter of their champion, and it is freely predicted that he will be tendered a cabinet post, presumably that of attorney-general, if the legislature of his state should fail to return him next winter to the senate.

FUNERAL OF H. J. SMITH.

One of the Most Impressive Ever Held in This Section.

The funeral services of the late Harrison J. Smith, of Washingtonville, were held Thursday afternoon from the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel, of that place. It was the largest and most impressive funeral ever held in that section, there being fully four hundred people present. Rev. E. M. Rodman, of Grace P. E. church and a member of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 20, F. and A., officiated, and used the full Episcopal service. Mr. Rodman spoke about twenty minutes. He said that he was not personally acquainted with the departed, but felt constrained to speak concerning him. He spoke of the many qualities of the departed, and eulogized him in the highest terms for his true worth.

A quartette consisting of Miss Glen, soprano; Miss Messersmith, alto; B. T. Barnes, basso, and Robert Clark, tenor, sang: "Jesus is Tenderly Calling," "While With Us," and "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

While the funeral cortege was entering the chapel, Mr. Rogers, the organist of Metropolitan Lodge, F. and A. M., of New York, of which the decedent was a member, rendered on the organ "Miserere," from Il Troctore, and while the friends were viewing the remains an improvised funeral march was rendered.

Among the large assemblage of people present was the staff of the deceased from the six stations of the Edison Works in New York of which he had charge.

Dr. Adams, William Sebring, Stephen Beebhing, John Lewis, Dr. Pocock and William Van Sickle, of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. & A. M., acted as escort and pall-bearers from the chapel to Scottish Rite Hall, New York, where the Masonic funeral service was conducted by the lodge of which Mr. Smith was a member.

The floral display represented beauty and grandeur. It would be impossible to give a description of the different pieces. Among them was a large floral chair and several large wreaths and pillows combined. The display at the chapel, which no doubt has never been surpassed, represented $350, and an $800 display was contributed by friends at the funeral service in New York.

The interment was at Elmira, N. Y.

ALL DEMOCRATS ENTHUSIASTIC.

Jersey Party Leaders Express Their Approval of Whitney's Name.

Senator James Smith, Jr., of New Jersey, has arranged to visit Mr. Whitney. It was said by one of his closest friends that he would visit Mr. Whitney in New York today and consult with several other Democratic leaders on the situation.

Allan L. McDermott, former Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, who is at Belmar, got out of his bed at midnight last night to express his delight at Mr. Whitney's decision to stay and fight.

"I consider Mr. Whitney one of our foremost statesmen," said he; "and his opinion on economic questions will have great weight at Chicago in enabling us to obtain a sound platform, without which we will have not the slightest show of success.

"The Democratic party cannot win on a platform for unlimited coinage, at the rate of 16 to 1, or any other rate that proposes to legislate value in the metal. When the convention comes to deal with this question Mr. Whitney will be of great assistance in teaching the delegates that suicide is a sin."

E. F. C. Young, of Jersey City, a member of the Democratic State Committee of New Jersey, is pleased with ex-Secretary Whitney's action in deferring his trip to Europe to lead the fight in Chicago for honest money.

"Mr. Whitney's presence in Chicago," said Mr. Young, "will encourage the advocates of the gold standard, and I shouldn't be surprised if he succeeds in his efforts to have the convention declare in favor of honest money."

TRIAL OF EDITOR REINER.

The trial of Dr. John Max Reiner for criminal libel against Mayor John C. Rankin, Jr., was adjourned this morning until the October term.

The witnesses were much perturbed in spirit, and several would like to have important business calling them out of the State. The Evening Herald, of Elizabeth, of which Dr. Reiner is the alleged editor, has continued its attacks on Mr. Rankin, Mayor of Elizabeth, ever since the indictment of the editor. Mayor Rankin has engaged Counselor R. V. Lindabury to conduct his case. Samuel Kalisch, of Newark, will represent Editor Reiner. The trial is before Judge McCormick in the Union County Criminal Court.

It is said that there was a conference of the witnesses who were called by the defendant at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and that they decided to tell the whole story of various alleged violations of law by the Mayor and on which Editor Reiner based his attacks.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria," and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

N. P. SCHOOL PRINCIPAL

HIS NAME IS ANDREW D. WARDE AND HE COMES WELL RECOMMENDED.

He Will Personally Teach Some of the Higher Branches and Will Exercise a Careful Supervision Over the School.

The newly elected principal of the North Plainfield public school has accepted the position tendered and will enter upon the duties of his position at the opening of the Fall term.

His name is Dr. Andrew D. Warde, of Otsego county, New York. Dr. Warde is just in the prime of life, forty-two years of age, and comes with the highest of recommendations from the school authorities of New York at Albany, as well as from each place where he has taught. They all represent him to be a hard-working, up-to-date, practical, successful principal. The North Plainfield school board expect to co-operate with him to make the school fully equal, in all departments, to any school of its grade elsewhere. He will personally teach some of the higher branches, and friends of the school are hoping he will see the way clear to introduce not only the kindergarten features for the primary scholars, but a business course for such boys as must leave off study entirely at or near graduation. In both these as well as other practical matters, the Doctor is a staunch believer

Dr. Warde's parents are from New England. He spent three years in study at Hartwick Seminary, N. Y.; took the State Normal School course at Albany; graduated from McKendree College, Illinois; took the full classical course at the Albany State Normal College, and has taught, in all, fifteen years; seven of them in Michigan. He is a writer for the educational papers and magazines and has lectured, but spends almost his whole time in actual educational work, on which subject he is an enthusiast. He received the degree of Ph. D. from McKendree College.

WEDDING WASN'T POSTPONED.

Bride's Uncle Attempted Suicide, But the Marriage Occurred on the Date Set.

The attempted suicide of Paul Reusch four weeks ago was supposed to have postponed the wedding of his favorite niece, Miss Barbara Kratzel, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Kratzel, and one of the best known young women in Dunellen society.

But Miss Kratzel had a will of her own, and on the 21st of May, the day set for the wedding, she and her fiance, Henry Weidenhaupt, Jr., of Perth Amboy, went to Westfield and were united in marriage by the Presbyterian minister, Rev. N. W. Cadwell.

Mr. Reusch having so far recovered as to be able to hear the news of the happy event, the announcement of the wedding was made. There is no little surprise among the young people, as it was anticipated that after Mr. Reusch passed the crisis there would be a grand wedding in Dunellen.

Crop Reports.

Weather Observer John Neagle has the following crop report in this week's weather bulletin:

The fine showers of the 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th and the splendid rain on the 14th have improved all crops very much; wheat and rye in head and filling nicely; potatoes in blossom; corn, oats and all garden truck doing well; blackberries very promising. Average temperature, 79 degrees. Rainfall, 2.80 inches.

HOLY CROSS FESTIVAL.

AN ANNUAL CHURCH EVENT ACROSS THE BROOK.

The Rooms Presented a Cheerful View as Decorated With Daisies—Pleasant Faces and Ways Made all Happy.

An annual event of real pleasure is the Sunday-school festival of Holy Cross church. This affair was held in the Sunday school rooms Wednesday, and was thoroughly successful. The rooms presented a cheerful picture, and all who entered were made to feel perfectly at home by those in charge. Tables arranged conveniently about the main room were inviting to all and those who took seats were carefully looked after. A choice collection of daisies formed the principal decorations and they were neatly arranged to the best advantage.

The affair was liberally patronized during the evening by the members of the church, Sunday-school and friends. The committee in charge was Miss Murphy, Miss Georgia Fountain and Miss Agnes Smith. At the candy table where the most delicious home-made sweets were on sale, Miss Rachel Emmons, Miss Fanny Weston and Miss Georgia Fountain, presided and had no trouble in disposing of the candy In a pleasant corner the lemonade well formed an attraction where Miss Helen Warman dispensed the refreshing beverage. Mrs. Mrs. Barker, Mrs. Turrill, Mrs. Brett and Mrs. Rogers, of Georgia, had charge of the refreshments, while the Misses Ida Fountain, Lena Bremmer, Carrie Drake, Lizzie Jessup, Anna Fiering and Eva Perry were efficient waitresses. Horsley Barker and B. B. Western, who were always on hand, assisted materially in making the affair a success. Rev. T. Logan Murphy pleased the little ones by exhibiting a music box from which all the popular airs were rendered to the delight of the boys and girls. The Sunday-school will receive a neat little sum as a result of the affair.

THEIR LOVE FOUND A WAY.

Foiled in the First Attempt a School-girl Again Elopes and Is Married.

Miss Carrie Seager, the sixteen-year-old daughter of Isaac Seager, and John Davis, a plumber, of Westfield, eloped last Sunday and were quietly married in New York.

Mr. Seager is a man of some property, a carpenter, and a steward in the Methodist church. His daughter, Carrie, a pretty girl, met Davis last winter, and an engagement followed. The family exerted itself to break it off, but to no purpose. The climax was reached when one Sunday afternoon, some time ago, the couple started to leave town together, and were overtaken at the station by Mrs. Seager, who took her daughter back home again.

Since then the girl had been under constant surveillance, but last Sunday she and Davis met, and went to New York and were married. The affair has occasioned much comment, as the bride is but a mere school girl. Her parents have resigned themselves to the inevitable, and will forgive them.

—The Mt. Pleasant chapel, which has just been completed, will be dedicated next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all to be present.

which would not work, according to the motorman's statement.

The procession of trolley cars then returned to the starting point where Chandler M. Biker, of the company, joined the party and took in the Netherwood branch after which the cars came back to North and Watchung avenues, where the party dispersed in all directions.

Congratulations were heaped upon Superintendent Adelmann for the excellent showing the cars made and the fine condition of the road as well as his kindness in arranging the "trolley party."

Among those who spent their afternoon on the cars, beside those already mentioned, were:

Dr. Stephenson, Counsellor W. K. McClure, Directors Wm. Brown and J. T. Fritts, Lewis Carman Dunn, Whitfield Brown, William H. Brower, ex-Councilman Elmore D. Moffett, Frank Linke, Richard Boyce, ex-Councilman Leonard Spangenburg, "The Father of the Trolley," L. W. Randolph, Judge J. E. Mosher, E. H. OFFICERS INSTALLED.

New Leaders of the Bricklayers' Union Take Their Places.

The Bricklayers' and Masons' Protective Union, No. 14, met in their Wednesday night, and after the regular routine of business, the following officers were installed by Deputy Randolph Marsh, for the coming year: President, Theodore Mason; vice-president, Andrew Cox; financial secretary, John Dents; recording secretary, William McCarty; corresponding secretary, Peter McNary; treasurer, William Moore; financial committee, William Smith, John Lude, Samuel Hand.

After adjournment, they went to 214 Park avenue, where a host of good things were served. After enjoying themselves for two hours at refreshments, singing and telling stories the evening was pleasantly spent.

Woman Became Suddenly Insane.

Annie Montgomery, aged twenty-five, who has been residing at the home of Alexander Hill at Bernardsville, became violently insane Sunday, and the other members of the family were compelled to flee for their lives. The woman was finally quieted and was sent to jail at Somerville to await the action of the court.

Bret Harte's New Story.

Plainfielder's will be interested to hear Bret Harte's new story is called "The Indiscretion of Elsbeth," and turns upon a curious episode. The hero of the romance is an American and he becomes enamored of a German princess. This is plausible enough until it is learned the princess appears to the lover in the guise of a dairyman. The tale will appear immediately in an American periodical.

Granted a Divorce.

Chancellor McGill has issued a decree of divorce to Ida M. Babbitt, who brought suit against her husband, George E. Babbitt, some time ago. She was formerly of Plainfield, and was married in the Quaker meeting house several years ago. The testimony in the case was taken before Roderick Byington, as Special Master in Chancery.—Newark News

Last Organ Recital.

Prof. William J. MacClymont will give his last organ recital this season at the First Presbyterian church on Monday evening. William Tallamy, solo tenor at St. John's church, Elizabeth, will assist.

SPED AROUND THE TOWN

STREET RAILWAY PEOPLE GIVE A TROLLEY RIDE OVER ALL LINES.

People All Along the Routes Decorated Their Houses in Honor of the Event and Cheered as They Passed Along.

The complete trolley system of Plainfield is now running regularly and another of Plainfield's long-planned improvements is a reality. Although the entire route has been open several days it was not until Friday morning that the cars were run regularly on their time table.

For some time the officials of the railway company have been planning to give a "trolley party" to a number of the leading citizens of Plainfield and surrounding towns and show them the road. Yesterday afternoon was the time chosen and four open cars, well filled with invited guests, made the entire trip of the railway company's lines, about seven miles in all. It goes without saying that everyone was pleased, both with the new cars and the extensions of the company's lines, recently completed.

The guests were invited to assemble at the corner of North and Watchung avenues at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon and many minutes before that time a crowd began to gather. There was a sprinkling of guests and a large number of spectators who had come to see the "fun." One by one the cars arrived, all decked with American flags which were fastened to the top, cars and trolley pole. By 3 o'clock two of the cars were crowded and another arrived with a load of the employes of the Chapot glove factory, which is located near the Dunellen line and is greatly benefited by the opening of it. It did not take long for the fourth car to receive its quota of guests and then the procession started out.

Car No. 1, piloted by Motorman Anderson and Conductor Fahy, while Superintendent John Adelmann and Thomas Nevins, Jr., son of millionaire Nevins who is president of the railway company, occupied the front platform with the motorman. Then came car No. 8, in charge of J. B. Martin and James McCormick, car No. 9, with Mark Hipp and Michael McCarthy as motorman and conductor, and car No. 10, piloted by Motorman Morris Higgins, and Conductor Cuckly.

The cars first went down West Front street to Dunellen and their reception along the line was decidedly an ovation. Many of the residents, particularly those living beyond Grant avenue, were evidently very glad to welcome the trolley as flags and bunting were used to decorate a number of the houses while the residents themselves waved vigorously at the open cars and their passengers as they swept by with banners streaming.

The delegation in Dunellen was awaited the approach of the "trolley party" at the Dunellen terminus and just as the cars came to a standstill there, the flag on the Lincoln schoolhouse at Dunellen was hoisted to the top of the pole in honor of the event for, even if the present rulers of Dunellen's destinies don't favor the trolley, the people of that borough do. Some of the employes who remained at the Chapot glove factory saluted the procession most vigorously. Several climbed on the roof and waved large cloths attached to brooms in a manner that almost had the appearance of shipwrecked mariners signaling for help. Back to town again the party sped and again were they received with sundry waves of handkerchief and flag

Superintendent Adelmann next directed the course of his "trolley party" up West Fourth street and everybody along the line, except the ghost in Evergreen cemetery, turned out to celebrate the regular opening of the complete system.

At the terminus at Monroe avenue and West Seventh street, there was as at the previous one, a general exodus from the car to allow the seats to be reversed. Then everybody scrambled in again, commenting as they did so on the excellence of the new system. Again the procession attracted attention in the business portion of the city and then the leading car turned into Somerset street. A halt was made at the turn-out in front of the North Plainfield public school to allow one car to pass. Car No. 1 was the lead and Superintendent Adelmann leaned over the front railing to talk with some of the visitors.

"Three cheers for Superintendent Adlemann!" shouted one of the guests and the three were given with a right good will while those in the other cars, who had not heard the first remark, wondered what had taken possession of the inmates of the first car.

"Three cheers for the street railway company!" yelled some one else and the response was a hearty one.

At the Somerset street terminus, there was another reversal of seats and passengers and, for a few moments, a little excitement, for in starting off car No. 7 crashed into car No. 8 from behind, smashing the former's fender and generally shaking up the passengers of both cars. No damage of a serious nature was done. The accident was accounted for by the brake, which would not work, according to the motorman's statement.

HIGHLY SIGNIFICANT

So Senator Stewart Considers the Action of the Silver Men.

TO HIM IT IS A HOPEFUL SIGN

Now Remains To Be Seen Whether Politics and Intrigue Will Debauch the Convention at Chicago, He Says.

New York, June 20.—Senator Stewart of Nevada, who is at the Hoffman house, regards the action of Senator Teller and the men who followed him out of the St. Louis convention as significant in the highest degree. "Senator Teller represented the real sentiment of nine-tenths of the people west of the Mississippi river," said he, "and three-fourths of the people of the United States. To me it appears a hopeful sign, and very remarkable that 105 men could have been found in the convention to vote as they did against the consolidated bank influence of Europe and American. The friends of silver have succeeded in electing a majority of the delegates in favor of the United States and against English rule, and are anxious to make an honest effort to rescue the party, which Cleveland betrayed, from the control of Pierpont Morgan, the Belmonts and their associates. It remains to be seen whether politics and intrigue will debauch the convention at Chicago." Gulusha A. Grow, congressman-at-large from Pennsylvania, says that the republican bolt will not mean a loss of more than seventy-five votes in the electoral college.

The Silverites' Address.

St. Louis, June 20.—The address to the people of the United States adopted by the bolting silverites at their secret meeting is a lengthy document. While it contains much in the nature of a silver coinage argument, the concluding paragraph shows the determination of the bolting delegates to bring about, if possible, the nomination of Senator Henry M. Teller of Colorado as the candidate for the presidency on a platform having for its cardinal principle the free and unlimited coinage of silver. In this connection the address reads: "We have endeavored in a plain way to set the matter before the eyes of our fellow citizens. We invoke the union of all men and all parties who believe that the time has come for the triumph of justice. It is an hour when the people may speak for themselves as individuals and through conventions yet to be held. It is the right of every citizen to indicate his preference. With this in view we offer to the forthcoming conventions and to the people the name of a man for the presidency of the United States whose life, in public and private, represents those distinguished virtues which adorned the days and the deeds of men of that earlier time of this republic in return to which virtues is requisite for the prosperity and contentment of the people, and the perpetuity and commanding example of free institutions. The name of Henry M. Teller is the man of the people and for the people. He is of no section. His experience and service, his devotion to the common justice and the common cause of his fellow-citizens have been as wide as the country. We believe that the people of the United States have in their hearts the knowledge that he has had their interests in his purpose through all the work of an exalted life."

ONLY ELEVEN KILLED.

Government Report of the Loss Sustained by the Rebels at Las Tres Tetas.

Havana, June 20.—Private advices from Camaguay are to the effect that the rebel loss in the battle of Najasa was only eleven killed and forty-nine wounded, instead of 800 killed and wounded as was stated in the official report of the fight. Public opinion is gaining ground here that the Spanish reports of a victory were untrue. It is said that Maximo Gomez, the rebel commander-in-chief, is marching towards the railroad between Nuevitas and Puerto Principe, his intention being to cut off communication between the two cities. Advices from Manzanillo, province of Santiago de Cuba, show that numerous parties of rebels belonging to the commands of Rabi and Jose Maceo are concentrating in the vicinity of that city. Every precaution is taken by the Spanish commander there to prevent or repulse an attack on the city.

International Firemen's Officers.

Chicago, June 20.—The convention of the International Firemen's union has elected the following officers: President, Thos. Oleskowsky of St. Louis; first vice-president, J. Birmingham, Washington; second vice-president, James W. Connor, Philadelphia; third vice-president, Frank Palpuso, St. Paul; secretary-treasurer, James Wilson, Brooklyn. At the American Federation of Labor congress, Jesse Johnson, Nashville.

St. Louis in Port at New York.

New York, June 20.—Steamer St. Louis, Randle, Southampton June 13, with merchandise, 275 cabin and 296 steerage passengers arrived last night. Time of passage 6 days, 10 hours and 33 minutes. Daily runs: 400, 502, 445, 502, 501, 446 and 141 to Sandy Hook. Total, 3,120 knots. Average speed 20.2 knots per hour. Had light winds and fogs.

Wants $10,000 for a Broken Hip.

Hartford, June 20.—The suit of Elisha Carpenter, ex-judge of the supreme court, against the Hartford Street Railroad company was argued on a demurrer before Judge Robinson in the superior court yesterday. Judge Carpenter sues to recover $10,000 for a broken hip.

OUTLOOK NOT BRIGHT

Increased Restriction in the Volume of General Business.

INDUSTRIAL LINES UNIMPROVED

Bank Clearings Show an Increase—Business Failures in the United States Range Above the Average—Wool-ens on Manufacturers Hopeful.

New York, June 20.—Bradstreet's weekly review of the state of trade will to-day say: A national presidential convention is the opening week of the between-seasons period of dullness explains the increased restriction in the volume of general trade. In industrial lines there is no improvement. In iron and steel, prices of some varieties tend lower and buyers manifest little interest as to requirements. Present activity among dry goods jobbers is confined to working off odd lots preparatory to stock taking. Manufacturers of cottons have cut quotations to attract buyers, and while there is increased activity in flannels for fall delivery, recently opened fall prints have found few buyers. The prolongation of the strike and boycott at Milwaukee is followed by a threat of iron and steel workers at Pittsburgh to strike if not granted an advance by July 1. The movement of merchandise is smaller in volume than a week ago, greatest activity being shown in hardware, groceries, drugs, paints and clothing. Manufacturers of woolens are reported more hopeful and to be making inquiries as to supplies of raw material, but quotations for wool at the interior are still above a parity with seaboard prices. At eastern centres the lumber trade has been disappointing.

Advance in Government Bond Prices.

Stock values at New York show reaction since the adjournment of the St. Louis conventions. Foreign buying, which was a feature, has developed into foreign selling. International stocks are the chief objects of interest. Government is advanced 1 1-8 per cent. on the adoption of the sound-money plank. The foreign buyers of stocks supplied the exchange market with bills and depressed demand sterling to 4 88.

Business Failures.

Business failures throughout the United States continue to run somewhat above the range in like weeks in preceding years. The total reported this week is 253, compared with 224 last week, 231 the corresponding week last year ago, 195 in the third week of June, 1894, and as contrasted with 350 (nearly 100 more than this week) in the corresponding week of 1893.

Bank Clearings.

There is a moderate increase in bank clearings throughout the United States, which amount to $1,038,000,000 this week, an increase of 10.6 per cent. over the preceeding week, but a decrease of 3-5 per cent. as compared with the corresponding week one year ago. When contrasted with the third week of June, 1894, the period of extreme depression after the panic in 1893, this week's increase is 23 per cent.; when compared with the clearings for the like week in 1892 the current week's total is nearly one-half of 1 per cent. larger, and as compared with the like total in 1892 6 per cent. larger. Somewhat more encouraging in the report that prices of only four of the more important staples declined during this week, wheat, lard, sugar and barb wire. Practically unchanged quotations are recorded for wheat flour, oats, coffee, print cloths, leather, iron and steel, while there are advances for Indian corn, cotton, petroleum and spirits of turpentine.

KRUGER'S DEMAND.

Wants Great Britain To Bring Cecil Rhodes and Others To Trial.

Cape Town, June 20.—The secretary of state for the Transvaal has telegraphed to the British high commissioner here saying that having in view the welfare and peace of South Africa, the Transvaal government is convinced that the proofs in its possession, and which are in the hands of Great Britain, now completely justify and compel the bringing to trial of Messrs. Cecil Rhodes, Alfred Beit and Dr. Harris, all of the British South Africa company, and connected with the raid into the Transvaal. The secretary adds that the Transvaal republic is obliged to press upon this step on Great Britain and also to urge that all control of the British Chartered South Africa company be transferred to Great Britain.

Bank President Worked Button.

New York, June 20.—George H. Wyckoff, president of the Bank of New Amsterdam, continues to improve. Last night was by far the best he has had since he was shot down by George H. Sampson, and it is said to give him $6,000. Mr. Wyckoff's chances for recovery improve each day. The body of Semple was sent to Chicago for interment.

M'KINLEY CAMPAIGN

It Will Probably Be Conducted from New York City.

REAL WORK TO BEGIN NEXT WEEK

Major McKinley's Secretary Begins the Task of Answering the Big Amount of Accumulated Mail Received at Canton Since the Nomination.

Canton, O., June 24.—Major McKinley's private secretary, Mr. Boyle, went to work this morning upon the mail and telegrams which had accumulated since the nomination, and with a force of assistants he expects to get replies to more than 6,000 senders within the week. Then after the formal notification next Monday the work of the campaign will begin in earnest. The Repository, which is popularly esteemed to be Major McKinley's organ, last evening had the following paragraph regarding the headquarters of the national committee, which may be significant: "While the question of the location of national headquarters has been under discussion and Cleveland has made a strong effort to secure them for the Forest City, the impression does not exist here that the custom of years past will be changed and it is believed that the republican national campaign will be directed by Chairman Hanna from New York, as usual." Members of the Michigan Republican Editorial association arrived at Canton this morning to pay their respects to Major McKinley. Gov. McGraw of Washington state will also be here to-day. Invitations have also been extended to Senators Sherman and Foraker, Gov. Bushnell and congressman C. H. Grosvenor to visit Canton next Saturday and participate in the ratification meeting arranged for that day. Mr. Grosvenor has signified his acceptance of the invitation.

THE PEACH CROP.

Outlook in New York and New England Reported as Encouraging.

Springfield, Mass., June 24.—The American Agriculturist Weekly to-day says: The earlier promise of an abundant peach crop in the northern and eastern states continues measurably bright, but of course the fruit will not be ready for market for some tiwie yet. Michigan peach growers are greatly encouraged over the outlook, and the counties in Indiana which have in the past few years established an enviable reputation in the Chicago market, report orchards in most promising condition. Peaches are dropping to some extent in Ohio, but in the main doing well, while in New York and New England the present outlook is for good crops of hardy varieties. The crop is coming along in generally fair shape in Maryland and Delaware, although very unevenly, some counties showing well, while elsewhere the yield will be very short.

CONDITION OF CROPS.

Weather Bureau's Weekly Bulletin for Eastern States.

Washington, June 24.—The weekly crop reports of the weather bureau for eastern states are as follows: New England—Corn still backward in north but generally in still crops in satisfactory condition. New York—Spring crops, pastures and late meadows show good improvement; hops arming out well; nights cool for corn. New Jersey—All crops much improved; haying progressing; wheat nearly ready to cut; rye harvest begun. Pennsylvania—Conditions favorable; haying continued and some rye harvested; tobacco well started. Maryland—Warm weather following rains beneficial to growing crops, though in some localities corn, hay and wheat were damaged by heavy downpours.

PRINCETON'S VICTORY.

Defeat of Yale at Baseball on Her Own Grounds Wildly Celebrated.

Princeton, N. J., June 24.—Last night when word came from New Haven that Princeton had defeated Yale and won the baseball championship the town went wild; bells were rung, fires built and speeches made upon the campus by professors and prominent manners of the alumni. Princeton has defeated Yale upon the latter's grounds for the first time in twenty years and has won her first baseball championship since 1891.

Indians To Hold Office.

Colon, June 24.—Advices received here from Georgetown, British Guiana, are to the effect that the Demerara Official Gazette publishes an ordinance appointing certain Indians in the interior captains and constables, with a uniform commission and salary. The object is to check the encroachments of neighbors. The new artillery that was mounted for the defense of Georgetown has been tried in the presence of the governor, Sir Augustus Hemming.

New Jersey's Tax Commission.

Trenton, June 24.—Gov. Griggs has appointed Attorney-general John P. Stockton a member of the equalization commission, in place of ex-senator George H. Large of Hunterdon county, who declined because of his inability to devote the necessary time to the service. The appointment of the attorney-general makes the commission stand three democrats and two republicans.

Big Damages for Loss of a Finger.

Waterbury, Conn., June 24.—In the district court yesterday Judge Braidstreet gave Everett H. Nunn, aged 16, a verdict of $1,000 for the loss of a finger in a power press of the Matthews & Willard company, and gave the father $375 for the loss of the son's wages.

CHEAPER TO HAVE GONE IN RAGS.

Attendants of First Presbyterian Church Social Fined for Dressing Well.

The social committee of the Christian Endeavor society of the First Presbyterian church, consisting of Miss Agnes Blair, chairman, Miss Flora Petrie, Miss Mary Lucky, Miss Grace Petrie, Miss Fanny Herring, Guernsey Nevins, Frank Bond and Frank Flannery, arranged a poverty social which was held in the chapel of the church last evening.

Everyone attending was met at the door by one of the committee and ushered into a side room, which was styled "Room for fines." There they were taken in charge by Miss Agnes Blair, who, in a thorough business-like manner, set a price on the wearing apparel and collected the stipulated amount from each. Here is a list of articles for which fines had to be paid, and the price charged: Silk dress, 10 cents; new dress, 5 cents; gold cuff buttons, 5 cents; silver cuff buttons, 2 cents; fancy pins 1 cent; collars, 2 cents; polished shoes with buttons or laces, 5 cents, chewing gum, 10 cents; neckties, 2 cents; ribbon, 3 cents; frizzes, 5 cents, watch and chain, 5 cents, studs, 2 cents, rings, 2 cents. Everyone in a greater or less degree came in for a share of the above, and Miss Blair would not let any escape.

After the fines had been collected a new feature was introduced by Miss Grace Petrie and Miss Agnes Blair. A paper called "The Daily Worrier," was issued for the first and amusing articles were read. An interview with Dr. Clawson was read by Frank Flannery and the following by Miss Petrie, as editor, and Miss Blair, as assistant: Personals, editorials, fashions, side talks with girls, suites, housekeeper's column, fine arts, sent a-word column, special Sunday edition. All of the sketches were very personal and amusing.

After all had enjoyed a good laugh, the committee served coffee and cake to those present and the balance of the time was devoted to sociability.

THE TIME OF VACATION.

How the Teachers of the Bryant School Will Spend the Summer.

The teachers of the Bryant School have decided what they will do during the summer, and it may be of interest to their many friends to know where they will be found. Miss Shattuck, principal, will divide her time between Lake Champlain and and the New England States. Miss Miller will remain at Oswego, N. Y., as will also Miss Marshall. Miss Davies goes to Petersburg, N. Y., and Miss Burnett will be found at Southampton, L. I. Miss Brown will spend the summer at her home in Lake Erie, Ohio, and Miss Cadmus will go to her home in East Orange, and has planned for several trips. Miss Low goes to Gloucester, Mass. Miss Runyon and Miss Ticknor will remain in Plainfield a portion of the time, and the balance will be spent in occasional outings from time to time. Miss Marsh is the only one who will not return. She will go to Newark, and in the fall will accept a position at the Bryn Mawr Preparatory School, of Baltimore.

Graduates Tomorrow.

Tomorrow will be an auspicious day for twenty-three young people of Plainfield, for on that day will they graduate from the High School and their names added to the alumni of that famous institution. As usual the commencement exercises will be held at Music Hall. A portion of the seats will be reserved for the friends of the graduates and the faculty. The rest of the hall will be free to all, and it is probable that every seat will be filled, as has been the case for past years.

Salvationists Hustling.

Another big meeting is being arranged by the Salvation Army corps, of this city, for Friday evening. Staff Captain Sammons, who has charge of the Northern New Jersey District, and probably his wife, will be present and lead the meeting. Staff Captain Sammons makes his headquarters at Newark, and is known as the "Jersey Lightning Man."

A FREE LUNCH BURDEN.

AN ADDITIONAL EXPENSE HEAPED ON CITY TAXPAYERS.

What Was Only a Passing Liberality of a City Official Now Becomes a Burden to the City Property Owners.

A considerable amount of preliminary work preceded the regular July meeting of the City Council which was held Tuesday evening. It was 8:45 when President See called the session to order. All the members responded to the roll call except Mr. Fisk, who is now on a vacation. A large number of petitions were received and presented. Edward Willis and others asked for four electric lights on South and Lealand avenues and Terrill road and the matter was referred to the proper committee. J. S. Leifert, of Budgeport, Conn., asked for a license for an all-night lunch wagon, and after due consideration the license was granted. W. H. Sampson and other residents of East Fifth street, complained of the speed and noise made by the trolley cars and asked that the same be regulated. The matter will be looked after by the proper committee. The petition of Manning and Sandford and others for a crosswalk on East Third and Richmond streets, was referred to the street committee as was also the petition of F. O. Herring and other residents of Park avenue, asking that they be not compelled to curb the avenue below the brook. John Johnson, city collector, presented a bill of expenses amounting to $275, which was incurred by him while contesting the collectorship matter. It was referred to the finance committee and Mr. Dumont asked that it be returned to Mr. Johnson and that he be asked to give a detailed statement of his expenses. The Plainfield Water Supply Co. stated in a petition that they had erected the five extra fire hydrants as per contract.

J. W. Murray and other residents of Central avenue, petitioned Council to thoroughly repair Central avenue and put it in first-class condition. They complained of the condition made so by the sewer work. The matter was referred to the street committee and later Mr. Frost stated that the committee intended to put all streets in good condition, but they did not intend being partial in the matter and showing favors. John Maraden, in a communication, stated that his portion of the sewer work had been completed as per contract and all bills had been paid. Nell Scott, of the West End, asked for a wholesale liquor license to conduct a business at 224 West Fourth street in the building owned by James Clark. This matter was referred to the license committee.

Chief Doane, as inspector of buildings, reported that thirteen permits had been granted during the past month. The action of the board of engineers in confirming the action of Gazelle Engine Co. No. 1, in dismissing Geo. Demarest and J. L. Blackford from the company for non-performance of duty, was confirmed by the council. City Judge DeMeza presented his monthly report which showed that $305 had been collected from fines and that Sergeant Kiely had received $50, one-half of the fines in the Ross and Parron illegal liquor selling cases, as informant. During the month 173 persons had been dealt with, 43 were fined, 21 committed, 20 discharged, and in 88 cases sentence was suspended. The city collector's monthly report was presented and filed. Mr. Stebbins offered a resolution that the Plainfield Water Supply Co. be requested to extend their mains so that a hydrant could be located at the corner of LaGrande and Carleton avenues. The resolution prevailed.

Mr. Serrell stated that the city ordinances had been compiled and arranged and he suggested that the same be referred to the Corporation Counsel for examination. The suggestion was adopted. Mr. Moore reported several hack and peddler's licenses and they were granted on his recommendation. Mr. Barrows spoke at length regarding the midnight lunch to the police. He said that the scheme was introduced as an experiment and had now been in working order two months. Continuing he said: "There is not enough men to arrange for relief nor to allow the regulars to leave their posts. The men have ten or eleven hours steady duty and we have seen the effect of the night air when they have had nothing to eat or drink. The scheme introduced is a great success. I asked Mayor Gilbert sometime ago where the money was coming from and he said 'no matter where we get it, we must have it.' Mr. Barrows then offered a resolution which was adopted that the police committee be authorized to contract for night lunches, the cost not to exceed $75 per month. Mr. Dumont voted in the negative though he gave no reason for so doing. Mr. Barrows offered an ordinance which provides that the police serve all notices in regard to the laying of sidewalks or curbing instead of the Street Commissioner as heretofore. He thought the latter's time was too valuable when the city was paying him $1,500. The ordinance was adopted on first and second readings and ordered engrossed and advertised. At this time Mr. Ginna took the chair while President See attended to some other matters, and Mr. Tolles then presented a petition, signed by C. H. Hand, and several hundred persons asking that Watchung avenue be extended to the brook. The petitioners cited the many advantages to be gained by giving work to unemployed, which would result in the erection of several fine buildings which are now prospective. Corporation Counsel Marsh was present and Mr. Ginna asked him for some information. Mr. Marsh stated that the material was rapidly getting into shape and allowing for necessary time, he thought the next regular August meeting would be sufficient enough. It was so decided.

Mr. Dumont thought there was no great hurry about the matter, as the street seemed a good ways off at present. He cited the borough's action and said that a man's property could not be taken until he was paid for it. Mr. Frost did not believe that the city would get any money from the property owners if the street was opened before the assessments for benefits were made. In presenting a sub-final report to date of the work on sewers, Mr. Frost stated that there was now twenty-four miles of sewers laid and as fine as any system in the United States. It had cost as little as any similar system, and no pains had been spared in doing the work properly. He complimented consulting engineer Gavett and Messrs. Hubbard and Van Emburgh as surveyors for the conscientious manner in which they had performed their work. Mr. Ginna said that the total cost would come under $150,000. It was discovered that there was a mistake in the report and it was referred to the finance and sewer committees jointly for examination and report at next meeting.

Mr. Frost reported that the committee appointed some time ago to confer with the assessor had met the latter and had carefully gone over the tax list, but owing to the large number of farm lands, they thought it absolutely necessary that a city map should be purchased. This would show all assessable property. On Mr. Frost's motion $10 was appropriated for that purpose.

E. H. Bird's bill amounting to $305.20, as his bill of expenses in the recent collectorship contest, was presented and ordered paid.

Mr. Dumont stated that last month's expenses were $11,000 and it was now necessary to borrow money. He offered resolutions which provided for the borrowing of $5,000 for the general fund and $2,500 for the fire fund. Both resolutions were adopted as was also two others which provided for the renewing of an $8,500 note and the borrowing of $8,000, both of which were on account of the sewers.

Mr. Dumont presented a short report on the widening of Madison avenue and offered a resolution, which was adopted, that Wednesday evening, July 22d, at 8 o'clock, be set as the time for the commissioners to meet in the Council rooms.

Mr. Tolles offered a resolution that the property owners on West Front street be required to curb the street according to the proper grade. The resolution prevailed.

Mr. Frost offered a resolution, which was adopted, that no person be allowed to make any opening in the streets unless they get a permit to do so. The same member then offered an ordinance which provides for regulating the house connections made to the sewers. It was adopted on first and second readings, and ordered engrossed and advertised. Mr. Frost offered another resolution that the above resolution be advertised in both city papers three times. The resolution was adopted.

Mr. Serrell called up the street sprinkling ordinance on its final passage and it was adopted. He also called up the ordinance relating to ash and garbage carts, but the opinion of the other members seemed to be that this ordinance was all out of proportion, and after a lively discussion it was referred back to the committee with the instructions to draw up an ordinance regulating ash and garbage carts. The ordinance presented took in all kinds of carts and wagons and the provisions were too strenuous.

On Mr. Barrows motion the police ordinance was adopted on the third reading.

Commander Booth-Tucker,

Who is to address a Meeting in this City Tonight.

A FIGHTER OF SATAN, LABOR AND THE TARIFF.

SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF COMMANDER BOOTH-TUCKER.

Left a Lucrative and Honorable Position in the English Service to Enter the Work of the Salvation Army in British India.

Commander Frederick St. George DeLautour Booth-Tucker, who is to speak publicly in this city tonight, is one of the most remarkable, as well as one of the most talented officers in the whole Salvation Army.

He was born in India. He was educated for the Indian Civil Service and and at an early age was an assistant commissioner in the Punjaub, his position being that of a sort of assistant governor of a province.

He was converted early in life and always felt great interest in the welfare of the natives of India, and did no inconsiderable work among them. In the year 1881 a copy of a London Christmas "War Cry" fell into his hands, containing an article from the General appealing for candidates for officership in the Salvation Army.

This article and the other contents of the paper made such a deep impression on him that he applied for a furlough, for the special purpose of visiting England to see the Salvation Army and enquire into its methods of working.

Although the Army then was very much smaller than it is now, and undergoing all kinds of persecution from press and mobs, the Commander felt that this was the sphere in which God wanted him to work, and he accordingly resigned his Government position. He was, at that time, receiving a salary of $5,000 a year, which would probably have increased by this time to three times that amount—with a pension of $5,000 a year after twenty-five years' service.

He spent some little time at the London Headquarters, assisting in legal and property matters, but in the fall of 1882 he went to India as the pioneer of the Salvation Army in that great empire. Shortly after his arrival in Bombay he and others were arrested for marching the streets with instruments, and he received sentence of a month's imprisonment in Bombay, which he served. On being released, he again marched, and was enabled to secure perfect liberty for the open air work of the Salvation Army, not only in Bombay, but throughout the whole of the Indian Empire.

Being dissatisfied with the results of ordinary missionary plans, the Commander determined upon a bold and apparently hazardous policy. He cast off European clothing, and not only adopted the native dress, but also went in for living in all respects as the natives of the country, one form of his scheme being the assumption of the dull yellow color for part of his uniform, known as the Fakeer color, which is the badge throughout Asia of persons whose lives are entirely given up to religion. In short, he became a religious mendicant, begging his food from door to door, and in this way placing the religion of Jesus Christ before the Asiatic mind in a distinctly Asiatic manner.

Commander Booth-Tucker's platform style is a combination of red-hot feeling, intellectual clearness, and the most powerful, logical, and convincing argument. His administrative capacity, his untiring energy, his long experience, and his practical cosmopolitan mind, render his appointment to this field not only one of the greatest compliments that the General could possibly have paid to the American people, but one of the surest guarantees that the brilliant past of the Army in this country is to be infinitely surpassed by what we shall see in the near future.

JAMES E. MARTINE REPLIES TO THE ARGUMENTS OF A NEWS WRITER.

Instances Cited In Which It Is Shown That the McKinley Bill Was the Cause of Oppression to Labor

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—

My attention has been called to a letter in the Plainfield News criticising an article in The Press on the telegrams to Mr. McKinley. Notwithstanding said criticism, still do I say you will find no congratulatory telegrams from the widows and orphans whose husbands and fathers were shot down at Homestead. The workmen in that strike were resisting a reduction in wages of from 21 to 22 per cent., when at the same time Carnegie, Phipps & Company were protected by a tariff almost prohibiting and to the tune of 104 per cent. The high wages quoted by The News are misleading. They were not per day; but per ton of iron produced. The reader may rely that full recompense in labor was given for every penny received.

I do say that the laborer is right in organization. His only strength, his only capital at Homestead or elsewhere is his labor, and organized labor in Workmen's Alliances and Trade Unions his only safeguard and salvation, against unjust oppression and tyranny of organized capital With labor that contest at Homestead was a fight for that which honest workingmen the world over believed to be their just rights. On the other side was intrenched wealth, ready in the words of that eloquent Republican, Hon. John J. Ingalls, "was arrogant, selfish and unyielding."

The writer in The News says, "He worked in 1868 for $1.75, and says I well knew the price of food and clothes then." But, dear fellow, those were the days of Republican misrule, but a Democratic tariff policy of untaxed clothes has made the burdens of the masses lighter today. Oh, no! I have not forgotten that we said, "Free wool would be a blessing." The truth of our assertion is verified by the fact that it is now possible to buy an all-wool blanket or suit of clothes at one-half the price that was exacted in the days of the McKinley law for a similar article filled with shoddy.

The fact remains that the Raritan Woolen Mills, under the fostering care of protective laws, barely paid enough wages to workingwomen to to keep them from a life of shame.

An American workingman, whose wife was a worker in the Raritan Mills, stated to me in 1892 that his wife received but sixty cents per day.

Oh! shame! Men and women of America, shame, if this be the measure of benefits that McKinleyism brings. God spare free America from more of it. J. E. Martine.

Lost a Finger.

John Apgar, aged 35 years, an employe in Bhaanme's planing mill on East Fourth street, met with an accident Wednesday at the mill which resulted in the loss of the first finger on the right hand and an injury to the second finger. He had sharpened a blade of one of the machines and while putting it back in position the blade slipped and fell on his right hand, with the above result. Mr. Apgar was taken to the hospital, where Drs. Long and Boone dressed the wounds. Mr. Apgar left the hospital this afternoon.

DAMAGE A CHURCH BELL

PATRIOTIC YOUTHS TOLLED THE BELL WITH TOO MUCH VENGEANCE.

The Members of the First Presbyterian Church Incensed at the Recklessness and Threaten the Boys With Arrest.

The bell of the First Presbyterian church did not ring early last Sunday morning. There were a number of young men in this city and the borough who knew the reason, and every one of them heaved a sigh of relief when the bell finally did peal out at about the noon hour, when the men who had been working on it had completed their labors. The cause of all the trouble was an attempt to cele*brate the Fourth* and welcome in another year of American independence by the ringing of the church bell. Late Friday evening a party of young men gained entrance to the church. Through the darkness they stole carefully up to the belfry after exciting adventures with projecting door-knobs and stray partitions. Four of the most powerful seized the bell rope and then the bell above spoke out in clear and rapid notes. The bell is a heavy one but the four strong pairs of arms made it sway with unusual rapidity. Suddenly there was a crash up in the bell loft and the bell was silent. The ringers tried to look at each other in dismay, but it was too dark. The combined efforts of all could not move the bell. They all supposed that the bell was ruined and a bill for $600 stared them in the face.

They found their way downstairs again and sat on the front steps to eat their midnight lunch and managed to cover the steps with the remains.

A number of the congregation were indignant Sunday morning at the results of the midnight visit and declared that steps would be taken to arrest the young men for trespassing. As those who took part in the ringing of the bell are not known outside of their own circles, no arrests have yet been made.

Another party of young men visited the Holy Cross church and the Church of the Redeemer, in the borough. The bell rope in the Holy Cross church was thrown out the window and pulled from the outside. In the Church of the Redeemer a clothes line was attached to the clapper of the bell and rung from the outside. These bells were rung not only at midnight, but some of the party remained and rang them nearly every hour until morning, making sleep impossible in the neighborhood. Mayor Hegeman was at last roused by the noise, went out and captured three of the bell ringers and lectured them severely.

A Delightful Sail.

The Hudson river, with all its natural beauties, is one of the chief attractions in this part of the country to foreign tourists. But to really see the river and the surrounding country as it should be viewed, a sail up the river is the ideal way. The excursion of the Grace M. E. church offers just such a chance. On Friday the large iron steamer Cygnus will convey the excursionists from Elizabethport to Oscawanna Island, which is located in one of the most beautiful parts of the Hudson river. The train leaves Plainfield at 7:45 o'clock on Friday morning.

—Marshal Peter Hansen, of Lincoln place, is improving the appearance of his property very much.

CHARGED WITH ASSAULT

THREE MEN ACCUSED IN UNION AND ONE IN SOMERSET COUNTY.

Those in the City Were Quarrels in Which Pistols Were Used as Arguments—Family Affair Across the Brook.

William Trust appeared before Justice Newcorn Monday and swore out a complaint against Charles Burnett for assault and battery. A short time ago Mr. Trust was subjected to an attack by Mr. Burnett, which resulted in his receiving a black eye. Mr. Burnett was held to await the action of the Grand Jury. He will probably furnish bail today for his appearance.

On complaint of John J. Hibbits, Justice Mosher issued a warrant for the arrest of John Moran, charging him with assault and battery. On the evening of the 3d, the two young men met in front of McVey's restaurant, and had some words which resulted in Moran striking Hibbits. Moran was arraigned last evening before Justice Mosher and waived examination. The Judge held him under $50 bonds to appear before the Grand Jury.

On complaint of Mrs. Budenheimer and Mr. Wyman, of Somerset street, Mr. Budenheimer was arrested last evening by Marshal Hansen on a warrant issued by Justice Crosley. He was charged with assault and battery. It seems that while Budenheimer was under the influence of liquor he drove his wife out doors, and also assaulted both her and Mr. Wyman. This morning he was brought before Justice Crosley, but as no one appeared against him, he was released.

Lambert DeCamp, a young man living near Alton, or Dog Corners as it used to be called, was brought before Justice Nash yesterday afternoon on the charge of assault and battery which was brought by his uncle, Frasee Connett, of the same place. Connett was in a field plowing several days ago with a horse belonging to DeCamp's brother-in-law. DeCamp claimed that the horse was not in condition to be used, and objected. A quarrel followed and Connets left the field in a badly battered condition. The arrest soon followed. DeCamp was held in $50 bail to appear before the Grand Jury. He is going to get a warrant out for Connett's arrest on the charge of cruelty to animals.

Downright Depravity.

Health Inspector and officer for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals William N. Pangborn, of the borough, has received notification of the barbarity which has been committed by certain people on Johnston Drive, and he is making strenuous efforts to ferret out the perpetrators of the cruel acts. One of the latest acts of cruelty reported from that neighborhood was on Saturday, when a good-sized dog was seen roaming about with a tin canfastened firmly over his eyes, ears and mouth. There is a heavy penalty attached to such inhumane cruelty, and no reason can be assigned for it except it be Dowgish downright depravity. At any rate an example should be made of such persons.

TEMPLAR FIELD DAY.

It Will Be a Great Masonic Event in This City.

Thursday, October 1st, is the day when the Knights Templar will hold their grand field day in this city. So stated the general order from the Grand Commandery that was received at the meeting of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., held last evening.

The Temple degree was conferred on two candidates. It was stated at the meeting that the Jersey Central Railroad would give a one-rate fare on their entire lines the day of the field day.

After the Sir Knights had sweltered through the meeting, Eminent Commander Kirkner very kindly invited them all out in an attempt to get cool on ice cream. The invitation was accepted and the frozen cream enjoyed.

A PAINFUL ACCIDENT.

A Sick Woman Falls Down Stairs and Breaks Her Nose and Arm.

Mrs. Louise Mohring, of South Second street, met with a very painful and severe accident Monday last. She has been ill and was suffering from a fever. About 10 o'clock she slipped from her bed unknown to the nurse, and started to pass into the next room through the hall. On her way she stumbled in some way at the head of the front stairs and fell down them head foremost. The injuries she sustained were very serious, and if she recovers, it will be, mainly, due to her strong and healthy constitution. Her right arm is broken at the wrist, her nose is also broken. There is a long deep cut in her right cheek, while several teeth were knocked out by the blow. She was badly bruised and cut in a number of other places. She is sixty years of age. Dr. Boone is attending her.

GOT M'CANN AT LAST.

FIRST WANTED AS A WITNESS AND THEN FOR ASSAULT.

It is Charged That He Kicked a Man by the Name of Hogan in the Face—Nicholas Kelly Arrested With Him.

The shooting affray on West Third street, several weeks ago, when James McCann attempted to perforate his brother, Chas. McCann, caused quite a little interest at the time, but Chas. McCann, instead of appearing against his brother, suddenly "vamoosed the ranch," and could not be found. He came back after a time, but before the police had a chance to lay hands on him, he got into a fracas with a man by the name of Hogan, kicked him in the face and otherwise abused him. He again absconded but Thursday appeared about the streets again, and came up for trial Thursday after noon. He paid $5 for his "fun" with Hogan.

He brought a friend, Nickolas Kelly, with him, and Kelly's visit to the court resulted in trouble for himself. Kelly is the man that has had so much trouble with Special Officer Cash, and has started a suit for false arrest against him. Although Kelly didn't know it, there was another warrant out against him on the charge of being disorderly and using indecent language, made by Cash. The warrant was served, and Kelly was unpleasantly surprised to find himself in custody. He was allowed to go on his own recognizance, and was ordered to appear for trial next Monday morning.

Dedication.

Dedicatory exercises was held in the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church Sunday afternoon. Rev. James Groves is the pastor, and the special music for the occasion has been mostly arranged by Israel Jones, the cornetist. The programme is as follows: Singing, "Don metar dismat"; anthem by the choir; singing by the congregation; prayer; vocal solo, by Miss Mason; dedication address by Rev. O. T. Scott: "How Firm a Foundation," by A. Henry and choir; collection; instrumental trio, cornet, violin and organ.

Corn Crop Injured by Worms.

Web worms are doing considerable injury to the corn crop in Hunterdon county. This worm strips the cornstalks of their leaves and prevents them maturing. Many farmers say the corn crop in the county will be light on account of the ravages of these worms. There seems to be nothing that will destroy the pests.

Thrown on the Driveway.

A young son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Bird, of East Front street, was gliding rapidly and peacefully along on his bicycle on the way down the hill from the Mountain View Inn, about 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon, when the machine got away, so to speak, from the rider, and striking a snag in the roadway, young Bird was hurled promiscuously over the handlebars to the hard roadbed. The youth was picked up in a skinned condition by ex-Borough Chief W. N. Pangborn, and assisted to a trolley car at the foot of the hill, and in which he was taken home. Besides an ugly looking wound on his right knee, the rider chin and forehead were badly cut and bruised.

A DEGREE FOR MERIT.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck Honored by the University of the City of New York.

The pastor of Trinity Reformed church, Rev Cornelius Schenck, has received the degree of Ph. D., Doctor of Philosophy.

Mr. Schenck pursued his studies in two universities, Taylor and the University of the City of New York. The course extended over a period of four years and included as subjects, sociology, comparative religion, and the philosophy of religion.

The subject of Mr. Shenck's thesis for the Doctorate was "Islam and Christianity."

This degree is not honorary, but rests on actual work done and examinations passed.

CHANGES ON THE POLICE FORCE.

How the Men Are Divided Over the City Districts.

The members of the police department were shifted about Wednesday night as follows:

Roundsman Frederickson performs night duty and Roundsman Mattox is on duty in the daytime. Patrolmen Vanderweg and Flanagan will look after the business part of town, while Patrolmen Post and Hartpence are located in the Boulevard and West End. Patrolmen Lunger and Cooney are also to be found on West Eighth and West Seventh streets. Patrolman Myers will watch the Netherwood district, and Patrolman Totten is stationed on Crescent avenue. Paradise Alley will be in charge of Patrolman Saunders, and Fifth street will be under the care of Patrolman Fraleigh.

The men have all received a new order that they are not to converse with anyone except on matters pertaining strictly to their business.

John E. Stewart and family, of West Seventh street, have returned from the Berkshires.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

Marriage of Miss Mattie Mason to John M. Higgins Last Night.

An exceedingly pretty home wedding was celebrated Thursday, 7 p.m., o'clock, when Miss Matie Mason, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Mason, of Somerset street, and John M. Higgins, of this city, were united in marriage by Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes. The bride wore a gown of white mull, and carried a bouquet of white carnations. After the ceremony congratulations followed and a reception was held until 10 o'clock when the bride and groom were taken to their new home on Richmond street which was already furnished.

Those who witnessed the ceremony were: Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Mason, parents of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. John Higgins, Sr., parents of the groom, and Jacob Higgins, brother of the groom, of North Branch; Mrs. Clare, Miss Clare and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Mason, Jr., of this city; and Miss Varney, of Boston.

A large collection of useful presents were received by Mr. and Mrs. Higgins.

Mr. Higgins is an employe of the Walter Scott Printing Machine Company.

CARRYING CONCEALED WEAPONS.

James Williams Paid $5 to the City for That Offence.

A man, who gave his name as James Williams was arrested on West Front street Thursday for carrying concealed weapons.

The policeman heard several shots fired and walked up the street meeting Williams. He saw the latter transfer a revolver from his hand to his coat sleeve and then held up his arms crying, "I haven't got it." The man was evidently drunk and finally agreed that he did fire the shots, but said that he had been chased by tramps. His little premature celebration cost him $5 in the city court Friday morning.

SUCCESSFUL FESTIVAL.

Scholars of a Sunday-School Raise Money for Their Excursion.

A festival was held on the grounds adjoining the First Church of Christ Thursday night by the Sunday-school of that church, in an effort to help defray the expenses of the Sunday-school excursion next Friday, when they go to Oscawanna Island with the Grace M. E. church.

The grounds were illuminated by numerous Japanese lanterns and presented a very pretty appearance. It is needless to say the affair was well patronized and a snug sum of money was the result. The affair was in charge of the Sunday-school and each individual assisted.

Discharged From the Hospital.

Peter Brady, the switchman at Bound Brook who was brought to Muhlenberg Hospital early last Saturday morning, suffering from injuries received by being struck by one of the "hog" engines, was released from that institution Friday. His recovery has been most rapid, judging from the extent and serious nature of his injuries, but the skill and efficiency of the corps of physicians and nurses there have brought him around allright again, although it will be some time before he can resume his position.

Much Needed Improvements Made.

A number of much needed improvements have been made in Liberty street recently by employes of the city. A crosswalk which was laid at the corner of that and Third streets, but which soon after sunk into oblivion, has been dug up and relaid. The rest of the corner has been fixed up in good shape, including the filling in of the dangerous gully which has existed for considerable time. A portion of Liberty street has also been topped off with crushed stone.

Pleased With Plainfield.

T. Edwin Isaacs, of Brooklyn, was the guest Thursday afternoon and evening of Chief T. O. Doane and family. He was given a ride around Plainfield and seemed astonished to find such a beautiful city so near Brooklyn. Although he has passed the allotted three score and ten years, he is still very active and enjoys the best of health. He is a great lover of the bicycle and rides his wheel every day. He organized in 1862 the famous Hudson Zouaves, armed and equipped them and sent them to the front.

Run Ten Miles an Hour.

Superintendent Adleman, of the street railway informs a Daily Press representative that the street cars are running at the rate of ten miles an hour which is the required rate specified by the city ordinance. With the power used, twelve miles is the highest rate a car could possibly run. This information is given for the benefit of those who have been complaining about the rate of speed of the cars.

Mrs. Fleming Gone to Long Branch.

Mrs. Fleming and her children left Fridericksburg for Long Branch Thursday morning. She has rented a cottage on North Broadway. Miss Florence Bliss will join her there in a few days, and they will remain there during the summer months.

THIS MAN SHOT TO KILL

Tip, the Bootblack, Tries to End His Wife's Life.

IN A PASSION OVER A QUARREL.

Gilbert Thompson and His Wife Quarrel Over Possession of the Former's Sister, the Wife Calls a Policeman and Thompson Vows That He Will Kill Her—Went Deliberately at It to Accomplish the Deed—Wife in a Precarious Condition at the Hospital.

"How foolish to fire off all their firecrackers before the Fourth," remarked a colored man living on East Second st. Thursday night about 11 o'clock, when three explosions followed each other in quick succession. It was not, however, a firecracker that startled the city at nearly midnight, but the sounds came from the little house between North avenue and East Second street, in the rear of Ted Clevely's store on North avenue, where Gilbert Thompson, better known as "Tip, the Bootblack," attempted to murder his wife Kate, in cold blood. He chose a 32-calibre self-cocking revolver as the weapon most fitted for his purpose, and fired three shots at her, two of which struck her. They were not fatal instantly, however, and she now lies in Muhlenberg Hospital trying to recover.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson are not a loving couple, and marriage has evidently been a failure in their case, at least. For some time they have not even lived together, and the city court docket records several instances when their troubles have been aired. According to the stories told there, Mrs. Thompson has been associating with other men, while "Tip" has been living with other women than his wife. Each side, of course, has laid all the blame on the other, and the exact truth of the matter is hard to discover.

Tip refused to support his wife until she applied to the city court and now he has been paying the rent on the second floor of the little house in the rear of Clevely's store, on North avenue, the lower floor of which has been occupied by Tom Jones and Wm Betts, two colored men.

Thompson and his wife are both colored. He is about 35 years old and she about five years older. Thompson is her second husband. The cause of the trouble lately has been Thompson's fourteen-year-old sister, Mabel. She lived with Thompson and his wife until they separated and then remained with Mrs. Thompson. Tip objected to this, claiming that Mrs. Thompson had the child on the street all the time. Thompson, as stated before, is a one-armed bootblack and has his bootblacking parlors on East Second street, just beyond the City Hotel.

Mrs Thompson and Mabel started down town early last evening and as they passed Tip's place he called to his sister, saying, "You mustn't go around the streets with her any more," and then persuaded her to come into the shop. Mrs. Thompson hurried to Patrolman Flannagan, told her story and persuaded the officer to come back with her. Tip peremptorily refused at first to let the child go with "that woman," admitting that she was neat and a good housekeeper, but saying that she kept company with other men. At last, however, he allowed the child to go with his wife, after the officer told him that he had better.

Mrs. Thompson and Mabel then started for Westervelt avenue, on the borough end of which Mrs. Thompson's sister lives, where they spent the evening. Thompson after waiting some time closed up his boot blacking establishment and sallied forth.

At the corner of Park avenue and Second street, he met a group of friends.

"She had the cop after me again this evening," he said, "and it's her last time." They heard his remark but did not realize the full significance of it until later in the evening.

Down to Front street he went and turned westward on that crowded thoroughfare. There was a decisive expression on his face and a dangerous glitter in his eye. At Dreier's store at the corner of Front street and Madison avenue, he stopped and, after standing in the window at the musical instruments on display, exhibited there, went into the store and purchased a 32 calibre self-cocking revolver and five cartridges for $1.25. Placing his newly purchased weapon in his pocket, he passed out into the night air. He next directed his steps to his sister-in-law's home on Westervelt avenue.

There was a change in his manner when he quietly requested his wife to come home with him. She was rather surprised at the difference in his manner but soon was walking homeward, accompanied by Mabel. The conversation lagged as the three went along quietly.

When they reached the little alley leading to Mrs. Thompson's home from East Second street, Thompson broke the silence by remarking:

"What do you mean by dogging me all the time?"

"I want you to stay at home and behave yourself," was his wife's reply.

They had reached the stairway that led to Mrs. Thompson's rooms, and Mabel, the sister of Tip, went on up the stairs to the kitchen where she started to get something to eat. Mrs. Thompson seated herself at the head of the stairs, while her one-armed husband sat down on the middle of the flight.

There was a long pause, and then Thompson began:

"Kate, what do you want me to do? I'll give you $3.50 a week and pay your rent, will that satisfy you?"

"Yes," came from the top of the flight, "if you'll behave yourself."

The lamp in the room on the second floor flickered as the cool breeze blew in at the open window, and the shadows flitted over the face of the waiting husband. In an instant, his face grew stern and terrible. "Nothing will satisfy you," he almost shouted, and then he pulled forth the weapon that he had hitherto concealed.

"Bang," went the revolver, and after the click of the self-cocking action, a second report came, and then a third. A dreadful scream answered the first shot, and then the stairway was filled with the smoke from the revolver. Out into the street rushed Mrs. Thompson, screaming as she went, "Lord have mercy, he's shot me, my husband's shot me!"

Most of Plainfield's good citizens were at home at the time when the first shot broke the stillness of the night. Sergeant Kiely was standing on Park avenue near Front street. The shots were deadened by the walls of the house, but the officer heard the screams. A friend approached him just as the terrified wife rushed from the house. The first cry was enough for the officer.

"Excuse me, I guess I'm wanted," he shouted to the astonished man as the latter saw the burly form of the Sergeant rushing up the street. When the Sergeant reached the corner the hitherto quiet occupants of the plazza of the City Hotel seemed suddenly possessed. Men were shouting and running every way, but all eyes were centred on a figure that was running down East Second street in that direction. It was a woman, a colored woman, with the blood streaming down her face.

"Lord have mercy on me," she gasped, as the blood nearly choked her. Not far behind her came the slight figure of a man. In his only hand he carried a smoking revolver. Sergeant Kiely was at his side in an instant. "Here it is," cried Tip, as he handed the weapon to Kiely. "I bought it to shoot her. I meant to kill her." He made no resistance as the Sergeant led him up Park avenue in the direction of the jail. Mrs. Thompson was by this time a terrible looking spectacle. The blood had saturated the entire front of her dress and completely covered her face. One eye was gone and from the optical cavity a steady stream of blood was pouring.

They made a strange procession as they marched to the lockup with the crowd following them.

Thompson was locked up at once, and then Kiely turned his attention to the injured woman. Two of the bullets had struck her, one in the right eye, tearing it out and passing into the head, the other behind the right ear, finally lodging in the neck.

"He shot me in my own house," she was heard to mutter by William DeMeza who was assisting the Sergeant. Boundsman Frederickson had in the meantime summoned Dr. Simpson and the ambulance and the victim of the shooting affair was borne away to Muhlenberg Hospital where she now remains.

Chief Gross visited her at the Hospital this morning and tried to get a statement from her but, as she was in a half-conscious state, it was very difficult.

She is in a very precarious state, but it is thought that she will live through the day at least.

"Ted" Clevely's place was electrified by having the rear door suddenly burst open and a colored girl enter screaming, "My God, my brother's shot his wife."

There was a general scattering and two or three young men bravely rushed out in the rear yard, armed only with empty soda water bottles, ready to catch the murderer should he attempt to run that way.

Patrolman Flanagan appeared and, after searching the house, took charge of the little girl, who was almost frantic with terror.

Thompson was brought before Justice Nash this morning at 10 o'clock. City Judge DeMeza acted as his counsel and asked that Thompson be remanded so that the condition of his wife could be ascertained. The request was granted and the hearing set down for next Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. His sister, Mabel Thompson, was remanded as a witness. The prisoner and witness will be taken to Elizabeth this afternoon.

Union Preparatory Services

The '96 Christian Endeavor convention committee will hold union prayer services during the summer to prepare for the convention. The first service will be held in the Trinity Reformed church, Monday evening, July 13th.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher, that it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria", and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

TAXPAYERS INTERESTED

A PROPER ADJUSTMENT OF THE SEWER TAX WILL BE DIFFICULT.

A Correspondent Criticises the Law That Prevents the Property Owners From Serving on the Tax Commission.

The publication, Wednesday evening, in The Press of the proposed meetings in August of the Sewer Tax Commission has already created great interest among the taxpayers of Plainfield. The questions that are likely to arise will cause considerable discussion pro and con, and many pleas will doubtless be suggested from the parties interested, which will require great patience and due consideration from the commission before a proper adjustment can be satisfactorily adopted.

The following letters have been received:

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—The question of a proper adjustment of the sewer tax is one that Press tonight will shortly come up for consideration. The tax when once apportioned will be charged up against property owners, and if the tax is not equally made it will be most unjust. Parties owning farming land may avoid the tax when later they will reap all the benefits when their property is divided and cut up into streets and building lots. Many are deeply interested in this matter, and the outcome of the commission will be of great importance to all concerned. Citizen.

This is another:

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I was greatly interested in your article last night about the Sewer Tax Commission. I had supposed that the Mayor would have selected some of the oldest or largest taxpayers in town on this important commission, and must criticise the law that requires disinterested parties to be chosen to fill the membership of this important Board. The matters to come before it will create considerable ill-feeling unless great wisdom prevails. Taxpayer.

Plans of Mr. and Mrs. Powell.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the American Purity Alliance, held in the United Charities building, New York, the 18th ult., a congratulatory address to the Conference of the International Federation for the Abolition of State Regulation of Vice, to be held at Berne, Switzerland, September 18th, 16th, 17th and 18th, was unanimously adopted. Aaron M. Powell, president, and Anna Rice Powell, corresponding secretary, were appointed to represent the Alliance at the International Conference. Mr. and Mrs. Powell will sail by the Paris, August 29th, en route for Berne, via Southampton and Paris. After the Conference they will rest for a time among the mountains of Switzerland, and on their return from the Continent will remain a month or two in England, making their headquarters in London. They will probably be absent from the country about three months.—July Philanthropist.

Samuel Mattison, of Chester, is enjoying a visit to Plainfield at the home of a friend, Theo. Swayze, of Prospect avenue.

BICYCLE FOR A BIRTHDAY PRESENT.

Happy Surprise Given to a Linden Avenue Young Man Last Night.

Henry Staats, fifteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Staats, celebrated the anniversary of his birthday Wednesday and last evening about 8 o'clock, when he returned from work, he was given a complete surprise by meeting about thirty friends at his home, who had assembled in honor of the annual event. The affair was arranged by the young man's father and sister. Music and games helped to pass a very pleasant evening and at a late hour supper was served. The young man received two handsome presents. One was a gold watch and chain from his grandmother, who lives in New Brunswick, and the other was a bicycle from his father. He also was presented with a large birthday cake by Mrs. David Bush.

On a Tour of Inspection.

A committee of ladies from the Town Improvement Association made a tour of the Fourth Ward Thursday, in the interest not only of the association, but of the health and welfare of the inhabitants. The committee is "sizing up," so to speak, the back fences, driveways and other approaches to and from the railway tracks and on November 1st next a prize of $5 will be awarded in each of the several districts, where neatness and the best kept yards are noticed.

OLD TIMERS PLAY WELL

FORMER KINGS OF THE LOCAL DIAMOND PUT UP A GOOD GAME.

But Accompanying the Game Was a Good Deal of Fun, and Spectators Were Well Paid for Their Attendance.

Who says the "Old Crescents" can't play base ball?

Although they were defeated Saturday afternoon by the crack nine of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. they covered themselves with glory so that Tennyson might have written of them as he did of the Light Brigade:

When can their glory fade.
Oh, the wild charge they made
All the world wondered."

There was a delegation from "the world" that nearly filled the grand stand on the Y. M. C. A. field and sat in the cool shade beside the banks of Green brook.

And, of course, they wondered. Who wouldn't to see Corporation Counsel Marsh chase the ball as if it was some offending witness, or Clarence Teal run around the bases as if the entire Crescent Wheelmen were after him.

The Y. M. C. A. boys won, of course, by a score of 19 to 6, but it was the work of the professional battery of the "Old Crescents" rather than that of the veterans that made their opponents score so high. Francis, of New Brunswick, was either not at his best or rather poor, as the young men batted him when and where they wished.

From a scientific point of view the game was not a bad one, but to the local cranks it was simply delightful.

It seemed like old times to see George Cornwell gyrating about the diamond and Hervey Doane picking up grounders and shooting them at first in the liveliest manner imaginable.

The old enthusiasts were especially vehement in their welcome back to the diamond of Tom Keller. He appeared in an old Crescent League suit and seemed like a boy again. He had an old mit, dating back fifteen years, but there is ball playing still left in Keller, and he danced around as if 200 pounds was nothing to carry. He caught everything, too, and his coaching was worth going miles to hear.

Quite at home at his old position at short and he was happy. He wore a large glove, but every time he saw a grounder shooting along he forgot that it was 1896, threw the glove away and fielded the ball as of old. When it came to batting, he was right there and knocked out the only two-base hit made off Burt.

It was a surprise to see Craig A. Marsh at second, but like playing was a greater one. He did his full share of the work and made the brilliant catch of the day. He had to run back to get it and when the ball did strike his hands it bounded out. But when it came down he was still there. Teel claimed an assist as Marsh was going backward rather rapidly when he caught the ball, and but for Teel's friendly embrace, would have probably stretched his length on the green sward.

The ball was the only thing that worried Doane at third. As long as it kept away, he was all right, but somehow it didn't look right. He successfully encountered it, however, but lame was no name for his condition yesterday.

The field, Demarest, Walz and Teel, were all there too. The long legs of "Chick" Demarest stood him in good stead and he stole bases with an avidity that was startling. His companion in the field followed his example and purloined their share also. They also proved their ability as mosquito killers. They managed to escape almost errorless by either catching or running away from the flies that came in their direction.

The record made by the Old Crescents is indeed remarkable as they made only six errors, for which their professional pitcher is responsible for one. "Chappie" Lyman made quite a hit as umpire and was an object of wrath for the Y. M. C. A. boys. According to them he was an "Old Crescent," too, and therefore prejudiced. Nevertheless, Lyman umpired to suit the audience, which made it all right.

The rooting was great. Tom Keller grew so excited that he wasted lots of energy in jumping up and down in his excitement. Teel, Doane, Demarest and all of them, in fact, were right up to date at coaching and the row at the extreme end of the field even felt their influence so that she tried a little base running all by herself, causing Walz considerable anxiety for fear she might come his way.

The Y. M. C. A. boys put up a good game, batting especially well. Burt, who is just home from college, pitched his first game and promises to be excellent. Schoonmaker played short as of old and did well.

The score by innings was:

Crescents	0	0	0	3	0	0	3	0	—6
Y. M. C. A.	0	3	0	2	5	3	0	6	x—19

ON THE COURTS.

Interesting Tennis Tournament Held on the Hillside Grounds.

The Hillside Tennis grounds presented an attractive feature Saturday afternoon when Plainfield's society in all its summer beauty gathered to enjoy the annual event.

The tennis courts were busily occupied all day, and interest grew intense toward the latter part of the afternoon when the semi-finals were play off.

The tournament was arranged by Messrs. Ryder, owing to the failure of the club to provide one. Great credit is due these two popular players for the enjoyable programme presented. The playing throughout was fine and attracted considerable attention. In the afternoon about 4 o'clock the fair sex began to arrive and in a short time the grounds were graced by a very large number of people. Mrs. George P. Mellick received and she was assisted by Mrs. Carl Pfeiffer, Miss Ryder, Mrs. Isaac H. Field, Miss Walz, Miss Anna Miller, Miss Tracy, Miss Martine. Refreshments consisting of ices and wafers were served on the lawn and were just the thing for such a warm day. Aside from the social feature, the games of tennis were closely watched and frequent applause was given favorite players. H. Mellick, of Montclair, and Allan Hartley, of New York, were the only two outside players.

The finals consisted of the best three out of five, but owing to the lateness of the hour the game was not finished. H. V. Ryder won two sets and A. Wadsworth secured one. The last set was postponed till this morning. The scores were as follows: W. Wadsworth against Craig A. won by Wadsworth, 6-0, 6-1; T. Smith against H. Y. Ryder, won by Ryder, 6-3, 6-1; Allan Hartley against H. Moore, won by Hartley, 8-6, 6-2; A. Livingston against G. Ryder, won by Ryder, by default; A. Wadsworth against B. Fish, won by Wadsworth, 6-3, 6-3; Richardson against P. Fish, won by Fish, 6-4, 6-4; Glenny against Mellick, won by Glenny, 6-2, 3-6, 6-2; T. Smith against C. Pfeiffer, won by Smith, 6-3, 6-4. The semi-finals were as follows: Wadsworth against Ryder, won by Ryder, 6-3, 6-3; Hartley against Ryder, won by Ryder, 6-1, 6-2; Wadsworth against Fish, won by Wadsworth, 6-2, 6-2; Wadsworth against Smith, won by Wadsworth, 6-1, 6-3. In the finals Ryder beat Wadsworth, 6-1, 9-7; and Wadsworth beat Ryder, 6-5, which left one set yet to play.

The prize offered to the winner was a handsome tennis racquet.

Celebrated With a Dance.

The Union County Country Club celebrated the Fourth on the evening of the third with a dance at their Casino. As midnight approached a sumptous supper was served by Max Wiertz. The decorations were not extensive, but consisted mainly of flags. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Patterson and daughters, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Burke, Netherwood, Misses Burke and the Misses Burke, Dillon and Misses Halloway and Mr. and Mrs. Garrigues. "Grandpa Patterson" renewed his youth by dancing the two-step with his daughters.

A Local Entertainer.

A large audience assembled in the Mt Olive Bap't church Thursday evening, and enjoyed an excellent entertainment given by Joseph Boldin of North Plainfield. This is the first time that Mr. Boldin has had an opportunity of showing his talent as a magician and his ability was most creditable. He performed a large number of tricks such as most people have witnessed in Music Hall. He held the closest attention of his audience and though the entertainment did not commence till 9:15 the people present were perfectly willing to wait.

Pleasantly Entertained.

Mrs. Emma Ege, of Central aven ue, entertained a few friends at her delightful home on Fourth of July evening. The entertainment was novel and varied and immensely enjoyed by all present. After refreshments the party repaired to the veranda to witness a display of fire-works that had been provided by the charming and clever hostess.

Borough Transfers.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded from North Plainfield in the Somerset County Clerk's office during the past week:

Lewis M. Coddington et ux to Melvin H. and Frank W. Cleaves, $900; Mountain Park Land Co. to Craig A. Marsh, $750; James McGee to Samuel B. Woolston and James F. Buckle, $11,250.

WILL START RIGHT AWAY

FAVORABLE ACTION OF BOROUGH COUNCIL ON AVENUE OPENING.

Work of Opening the Street Will Proceed Without Delay, and Meanwhile the Assessments Will be Fixed.

Everyone will be more than pleased to learn that Watchung avenue from the brook to Jackson avenue is to be opened, and that it was so decided by a majority vote of the Borough Council last Friday night. Messrs. McLaughlin and Valiant were the only two who voted against it. All the members were present, and the first business was the presentation of the clerk's report as follows:

	Balance.	Deficit.
Borough	$ 741.82
Fire Department	67.97
Lights	1,139.40	$ 6.62
Poor		87.19
	$1,941.09	$93.81
	93.81
Total balance	$1,847.28

From fines, licenses, etc., $75.01 was reported as collected.

The monthly statement of Collector Spencer was as follows:

Total tax collected for 1896 since last report $281.10, less special school tax $67.50, less Board of Health tax $4.05, total $71.55, less $281.10 which leaves $209.55. Previously reported $38,175.71. The latter amount and $281.10 makes the total, $38,456.81.

Wm. Pangborn offered his resignation as special marshal. It was referred to the License and Marshal Committee, and later it was accepted. In a petition J. H. Howell asked that sidewalks be laid in front of the property owned by Mrs. Hegeman and Harold Serrell. The matter was referred to the proper committee. The officers in charge of Warren Engine Co. No 1 asked that the following members, having served seven years, receive their exemption papers: E. E. Pope, J. Stahl, J. P. Emmons, W. C. Smith, L. B. Woolston, Geo. Schlereth, J. F. Buckle.

Later a resolution was offered by Mr. Peck, that exemption papers be granted Geo. H. Fairchild and J. D. Anderson. The other names were referred to the Fire, Water and Lamps Committee. At this time Peter A. Emmons was given the floor and he spoke at length on the Watchung avenue matter. He favored the opening but thought the assessments for benefits should be levied first. His remarks were given close attention by the members.

Mrs. J. Ptaschinska who was injured sometime ago by falling in a fire well on Linden avenue, asked the Council through her counsel, Craig A. Marsh, if they were willing to settle for damages, believing as she did that it was the borough's fault. Intimation was made that she might bring action against the borough if they did not settle. The matter was referred to the Laws, Ordinance and Election Committee.

The usual budget of claims were presented and ordered paid. Borough Counsel Reed then made a few remarks in answer to those made by Peter A. Emmons.

Mr. Reed said that Watchung avenue could be opened by making assessments first or opening the street and making the assessments afterwards. It was optional with the council.

Mr. Peck stated that the fire department was in good condition and improvements had been made.

He said that the fire tower had been erected and a bell placed in it, but neither had yet been accepted by the borough. He also said that the flanges in the fire boxes would be cut to allow a quicker action of the bell. In regard to the new hose house for Prideville, he said the committee desired a little more time to consider the matter. Mr. Lounsbury said that a dog catcher and a pound had been secured and already sixteen dogs had been captured, three of which had been redeemed. Mr. Woolston stated that the stone contract with the Scotch Plains man was not satisfactory, as the crusher is crippled half the time. He said that Mr. Wilson would be willing to furnish stone under reasonable conditions. Mr. Woolston reported that the bids for opening, grading and laying out Watchung avenue had been received, and the same were read as published in The Daily Press. He also stated that as regards the laying of flagging in front of the First Church of Christ building on Grove street, he had learned that church property was not taxable.

The street committee reported that $279.99 had been expended on streets, and $21.50 had been received from the sale of dirt. Mr. Peck offered a resolution which was carried, that $1,000 be borrowed and the same charged to the light account. The same member stated that W. T. Kirk was anxious to receive a payment for his work on the fire bell and tower, but the Council did not propose to pay him in full until the same had been accepted. Mr. Peck then offered a resolution that $1,150 be secured for sixty days, and the same charged to the fire account. Mr. Schutt offered a resolution that the action of Collector Spencer in the payment of $136.87 in favor of the pay roll be confirmed.

The bill of Frank Hubbard, $373.25, for furnishing the proper grades to lay sidewalks in the borough, was objected to by several of the members, as they thought the amount too much. The matter was referred to the proper committee for investigation.

Mr. Peck offered a resolution that a warrant for $1,000 be drawn in favor of W. T. Kirk as part payment on the contract for the fire bell and tower, It was adopted.

Also a resolution offered by Mr. Woolston the crosswalks at the corner of Grove street and Craig place, asked for by Charles Place, was granted. At this point the Watchung avenue matter was brought up through a resolution offered by Mr. Woolston that the street be opened, and that the money for doing the work be raised by the issuing of certificates of indebtedness. A heated discussion followed in which Messrs. McLaughlin and Valiant took the opposing side. Mr. Valiant moved that his former resolution passed at the last meeting be reconsidered which was so ordered. Mr. McLaughlin then offered a resolution that the Mayor appoint commissioners to assess benefits, and report in one month, and after the assessments are made it be left to the option of the Council whether to proceed or not.

Mr. Valiant's original resolution came up the second time and was defeated. Mr. Valiant alone voting for it. Mr. McLaughlin's resolution was then introduced which was defeated. Mr. McLaughlin voted alone for the resolution. Mr. McLaughlin then offered another resolution that commissioners be appointed to assess benefits, and report at the earliest possible moment. This resolution was adopted. Mr. Lounsbury voting in the negative. Mr. Woolston then introduced his former resolution that the street be opened. This resolution was also adopted, and brought forth a very lively discussion on all sides. Mr. McLaughlin intimated treachery and Mr. Lounsbury objected. The former apologized for his remarks. All voted for Mr. Woolston's resolution except Messrs. Valiant and McLaughlin. The work of opening the street will now proceed without delay, and commissioners will be appointed to assess benefits. Mr. Peck then offered a resolution that the fire, water and lamp committee be authorized to take the necessary precautions for protection for the Fourth, which was adopted. The Council then adjourned to meet Again on Friday evening.

WIFE BEATERS IN COURT.

BRUTES WHO HAVE A PENCHANT FOR ABUSING THEIR PARTNERS.

One Pleaded Guilty and Was Fined $10—The Other Discharged Because the Wife Withdrew the Complaint.

The city lockup is not a particularly pleasing place, especially on a warm day and so the city court trials were hustled through this morning with all the speed that was convenient to justice.

The heat seemed to have affected the brain of John Farington, the first culprit, for he didn't know how to plead. The charge against him was being drunk and disorderly and abusing his wife. Chief Grant told how the police had been called a number of times to his home on East Front street, to prevent him from beating his wife. Saturday the police were notified that he was beating the neighbors' children and his own wife. He was arrested by this time he decided to plead guilty to the first part of the charge and was fined $10.

Michael Manchun, a section foreman from Yonkers, was found in a drunken condition on Plainfield avenue and Eighth street Saturday.

"I'm a stranger in town and got a little full on the Fourth," he explained to the Judge, as his teeth chattered with fright. Sentence was suspended on him.

Paradise Alley had her representatives in court. There were James Errico and his wife, both Italians. The complaint was against Errico, who was charged by his wife with beating her. He was arrested on Friday night and came up Saturday, but the trial was set down for this morning. Mrs. Errico claimed her husband had kicked and beaten her and showed the marks of his teeth and fingers on her arm. When told of his crime, Errico merely waved his hands and remarked, "Me no understand." At the last moment Mrs. Errico withdrew the complaint. Judge DeMeza dismissed the prisoner after lecturing both severely.

The trial of Nicholas Kelly charged with being disorderly and using indecent language was adjourned indefinitely.

Contusion of the Forehead.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cooper's ten-year-old daughter, of 124 East Fourth street, sustained a contusion of the forehead Friday morning about 10 o'clock. While attempting to cross Park avenue at the corner of Fourth street, Mrs. George Thatcher drove by in a dog cart, and the little girl came in contact with the hub on the cart, which resulted in throwing her. She was picked up by Mr. Moy, the druggist, and assisted to her home. The girl seemed to be more frightened than injured.

MISHAPS OF THREE DAYS

UNFORTUNATE INDIVIDUALS WHO WERE INJURED IN VARIOUS WAYS.

Some Were in Runaways, Some in Bicycle Tumbles, While One or Two Were Injured by Getting Near Explosions

A man named John Bodi, a miner, who has just been released from a New York hospital, where his eyes were being treated, fell off a railroad bridge near Fanwood Friday night, cutting a terrible gash in the top of his head. He was turned over to the Plainfield police by the Fanwood authorities Saturday morning, and then taken to Muhlenberg Hospital, where nineteen stitches were taken in his wound. He is now doing very well.

Christian Geriach, an assistant coachman for Charles Hyde, of East Front street, met with an exceedingly painful accident yesterday afternoon while riding a bicycle on East Second street. Mr. Geriach had only ridden a short distance, and in attempting to get off the wheel his right foot touched the ground where there was a quantity of clay. This caused his foot to slip, and as a result his right leg midway between the knee and ankle sustained a compound fracture. He was cared for by kind hands and assisted to a nearby piazza, and the ambulance sent for, he was then taken to the hospital where under the care of Dr. Long he is getting along as well as can be expected.

While driving along Somerset street last evening about 6:30 o'clock, Eugene Hoerster, of the borough, was thrown from his wagon and sustained severe injuries to his right arm. The horse became frightened and ran away and the wagon was a complete wreck. The horse ran through Somerset place and jumped a fence in Mrs. Brokaw's yard, where he was caught. Mr. Hoerster called at Dr. Mattison's office and received treatment there for his injured arm.

Louis Dunn, of Somerset street, while taking care of Grocer Van Winkle's horses, received a painful injury over the right eye which was caused by a kick from one of the animals. His nose was also bruised. He went to Dr. Mattison's office and was properly treated.

Saturday night Joseph Miller, of East Front street, called on Dr. Mattison and stated that a young man named Sutterlein had without any cause kicked him in the forehead over the right eye. The cut was bleeding profusely and Miller was very weak. The doctor took several stitches in the cut and Miller was able to go home in a little while.

Joseph Carbone, of North avenue, spent Saturday at Boynton Beach. While there he set off some fireworks. That is the reason he is now carrying his right hand in a bandage and sling. It happened while he was touching off a flower pot. The thing exploded before he realized the result. His hand pains him very much.

Rufus Blue, of West Fourth street, was cleaning the mouth of a loaded cannon, Saturday, when his sister lighted a firecracker over the hole and set fire to the fuse. It wasn't the cannon's fault that his hand was not blown off, but as it was he will not be able to use it for sometime.

Ned Waring, of Park avenue, had the lower part of his face burned Saturday by a too close interview with the muzzle of a cannon.

A party of young men from Washington Park visited the belfries of the Holy Cross church and the Church of the Redeemerslate Friday evening and welcomed the Fourth in with a merry clanging of bells.

John Gray, a lad about nine years old, living on Grant avenue, visited New Market Saturday with a party of friends. They were enjoying themselves on the island with their cannon when one of the party accidentally dropped a lighted match in the open box of powder. Gray was close by and had his face badly burned and the hair singed off his head. He was taken to a New Market physician and afterwards brought home.

Illustrated His Subject.

Rev. J. H. Carter, D. D., of Newark, gave an interesting illustrated lecture Thursday in the basement of Reform Hall for the benefit of the Filmore Avenue Baptist church. The subject was on the "Life of Christ from the Annunciation to the Ascension, His Baptism, Temptation, Crucifixion and Resurrection." The doctor had about forty-eight fine selected views, which gave his audience an excellent idea of the subject. Dr. Carter is a thoroughly educated man and a master of his subject. His talk was not only interesting but very helpful.

A Pleasant Euchre Party.

Mrs. L. William Serrell, of Crescent avenue, gave a pleasant euchre party Friday evening in honor of her guest, Miss Williams, of Jersey City. Miss Jessie Munger and Mrs. Jules Erickson won the first and second prizes for the women, and Walter Moore and W. B. Gilbert secured the first and second prizes for the men. Miss Kirkner was awarded the consolation prize.

Irresistible.

"Sir," said a Heidelberg student to a night watchman, in the wee sma' hours of the morning, "sir, I would like to ask you a question."

"Go ahead, young man," answered the dignitary; "that is what I am here for."

"Well, sir, does the law permit me to call a policeman an ass?"

"You had better be gone immediately, or I will lock you up."

The votary of Alma Mater advanced a few steps on his way home, but returned and asked humbly:

"But, sir, is it permitted to call an ass a policeman?"

The law doesn't say anything about that, young man."

"It doesn't, eh? Well, good morning, Mr. Policeman."—Amusing Journal.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY,

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

In Plainfield an attempt is being made to stop the trolley cars running Sundays.—New York Journal.

A lie from beginning to end.

It is said that Senator Stokes, of Cumberland county, will probably succeed Secretary of State Kelsey.

It has been suggested that Chief Doane should be authorized to call the ambulance in emergency cases without first obtaining a permit.

Murders and shooting scrapes have been happening all around Plainfield for the past year, but now we are shocked with one in our midst. It is a deplorable affair.

Senator Hill's political funeral dirge has been chanted more times than any other man in public life, but in every great National affair or contest he looms up with increasing brilliancy. He is one of the greatest men in public life today.

Gentlemen of the Borough Council, the people want Watchung avenue opened and they don't care whether the assessments are collected before or after the improvement is completed. Rescind the odious resolution passed at the last meeting.

Some idea of the extent to which fleecing amounts to in restaurants can be obtained from the statement of a New York restaurant proprietor, who was formerly a waiter. While his wages were only $8 a week, his tips frequently amounted to $175 a month.

The National Silver Party of New Jersey was organized at Trenton recently, and delegates were elected to attend a convention to be held at St. Louis, July 22d. James McCullough will represent the Eighth District. The platform adopted says that the object of the gold standard is to establish in this country a moneyed aristocracy, and it demands the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1.

No better indication of the increasing business in Plainfield is needed than the fact that the postmaster's salary has been increased $100 a year, and his pay is judged by the amount of business transacted. In New Brunswick the salary of the postmaster has been reduced $100. And yet New Brunswick papers prate of how much more business is done in that old Dutch town than modern, up-to-date Plainfield.

The rule just adopted by the State Board of Education requiring a competitive examination for applicants for County Superintendencies of public schools before appointments are made, will, if properly carried out, be of great benefit to the county schools of the State. Heretofore the County Superintendents have been chosen without much regard to their qualifications, but mainly through their political "pull," the result being the appointment in some counties of men ridiculously incompetent. The office is one of large responsibilities, and its incumbent can do either much good or considerable harm to educational interests, according as he may be qualified or not for his duties. It should be deemed as necessary to ascertain the capabilities of a County Superintendent as it is to know the qualifications of a public school principal, and the only way to find out is by a regular examination of the applicant for the office.—Newark Advertiser.

The result of the experiment of serving a free midnight lunch to the police force is just what The Press expected when it was inaugurated. At the start it was some kindly inclined and benefitcent city official who was settling for the lunch, but now it will be the taxpayer who will advance the coin for he coffee and sandwiches, for such was the resolution passed by the Common Council last night. The amount necessary for this little feature of municipal government as viewed by the present city fathers is $75 per month. A mere bagatelle, some may think, but The Press regrets that any city official should become imbued with this idea of finance. So far as our information goes, there is not another city in the country that furnishes its police with a free lunch, and we cannot see the necessity of such an expense in Plainfield. Already the tax rate in this city is very high. Expenses should be reduced rather than increased by indulging in such useless luxuries as a free lunch for the police, because it will not increase the efficiency of the force to any extent. With the policemen receiving their uniforms, bicycles and food free of cost to themselves, it seems that they are faring pretty well—a good deal better than they would if they were of the force. The city ought not to be asked to pay for the fads of some of its officials.

AT THE CONVENTION.

Silver Men Carry Everything Their Own Way.

BOLT OF NEW YORKERS HEADED OFF.

Eastern Delegates Incensed at the High Handed Action of Silver Men, and Are Only Prevented From Leaving the Convention by William C. Whitney—Governor Altgeld Addresses the Convention and Gets a Great Ovation—S. P. White, of California, Was Chosen Permanent Chairman of the Convention.

From The Press of July 8th.

Chicago, July 8—The sun glittered down this morning on a haggard looking lot of delegates. Much of last night was consumed by the delegates in the committee rooms and when they did get to bed there was no rest on account of the almost ceaseless noise of shouters for this or that boom. The weather was beautifully clear, however, however, as the advance guard came strolling towards the massive coliseum in which the convention is being held.

The drooping eyelids and careworn countenances of the delegates as they arrived spoke effectually of the hard night put in in the committee rooms. The delegates strolled in irregularly without regard to States until 10:15, when the Iowa delegation marched in with a big Boies banner at their head. This served to cause some enthusiasm and the delegates began to stir from their lethargy. A few minutes after, the north galleries resounded with a noise as though a band of Indians had swooped down upon that particular section of the hall. This was caused by the entrance of the Bryan Club, of Nebraska, with a huge banner, emblazoned with silver. As soon as this emblem met the gaze of the rest of the western delegates there was a vociferous shout that rolled into a tremendous volume of earsplitting sound above which a voice could not be heard a foot away. The enthusiasm continued for several minutes. From this time forward the seats commenced to fill rapidly as one after another of the various delegations arrived.

The section alloted to New York, was noticeably vacant, and it was soon learned that the New York delegation was in a conference. The more the New Yorkers thought of the revolutionary tactics indulged by the majority yesterday, when the selection of Senator Hill for temporary chairman was rejected, the more indignant they became. Among some of the most radical delegates there was a strong sentiment of bolting the convention. When the caucus was called this morning this sentiment found an opening in such a resolution. Several of the most prominent leaders advocated this action, but Mr. Whitney got the attention of the delegates, and in a powerful speech counseled moderation, and prevented the adoption of the resolution. While this was going on among the New Yorkers, the convention hall had been filled.

At 10:51 Chairman Daniels brought his gavel down on the table and called for order. The New York delegation was not as yet in their seats. Rev. Dr. Green, of Iowa, offered prayer, during which the immense audience arose to a standing position.

The first business taken up was the call of the committees and afterwards the report of the committee on credentials was called for.

At 11:22 all the seats alloted to the New York delegation were filled. Senator Hill was not present.

Gov. Hogg, of Texas, is called upon to address the convention and seconds the platform. He advocates a more friendly spirit among the delegates. He takes up the Republican platform and scores its protective tariff plank, and ridicules and deprecates the international agreement on the currency question set forth by the Republicans.

11:52—Senator Blackburn, of Kentucky, is now speaking. He says: "The American people look to the convention to right their Governmental wrongs, and we are here to meet the reasonable expectations of the people. Let us take no action that is not tempered with the utmost measure of fairness. We mean to put silver back on its old basis of ratio with gold and make the country prosperous."

12:05—A motion was put for the convention to adjourn, but it was defeated.

12:15—Governor Altgeld commences addressing the convention. He says: "Upon yesterday the seat of war was transferred from the east to the Mississippi river. The days of the common people have dawned." He proceeds with profound attention. He deprecates the unhappy conditions and refers to the immense sums of money held by English money lenders who work a stringency in the currency. He speaks derisively of the money lenders and proposes to pay them back in silver and gold. He says: "The English money lenders went to St. Louis two weeks ago and took charge of the convention, with Mark Hanna as their agent, and Mr. Hanna nominated the candidate for President. The other members of the firm are here trying to put the same halter around your neck. Are you going to let them do it? No! No!"

At 12:44 he closed his remarks amid great applause.

After the address of Governor Altgeld, S. P. White, of California, was chosen as permanent chairman and assumed the chair.

Mr. Jones, of West Virginia, gives way to the Hon. George Williams, of Massachusetts. He is a young man and a good speaker. He claims that this is not a sectional battle, but a contest to restore the union of the States.

As Mr. Williams concluded he shook hands with Mr. Daniels and a report from the committee of credentials was called for. There was a demand for a roll call on the report of the committee, but it was withdrawn and the committee withdrew to further consider contests.

The convention took a recess to await the report of the committee.

The Convention has adjourned till 5 o'clock.

The committee on resolutions, which was controlled by the white-metal men, adopted a platform which will be submitted to the convention today, and of which the following is a rough draft:

Declaring for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1, independent of any other nation.

Denouncing the issuing by the Government of bonds in times of peace and allowing private individuals to reap benefit therefrom.

Demanding that the power of issue notes be taken away from national banks.

Declaring for a tariff for revenue only and making a declaration that a revival of the McKinley bill would be a menace to the country.

Demanding the enactment of a constitutional amendment to permit an income tax.

Expressing sympathy for the belligerents of Cuba.

Demanding that the immigration of pauper labor be restricted.

Favoring liberal pensions to the old soldiers.

Approving Senator Hill's bill prohibiting punishment in contempt cases and denouncing the House for not passing it.

Denouncing the Pacific Funding bill.

Approving a third term as President for any man.

Denouncing the extravagance of the last Republican Congress.

The Bland managers are this morning predicting the nomination of "Silver Dick" on the second ballot, although there is a good deal more uncertainty about the result of the contest for the nomination than there is about anything else connected with the Convention.

Losing Flesh

You naturally lose flesh in the summer and running down is so easy. You get a little weaker each day without hardly noticing it. There is loss of appetite, headache, weakness of the muscles, disturbed sleep, weakness of memory, and these are the beginning of nervous prostration. Iron and tonics and bitters may afford some temporary relief, but what you need is a food for body, brain and nerves.

Scott's Emulsion.

of Cod-liver Oil with the Hypophosphites, furnishes just the nourishment needed for those who are run down and pale and thin and weak. If you lose flesh in summer take Scott's Emulsion now. Don't wait till fall or winter before beginning.

For sale at 50 cts. and $1.00 by all druggists.

FOR THE FRESH AIR FUND.

A Successful Festival Given at the Home of Bessie Martin.

The ice cream festival arranged by Bessie Martin for the benefit of the local babies fresh air fund was held Tuesday from 5:30 to 9 o'clock on Mr and Mrs. H. J. Martin's porch, Fairview avenue. The event was a great success, as the profits will probably reach $15. During the prescribed hours over 200 persons were present to assist in the worthy object. The young girls worked energetically and they were certainly deserving of all success. Bessie Martin and Mettie Young were in charge of the ice cream. Grace Emmons and Emma Line presided at the candy table, and Hattie Messerschmidt served the lemonade. Clara Martin was in charge of the cake table, Hazel Martin the flower booth, and Clyde Slater, the pop-corn table. Everything was sold out except two cakes, and it was necessary to send after ice cream several times. An attractive feature was the music box, kindly loaned by White, the dry goods merchant.

FAILED TO CLOSE ON SUNDAY.

Westfield Business Men Defied the Orders of the Sabbath Observance League.

The notices sent out by the Sunday Observance League, of Westfield, notifying business men to keep their places closed on Sunday, apparently had no weight, for, if anything, secular business was carried on more openly Sunday than ever, by those who have been in the habit of doing Sunday business.

The feeling among the business men against the Sunday Observance League is very bitter, and Robert Johnson, secretary of the league, has been subjected to many petty annoyances and insults since the notices were sent out. The league is fully informed as to the places that kept open Sunday and the next step that they will take is awaited with considerable interest. The league has a legal adviser, but his identity is not known.

Successful Fire Extinguisher.

Several hundred people were attracted to the vacant lot near the Babcock building Tuesday to witness the exhibit of the Knickerbocker Fire Extinguishing Company. A large box was filled with the most inflammable material, saturated with kerosene and a match touched. In a moment the whole mass was a seething box of hot flames. Then it was that one of the little cans of the extinguishing fluid was directed on the fire and in less than 45 seconds the flames were entirely extinguished. Another test was made with gasoline, being equally successful. The extinguishers are neatly designed cans holding a quart of the fluid. They are filled with a gas that will force the fluid a distance of thirty or forty feet, and are hermetically sealed when prepared, so that they are ready for instant use. They will instantly extinguish any small fire.

Complains Against a Night Lunch.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:

I noticed in your edition last evening that the Common Council had granted a permit to a stranger from Bridgeport, Conn., to run an all-night lunch wagon on the public streets. This is the way they protect taxpayers who do business here, pay rent, help, etc., by giving a permit to a stranger to take up part of a street, and charge him no rent or taxes. I am interested as I cater to the lunch business, and claim that this is not fair treatment. There are two restaurants and two lunch rooms on North avenue, which are open as long as business keeps them there. If you take up before 12 o'clock most often 1 o'clock, so there is no need to give anyone any such permit, except to take the bread from our mouths. A few months ago we were ordered to take down a few signs that reached a little over the line. Could we get a permit to keep them there? Of course not, but a stranger can come here, get on the police force, get a permit to block the street, or do anything he likes, in preference to people that have lived or done business here for years. I do not think this is fair play.

E. H. Clevely.

Eli Hill, Lumber City, Pa., writes, "I have been suffering from piles for twenty-five years and thought my case incurable. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve was recommended to me as a pile cure, so I bought a box and it performed a permanent cure." This is only one of thousands of similar cases. Eczema, sores and skin diseases yield quickly when it is used. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

FROM BUMPERS TO JAIL.

FOUR TRAMPS ARRESTED, TWO RELEASED AND TWO SENT TO JAIL.

The Quartet While Scurrying Along the Track as They Ran From a Freight Train, Ran Right Into the Police.

A long freight train pulled into Plainfield early Wednesday about 4 o'clock and as it slowed up in front of the station, four men were seen scurrying away in the faint morning light. Patrolman Flanagan and Vanderveg were on duty in the neighborhood, while Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Frederickson were passing by on their regular rounds of inspection.

The officers saw the men leave the train and soon captured them. All four were locked up on the charge of stealing a ride on a freight train.

This morning they were arraigned before City Judge DeMeza. There was one man of middle age, Thomas Conloyn, he said his name was, and the other three were lads, Frank Kraus, 18 years, Joseph Seulley, 18 years, and Thomas Moore, 21 years. All four claimed they were from Philadelphia and were beating their way along. Kraus and Seulley were not half looking lads and evidently felt the disgrace of being locked up. Kraus had a certificate from a Philadelphia school telling of his good character. After lecturing the lads, Judge DeMeza suspended sentence on them.

When he turned his attention to Conloyn and Moore, these worthies declared they must get to Philadelphia tomorrow or lose their jobs. They couldn't explain their presence on a train going in the opposite direction and begged for mercy.

Each was given his choice between a fine of $3 or ten days in jail.

Struck by a Long Branch Train.

Charles Daube, forty years old, was struck by an east-bound passenger train on the Long Branch Railroad Monday night while driving across the Court street crossing in Elizabeth. He was thrown from his wagon and received injuries about the head and body, and had his hand broken. His horse was knocked to one side and badly cut about the legs and body. The wagon was carried a distance of two blocks on the front part of the engine. The injured man was removed to the hospital, where, it is said, he will recover.

Six Tramps Made Him Give Up.

Six tramps blocked the way of Garret Yates, a farmer of Franklin Park, while he was on his way afoot from New Brunswick to Metuchen Monday night. Mr. Yates made a move as if to escape and heard the click of a revolver. Then a bullet whizzed by his head. He concluded that discretion was the better part of valor and held up his hands. The tramps took his watch and chain and a small amount of money. They ran to the woods and Mr. Yates returned to New Brunswick and notified the police.

Just as Was Expected.

E. J. Richards, the Liberty street druggist, says he already notices a great increase in his business since the street cars have been passing his door. Other merchants in that locality also report a similar increase in business since the West Fourth street branch was opened. They claim to have secured customers from the outlying district who heretofore took the steam cars into town.

Blackford to Fight the Gazelle Company.

John L. Blackford has determined to fight the Gazelle Engine Company in their efforts to dismiss him from the rolls of the company for non-attendance to fires. Blackford claims that he has attended the fires and will bring the matter before the Common Council.

Lost Her Pocketbook.

Mrs. Crocker, of this city, left town Friday morning on the 1:17 train for Chicago, and when she reached Philadelphia she discovered that her pocketbook had been stolen. She was obliged to get off at the latter place and telegraph home for five money before she could continue her journey.

Small in size, but great in results. De Witt's Little Early Risers are gently but thoroughly, curing indigestion, dyspepsia and constipation. Small pill, safe pill, best pill. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75c.

"Wake up, Jacob, day is breaking!" so said De Witt's Little Early Risers to the man who had taken them to arouse his sluggish liver. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

WHY $85 IS ENOUGH FOR A BICYCLE.

Considering, first, that our reputation for high-class work is the best; second, that the material used is of the highest quality; third, that our facilities for manufacturing are unsurpassed; fourth, that the special features are numerous and so advantageous; and last, that each machine carries with it a strong, honest guarantee—why should it not be as good or better than the "best"? Instalments, $20 down and $10 monthly, or $15 down and $5 weekly.

NOT ALL STOPPED YET.

Borough Officials Find That the Pollution of the Brook Continues.

The North Plainfield Board of Health is still hot after the trail of those who are sewering into Green brook. A short time ago, Inspector William Pangborn made an investigation and found that two cesspools from the Babcock building were running into the brook. The executors of the Babcock estate were notified that they were violating the law and would be prosecuted if they did not remedy the difficulty. They immediately agreed to connect with the new sewer system and on this ground the Board will not proceed against them.

Inspector Pangborn also found that the Pond Machine Tool Company were running a sewer from their shops into Green brook and that much offensive matter was being dumped into the stream in this manner. Borough Counsel Reed, under instruction from the Board of Health, has notified the company of the violation and informed them that if it was not stopped immediately they would be proceeded against under the State act which provides a fine of $1,000 or two years imprisonment, or both, for a conviction. They will no doubt disconnect.

Several other connections with the brook, which are located above Somerset street, have been found by Inspector Pangborn. Those responsible for them will be proceeded against.

Customer—I want a remedy for catarrh.

Drug Clerk—All right, sir. Here's a blood tonic that is advertised to build up the constitution.

Customer—Young man, do you think I'm going to dose myself with a blood tonic for months, just on the chance of it doing me some good? Not much! I want immediate relief; besides, catarrh is a local affection, and no tonic or blood purifier ever made can cure it. Here's 50 cents. Let me have Ely's Cream Balm. It's the only thing I know of to cure catarrh.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds, croup and whooping cough. It is pleasant, safe and reliable. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

Last summer one of our grandchildren was sick with a severe bowel trouble. Our doctor's remedies had failed, then we tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which gave very speedy relief. We regard it as the best medicine ever put on the market for bowel complaints.—Mr. E. S. Gregory, Fredericktown, Mo. This certainly is the best medicine ever put on the market for dysentery, summer complaint, colic and cholera infantum in children. It never fails to give prompt relief when used in reasonable time and the plain printed directions are followed. Many mothers have expressed their sincere gratitude for the cures it has effected. WEDDING IN DOLLDOM.

A Unique Party Enjoyed by Little People on Bank Place Yesterday.

A novel, and very unique social event was held Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Tier, on Bank place. It was called a doll wedding and was arranged by Miss Gertrude Tier as a surprise for Miss Ida Tier.

The bride and groom, maid of honor and guests were all dolls. The bride was Bessie Tier, gowned in white silk, trimmed with orange blossoms and the maid of honor, Bessie Borsough, was also gowned in white silk, while the groom, Wm Borsough, was attired in black broadcloth. The bridal party stood under an arch of orange blossoms and were married by Rev. Dr. Craig, who was attired in black broadcloth. A reception followed the ceremony when refreshments were served. The table was nicely decorated and in the centre was placed a wedding fruit cake. The bride and groom left during the afternoon for Chicago and will return about Thursday when they will take up their residence with the mother of the bride, Miss Ida Tier. The guests present were: Beatrice Taylor, Libbey Vanvelsor, Harvey Borsough and wife Edith and son Willie, Bessie Brown, Emma LaForge, Lulu Green, Blanche Borsough, Carrie Tradeell.

BIG TIME FOR THE PARKS

A GLORIOUS CELEBRATION AT THE POPULAR CLUB GROUNDS.

One Continual Round of Pleasure from Early Morn Till Late at Night, in Which All Sorts of Pastimes Took Place

Never was there such a successful day at the Park Club as Saturday. The Fourth was celebrated in a grand and glorious manner with everything from fireworks to a dog fight; the latter, however, was not on the programme, but was arranged at the last moment by one of the participants. For the last week Janitor Israel Jones and his corps of sable assistants have been hard at work preparing for the celebration, while the Fourth of July committee has been laboring over it for nearly a month.

The club house and grounds on Washington avenue presented a gala appearance. The lawn itself was in fine condition, the result of constant care, and the tennis courts were also specially prepared. Long strings of Japanese lanterns were stretched around the grounds and from convenient posts to the club house. Their brilliant colors showed well in the daylight, but it was not until evening that they appeared at their best. The Stars and Stripes of all sizes and all shapes waved from club house, tennis nets and every point where they could be placed. The interior of the club house was a perfect bower of red, white and blue. There were large flags, small flags and middle sized flags arranged about the ceiling and walls, while streamers of tri-colored bunting were draped from chandelier to corner, over the doors and around windows. There was not too much of it, either, for the best artistic talent in Washington Park was called out to assist in its arrangement. The pagoda that guards the approach over Green brook from its elevated position on the extremity of the bowling alleys, was also charming in its appearance. The same hands that had so changed the interior of the club house had been at work here. The electric lights that illuminated it had been enclosed in Japanese lanterns which, in the evening, shed a soft light over the scene, and aided by the flags that screened it from the view of the occupants of the club-house, made it a romantic place, and many couples took advantage of it. Early on Saturday morning Janitor Jones and his assistants were on hand putting the finishing touches on the decorations. As the hour of 10 approached there was a general exodus for the Y. M. C. A. baseball field just across the brook.

As the visitor entered, he or she was beguiled into buying a most remarkable score card, which informed him that the "Cuban Bachelors" and the "Spanish Benedicts" of the Park Club would play an "exhibition (?) game of baseball. It is rather hard to say why the Bachelors were designated as Cubans, unless it was because they were fighting to secure their freedom from Bachelordom, which is hardly likely, or else the Benedicts were termed Spanish as they are such tyrants. However, it was, two remarkable teams lined up soon after the appointed hour. They consisted at the start of the following:

CUBAN BACHELORS.	SPANISH BENEDICTS.
Percy Sandford	pitcher	C. W. Smith
R. W. Erickson	catcher	J. T. Scott
Dr. Matthewson	first base	Van Deventer
Gilford Cooley	second base	S. Townsend
H. Murray	third base	H. McCoss
C. C. Worth	shortstop	H. Bound
C. O. Stevens	left field	J. Erickson
W. S. Bunyon	center field	Boy Blue
L. H. VanBuren	right field	J. C. Peck

Peter B. Matthews held the all-important office of captain-general of the rebelling Bachelors, while Roger Erickson was commander-in-chief of the same troops on the field. The cruel tyrants of Spain, otherwise the married men, had Edwin T. Douglass and Augustus VanDeventer to fill those positions.

Never was a battle harder fought than this one. Leonidas, with his band of three hundred Spartans at Thermopylae, were not "in it" with the Benedicts. They withstood the shock of the advancing Bachelors, and as man after man tumbled over in the dust, usually in his efforts to stop a grounder, they remained true to their colors, got in the way of base runners or slung their bats with a vicious lunge at Erickson's shins. But it was of no avail. After the Bachelors rolled up a score of four-teen in the third inning, and then only stopped because Worth thought one of the fielders was dead, and batted a ball at him to see, there remained only one thing to be done. Captain-General Douglass secured the best terms possible, and nine very warm, dusty and tired Benedicts departed from the field after giving a farewell cheer for their opponents. Just three and a half innings were played, and the score stood 26 to 10 in favor of Cuba. The Benedicts had evidently "fixed" the boy in charge of the score board, for he persisted in reducing Cuba's score by two.

At the start "Charley" Smith went into the pitchers box for the Benedicts. Resent the ball flying over the plate in the most improved manner, tying himself up in knots at each effort. One inning was all he wanted, and then he retired to centrefield, where he was forced to keep up a war dance most of the time to escape from the cloud of "Jersey" mosquitoes that that showed a special fondness for his golf stockings. "Doc" Thiers filled the box the next inning, and attempted to try his remarkable curve, but somehow it didn't go. He had a little trick, however, that proved very unpleasant for the batsman. When he happened to get three balls on one of the Bachelors, he delivered the next with dazzling swiftness at the batsman's ribs, and the poor "bach" took his first.

But although "Doc" was a trifle out of practice at pitching, he was equal to any of New York's most expert cracksmen when he came to steal bases. He attempted to stop one grounder with his wrist and now believes that dentistry and baseball are not companionable occupations.

C. W. McCuchen was late in coming, but he appeared toward the close of the first inning in an immaculate white flannel suit and skipped about the field like a colt. He played at short stop until the third inning and then pitched. He enjoyed seeing the ball go, and he sent it right over the plate. And the Bachelors didn't "do a thing" to him. Every man on that team had at least two chances at bat in the one inning.

J. T. Scott was a surprise to all as catcher, himself probably included, for he caught for half the game. It wasn't very pleasant when the foul balls whistled around his ears like the mosquitoes around Smith's pedal extremities, but he stuck to it and crouched behind the batter like a tiger ready to spring on its prey.

Jules Erickson caught the rest of the game and wore an expression like a martyred monk as he forgot and caught the ball on his gloveless hand. Of course, every man wore a glove as large as they could get and Henry McGee bought a sofa pillow, but the referee barred it out. McGee played a great game, however, and his crowning feat was a stolen base. It was more fun, he declared, than running for the train in the morning.

Van Deventer directed his team and also the ball several times. A stoppage of everything that didn't come within his reach, but not always with his hands. He was the crack hitter of the team and went after the ball like a schoolmaster in pursuit of a disobedient pupil.

Samuel Townsend appeared to be the only one on the team that was not "dead" after the game. He really put up a good game at second and was acceptable for a number of put outs.

Councilman J. C. Peck selected right field, as he thought he wouldn't have anything to do, but he miscalculated the crack batters on the other side. He usually stopped the balls by going at them headfirst and tumbling down before them if they tried to go by. He sprinted around the bases at terrific speed and managed to arrive safely, after cleaning the base line of obstructing players.

There was only one man on the Bachelor side that appreciated the real idea of the game and that was George O. Stevens. He realized that he was a Cuban and tried to appear as one. He marched out for practice in a pair of tight-fitting pink and white striped knickerbockers while the rest of his comely form was arrayed in a colored shirt and black stockings. He wore a green soft hat with a yellow sunflower embroidered on it, while a linen duster, the tails of which danced in the breeze as he ran to escape a grounder, added to the artistic effect. To tell the truth, that coal dealer of ours was a "beaut" and no mistake. All his playing was on the phenomenal order, especially his base running.

Walter Murray was one of the few who really knew how to play ball, and so he had to act as base runner for most of his team.

The Benedict battery, Sanford and Erickson, stood it out for the entire game, and while Sandford was hit rather heavily, he kept his head and threw a straight ball. He improved with his work, however, and astonished the Spanish tyrants. Erickson caught very well and deserves credit for it, even though he did break his record by melting down seven collars during the game.

On the edge of the grove that bordered the field on the right stood Laurens H. VanBuren. He smiled on the grandstand in the distance and wished he was there. That was about all he had to do except to get out of the way of a few flys that were batted in his direction. The umpire soon found that his position at first base was no "cinch." The balls flew about his head until he could imagine he was another Farragut sailing into Mobile Bay under fire. With grim determination he gobbled up everything he could as he used to at Brown University. Will S. Bunyon appeared on the field in a short sleeved jersey, a pair of long trousers and a straw hat. He was very careful about the latter article. From his position at centre field his musical voice could be heard whispering about the warmness of the occasion and the eagle eye of the umpires. He ran bases in a rather novel manner, always keeping one on that straw hat which he carefully laid down before attempting to slide a base.

The most abused man on the entire Bachelor team was Cooley at second base. Ed Douglass hurled his formidable proportions at second base in an attempt to slide, Cooley was in the way but didn't stay so long. He managed to wipe his face in the dust quite heavily, however. Other runners followed Douglass' example until all that remained of Cooley was put out in the field to broil, while Stevens in his Cuban stare, defended the second bag. G. O. Worth hustled around at short stop and bowled the ball at Dr. Matthewson as if intent on a strike or spare.

There were two plays that deserve special mention. One was a double play made by Townsend all alone and the other was McCutchen's famous catch. It struck his shoulder, bounding into the air. When it came down the flannel suit of McCutchen's, not as white as before, was under it and the hands of the veteran president of the Choral Society closed upon it with a deadly grip. "Man out" declared his highness the Major who was umpiring.

And, by the way, the umpires should not be forgotten. According to the score-card they were "B. Ambitious Hegeman, Jr.," and "A. Lovely Codger Marsh." Mayor Hegeman did not appear until the last moment but his appearance more than made up for the delay. Clad in a light colored golf suit, he wore an immense red flower, the botanists are still analyzing it, and a catcher's mask. The latter he carried in his arm throughout the game, to muzzle, it is supposed, any player who should become disorderly. The referee was F. O. Ball, who was particularly selected because he "doesn't know anything about the game."

In the afternoon came the tennis tournament and the afternoon tea, the latter held in the pagoda. The tournament was divided into several classes. The summaries are as follows.

Junior singles, class A, boys between 14 and 15 years—W. A. Townsend defeated Arthur Peck, 6-3, 6-1; winning prize a silver medal.

Junior singles, class B, boys under 14 years. Clarence Boome defeated Morgan Townsend 6-0, 6-0, winning prize silver medal.

Junior doubles, class A—W. A. Townsend and Arthur Peck won prizes, two pairs gold sleeve buttons, as there were no other competitors.

Junior doubles, class B, not played.

Senior doubles, first round—Aug VanDeventer and Sam'l Townsend defeated Percy Sandford and A. Willis West, 5-6, 6-1, 6-1; Arthur Murphy and B. C. Ball defeated Meredith Dryden and Fred P. Taylor, 6-4, 6-2. William M. McCutchen and Chas Dupee defeated Will Thiers and Geo. Worth, 6-1, 6-1.

Semi-final round—Murphy and Ball defeated VanDeventer and Townsend, 6-5, 6-4, 6-5. McCutchen and Dupee drew a bye.

Final round—McCutchen and Dupee defeated Murphy and Ball, 6-1, 6-0, winning prizes two pearl and gold scarf pins.

Senior Singles, first round—Percy Sandford defeated Will Thiers, 6-5, 6-3. Carl Brown defeated A. Willis West, 6-5. The rest of this match and the tournament was postponed until next Saturday on account of darkness.

All of the prizes are subject to challenge.

While the game was going on the guests gathered in the pagoda or on the lawn, some watching the play and others enjoying a little chat. The The afternoon tea was in charge of the following ladies: Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Mrs. Edwin T. Douglass, Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Mrs. B. Arrowsmith Hegeman, Jr., and Mrs. William J. Boome.

As the evening approached, the Chinese lanterns were lighted and the seats that covered the high ground in the rear of the club house began to fill. By eight o'clock every seat on the lawn and club house was occupied with invited guests while the street was crowded with those who had come to view the fireworks from the outside. There were nearly 700 guests inside the grounds while twice as many more gathered in the vicinity of the club house.

Promptly at eight o'clock sis-boom and the first rocket had shot heavenward. For nearly an hour the exhibit continued without a pause and the guests of the Park Club were given a chance to see what good fireworks were. The exhibit was a very creditable one and was carried out without delay. It was furnished by R. G. Rand. Just as the last piece was ready to be started, a few drops of rain told that the long expected shower had arrived. All waited a moment to see it and then there was a grand rush for the club house. It was soon crowded but after a little time while the guests settled themselves, the orchestra that had been playing patriotic airs while rockets, batteries and bombs had followed each other in rapid succession, now started an inspiring two-step and the charming ball room was soon crowded with gliding, whirling couples. It was only another of those delightful affairs for which the Park Club is so famous. The patronesses of the dance were: Mrs Charles A. Reed, Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Mrs. Geo. P. Dupee, Mrs. Edwin T. Douglass, Mrs. William J. Roome, Mrs. Benjamin M. Day, Mrs. Augustus VanDeventer, Mrs. George D. Hallock.

The day had been a long one but it was not until Janitor Jones announced that "the ball was over" and that midnight was there that the young people bid each other good night, or rather good morning, and departed homeward. The rain had stopped and few stars peeped down at the earth below and July Fourth, 1896, had passed into history.

Somebody was responsible for all this pleasure and here is where the Fourth of July committee comes in. The committee was composed of Elston M. French, chairman, W. J. Roome, Aug. VanDeventer, E. T. Douglass, Samuel Townsend and W. N. Runyon, and they deserve all the credit that can be given. The decoration committee was composed of Aug. VanDeventer, chairman, R. W. Erickson and E. T. Douglass. The tennis committee was composed of Samuel Townsend, chairman, H. B. Reed and George C. Worth.

A CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR PARABLE.

Once upon a time a little brown acorn fell to the ground, and as it lay looking upward into the blue vault of Heaven, a great desire took possession of it, that it might some day become a tree like the mother tree above it. This yearning became so intense the little brown coat was nearly bursted, but cold winds and heavy rains came, and our little acorn was very glad to take shelter in a crevice near by. After lying there a long time, it felt the warmth of returning spring, and with it a new resolve to do something worthy of itself. The little brown coat became too tight, thought became action, a green bud made its appearance, a leaf, then further growth. It used all the means possible, drinking in the rain, absorbing the sunlight, spreading its roots here and there, taking fast hold of the rocks beneath, one aim and object in view,—looking upward, spreading outward, — an honor to the forest, and a delight for man. Do you read my story? Do you see in the acorn the desire that took possession of a few of our earnest Christian Endeavor workers a long time ago, that our much loved city should receive the blessing that comes from an enthusiastic host gathered together in a Convention? Like the little acorn, it met with some disappointments; when the convention met in New Brunswick in October, '94, how Plainfield longed to be the favored one for '95, but no, Atlantic City was chosen, and Plainfield came home and settled down to more thorough preparation for the coming year.

With the dawning of another season there were signs of returning life; the spring came up with renewed energy, spreading out its roots like the acorn until it touched Dunellen, Bound Brook, Washingtonville, South Plainfield and many other places, work commenced in earnest, papers were drawn up asking for signatures requesting this favor. Great plans were made and fully materialized for the gathering at Atlantic City. The "White Caps" were everywhere. The tree came to its height when the decision was given, "Plainfield, '96." But like our tree we must not be satisfied with height alone, but must spread out giving shade, to be of service and bearing fruit to help others. There is to be a harvest this fall and it depends upon each one of us dear Christian Endeavorers. We can make this just what we will. Like our tree we must be firmly rooted to the rock, Christ Jesus. We must aim high, get enthused with the spirit of true Christian Endeavor, so that our friends may receive inspiration from us. Then when we come together in October and listen to the host of earnest speakers, become enraptured with the soul inspiring music, there shall not only be a blessing for each one present, it shall be so great each delegate may carry home an abundance, so that our whole State shall feel the influence of the tenth anniversary of Christian Endeavor in New Jersey.

Good Booming Process.

Referring to the decision of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders to macadamize the road from Bound Brook, the Real Estate News says:

The building of this road from Plainfield to Somerville will open up a new country to capitalists and manufacturers. It will enhance the value of every foot of property on its line. It will make Bound Brook, Dunellen and Plainfield accessible to the world. It will be of incalculable benefit to Bound Brook and Somerville. The road passes through a beautiful section of Somerset and Middlesex counties. Let the good work go on.

An Old Prayer Book.

W. S. Benton, of this city, has a prayer book translated from English to the Indian language by his grandfather, Dr. Caleb Benton, in 1788. It is probable that he will put it on exhibition at the Public Library.

Festival of Days.

The members of the W. C. T. U. are arranging for a "Festival of Days," to be given October 27th and 28th. It gives promise of being a grand event.

WILL BE INCORPORATED.

HILLSIDE TENNIS AND GOLF CLUB TO RECEIVE A STATE CHARTER.

This Action is Taken so as to be Able to Erect a Clubhouse on the Golf Course.—New Officers Elected Last Night.

The Hillside Tennis and Golf Club is soon to become an incorporated body. So it was decided at a meeting of the club held recently in the club house and the name of the new organization will be the same as the old. A good attendance of members was present and the resolution was favorably looked upon by all. It was passed and the following officers and trustees were elected: President, George P. Mellick; vice-president, George A. Chapman; secretary, John Doull Miller; treasurer, Josiah Broune; secretary of golf, James S. Anthony; trustees, Howard W. Beebe, Fred W. Walz, A. H. Atterbury, James P. Murray. The affairs of the club were discussed and found in a very satisfactory condition.

The object of the incorporating of the club is so that it will be possible for the club to erect a clubhouse on the golf course. Since the introduction of the golf department into the club it has been the cherished idea of many of members to have a clubhouse on or near the golf course, and the plan was favorably considered last evening.

The idea has been to have a pretty house erected with broad piazzas and attractively located at the beginning of the couse. It would add much to the future success of the club, as it will naturally make an attractive place of rendezvous for the members and their friends on summer afternoons, the idea being to have the house sufficiently commodious to have the regular clubrooms with the other necessary conveniences, such as dressing rooms and storage rooms for golf sticks, etc. Further details will be made public later.

Suit For a Large Amount.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh began a suit for $20,000 in the Supreme Court, today, against the Lehigh Valley railroad company, as attorney for Mrs. Henry Burnett.

Booth-Tucker Coming.

The Salvation Army are making a hard effort to build up their corps in this city, and to create more interest Commander Booth-Tucker will address a meeting in the Army Hall on West Second street, Thursday evening, July 9th. He is the one who recently succeeded Ballington Booth, and has charge of the forces in this country. He left much behind to enter the Army work, and is an intelligent and interesting speaker.

Dangerous Hilarity.

A number of young men, whose brains were fuddled by too much beer, lighted several cannon firecrackers in the barroom of Spiegel's saloon on Friday evening, and considerable damage was done to the interior, including the breaking of many window glasses, the revolving fans, etc. The proprietor was unable to find a policeman just at the moment, and taking a club he soon "cleaned the coop" and convinced the fun-makers that he was boss of the place. He estimates his damage at $60, and the fathers of several of the young men will be compelled to settle the loss.

OLD-TIME CELEBRATION.

NEW MARKET ENJOYS ALL SORTS OF FUN ON THE FOURTH.

The Whole Country Around See the Games and Pastimes That Marked the Celebrations in Times Gone By.

The Fourth of July celebration in New Market, which was arranged and carried out by Friendship Council No. 81, Jr. O. U. A. M., was a most successful affair in its entirety. The celebration was scheduled to begin at 10 o'clock but long before that time the crowd began to arrive and by the time the first event came off, it is estimated that fully four thousand people were on the grounds or in the immediate vicinity. There were all sorts of people present. Some came on bicycles, some in farm wagons with a pair of mules to draw it, some afoot and the typical farmer boy and his best girl, munching peanuts, were very much in evidence.

The grounds where most of the events came off, were prettily decorated for the occasion with bunting and flags. The Ladies' Schubert Orchestra was present, under the direction of Mrs. Buckley, enlivened the time by numerous selections, prominent among which were the National air.

The first event to come off was the two mile bicycle race. It was run in three heats. A. Simmons, colored of this city was the winner of the final heat. The club race was quite a novelty and rather exciting, several of the contestants fell overboard during its progress. It was won by Frank T. Nelson, of New Market.

The boat race with two men in a boat came next. It was won by Eugene Leach, of Dunellen, and Frank Leivers, of this city. Three contestants started in the swimming race, of which Frank T. Nelson, of New Market, was the winner. Everett L. Morgan, of this city, was the winner in the 100 yard dash, and he also captured the prize in the two following events. The pole vault and running high jump. Charles S. Day, of New Market, won the shoe race. George Apgar, of Dunellen, proved to be the best man in the high kicking match. E. L. Morgan was the winner of the running broad jump. Chas S. Day proved himself the fastest man in the sack race.

The winner of the three legged race were Chas S. and Stanley Day of New Market. The next event, the egg race, brought forth a great deal of discussion as to who was the winner. The prize was given to Eugene Leach, of Dunellen, although several competitors finished ahead of him, but those who did broke some of the eggs and on these grounds the prize was given to Leach. The tug of war was quite exciting and was one by David S. Lord, Wm. T. Brokaw and David F. Blackford, who pulled against six men.

Each of the winners of the different events received a handsome prize, and all declared it to be the most successful celebration the council has ever held.

The committee in charge consisted of Joseph E. Meeker, chairman; Robert L. Pierce and Frank F. Randolph.

DEDICATORY EXERCISES

MT. ZION A. M. E. CHURCH AUSPICIOUSLY OPENED YESTERDAY.

The Services Attended by a Number of Out-of-Town Ministers, Who Preached Sermons of Deep Thought and Advice.

Mt. Zion A. M. E. church on West Fourth street was dedicated yesterday under most auspicious circumstances. At each service the attendance was so large that the building was unable to hold all the people.

In the morning Rev. Mr. Thompson, of New Brunswick, preached a sermon from the text "The People Had a Mind to Work." He spoke of Nehemiah's work in building the walls around Jerusalem, and then drew many interesting points therefrom. At this service the trained choir from the New Brunswick church was present and assisted.

In the afternoon at 3 o'clock the regular dedicatory exercises were held. Presiding Elder L. Sturges took charge, after which the trustees, Albert Henry, Theodore Hooper, Mixon Morris and John Jackson, advanced to the platform and presented the keys of the church to the presiding elder. The keys were afterwards turned over to the pastor, Rev. Jas. Groves. The regular choir, assisted by organist Fred White and cornetist Israel Jones, rendered several selections, and Miss Mason sang a pretty solo. The dedication sermon was then preached by Rev. O. T. Scott, of Madison. His text was "Is there no balm in Gilead?" A feature of the afternoon was the raising of funds to pay the balance on the church. The entire amount raised during the day and evening was $150.06.

In the evening Presiding Elder Sturges preached from the text "My Presence Shall Go with Thee, and I Will Give Thee Best." The church is well arranged and adapted to the growing congregation. Rev. Mr. Dosh, of Elizabeth, assisted at the services, as did the pastor, Rev. James Groves.

FORGETTING.

How often the cares of yesterday,
The past with its ghost of pain,
Rise up to our burdened souls to-day
And we bear them all again!

Yet, why should we worry and grieve in mind?
The past can return no more.
'Twere better forgetting things behind
And reaching to those before.

It matters not what "might have been;"
The great are the things to be;
And the highest aim is to now begin
To live for eternity.

Then, leaving the changeless past for aye,
Forgetting its wind and tears,
Step out into the newer, brighter day
And live in the coming years.
—Rev. C. Owen Larrison, in N. Y. Christian Advocate.

BLACK BUTTERFLIES.

How They Presaged Evil for the Girl Who Loved Lieut. Taunton.

The devotion of her look was affording amusement to the chaperons and elderly officers, who, by reason of physical infirmities, were convinced that dancing is a hollow vanity, and therefore abstained from it, but were free to comment upon people and faces, which have been definitely proven not to be vanities, and are indulged in by the most potent, grave and reverend signors, and have their sanction.

She was dancing with Taunton, waltzing the long-stepped, fast, gliding waltz which the cavalry officer is apt to affect, and which has in it the dash and verve commonly supposed to be attributes of that gallant branch of the service.

It was a case of true love, and had not run smooth. Miss Rossini was torn between a desire to obey her parents and the wish to pave the way to their entreaties. The outcome of the conflict has been written beforehand in the book of life these thousands of centuries. A weakness of will—sweetly feminine, but trying when it is not one's self that wields the power—was her worst fault. Her promises were governed entirely by the speaker of the moment. To her father she swore eternal renunciation of Taunton; to Taunton she swore fidelity in her love; and yet, if untruth is to be judged only by its intention, she was not guilty of falsehood. The time had passed, some two weeks before, when she might with honesty tell her father that she would give the first lieutenant up forever. Moreover, Capt. Rossini had begun to lose faith in her promises. At last she replied to his remonstrances one day that she loved Taunton, that he loved her, and that she meant eventually to marry him. At this she turned first red and then pale, but remained firm against all the paternal wrath turned on her head with a vehemence and fervor that were intended to impress her with the deep respect a child should nourish toward the author of its being. To his choice epithets she made no reply. The humor of the situation struck upon them—the exact paradox of parental reverence. But she showed the obstinacy which lies at the bottom of even a weak nature, which is part of the instinct of self-preservation, and she held her tongue.

The strain was telling on her, however. She was greatly changed from the girl who, but six months before, had come back from school to the gayety and adulation of a big army post. The soft bloom of her loveliness was her rather cool prettiness, which lent her charm. The garrison was sorry for her; it did all in its power to help along the meetings of this much enamored couple, and succeeded only too well.

Capt. and Mrs. Rossini were persons of a type not prevalent in the service, with an eye very much to the main chance, worldly wise to a degree. A rich man "back east," who had taken a fancy to the little boarding-school miss, and who sent numerous letters, rolls of music, books and boxes of candy, was looked upon as a far better match than a first lieutenant, even a most exemplary first lieutenant, as Taunton certainly was. When Taunton's attentions had become too marked, he had been forbidden the house, and Lucia had been commanded to repulse him. The mere fact that she promised faithfully to do so, in the presence of her father's wrath had no influence on her when once she was thrown with her lover. It was a choice of evils; whether she should oppose her parents or Taunton, and she chose the former as less unpleasant.

Just at first they kept their meetings secret, but once they were discovered they threw aside concealment and saw each other openly under the very eyes of the powerless father and mother. They took long rides along the foothills, long walks around the outskirts of the garrison, Taunton striding along with his fine head very erect, his gray eyes seeing nothing but the girl at his side, who picked her way daintily among the litter of tin cans and broken bottles and old horse-shoes that marked the approach to the post. There were no leafy bowers under which to stroll, and no velvety swards to press their feet upon; but they could well afford to ignore the surroundings; it is only fair that they should be the value of the background to the picture. By common consent they avoided straying to the creek, where the willows and cottonwoods were thick and green; the "men" and their sweethearts held that field. And the hops, too, they danced together a great deal of the time, and made no secret of the infatuation. Capt. Rossini looked savage and Mrs. Rossini was manifestly uneasy, but an open scene was not to be thought of, public opinion being against the parents. There were bad half-hours and tearful nights for Lucia after each defiance, but there was more sweet in Taunton's love than bitter in her father's fury.

And so it happened that the long notes of the "Santiago" were bearing the two onward with other dancers, snatches of singing, of laughter and of conversation sounding with the music until there broke in suddenly, drowning it all, a clang, a roar, a bellow of thunder. The music hesitated for an instant; for an instant there was a cessation of movement and exclamations of fear; then the bright figures swayed on and the chatter was resumed, and the damp, cool wind of a summer shower blew over them, while the rain beat down on the parade ground.

But Taunton's eyes had lost, somehow, the look of perfect content; the girl's head was farther away from his shoulder, and the swing had gone from their step. They stopped by an open window, to which the wind blew them. There came a sudden gust which wafted in a great dark butterfly that, in the rays of artificial light, seemed dead black, the omen of impending harm. It battered for an instant, dazzled and wind-beaten; fluttered and circled around, then, spreading its shadow wings, it floated steadily, relentlessly upon Taunton and the girl beside him. She watched it with parted lips and frightened eyes as it moved toward her out of the lightning-streaked night, and neither moved until it sank and settled on her light hair. Then she threw up both arms and brushed it off with a heavy blow. The persistence of the light few only in the storm again with a drooping wing.

An orderly crossed the hop-room to the adjutant, who was speaking to the band-master, but none of the listening pairs could hear the soldier's message.

"Well, play it if you can find the music," the adjutant said, coolly, then wheeled about and followed the orderly.

He was back again in ten minutes, speaking hurriedly to Taunton. Taunton answered, bowed his head, and turning away, crossed the room to where Capt. Rossini stood with his daughter.

"Good evening, captain," he said, and waiting for no reply, put his hand on Lucia's arm and drew her aside with an air of proprietorship that left the father aghast.

"Lucia, listen, dear. I've hardly time for even the good-by. Don't look so frightened; it amounts to nothing. Simply some trouble over at the agency that makes it necessary for me to go up there instantly with a detachment. I don't know how long—expectation of trouble for some time. My dear child, you must not look like that; how silly of a soldier's daughter! I tell you I'll be back in a few days. If you are going to faint, come out in the air; the rain has stopped."

She took his arm and let him drag her out upon the steps. The music came to them from within and smothered the sound of their voices.

"Marion, you aren't going to go away? How can you, how can you?" she said, in a whisper.

"How can I? Why, because I'm ordered. But I've an order for you, in turn."

"Well?" She bent her fan and worked her fingers nervously, still leaning hard on his arm.

"You must go with me instantly and tell your father."

"I won't," she answered, with set teeth.

"Why, but Lucia, you will if I say so."

"I won't."

"Then I'll do it alone."

"I can't stop you, but if you do I shall hate you—as much as I have loved you."

"But why? He must be told some time. I'm in a fearful hurry. As a matter of fact, I've no right to be here now; if the C. O. catches me, I'll get the dickens. Come along and tell him."

"I said I wouldn't, and I won't."

"What makes you so obstinate? It's not like you."

"It's like me sometimes. It's like me when I'm afraid."

"Afraid of what?"

"Of papa. I wouldn't mind so dreadfully if you were going to be here, but I think a mean and cowardly act of you to leave me to bear the brunt of it all alone for days and days. It might kill me. I'm worried to death now."

A tear dropped on Taunton's hand and melted the firmness in a moment. He began to plead. "But, Lucia, he must know in a few weeks at most. I've let you persuade me too long already. We ought to have been brave and open in the first place, or else have gone up and made our confession immediately. What the deuce ever made me give in to your silly fears, I can't understand."

"You were glad enough to get me most anyway."

"I suppose that's it. But let me tell him before now. It would be so much better in case—anything were to happen to me."

"Oh, Marion, there's no danger, is there?"

"Probably not. But you can't always be sure. You see, it would be better to have it over with if I should get—hurt."

"You won't, I'm sure you won't. Don't tell him yet, Marion, please don't, and oh, don't get killed! Do you think the black butterfly meant anything—do you?"

"Of course not. Lucia, I'm doing wrong to give in to you, I know it, and I'm going to punish myself by not letting catch me here. Good-by, little girl, good-by. I wish you were braver. Adios!"

Taunton ran down the steps, and, keeping in the shadows of the buildings, made off to the troop quarters. And the girl stood there in the darkness, looking with wide eyes up at the sky, where gray, thick clouds drifted together and apart, showing patches of starry, black heavens, and covering them over as quickly. The cottonwoods rustled in the wind, and her hair blew over her face, all damp and clinging. She bent her head to listen to the sounds, stopped, and started at the sound. She turned about and looked at the barracks where F troop was making ready to depart—a portion of the troop, that is. Men ran by alone, or leading horses; orderlies galloped beneath the shadow of the trees. Shaking with cold, she stood there, her heart seeming numb and still. From the open doors of the soldiers' quarters fell bars of light, and uniformed figures passed in and out, forward and backward. She saw Taunton run along and hurry to his house. In five minutes he was back again in scouting clothes. All the lamps lighted from the barracks showed her. When he had started for his quarters, she had wavered for a second, almost determined to go to him and tell him she would do as he wished. But, as usual, it ended in indecision. It would be all right when he came back, it would be time enough then. She threw up her arm and brushed away a black, flying thing, whose big, soft wings had touched her cheek.

The music had stopped and begun again, and again stopped while she stood there. People had passed her by, going out, but they had not seen her in the shadows of the corner.

There came a sudden silence. The leaves of the trees stopped their whisperings, the wind died away in the night, the voices about ceased, their murmurs. The rain-drops clung to the branches; and out from the silence came the word of command which all the garrison and the rigid woman were waiting to hear: "Prepare to mount."

A clash of accoutrements, a trampling of hoofs, the wind blew fresh once more, the leaves rustled and shook down the drops, and the world went on.

The woman brushed her hair from her eyes, pushed up her skirts, and walked home alone.

It was a beautiful morning after the storm. Every one was on the porches watching guard-mounting with as much interest as if it had not been gone through before, deeply engrossed in the choosing of the commanding officer's orderly.

A second lieutenant sat upon the steps of Capt. Rossini's quarters, beside the sergeant of the day-guard, who was smiling and talking in her old lively way. The second lieutenant reflected that she could not have been much in love with Taunton after all; she seemed in no way affected by his absence on an expedition which was not quite safe, at best. The second lieutenant gathered hopes, for there was a lingering fondness for the pretty creature in his own heart.

So they talked and laughed and watched guard-mounting in the sunshine of the cool morning. When it was over, and the adjutant, and officer of the day, and the staff and the band were going their ways, there came a sound of the hoofs of a galloping horse, and a courier from the agency drew up at the commandant's quarters, while the people on the porches craned their necks and strained their ears in vain attempt to hear the mud-splashed man's message.

The Rossinis' house was next to the commanding officer's. Lucia jumped up and ran down neat lawn to the gate.

"Lucia! come back here! What do you mean?" thundered the captain, indulging in some assorted oaths.

She wheeled about and faced him. "I am going to see what has happened to my husband," she said, deliberately, and did not wait to notice the look on his dark face. The second lieutenant leaned against the railing for support. The courier's words were low, but Lucia read the tidings of death as plainly as if he had shouted them aloud. She flushed—and then turned very pale. There came a queer thud in her heart and a cry half in her hand, and she was in a thousand upon thousands of black butterflies that flew around her. She laughed and put up her hands to seize them, bit at them, struck at them, shook her clenched fists at them, fighting off the soft wings that only herself could see.—Gwendolen Overton, in San Francisco Argonaut.

LITERARY TREE OF THIBET.

Natives of the Country Look Upon It as a Sacred Production.

One by one the traditions of antiquity and the illusions of youth are ruthlessly dispelled. Many people will hear with sorrow and regret that the sacred tree of Kum-Bum in Thibet is, on no less an authority than Mr. Thistleton-Dyer, of Kew Gardens, a fraud and an imposture, like the mahatmas of that interesting but thoroughly mendacious land. Who has not heard of the wonderful tree which sprung from the spot where the mother of Toong-Kape shaved her worthy offspring's head when she dedicated him to the divinities and threw his matted hair on the ground? Who has not seen memorable event the leaves on its branches and the bark on its trunk have not been the same as on ordinary trees, but contained sacred prayers and symbols, which were supposed to grow naturally on them, and diffused a strong odor of incense. The priests were very jealous of it, watched over it themselves, and were careful to prevent strangers seeing either leaves or branches until ready to be sold, with letters and signs on them, as orders, bowers, have now managed to obtain specimens, and they have been critically examined by experts here. The tree has been identified as an ordinary syringa villosa, common in China, and any marks which the leaves may have had upon them were—but let Mr. Thistleton-Dyer remarks, the sacred tree is "an elaborate fraud." Kum-Bum, therefore, ceases to be the original plant in Kew which was believed to produce live geese on its branches. One of the early popes sent a messenger to investigate our southeastern county's phenomenon. When he arrived the people thereabout told him the tree grew in the midlands; in the midlands they said it was only to be found in Scotland; in Scotland they said it flourished solely in the Orkneys, and had he gone there he would very likely have been told that it grew on the mainland as the north pole. At all events he could not find it. The sacred plant of Kum-Bum must now be placed in the same category of delusions and relegated to the dustbin of exploded impostures.—London Telegraph.

MADE A HOT SUNDAY FIRE

A BARN OWNED BY PLINY FISK DESTROYED BY FLAMES.

The Fire Department Does Good Work in Preventing the Flames From Spreading—Famous Hose Carriage Damaged.

One of Plainfield's largest fires for sometime past broke out Sunday afternoon at 2:12 in the large barn on West Sixth street near Park avenue owned and occupied by Pliny Fisk. Frank Day and John Neagle discovered the fire simultaneously. The former telephoned to Chief Doane at his home, and the latter pulled Box 35 at the corner of West Fifth street and Arlington avenue. The department responded promptly, and in a very short time the conflagration was under control. The fire seemed to have started in the bedroom on the the second floor and quickly spread through the entire upper part of the barn. Four lines of hose were laid, and it is safe to say that no fire in this city has ever been so well managed. The house adjoining, occupied by Mrs. Randall, was saved, only the upper part of the building being slightly scorched. There was in the lower part of the barn three horses, several wagons, including the famous silver hose carriage belonging to Alert Hose Company. Everything was rescued except an express wagon belonging to Charles J. Fisk. The damage to the hose carriage will amount to about $1,000, and the loss on the barn will probably reach $2,000.

In the upper part of the barn was a quantity of furniture owned by Mrs. Kaufman and Dominick McNamee, was entirely consumed, and after two hours hard work the flames were extinguished. The firemen all performed good work and deserve credit for it.

During the fire Frazee Putnam was struck in the head by the nozzle, he having lost control of it. First Assistant Chief Engineer Martin and L. M. Dunavan were each struck in the neck by a stream of water, but no damage resulted, save a slight cut on Putnam's forehead.

One of Mr. Fisk's men saved the horses at great risk to his life as the fire was burning fiercely at the time. This is the second time the carriage has been saved from being destroyed by fire. The first time it was in the fire at the Crystal Palace, New York, several years ago.

The origin of the fire is unknown. Some say it was due to carelessness, while others are inclined to think that the electric light wires running into the barn had something to do with it.

Rev. W. R. Richards Wins the Hillside Handicap Tournament.

One of the most interesting events Saturday morning was the handicap golf tournament on the golf links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, and what made it doubly interesting was the fact that Dr. W. R. Richards, a novice, won the tournament and thereby secured the prize, a set of golf clubs. Dr. Richards had no idea of playing in the tournament, but was persuaded to do so by his friends. It was his third game and he did not expect to win. The game started at 10:30 and was concluded before 1 o'clock. Fifteen members entered the tournament and the playing was exceedingly good. The course was in fine condition, which added materially to the pleasure of the game. James Stowell Anthony and Evarts Tracy, Jr., were the for second honors, a box of golf balls. The match will be played off in a few days. Below will be found the scores in full:

BICYCLIST'S LIVELY EXPERIENCE.

Plunged Headlong Over His Wheel in the Gutter on Liberty Street.

John Smith, of the West End, had quite an exciting experience at the corner of Liberty and Third streets Thursday morning and one which he will no doubt remember for sometime.

He borrowed a wheel of John Newman on which to go to town. He came up West Third street at quite a fast gait and attempted to turn into Liberty street. In doing so he lost control of the wheel and followed a zigzag course through the street. A large iron drinking fountain for horses stands on the corner at this point and Smith plunged headlong into it with the wheel.

He turned a somersault over the wheel and landed in a heap on the sidewalk, badly bruised and shaken up. His clothes were also badly torn. The wheel was almost a total wreck.

Horace W. Fish, of New York, vice-president of the the Potter Printing Press Company, has leased Charles Potter's pretty property, corner of Seventh and Division streets, and with his family will spend the summer in Plainfield.

ST. MARY'S SCHOOL WORK

CREDITABLE EFFORTS OF SCHOLARS ON EXHIBITION.

Several Sketches Show That the Young Ideas Are Handy With the Pencil—The Teachers Deserve Great Credit.

The annual exhibition of the work performed by the scholars of the Parochial school was opened Saturday morning in the school hall and will continue till Wednesday night. It can be honestly stated that the exhibit is a thoroughly creditable one in every particular and reflects earnest effort and study on the part of the scholars. Perhaps the most noteworthy exhibit is the crayon work by the senior class. This class is in charge of Miss Phillips as teacher and that she has worked faithfully and earnestly goes without saying. Among this work there are several scholars deserving of special mention. Lawrence Doyle has drawn the head of a horse in a most life-like manner while Miss Elizabeth Day has produced a dog's head with the same result. A striking picture is one entitled "An Eagle's Nest," drawn by Miss Annie O'Keefe. The picture of "Mary Magdalene" by Miss Elizabeth Flannagan is certainly very finely executed as is also a portrait of Pope Leo XIII., by Miss Elizabeth Rafferty. Edward Flynn has placed on card board a very fine picture of St. John the Evangelist, while Miss Smith has performed equal work in producing a portrait of Longfellow. A favorite picture is that of Bishop Wigger, drawn by Miss Josie Murphy. Then there are a number of maps of various countries, and the work done by John Madden, John Berry, John Butscher, Miss Mary Smith, Michael Owens and Miss Josie Murphy is noteworthy. There are also several fine putty models which were made by the boys and girls.

Another feature is the exhibit of fancy sewing. This art is taught by Miss Slevin and the scholars have made remarkable progress. There is also an exhibit of plain sewing which is creditable work. An interesting feature is the exhibit of journals of school work for each month in the year. This work was performed by the senior class. Different subjects were chosen for each month and then a story was written from it. Miss Phillips has placed in each journal an original pen sketch which is exceedingly fine. In the six primary grades the scholars have all done excellent work in the various elementary branches and their work shows care and thought. There seems to be a uniformity in all the work that is noteworthy. The bookkeeping department comprising a year's solid work is most commendable. The work is neatly done and would be creditable to people much older in years. The exhibit is in charge of Sister Mary Esther ably assisted by the other Sisters. They extend a very cordial invitation to all to visit the school and witness the exhibit.

BIDS EXCEED ESTIMATES

BOARD OF EDUCATION FIGURED COST OF REPAIRS TOO LOW.

On the New Lincoln School the Bid Was $4,000 More Than it Was Proposed to Spend—No Contract Awarded.

The Board of Education held its regular monthly meeting Monday night, but the contracts for the new Lincoln building were not awarded as was expected. The lowest bid was that of John Abbott, and that was over $4,000 above the estimated cost, $90,000.

Messrs. Probasco, Lounsbury, Jenkins and Abbott were present. After the usual reading of the minutes of the last meetings and a number of approved bills, which were ordered paid, Secretary Lounsbury read City Collector Johnson's report. It showed that during the last month the total school taxes collected were $1,239.50, the interest on which was $183.66, making a total of $1,373.16, of which $915.91 had been deposited in the First National Bank and $457.25 in the City National Bank.

A statement was read from Superintendent Maxson stating that $516.60 had been received during the last month from tuition pupils, making a total of $2,250.48 for the year.

A letter was read to the Board from James B. Reynolds, school trustee of the Tenth ward, New York city, thanking the Board for a large basket of flowers, which had been used very effectually in the University Settlement.

After listening to these communications, the Board next turned its attention to the matter of the new school, and Mr. Lounsbury, as chairman of the building committee, made his report. The lowest bidder, he reported, was John Abbott, of this city, whose bid was $94,443, about $500 lower than any of the others. Mr. Lounsbury suggested and the Board adopted the suggestion, that the certified checks accompanying the other bids be returned, and that Mr. Abbott confer with Architect Karr and make some necessary changes in the bid, to bring the contract price to a lower amount, and report to the Board later.

For the repairs at the Washington School, Wyman & Haberle bid the lowest on the carpenter work, $1,263, and Galbraith & Walsh on the heating, plumbing and ventilating work, $1,153. Mr. Lounsbury told the Board that the last bid was incorrect and Galbraith & Walsh had come to him as soon as the bids were made public and explained that an error had been made and the bid should have been $1,322.

After looking over the cost of making the repairs in the Bryant and Stillman schools, which considerably exceeded the estimate that had been placed on them, there was a general feeling expressed among the members of the Board that part of the repairing should be put off a year, especially after Mr. Lounsbury explained that the regular apportionment for repairs would be exceeded by about $3,000, which it would be necessary to borrow. After some deliberation it was decided to make only the absolutely necessary repairs at the Washington building, which would not amount to very much, and make the repairs in the Stillman and Bryant buildings according to specifications. The repairs in the latter schools are the putting in of sanitary water closets and of enlarging the outbuildings to accommodate them. These changes the Board deemed necessary on account of sanitary reasons.

Chas. M. Wilson's bid of $1,050 was the lowest for the repairs at the Bryant and Wyman & Haberle's bid of $1,226.80, the lowest for the Stillman. The Board then decided by motion that these contracts should be awarded to those mentioned above, subject to the approval of the building committee, who had another report. After consultation with Superintendent Maxson, he reported regarding the necessary furniture and blackboards for the Lincoln building and for the new classes to be started in the assembly room of the Bryant school. The estimate for furniture was about $1,400 and the blackboards $300. Mr. Lounsbury thought this could be reduced by not furnishing both floors of the Lincoln building at the same time and he was given the power to order the furniture and blackboards, making what reduction he could. An application for the position of janitor at the Lincoln building was received from James B. Morrison, but was laid on the table until another meeting.

The board then adjourned.

—Down in the lower part of the State, recently, a young boy named Jones was playing with a hatchet, when it accidentally clipped off one of his fingers. When he ran into the house minus the digit, his mother rushed out and picked up the missing finger. A doctor was sent for, the finger was sewed on, and now it has grown fast to the stump and is as good as ever.

The auditing committee reported all bills correct except one for $48 50, presented by C. M. Meeker. Mr. Westphal, chairman of the committee, moved that it be referred back to Street Commissioner Meeker with the recommendation that he pay his own help. The motion was not seconded. Mr. See ordered that the bill be paid. The motion was adopted, Mr. Westphal voting no. The latter thought that when the city was paying Mr. Meeker to do surveying they ought not to pay another man to help him to do it.

The Council then adjourned to meet Monday evening, July 20th, at which time action will be taken on the new police rules.

The report of the final cost of the sewerage system was referred back by request to the joint committee on sewers and finance, to ascertain the amount of accrued interest on the sewerage notes up to June 30th.

PROSPEROUS CONCERN.

L. V. F. Randolph at the Head of the Atlantic Trust Company.

The New York Post of last Friday had the following to say about two big financial institutions:

The Mutual Life Insurance Company has purchased 1,000 shares of the stock of the Atlantic Trust Company at 180. Negotiations for the purchase have been in progress some time, but the sale was actually consummated yesterday. When the scheme was first proposed, there was some difficulty in finding holders of the Trust Company's stock who would give it up. Finally half-a-dozen of them, including an estate, formed a pool of 1,000 shares, each giving up a part of his holdings, a verbal condition of the sale being that the Mutual should do whatever it could consistently to enhance the growth of the Trust Company's business.

The last previous sale of Atlantic Trust Company stock reported was of 50 shares at 178 at auction, early in May. Since then the price has been gradually rising, and today it was said that the stock was nowhere obtainable at less than 190. The company was organized in 1887 with a capital of $500,000, which was doubled a year ago, shortly after the present management took charge. Dividends are paid at the rate of 2 per cent. quarterly. The statement of the company's business for the half year ending June 30th, 1896, shows that during that period it earned net $62,673.56, or at the rate of 12½ per cent. per annum on the capitalization.

This is the trust company of which ex-Mayor L. V. F. Randolph is president.

—Armstrong's pharmacy will soon cool its patrons with revolving fans, operated by an electric motor. Workmen are now making changes in the gas fixtures to admit the fans.

—Young Sutterlein, whom Joseph Miller claimed kicked him in the head, denies the act. He says that Miller became insulting to his mother and that she struck him and he fell cutting his head on a barrel hoop.

—Mrs. Rhodie Noah, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but kept getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.—Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

Entertained at Fanwood.

A pleasant entertainment was given in the Fanwood club house Monday for the benefit of All Saints' P. E. church, Fanwood. The affair was arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Gwynette and Rev. Dr. True and they deserve unlimited praise for their earnest efforts to give a programme of such rare merit. The club house was nicely decorated with flowers and bunting. The programme consisted of choice selections on the banjo, mandolin and piano, by the Empire trio, of Westfield; tenor solos by Charles Foster, leading soloist in Trinity church, New York; selections by Union County's own Alfred E. Pearsall, assisted by Miss Budworth, on the piano. Each number was generously applauded and the artists very kindly responded to the pleasure of the appreciative audience present. After the entertainment a delightful dance was enjoyed by the young people.

Annihilating the Beetle Bug.

A delegation from the Town Improvement Society started out yesterday on their tour of inspection. For the second time they sprayed the beautiful elm trees at the Barnaby residence on Plainfield avenue. Edward Barry, who was formerly in charge of the property, says the process of annihilation to the elm beetle is perfect in every respect, and that with a little more actual labor on the part of the society will drive the pest from our midst.

A Street in Bad Condition.

Greenbrook road, between Somerset and Grove streets, is in a very bad condition, owing to the recent heavy rains which have washed out the roadbed to a great extent. The property owners on the street have been notified by the Borough Council to lay a stone sidewalk in front of their respective properties, but will refuse to do so until the borough repairs or macadamizes the road.

Bitten by a Dog.

Mrs. John Benner, the wife of the proprietor of the Fanwood road house, on Monday was bitten by a large St. Bernard dog on her left arm. The wound made is a severe one. The dog was killed and the lacerated part cauterized. Mrs. Benner will be unable to use her arm for some time. The animal was considered to be friendly.

BLOOD FLOWED FREELY.

BUT WHAT CAUSED THE GORE TO RUN WAS NOT LEARNED.

Mysterious Wound of a Man Who Startled East Fifth Street Monday Night With His Continuous Cries for a Physician.

"Doctor, doctor," screamed a man running along East Fifth street about midnight Monday when all the good citizens were fast asleep. More than one resident of that street was roused from their slumbers by the cries.

"Doctor, doctor, don't let a man bleed to death," still yelled the man as he half ran, half staggered down the street in the direction of Watchung avenue. Heads appeared at the windows and sleepy voices demanded the cause of all the unseemly racket.

There was no explanation and the drowsy-looking faces disappeared again while the midnight visitor kept on down that thoroughfare. Patrolman Myers whose beat includes that vicinity promptly came to the scene of the trouble. He found a man, apparently intoxicated, with his clothes covered with blood and a wound to his hand that was bleeding profusely. The man didn't seem to know what had occurred, so the officer took him to the lockup, and then to Dr. Long's to have his wound dressed.

This morning the stranger came before City Judge DeMeza in a pitiable condition as far as looks were concerned. It was impossible to tell what color his trousers were originally as they were completely saturated with blood. The rest of his clothing was in nearly the same condition.

He said that his name was William Duncan, from New York, and that he missed the train from Plainfield to Netherwood last night and started to walk. He did remember taking a glass or two before starting, but what happened after he started to walk up the railroad, he had not the slightest idea, at least so he said in court. The police were of the opinion that he walked off one of the railroad bridges.

As he had done nothing to be punished for, the Judge suspended sentence on him.

MOTORMAN NOT TO BLAME

A Little Child Became Frightened and Ran in Front of the Car.

The first accident of any kind to happen to anyone since the opening of the extension of the street railway occurred early Tuesday evening at about 6:15 o'clock. It was not at all serious, however.

Little Florence Wilson, of East Fourth street, about two-and-one-half years of age, was standing on Watchung avenue, when one of the trolley cars came along from the direction of Fifth street. The child started to run across the street but became frightened and stood still in the middle of the track just as the car came along. Motorman Michael Welch reversed the current and brought the car to a sudden stop a few feet beyond. The fender served its purpose and picked the child up. The little girl struck her head against the fender and a small scalp wound was inflicted.

The uncle of the little child was in the car at the time and agreed with all the other eye witnesses of the accident that the motorman was not in the slightest to blame. Chas. Bowers was the conductor.

The father of the child was just returning from Scott's Press Works and accompanied Superintendent Adleman, who carried the child to Dr. Fritts' office, where it was found that the injuries were very slight.

HURT IN A RUNAWAY.

Farmer Stiles' Horse Becomes Fractious and Injures His Driver.

Last Saturday morning Fesiden Stites, a farmer residing at Mt. Bethel, accompanied by his ten-year-old daughter was driving to this city, when nearing the Mt. Bethel post-office, the horse suddenly shied and ran up a bank, overturning the wagon and throwing the occupants to the ground.

While the horse was making futile efforts to release himself from the wagon, he severely injured Mr. Stites' right leg, beside cutting several gashes in his head.

John Borman, who was in the vicinity, went to Mr. Stites assistance, and conveyed the injured man to his home. The little girl fortunately escaped without any injury.

Wanted His "Pop."

Little Clarence VanSickle, the three-year old son of J. W. VanSickle, of 315 East Third street, wandered away from home Saturday afternoon. He asked his father for a penny before starting and it was supposed that he had gone to Blimm's store to buy some candy. He did not return, however, and was finally found quite a distance out West Front street, where he was lustily calling for his "pop."

VIEWED BY A DELEGATE

FRED C. MARSH TALKS ABOUT THE CHICAGO CONVENTION.

He Says Under the Instructions of the State Convention the Delegates Could Not Vote—Speaks of Bryan's Personality.

Senator Marsh, delegate to the national Democratic convention from this district, was seen at his law office by an Elizabeth Journal representative and requested to give a brief statement concerning the doings of the New Jersey delegates. He said:

"It is a matter of great pride to the delegates that throughout the whole of the convention they were united upon every question. Although not governed by the unit rule, they fully appreciated the action of the State convention at Trenton, and upon every question submitted they cast their unanimous vote in favor of sound money.

"All of our delegates had a good opportunity to become personally acquainted with the nominee, William J. Bryan, as he sat with the Nebraska delegation after the first day. He spent a great part of his time with the Jerseymen in pleasant conversation. The fact that we voted against him on all occasions in no way interfered with our pleasant relations, as he understood thoroughly we were there under instructions from our State convention.

"The candidate is a gentleman of magnetic presence. I think that if the vote had been taken within an hour after his now famous speech he would have polled every vote in the convention, excepting the sound money men of the east. The western and southern men are perfectly confident of their ability to carry all of their States for the ticket; and this opinion, I am free to say, is shared by many with whom I talked at the different hotels. I refer to business men who have traveled through these sections of the country, and who say that it is perfectly marvellous the strides the silver issue has made within the past two months.

"They tell me that in some sections the people actually believe that 'free silver' means the free issue of silver by the Government to the people; in other words that Uncle Sam is going to dish out silver dollars and make them rich. Others think that they can get a gold dollar and take it to a mint or bank and get sixteen silver dollars for it; but I judge from the information I obtain that the real strength of the silver men is the result of the hard times in these sections; the people really believe that free silver means improved times and more money for themselves and families, and such a sentiment when it once breaks loose is very hard to overcome.

"I cannot state with any accuracy as to what the plans are concerning the third ticket; in the confusion attendant all such occasions immediately after the nomination of the ticket, it was lost sight of. I think there are many Democrats in this State who would prefer to see a third ticket nominated, so that they could vote for a Democrat upon a Democratic platform. There are many Democrats, in the absence of a third ticket, who will not vote for Mr. McKinley, because they believe him to be a silver man at heart.

"To those Democrats who may attempt to criticise the action of the New Jersey delegates in refusing to vote, I can only say that we followed the instructions of the convention at Trenton, and any violation of these instructions would have been a breach of faith with the voters who sent us to Chicago."

PLEASANTLY ENTERTAINED.

Friends of Everett J. Peck Spend an Evening of Pleasure at His Home.

Everett J. Peck, of Myrtle avenue, entertained a few friends at his home Tuesday evening in a very pleasant manner. Most of the evening was spent on the broad piazza which was delightfully cool; refreshments were also served on the piazza toward the close. Banjo playing by the host was a most enjoyable feature. Among those present were the Misses Margaret N. Hazeltine, Grace E. Overton, Eleanor T. VanDeventer, Edith L. Burt and Amy Burt, and the Messrs. George A. Horne, J. Vincent Bittenhouse, Wilbur F. Cornwell, Calvin Crowell and Carroll Runyon.

The affair was in honor of Everett Peck's seventeenth birthday.

A Dinner Party.

The following were entertained at a dinner party at Mountain Park Inn last Saturday by Mr. and Mrs. Vail: Mr. and Mrs. Wm. M. Sandford, Miss Pauline May Sandford, Miss Bertha N. Randolph, J. D. F. Randolph, E. F. Vail, A. W. Vail, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Cadmus.

PARTNERS IN TROUBLE.

SACKELOS HAS SECURED AN INJUNCTION TO STOP HIS PARTNER.

Sackelos Claims that Polites Tried to Freeze Him Out of the New York and Philadelphia Confectionary Co.

Poor advice and rather high-hand methods promise to bring Frank Polites, of the New York and Philadelphia Confectionery Company, into several lawsuits and considerable expense and trouble.

The story of the arrest of his partner, George Sakelos, for the embezzlement of funds, on his complaint, has been told in the Press, as has also the subsequent release of Sakelos, as the case was not one for a justice's court but for the Court of Chancery.

Reed & Coddington were retained by Sackelos and ex-Judge Coddington, who was at the trial, suggested to Polites that an arbitrator be appointed and the partnership settled with little expense or bother, but the offer was refused.

As soon as Sackelos was arrested, Polites took possession of the store and refused to allow his partner to see the accounts or have anything to do with the business.

Ex-Judge Coddington prepared the necessary papers yesterday and went before Chancellor McGill at Jersey City and obtained an injunction restraining Polites from collecting any money due the firm or doing anything with the stock of the firm for his own personal benefit. He also made application for a receiver. The case was set down for July 28th.

The papers were served on Polites yesterday afternoon. This is not the only suit that he will have to fight. Sackelos is about to bring another *suit through his lawyers for false im*prisonment of his partner.

O'DONALD ON A RAMPAGE.

The West End Stirred Up By the Actions of a Drunken Man.

A large crowd gathered on South Second street early Tuesday evening, attracted by the noise at the house of Hughie O'Donald. Patrolman Flynn was also attracted to the scene of action and found quite a gathering of neighbors who expected to see some fun. The officer was told that O'Donald had been beating his wife and was on a general rampage, so he investigated. He found the man considerably under the influence of liquor and acting in a disorderly manner. There was no proof that he had been beating his wife while Mrs. O'Donald declared that he had not.

O'Donald was left in jail over night to sober up and was arraigned this morning before City Judge DeMeza. He remembered faintly that he had not been on his best behavior the night before and finally pleaded guilty. The Judge fined him $10 and warned him not to disturb the neighborhood again unless he wished to spend a month or two in jail.

CAUGHT IN THE TRENCH.

B. W. Hand Narrowly Escapes Injury in a Cavein.

B. W. Hand, of West Front street, had a narrow escape from possible serious injury Tuesday morning while digging a trench for a house connections with the sewers, on the property of Henry Hoffman, West Front street.

Mr. Hand was standing in an eight-foot trench, superintending the laying of the sewer pipe, when both banks of the trench caved in, burying Mr. Hand up to his waist and but for the fact that two large pieces of crust lodged between him and the bank, thus protecting him in a degree, and it was due to this fact that he escaped injury.

As it was, Mr. Hand was unable to extricate himself and several of his employes dug him out of his precarious position.

The ground where the accident occurred is very sandy and it is surmised that passing street cars jarred the ground, causing it to cavein.

To Receive a State President.

In order to complete arrangements to receive State President Volmer on July 23d, the reception committee of the Daughters of Rebekah met last evening at the home of Mrs. W. J. Ford on East Fourth street. Preparations were made to have a very enjoyable time in the lodge room when Mrs. Volkner arrives. The committee is Mrs. Frank Whitely, Mrs. S. J. Higgins, Mrs. Jacob Kriney, Mrs. Barber, Mrs. Peter VanFleet, and Mrs. Ford, the chairman.

Injured His Finger.

"Ten" Overbaugh, an employee of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Co., sustained a severe injury to a finger yesterday while repairing a wheel. The finger caught between the spokes and tore the flesh into shreds and blood flowed profusely. Overbaugh went to Dr. Fritts' office and had the finger treated.

NOT TO EXCEED ESTIMATE

PLANS OF NEW LINCOLN SCHOOL MODIFIED TO LOWER COST.

John Abbott Awarded the Contract for Construction, Which Will Be Superintended By Architect E. Powell Karr.

It was nearly nine o'clock when the Board of Education met in special session Tuesday night to consider the modified plans for the new Lincoln School. In fact they were considered in executive session previous to the meeting, and it only required an open vote to confirm or reject the building committee's report, offered by Mr. Lounsbury. The report stated that the plans had been modified to lessen the cost, and that they had been submitted to Contractor John Abbott, the lowest bidder, who had agreed to deduct $3,375 if the plans were followed. He also agreed to furnish the plumbing for $285 additional.

The report contained four resolutions, which provided that C. Powell Karr be engaged as the architect and superintendent of building, for which he is to receive 5 per cent. of the total cost. That the contract be awarded to John Abbott for $21,753, exclusive of electric wiring, heating, ventilating and grading. That the architect prepare at once the necessary contracts with John Abbott and the Dudley Engine Company, and the president and secretary of the board are authorized to execute such contracts and deliver the same to the parties when the bonds required are delivered and approved.

That the finance committee be authorized to make such arrangements necessary to enable the Board to secure the funds required to meet payments when they fall due, and that the president and secretary of the Board are authorized to execute such promissory notes in the name of the Board, as may be required, the proceeds of said notes to be deposited in the City National Bank to the credit of the Board, in a special account to be known as the "Lincoln School Building Account," and all payments on said building are to be made by check, signed by the president and secretary of the Board, and charged against said special account.

The report and resolutions were signed by F. C. Lounsbury, J. B. Prebasco and L. N. Lovell, building committee, and were unanimously adopted by the Board. The Board then went into executive session and held a conference with Architect Karr and Contractor Abbott. The modified plans were inspected by the board, and some members did not wholly favor them in their own mind, thinking that the original plans would give a more imposing structure.

A Valuable Piece of Land Sold.

Charles H. Hand this morning consummated a deal by which he becomes the sole owner of the Frazee property at the corner of Watchung avenue and East Second-street, of which he has owned a three-quarter interest for a long time. The remaining interest he purchased of J. P. Powers and George DeMeza. Mr. Hand desires to sell the property at private sale, and if he does not succeed in this he will dispose of it at auction on Saturday, July 25th. It is a valuable site and will be made doubly so when the opening of Watchung avenue is consummated.

Arrivals at the Inn.

The following are the late arrivals at Mountain Park Inn: Mr. and Mrs. Dahlgren, New York; Mr. Titsworth, Mr. and Mrs. Hyde, Miss Hyde, Miss Vermeule, Plainfield; Mr. Harberger, Boston; Mr. and Mrs. Spencer, Bayonne; Mr. Truman, Mr. and Mrs. Case, Mrs. VanWyck, Mr. and Mrs. Atterbury, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Hurd, Mr. MacMahon, Mr. Keer, Mr. Booker, Newark; Dr. Valentine, Brooklyn; Mr. Carson, Sing Sing; Mrs. Miller, Plainfield.

A Convert to Free Coinage.

Lawyer J. J. Stone, of Putnam avenue, who has been a life-long Republican and a protectionist, says he will support the "sunflower of Nebraska and the pine cone of Maine" in the coming election. Mr. Stone says that the silver question is paramount to all others in this country today, and that when the issue is properly placed before the people of the eastern States it will win many to its side who are now opposed to it.

Surprise for a Policeman.

Policeman J. A. Saunders was pleasantly surprised at his home on Berckman street last night by a number of friends. Among those present were: Mrs. Newell Peterson, Mrs. Wyatt, Mr. and Mrs. L. Peterson, William Burton, E. Wilson, B. Harvey, Miss H. Jackson, Miss C. Corry, Miss Nancy Jordan, Mrs. Rosa Stout, Mrs. S. Thornton, Wm. Dandridge, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Saunders, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Davis and E. D. Saunders.

MUSIC FOR THE MASSES.

SECOND OF THE OPEN AIR BAND CONCERTS LARGELY ATTENDED.

The Terrific Heat Keeps Some People at Home, But Still an Immense Crowd Gathers and Listens to the Melodies.

Two cyclists rode to Plainfield from Elizabeth Tuesday. They had no particularlar object in view and were riding up East Fifth street when they noticed an unusual number of people on the street. Everbody seemed to be clad in holiday garb and yet they strolled along as if with no special destination. As the riders reached the corner of Watchung avenue, streams of music floated in their direction and Plainfield's second open-air concert of this year had begun.

Early in the evening, even before it grew dark, the crowd began to assemble in front of the Crescent Avenue church and in the vicinity of the triangle that is formed by the intersection of LaGrande, Watchung and Crescent avenues. The great majority of the people came on foot but the cyclists were there in great numbers and carriages stood on all sides of the triangle.

The crowd was like all the open air concert crowds, every class was represented. The staid old banker, accompanied by his wife and charming daughters, strolled through the broad avenues in the vicinity listening to the music as while close behind came the hard-working wage earner and his wife, their sturdy son following with the girl of his choice.

The crowd did not invade the lawn in front of the church for a very good reason. Sexton Angleman was on the scene early in the evening and started to water the lawn which he did very effectually throughout the concert. There were no decorations of lanterns, but colored fire was burned at intervals in the yard of Councilman J. B. Dumont and illuminated the scene very picturesquely.

The band played excellently and the selections were all well received so that the second concert was a grand success. The crowd was not quite as large as at the first but kept changing so that it was impossible to gain any idea of the number.

FREIGHT CARS IN CORN FIELD.

Collision Which Sent Part of a Train Down a Bank.

On the Central Railroad of New Jersey, near the North Branch station, at half-past seven o'clock Saturday evening, the fast freight smashed into the rear end of a coal train that was standing just outside the cut at the east of a sharp curve. The locomotive had cut loose from the coal train and started for the water tank at the station, when the freight, consisting of forty cars laden with merchandize, came rushing down the steep grade of Pickel's Mountain and around the curve.

When Gilmore, the engineer of the fast freight, saw the coal train, he tried to stop his locomotive, but could not, and as the crash came he and the firemen jumped. The big freight engine ploughed into the caboose, tossing it forward among the cars. Then the engine turned on its side and fell across the tracks.

Ten of the freight cars left the track and rolled down a steep embankment into a corn field. The car doors were bust open, and the contents of the cars was scattered over the ground. Two hundred feet of rail and ties were torn up. Two wrecking trains and one hundred workmen worked all night to clear the road. The end brakeman of the coal train says he went back to flag the freight, but Gilmore, the engineer, says he saw no signal.

JURY DISAGREED AGAIN.

Failure to Reach a Verdict in the Case of Pearson Against Bohl.

For the second time the case of Pearson against Bohl has been tried. Several weeks ago it came up before Justice Newporn and a jury, and the latter returned with a verdict of 9 to 3 in favor of Pearson. Tuesday the case came up again before the same Justice and a different jury, and after five long weary hours they came in with a verdict of 10 to 2 in favor of Bohl. Lawyer H. C. Runyon represented Pearson, and Lawyers Kirch and Swackhamer appeared for Bohl. The latter was called in yesterday to assist. The jury was composed of the following: Charles Yaeger, Louis Randolph, Richard R. Davis, Jr., J. H. French, Israel LaRue, Isaac Brokaw, Louis M. Dunavan, E. E. Marshall, W. A. Caproim, J. F. Green, P. S. VanFleet and Michael Coyne.

In consequence of the latter result the case was set down for next Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when it is hoped that the case will be settled.

DUNN FAVORS MR. BRYAN

BRYAN A GOOD MAN AND THE SILVER IDEA WILL DIE OUT.

Ex-Congressman John T. Dunn Will Support the Regular Democratic Nominees and Gives His Reasons Therefor.

The following is the letter of John T. Dunn to the New York World of yesterday:

*I sat on the seat next to that occu*pied by Mr. Bryan in the Fifty-third Congress, and had ample opportunity to "size him up."

I think he would make a good President. He is as honest as God makes men, of the highest order of patriotism as he understands the meaning of the word, untiring in his industry and devoted to the best interest of his country as he sees it, and only mistaken in his silver theories.

Silver, even with Mr. Bryan elected, can never be successful in its demands. I am therefore going to back my opinion of Bryan—who is an enemy of trusts—with my vote and work, wherever it can be utilized, especially as I look upon the success of the protectionists, from what they have already done in personal legislation and their wicked purpose of doing as bad if not worse in the future by using the taxing power of the Government to rob their fellow citizens, as of far greater peril to our institutions than would be the success of Mr. Bryan at the very worst that can be said of it. Indeed, the silver demand is ultra-protection—protection of the mine owner, a smaller dog, the offspring of a worse and more wicked breed, the real protectionist, who organizes governmental powers for selfish ends in class legislation.

We know what the McKinleyites have done and the destructive effects of their course, and we know what they will do in the future if successful in this election.

Theirs is a settled, determined and destructive policy for personal aggrandizement at the expense of the industries of the country, while the silver craze is but temporarily an expedient born of circumstances, which will work its own cure before the time arrives at which legislation can be had to carry out the craziness.

Silver in its present attitude is simply threatening and dangerous, while protection has been successful and destructive in its operations, and carried to its legitimate end would be destructive to the life of the Republic itself. It would, if successful in McKinley's election at this time, become the settled policy in our financial legislation, backed by the aggregated and organized wealth wrung from the people in the taxing power of the Government, a taste of which the country has recently had in the wealth distributed by Mark Hanna to organize Republican district delegations, by means of which he mastered the St. Louis Convention in the interest of his associate protectionists, whose funds he distributed for that purpose, using the name and prestige of the great Republican party to serve personal ends in class legislation.

We see that the unorganized masses are unable, except by revolution, to cope with this dangerous power of wealth wrung from the people for private gain, a policy under which a Republican cannot live, and one which every man who loves his country should fight with all his power.

No, of the two evils, under all the circumstances, I choose the least, and will support Bryan with all my might, believing that, even should he be elected, he could never get a Congress to carry out his present views, also that he is too much of a man and too much of a patriot to do anything that could injure his country and that before any action could be taken by him or his silver supporters of the present hour to carry their views into legislation the silver craze will cure itself and the disease disappear.

Couldn't Pay for the Rig.

A Plainfield young man who on several occasions has had trouble in regard to hiring rigs from different ones managed to get in more trouble Saturday night. He hired a horse and wagon from Day, the liveryman, for two hours. It was about eight o'clock in the evening when he started. Time went on and it soon became midnight and the young man did not return. Mr. Day began to wonder whether he was ever coming back, when about 4:30 Sunday morning the young man and the rig appeared. He had nothing to say regarding his protracted absence, and furthermore he had no money to pay for the hiring of the rig. An officer was called and arrest was threatened, but it is understood that the young man promised to settle.

Granted a Patent.

Walter Scott has been granted a patent for bed motion on cylinder printing presses.

VIEWED BY DEMOCRATS.

NOMINATION OF BRYAN DOES NOT MEET WITH APPROVAL OF ALL.

Some Say They Will Stay at Home on Election Day—James E. Martine Will Work and Vote for the Ticket Named.

The nomination of William J. Bryan as the Democratic candidate for President is viewed differently by the Democrats of Plainfield. The following interviews have been secured by Press reporters this morning:

L. G. Simpson remarked that he had nothing to say.

John Mortimer—"I am going to vote for McKinley."

Counsellor William K. McClure refused to commit himself at present.

John A. Thickstun—"I think it's all right. I am in favor of free silver. I may be wrong, but I don't think I am."

Ex Chief Marshal Panborn—"Bryan is a bright young man and will probably bring a good many young men about him."

Elston M. French—"I won't vote for a man who has such fanatical ideas as Bryan and the men who ran the convention."

Ex-Councilman Spangenberg—"I am an American, a sterling Democrat, but no fool. I am now going in to help save the country."

General W. H. Sterling—"I shall be found at home on election day. I will not vote for the Democratic candidate and I will not vote for McKinley."

Samuel S. Swackhamer—"The question is a very nice one and I have not had time to look into it thoroughly yet, so I do not care to commit myself as yet."

Postmaster John M. Hetfield—"I don't think very much of it. I think it is an outrage. They did not show the spirit of true Democracy at the the convention."

Ex-Councilman Vincent L. Frasee—"He suits me. He has a clean record and I think he is a very able man. I have read his speeches in Congress and think he is a good man."

Judge Smalley, of the borough—"An excellent nominee. I watched his course while in Congress and it was an honorable one. This Government is big enough to run its own affairs and if the people want silver with the Government's stamp on one ounce of that metal all right. We can run the ship and defy foreign bondholders."

James D. Martine—"Well I shall vote the Democratic ticket. Mr. Bryan I believe is an honorable and honest man, prompted by convictions and the courage to espouse and defend them—in this a wide difference from Mr. McKinley. Through the contest he has not dared to open his mouth lest it might lose him votes. As to the platform. There are some features I would wish were different, but the great House of Representatives will temper legislation on all lines. Do I approve the course of New Jersey delegates? No! They should have voted for somebody, that is what we sent them to Chicago for. If mistakes exist let us correct them inside our own party. I deem it the duty of all Democrats to sustain our ticket."

Andrew E. Kenney, the active young Democrat of the borough, said: "Bryan is a brilliant orator. I heard him make his famous tariff speech in 1894 and was deeply impressed. I made mention of it in correspondence to The Press at the time. As to the issue that will apparently be uppermost in the campaign this fall it has hardly developed as yet. As to gold, as being the only standard and being imperative for the prosperity of the country, there seems to be a great difference of opinion. One-third of the Republican party and fully two-thirds of the Democratic party have publicly declared for silver. The convention shows that the west is a great power and the men of predominating character are at the helm, that they are advanced and progressive is evident. They go to work as if they meant to win and our eastern people, with namby-pamby manners, are surprised to see their strength. Bryan's convention speech shows that he is conversant with the questions of the day. We shouldn't be too much agitated by the Silverites and their decisive action. Gold is a great bugaboo, and the menace is not as great as we are led to believe. New York, as the centre of wealth, is apt to be strong for existing customs. Still New York is beginning to learn that there are other communities. Don't give up the ship and stand by the party."

Handsome Sam Sues for a Divorce.

Samuel H. Andrews, known as "Handsome Sam," who has been in the Board of Elections of Brooklyn for twenty-three years under all administrations, has commenced a suit for divorce against his wife. He is a prominent Republican politician, and his wife is equally well known in social circles. The principal co-respondent named in the papers is a real-estate dealer with offices in New York. He is Eugene R. Thompson, of 649 Macon street, Brooklyn. Mr. Andrews summered in Plainfield for several seasons and is very well known and popular with many people here.

ABUSED HER LANDLORD.

DENNIS CARNEY HAS TROUBLE WITH ONE OF HIS FLOCK.

Mrs. Polon Had a Quarrel With a Neighbor Which Ends in Her Cate-chising Dennis With an Unruly Tongue.

The guardian angel of Paradise Alley, Special Officer Dennis Carney, was in court again last Friday morning and brought with him one of his tenants, Mrs. Mary Polon. She came not as a guest but as a prisoner, and Carney was the complainant. He charged her with using indecent and profane language.

Mrs. Polon lives in one of Carney's houses on Paradise Alley, but the relations between landlord and tenant have not been the pleasantest. The trouble started between James Harding, who lives next door, and Mrs. Polon. They quarrelled over the possession of a clothespole and Mrs. Polon applied a name to Harding that was not the most polite.

Carney was around and heard the words and after Harding retired from the field, he tried a round with Mrs. Polon, in which, he states, she spoke very insultingly to him. That was the cause of the complaint. The little court room at the station house was crowded this morning when the case came up for trial.

Mrs. Polon was present as was her counsel, William K. McClure. She is rather excitable and wanted to have her share of talking as well as her lawyer. When Carney was sworn as a witness and told his story, her indignation boiled over and she constantly interrupted the proceedings.

"She can't stop" remarked Carney when the Judge ordered Mrs. Polon to be quiet and then she looked at him, and, if looks could kill, Carney would be a dead man now. Counsellor McClure was conducting the case, but her continual interruptions were too much even for him and he started to leave the court and resign Mrs. Polon to her fate.

"Stop," she called as her counsel passed out between the lines of smiling spectators but as he didn't, she rushed after him and begged that he remain promising to be quiet. He finally consented and she sat still and glared at her landlord who, in turn, glared at her.

The testimony was heard and the Judge declared Mrs. Polan guilty but granted the request of Counsellor McClure and suspended sentence.

"Where does she live?" asked one of the reporters to Carney.

"She lives on Cottage place in my house," was Carney's reply.

"To my grief," exclaimed Mrs. Polan who had heard the reply and then she departed.

"You," she started as she left the court room and she started to apply another "pet" name as Carney but she remembered the Judge's caution, and with lips tightly pressed together, she left the station house.

ODD HEALTH CULTURE CLUB.

Young Women Rise Before Sunrise and Walk About Barefooted in the Grass.

A band of young women residents of Westfield have formed the Health Culture Club and are carrying out some odd views they entertain.

The members of the club belong to the best families in the town. They believe that everyone, to enjoy good health, should rise an hour before sunrise and spend that hour in walking about the dewy grass barefooted. They declare that it is nature's method of health making, beautifying and invigorating. They commenced the practice late in April and hope to keep it up until frost forbids the exercise. They relate wonderful stories of their experience and the splendid effects.

REPUBLICANS AT WORK.

They Elect Delegates and Arrange For Campaign Clubs.

The first move in the coming Presidential campaign was made by the Republicans of Plainfield last evening when the general primary of the Republican State League, was held in the Republican Association rooms Friday evening last.

The meeting was called to order by County Committeeman J. Fred Mac Donald. Mr. MacDonald was chosen permanent chairman and J. B. Cowgard, secretary. Five delegates to the convention of the Republican State League, to be held at Asbury Park on July 15th, in the auditorium, were elected as follows: James T. MacMurray, W. H. Drayton, J. W. Murray, Jr., William Newcorn and Wm T. Kirk.

The delegates leave this city on Wednesday morning on the 8:13 train.

A committee was appointed to formulate plans for the forming of the Republican campaign clubs. The committee consisted of the following: J. B. Coward, chairman; W. H. Drayton, J. MacMurray, Wm. Newcorn and Roger Murray. There was a good attendance at the meeting.

A Hotel Sold.

Ex-Tax Collector W. P. Bergen, of Somerville, has taken the Somerset House in that town and will conduct the same as a first-class family hotel. Mr. Bergen is well-known throughout the state and will make a popular landlord.

EMPTY BOTTLES IN COURT

MRS. BOWE FOUND THEM, BUT MRS. WOLF CLAIMED OWNERSHIP.

Mrs. Wolf Said That She Tried to Break Them, While Mrs. Bowe Claims that Mrs. Wolf Struck Her Instead.

The bottle played an important part in the city court Saturday last, it was empty, and its former contents didn't have anything to do with the case. This little drama was enacted at the 'gravel pit," which is located at the end of East Third street. There was no hero or heroine to it, however, but merely a scrap between two women that live in that neighborhood.

Mrs. Sophie Bowe was the complainant in the case, and she told how she had been down at the 'gravel pit." There she found some empty bottles which she placed in her coal scuttle which she carried, intending to take them home and sell them.

Mrs. John Wolf was looking about the "gravel pit" for coal when Mrs. Bowe made her discovery. Mrs. Wolf claimed the bottles belonged to her husband. Mrs. Bowe didn't see it in that light as the place was a public dump. Then Mrs. Wolf used a stick trying, she says, to break the bottles but, Mrs. Bowe says, to strike her. The blow landed on the bottles glanced and caught Mrs. Bowe on the hips. There was considerable divergence of opinion regarding the strength of the blow.

City Judge DeMeza decided that Mr. Wolf, who had been arrested for this offence, was guilty, but decided to suspend sentence on her.

MIDDLESEX IN THE BALANCE.

The Perth Amboy Freeholder Recount Ready for the Court.

Upon the decision of Chief-Justice Beasley rests the political control of the Middlesex County Board of Freeholders, and consequently the control of the county offices. The question on which the Chief-Justice is to render a decision is the legality of certain ballots cast at the April election in Perth Amboy for a member of the Board of Freeholders. South R. Farrington, the Republican candidate, now holds the seat, having been declared elected by the Election Board of Canvassers, over Editor St. George Kempson, by a plurality of sixteen votes.

The election was contested, and Assemblyman Hicks, of Middlesex county, who has been acting as referee on the personal representative of Chief-Justice Beasley, reported Thursday that all the ballots had been recounted, and those which have been objected to now await the action of the Court.

Of the 978 votes cast for Farrington, 539 have been contested. Kempson's total was 985, of which 480 have been objected to. The total votes cast show a difference of only three ballots in favor of the Republican candidate. The Court will take up the case when Mr. Kempson's lawyers are ready.

SUTTERLEIN FINED TEN DOLLARS.

Result of a Fourth of July Scrap Across the Brook.

Justice Crosley gave a hearing last Friday in the case of Joseph Miller against Charles Sutterlein. It will be remembered that recently Miller received an injury in the head which he claimed was caused by a kick from Sutterlein. Last Friday when the case was called Sutterlein had five witnesses who swore that Miller fell and struck his head on a barrel, while the practice has in April and hope to keep it up until frost forbids the exercise. They relate wonderful stories of their experience and the splendid effects.

Sutterlein had five witnesses who corroborated Sutterlein's statement, while Miller had no one to substantiate his charge.

The Rock Painted.

The annual event of painting Washington Rock took place last Friday. Ex-Chief Marshal Pangborn, Andrew Lutkins and Edward Coulter performed the work. They also trimmed the trees in that locality. Boice, Runyon & Co. very kindly donated the lime and Andrew S. Hoff generously loaned a horse and wagon. The largest part of the day was occupied doing the work and the appreciation of the public is hereby extended.

More School Facilities Needed.

The Westfield Board of Education has offered to purchase the lot and building belonging to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union on Prospect street. The ground is wanted to enable the board to build an addition to the Prospect street schoolhouse, which has been so crowded during the last part of the school year that some of the primary classes would have but half a day's session.

More Work at Fond's.

Men in authority at the Pond Machine Tool Company's Works say that new and additional men are being taken on from time to time. When a firm of this magnitude takes on additional help on the eve of a Presidential campaign it certainly looks like "brighter days" for the average machinist.

FIRST WIFE, THEN HUBBY.

Wife Punished, Husband Angered, and Then the Latter Gets Into Court.

The usual quiet of the borough was disturbed last night and this morning, and in consequence those interested in the matter had a lively time. The people who caused the trouble were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rothenhausern, of Westervelt avenue, near the foot of the mountains. Friday evening between 8 and 9 o'clock William Callaway, of Westervelt avenue, was passing the home of the former when Mrs. Rothenhausen appeared in a disorderly manner and called him vile names. Mr. Callaway objected and went to the home of Justice Crosley, where he had a warrantissued for her arrest. She was placed in the lockup by Chief Marshal Wilson, and arraigned before the Judge. She was very noisy and inclined to make trouble. The Judge finally gave her sixty days.

This fact angered her husband, and he too began to make trouble. His language became indecent, and to give vent to his feelings he unfastened a horse belonging to Dennis Sutphen, which was tied near the lockup, and started the animal up the street. With this, Marshal Hansen started after Rothenhausen and arrested him, but had to call on Undertaker Henry DeMott to assist him. Finally the disturber was brought before the Judge, and for a few minutes begged for mercy, saying that he did not know that Peter Hansen was an officer. The Judge was not easily phazed, however, and gave the man sixty-five days. This struck him heavy and he then threatened to bring suit. When placed in the cell adjoining that of his wife, he exclaimed, "Mamma I got five days more than you." The two were taken to Somerville this afternoon to spend sixty and sixty-five days respectively.

AT PROGRESSIVE HEARTS.

Not an Affair of Cupid, But One of Cards.

Mrs. J C. Baker, of Stelle avenue, gave a progressive heart party Friday evening in honor of her daughter, Miss Gertrude Baker, and her niece, Miss Anderson, of Chicago.

Miss May Evans and Laurens H. Van Buren were the successful prize winners.

There were five tables and those who played were: Miss Anna Miller, Miss Florence Waring, Miss Middledith, Miss Sheppard, Miss Gertrude Andrews, Miss Emma Schoonmaker, of Plainfield; Miss Rogers, of Pittsburg; Miss Watts, of Brooklyn; and Percy Stewart, Walter Stewart, William N. Runyon, Harry Patton, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, Augustus D. Sheppard, Jr., Howard Beebe, J. H. P. Wharton, W. Baker, Laurens H. Van Buren and James Middledith.

After the playing was concluded dancing was enjoyed and later delightful refreshments were served.

They Want Protection.

The matter of locating a fire brigade in "Bull Frog City" is still being advocated by the residents of that quiet North Plainfield suburb. They claim that all they want as citizens and taxpayers is proper protection against fire and floods. Since Mayor "Levi" Drake has let loose of the reins of municipal government things seem to be going to the dogs in dry weather and to the brook in wet weather.

Wanton Destruction of Game.

Game Warden Tooker has been flooded with complaints from sportsmen that berry pickers, who are very numerous just now, have been destroying many game birds and their eggs, and that dogs belonging to the pickers have killed many young rabbits. The warden has begun a crusade against this destruction, and has already made three arrests. Most of those complained of are Italians.

Victim in Her Grave.

The funeral of pretty Jessie Schriber, who was so mangled by a Long Branch train, took place Friday afternoon at Elizabeth. The mystery regarding her death remains as deep as ever, and why she was in that out of the way place, cannot be conjectured. The Rev. Mr. Sleeper and nearly all except the police believe she was foully murdered and her body placed on the track.

A Buggy Wrecked.

The wagon of Simonson, the North Plainfield feed dealer, collided with a buggy belonging to John Lynch, of Elizabeth street, and one of the front wheels of the buggy was wrecked. The accident occurred on West Front street near the Babcock building late yesterday afternoon, and was caused by the crowded condition of that thoroughfare.

Notes From the Brick Yard.

Few people have any conception of the work done at Richard Boyce's Maple avenue brick yards. Besides the million or more brick he has manufactured and sold within the past year, he has 575,000 more ready for shipment and as many more now in the kiln ready to burn the latter part of the present month. Mr. Boyce has also suffered a heavy loss by the melting away of some 40,000 by the recent heavy rains.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

The Centaur Company, 77 Murray Street, New York City.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

FATHER SELLS TO SON.

COMMERCIAL PALACE NOW OWNED BY J. LINN EDSALL.

Result of an Agreement Made Between the Two That When the Son Was 25 Years Old He Should Become Proprietor.

Seely Edsall, of the Commercial Palace, sold today his entire business to his son, J. Linn Edsall, who will carry on the business at the same place as heretofore.

This action is carrying out a previous agreement Mr. Edsall made with his son that as soon as he arrived at the age of twenty-five, which time occurred yesterday, July 8th, and proved capable of the management of the business, he should have the privilege to buy in preference to anyone else.

After serving a period of about forty years in the mercantile line, Mr. Edsall feels that he has served his full time in a business capacity, and for the balance of his life he is entitled to freedom and rest from the cares and anxieties of business life.

REFORM WORK IN WESTFIELD.

Sunday Observance League's Work Unsuccessful, but the Agitation Will Continue.

At a larely attended meeting of the Sunday Observance League of Westfield Tuesday evening, secretary Johnston reported that he had sent the much discussed circular letter to all reported to him as transgressors, and that it had not been successful in procuring a general Sunday closing. He was satisfied that popular sentiment was with the League, and that the movement would triumph ultimately.

The meeting decided that further evidence should be obtained, and that after one more warning there should be test cases. Judge McCormick has given the League assurance that he shall revoke the licenses of any liquor dealers who violate the Sunday law.

State Board of Taxation.

A meeting of the State Board of Taxation was held at the State House Tuesday. All the members of the board were present except Mayor Lentz. The board has arranged a programme of meetings at different points in the state for the accommodation of those who may wish to present appeals from unjust assessments. Appeals may be brought on for hearing before the State Board of Taxation at these sessions by filing an appeal with the clerk of the board, and serving a notice of the same, with a notice in writing upon the clerk or attorney of the taxing district where the property is situated. Such appeals must be presented at least three days before the time designated in the notice for the hearing.

The Horse Came Home Alone.

Frank Hand, of Park avenue, drove to Scotch Plains yesterday and left his horse tied to a post at the place where he was stopping. The horse being a lively one took a notion to go home and to carry out the purpose he broke the bridle and upset the wagon. The latter was wrecked considerable. The horse came directly home to the stable. Mr. Hand was obliged to come home, secure another wagon and return for the damaged one.

PERIODICAL SETS NEEDED.

Contributions of Magazines to the Public Library Wanted.

Much of the work of the Public Library in assisting readers and students is done by means of its periodical literature. It is, therefore, desirable whenever possible to complete its periodical sets.

A list of the incomplete set of magazines now in the library has been posted up in the reading room. Any persons who have volumes of magazines, either bound or unbound, which would help to complete three sets, and who are willing to contribute the same to the library are requested to leave word at the librarian's desk. All gifts will be sent for, promptly acknowledged, and note made of the donor's name.

While an odd volume of a magazine, especially if unbound, is of comparatively little use in one's home, if given to the library it will be bound, have its own place on the shelves and help in the valuable reference work of the library.

Another Gasolene Explosion.

While attempting to blow out a gasolene stove on Tuesday was disastrous work for Mrs. Frank Fisher, of Metuchen. She had finished her cooking, and when she blew at the light there was an explosion which scattered the burning gasolene about the room and upon her clothes. George Mead, a grocer, heard the woman's screams and ran into the house. He extinguished the flames, but not until Mrs. Fisher had been painfully burned and considerable damage done to the furniture.

Wheels Collide.

Mat. Sweeney, night messenger for the Western Union Telegraph Company, was knocked from his wheel in West Seventh street by a collision with an unknown rider. Sweeney did all in his power to keep clear of the other rider, but the latter was evidently a beginner and persited in keeping to the left of the road. Sweeny sustained a few slight bruises.

—There have been several breaks in the North Plainfield fire alarm system of late, but the repairs have been quickly made and the system is in good order.

PROVIDING THE MONEY.

BOROUGH COUNCIL VOTES TO ISSUE CERTIFICATES OF INDEBTEDNESS.

The Sum of $32,000 Will be Raised and Issued in Sums of $1,000, Payable in Five Years, at Five Per Cent Interest.

The adjourned session of the Borough Council Friday evening last was exceedingly short. All the members except Messrs. Valiant and MacLaughlin were present.

The principal business considered was the opening of Watchung avenue. Mr. Woolston offered several resolutions, all of which were adopted. The first resolution provided that certificates of indebtedness to the amount of $32,000 be issued, not exceeding the cost of the improvement of opening and grading Watchung avenue, and that the same be issued in sums of $1,000 each, redeemable one year from date and payable in five years. They are to draw interest at the rate of five per cent annually, and are to be payable semi-annually. Such certificates when issued are not to be sold at less than par, and the proceeds are to be used in opening the avenue. All money from assessments received from benefits is to be appropriated toward paying said certificates of indebtedness. The next resolution provided for the acceptance of the City National Bank's offer to loan the necessary money at par to open Watchung avenue, as their bid was considered the most advantageous and the Mayor and clerk were authorized to open an account at that bank.

The third resolution authorized the drawing of warrants for the necessary amount of money to pay the assessments for damages to the property owners along the proposed new street. The names and each amount was previously published in these columns.

The next resolution instructed the mayor and clerk to notify the Board of Freeholders in both Union and Somerset counties that the proposed avenue is to be opened at a width of sixty feet and that it will be necessary to have a bridge over the brook to join each avenue.

Another resolution was offered that the bid of David Bowden to furnish materials, etc., as per contract to open the avenue, be accepted according to the specifications prepared by engineer F. A. Dunham, and that Mr. Bowden furnish the necessary bond for the faithful performance of such work. The next resolution authorized Councilman Lounsbury to secure proper certificates of indebtedness to be issued. The last resolution provided that the bid of Jasper Wilson & Co., to furnish crushed stone, be accepted, and a contract be entered into. Mr. Woolston offered all of the above resolutions and they were adopted unanimously by the council. The council then adjourned to meet Friday evening, July 31st, at eight o'clock.

LONG TIME FREIGHT HANDLER.

John Harding is in the Employ of the Central for a Quarter of a Century.

Few people have visited the freight house in this city within the past twenty-five or thirty years, but have seen the smiling and genial John Harding. He has been a faithful attendant there, be it said to his credit.

Mr. Harding was born in Castle Ivers, County Limerick, Ireland, on June 23d, 1834, and he is, therefore, now in the sixty-third year of his age. His parents were both born there, but emigrating to this country after gaining their maturity and locating in Illinois, where the father died from fever and ague. His mother died here in 1858.

John was a stout robust boy when, at the age of eighteen years, he sailed to this country on the ship Underwriter of the White Star Line. Eight weeks time being required to make the trip. He came direct to Plainfield and remained for a time with his brother who then lived on East Third street near Church street. Later on he secured a position with Thomas Stead, who kept a hotel in what is now known as the "Notch," where he worked for three years and was subsequently obliged to give up on account of failing health.

In 1859 Mr. Harding worked on a gravel train on the New Jersey Central Railroad, and after one year's service in that capacity he was employed as a freight-handler on the steamer Red Jacket, plying between New York and Staten Island. In this capacity he worked for a time and finally came to the freight house in this city, while the late Dean Gordon was station agent, and he has handled freight there more or less ever since.

Mr. Harding now begins to show the result of many years hard labor and, as he says, It is beginning to tell on him.

Generous Contributions.

The congregation of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church have contributed $650 to the church in St. Louis of which Rev. Mr. Palmer is pastor and which was wrecked by the cyclone.

A Big Turtle.

A forty-pound loggerhead turtle was caught by a party of Plainfielders at Boynton Beach Sunday and is now on exhibition at Hummer's meat market.

SUPERSTITIONS ABOUT CATS.

In the Tyrol girls who are fond o cats marry early.

Throwing a cat overboard from a ship will cause a cyclone.

The Pennsylvania Dutch believe black cats cure epilepsy.

Three drops of a black cat's blood is said to be a cure for croup.

If a cat washes herself calmly and smoothly the weather will be fair.

If the family cat lies with its back to the fire there will be a squall.

A person who despises cats will be carried to his grave in a bowling storm.

If a cat sneezes three times the whole family will soon suffer from influenza.

To dream of a black cat at Christmas time in Germany is an omen of alarming illness.

If it rains on a Dutch girl's wedding day it is because the bride has forgotten to feed her cat.

In Ireland the cat must not be taken to a new house by a moving family, especially if water has to be crossed.

A cat born in May will be of a melancholy disposition, given to catching snakes and bringing them into the house.

If it rains when there is a large washing on the line in Germany it is a sure sign that the house mother has ill-treated the cat.

Bad luck will follow if a black cat crosses your path, for the devil prowls about, especially at night, in the guise of a black cat.

In Scotland they used to cure erysipelas by cutting off half a cat's ear and letting the blood from the wound drop on the diseased part.

In moving in Scotland the family cat is thrown into the new house before the family enters in order that it may absorb any disease or curse left by the former tenants.

WHO SHALL BE FIRST?

A clergyman usually takes precedence of a barrister.

A viscount ranks higher than the oldest son of an earl.

The oldest sons of barons are inferior in rank to the younger sons of earls.

Earls take precedence of the younger sons of dukes of the blood royal.

The eldest sons of knights of the Garter precede eldest sons of Baronets.

Barons take rank immediately after the secretaries of state, if these are barons.

The eldest son of a marquis takes precedence over the younger son of a duke.

In all state ceremonials the sovereign takes precedence of all persons whatsoever.

The treasurer of her majesty's household follows the commissioner of the great seal.

The archbishop of Canterbury ranks immediately after the members of the royal family.

COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY.

The Brazilian sugar crop is reported to be an average one this year.

Cedar wood is now being exported from Argentine to the United States by way of Trial.

The royal arsenal at Woolwich employs about 15,000 workmen, and has 40 miles of internal railways.

There are 19,146,420 acres of timber lands in southern states, and the average yield of these forests is 3,000 feet per acre.

The railway clearing house is one of the largest offices in Britain. It has a staff of 1,600 clerks and 450 out-of-door officers.

The trade returns of Canada for the first nine months of the fiscal year show an increase in exports and imports of $11,120,511 over the corresponding period of the last fiscal year.

THE WORLD OVER.

Eleven thousand brass bands play for the Salvation Army.

England imports about 400,000 packs of playing cards yearly.

From the latest census it seems that there are 2,741,000 gypsies in Hungary.

In England there is only one place of worship to about every 4,000 persons.

A flywheel in Germany is made of steel wire. The wheel is 25 feet in diameter and 250 miles of wire were used in its construction.

One of the best-informed deputies in congress in Argentine says that there is a unanimous determination to insist upon the Argentine contention concerning the Chilian boundary, and that if it means war this will be accepted and that there will be no arbitration as to that point.

SCHOOL AND COLLEGE.

School directors in the district of Duverne, Ia., have ordered a cyclone cave dug at each of the schoolhouses in the district.

The Boston Transcript recalls the fact that Baron de Hirsch founded and maintained many schools in Egypt and European and Asiatic Turkey.

The Ohio Wesleyan university has adopted a rule absolutely forbidding its students to use tobacco in any form. It has made a great stir among the students.

Florida leads the south in provision for education, having a higher ratio of enrollment and paying is days a year more schooling than any other state in that section.

THE MINES.

Five persons are killed daily in the mines of England.

Mr. Rhodes has become as managing director of the Consolidated Gold Fields company last year was more than $1,650,000.

Not long since, in a mine in the Flenu (Belgium) district called "St. Henrietta des Produits," a rich vein of coal was struck at the extraordinary depth of 4,188 feet.

Practical Thoughts in Rhythm and Rhyme From the Ninety-first Psalm.

Whoso dwelleth in the secret place
Of the Most High, I find His grace
Is there. He says, I may abide
Under His shadow, my rest His side.

Then I can say, He is my Lord,
My refuge, fortress, and my God,
Him will I trust, for He doth save
From snares and pestilential grave.

Beneath His feathers and His wings,
His truth my shield and buckler brings.
I shall not fear nights terror—nay
Nor flying arrow by day.

A thousand at my side may fall,
Ten thousand too—both great and small.
Yet it shall not come nigh to me
For I have placed my trust in Thee.

My eyes with pity, doth behold
The wicked, with their doom foretold.
But they who put their trust in God,
Shall be protected from His rod.

That dwelling place O Lord Most High,
Doth bring me from all evil nigh.
He gives His angels charge to keep
My life in danger, rest in sleep.

Upon the lion and adder tread,
For Jesus broke the serpents head.
He loves my soul, I know His love,
Because on me He sets His love.

And as I call upon Thee, Lord,
To me is promised answered word.
Long life Thou'st given, and yet I live.
Salvation, Jesus sure, I have.

WOMAN MAIL CARRIER.

The Successful Bidder Arouses the Jealousy of Defeated Ones.

Mrs. Springstein, of Summit, has been given the contract to carry the mails between Summit and New Providence. The contract was offered to the lowest bidder, and Mrs. Springstein's bid was the lowest. The residents of both towns, particularly the rival bidders, ridiculed the appointment, called her the leader of the new women's movement and sought in other ways to bring her into public contempt.

Mrs. Springstein, however, entered upon the work very pluckily, and having given the required bonds, proceeded, twice a day, rain or shine, to carry the mail bags back and forth.

The woman did not seem to mind *the cheap jokes indulged in at her ex*pense, but yesterday the explosion came. James Horner, Sr., of New Providence, was arrested on her complaint on the charge of publicly defaming her character. She declares that the matter has gone quite far enough, and says she intends to show that a woman has a right to carry the mails and that she must be left alone in the discharge of her duties.

ON THE MOUNTAIN TOP.

A Happy Soliloquy on the Attractions to be Found at Mountain Park Inn.

One hour from Liberty street, New York, to the top of a mountain and gleefully landed in the brand-new Mountain Park Hotel! This was never possible till June, 1896. Plainfield exults in this great victory over rocks and altitude. The guest finds a new surprise at every turn. The smooth macadam road winding up from the plain, a short half mile among the trees, the air redolent with the breath of ferns and flowers, the luxuriant foliage of the forest waving gracefully to the music of a thousand birds, soon make the traveler forget the hot and dusty city. The stately hotel looms up, grandly perched on the very crest of the mountain. From the spacious verandas, the vision is indeed magnificent. "Plainfield the beautiful" lies at your feet, its many spires and gables rising as if from a wide and splendid park. Westward, the "Second Mountain" of the Watchung series climbs skyward, while away to the east the hills of Staten Island and the shining waters of the Kill von Kull meet the eye. In this favored spot mountain breezes always cool the brow, summer heats are unknown and hay fever never comes, while the happy guests pity those who dwell 600 feet below them on the plain.

Enter the hotel. Here all is newness, neatness, taste and good cheer. The bright and pretty dining hall with its new and shining service of silver and china and linen crowns all with a splendid bill of fare, bringing that supreme satisfaction that comes only after a first-class dinner course under first-class management, amid first-class surroundings. Finish your day with an evening in your spacious parlors with music and beauty, or out on the verandas looking at the silvery moon and listening to the cool zephyrs that are always playing sweet symphonies among the tree tops far below you, while never a solitary Jersey mosquito ever dares to molest you or make you afraid. A great so*ciety queen said "the half was never* told me," and that's just what the present writer said when he took up his abode in the Mountain Park Inn.

Citizens of New York and Newark are discovering the delights of this grand mountain retreat within an hour from their city limits, while the Plainfielders rejoice in holding dinner parties near the clouds.

Facts About Fire.

The city of Philadelphia reports a saving of one million dollars per year by the use of chemical over water engines. Water does much more damage than fires. When the Chemicals of the Knickerbocker Hand Fire Extinguisher are projected upon a fire, they are by the heat instantly converted into gases, that expand rapidly in every direction driving away the oxygen, and the fire dies, being deprived of its life. The effect sought, namely: the extinguishing of fires is easily accomplished by the Knickerbocker.

WON'T GO TO CUBA NOW.

A FORMER PLAINFIELDER'S LIVELY EXPERIENCE AT THE CUBA FAIR.

Donned the Military Uniform of a Fighter of Cuba Libre and Showed the Crowd How to Shoot the Death-Dealing Guns.

The New Brunswick Home News publishes the following about William F. Ford, formerly of this city: This is a touching story about how William F. Ford lent gayety to the Cuban fair at Waverly, yesterday, by parading the grounds in the full military equipment of a fighter for "Cuba Libre," became imbued with enthusiasm to strike for the Cubans home and freedom, but lost heart when the terrors of war were pictured to him.

Ford knows a thing or two about Gatling guns, having acquired his knowledge in The True American office in Trenton under Editor Joe Naar, where those playthings are used to keep off irate folks who want to kill the man who wrote the piece in the paper. The young man was telling what he knew about them to a gaping crowd, when he was accosted by a blood-thirsty fellow in a canvas suit, who carried a deadly machete.

"Say, my friend. Would you not like to go to Cuba?" said the stranger to Ford.

The reporter, being heart and fancy free, said that such a chance would suit him to a T. Moreover, he was tired of writing dog fights and strawberry festivals for a country daily, and since Gen. Bradley Johnson, the New York Journal's correspondent in Havana, was about to fight a duel with a crack-shot in the Spanish army, there was a gap just yawning for a bright young man with a yearning for fame. "Say, you can count on me," said Ford. "I can work a Gatling gun to beat the band, and blood don't turn my stomach. Between fights I can write red-hot war stories for the Journal."

"You are the right stuff," said the fellow with the machete. Just put on one of these uniforms, and you can put in your time showing off these guns to the crowd. Within the next few minutes Ford blossomed out in the full regalia of a Cuban insurgent. He carried his machete a little gingerly, to be sure, and his knees quivered when the Gatling guns went off, but otherwise he seemed to be sound.

About this time Assemblyman Edward Hicks and James P. Logan, the newspaper man, happened to come across Ford. His fitting accoutrements almost disguised him. "Salute and give the countersign," yelled Ford like a machete in a burlesque, Messrs. Hicks and Logan laughed outright at the top of the reporter. Then Ford told them he was going to Cuba. They did not believe him at first, but it looked very much like it when later on Ford was seen having his photograph taken and his pedigree recorded in the enlistment tent.

It was rumored in town this morning that after a bad night on a cot, during which the machete fellow told Ford some discomforting things about how the Spanish were a very ungentlemanly lot with a deep-seated predilection for spilling Cuban blood as a pastime, Ford deserted the camp. He had not been found up to noon today to tell his side of the story. But it is feared that "Cuba Libre" has re*ceived a set-back*, for Ford would have made a gallant soldier. As for the Journal, their loss cannot be reckoned.

Broke a Small Bone.

Oscar Vaughn, of 15 Harmony street, took a ride on his wheel Monday in the vicinity of Washingtonville. While he was returning through the Notch down a steep grade he pulled his handlebars out, with the result of throwing him with much force into the roadway. He picked himself up and managed to reach Dr. Martin's drug store, where it was learned by the doctor that a small bone in the right wrist was fractured. Vaughn also sustained injury to his left shoulder and a scratch on his face. Today he was unable to take his position as driver on the Scotch Plains stage.

ILLEGAL LIQUOR SELLING.

John Scott Convicted of Selling Beer Without a License.

After several adjournments, the case against John Scott for illegal liquor selling, has been tried and Monday City Judge DeMeza gave his verdict. He pronounced Scott guilty and fined him $25 on each charge, for there were two.

Scott drives a beer wagon and is supposed only to deliver the bottled liquid. It was said that he sold directly from the wagon. The police secured the evidence and the arrest was made. This was sometime ago.

Scott was defended by Reed and Coddington, and the chief argument used in his defence was that the beer had been ordered and then delivered although much time did not elapse between the time of ordering and delivering.

ROUGH LOT OF PLAYERS

UNSPORTSMANLIKE TACTICS OF THE RARITAN BALL PLAYERS.

When the Y. M. C. A. Was Getting the Best of the Game the Visitors Tried Ball's dozing in the Endeavor to Cause Defeat.

An aggregation of ball players from Raritan, some of whom no doubt have been brought up among a lot of Indians and cowboys, came to Plainfield Saturday afternoon and met the Y. M. C. A. team. Those who are acquainted with the geographical lines of New Jersey know that Raritan is about a mile from Somerville, and the latest reports fail to show that this romantic spot has yet come into the Union, hence the wild and frenzied actions of some of its inhabitants. The visitors came to town with the avowed purpose of winning the game, if they had to resort to trickery to do it, but their purpose failed and they went to their homes a sad but wiser company of players. The Y. M. C. A. team was out in full force and they put up as fine a game as anyone could wish to see. Their batting and fielding was superb.

The monthy Rar-i-tans.

The contest was opened in good form and the spectators felt as though the score would be close, which it was. The home team made one run in the first inning and succeeded in shutting the visitors out of a run for six innings. In the other three innings they scored eight runs, while the Y. M. C. A. team made nine runs in all, thus beating by one run.

Burt pitched an elegant game and at no time did he lose control of the ball. His easy method of delivery, combined with a cool head, held the visitors down, and then the whole team supported him well.

Of the visitors very little can be said in commendation. The team acted very much as though they felt out of place playing with a Y. M. C. A. team. They acted and looked strange all through the contest, until the latter part, when they gave as disgraceful an exhibition as the people of Plainfield have ever witnessed. The players took liberties while off the diamond, which would only be tolerated in such a place as they hailed from. They interfered with the ball while being fielded by the home team and crowded in the diamond so as to prevent the playing of their opponents. Several times Umpire Keller was obliged to call them down, and on one occasion he ordered the first baseman off the field for his Indian tactics.

The gentleman in the back-ground with an ear-shell derby is the famous "Tee Bar" Keller, and he is performing the arduous duty of umpiring.

In the ninth inning the Raritans substituted a man named Mulligan for one who was a poor batter. This was done in the hope that the former would win the game. Mulligan did not win the game, and the only thing he succeeded in was that of keeping pace with his fellow Indians.

While the exhibition from a baseball point of view was close and exciting, it must be said that the local nine cannot afford to play such teams. There are enough good teams who know how to act when they meet gentlemen, without bringing to Plainfield such a team as visited here Saturday afternoon.

The people of this city should be liberal in their patronage and thus help the boys out, but it is the duty of the home management to bring such clubs here which would make it possible for the fair sex to attend. We feel sure that Manager McLaughlin will give the matter his attention.

For the visitors Enright put up a great game, and the balance of the team played very good, leaving out

THE NORTHFIELD CONFERENCE.

William D. Murray Describes a Great Work of the Y. M. C. A.

William D. Murray at the the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon gave an account of the students' conference conducted by D. L. Moody, at Northfield, Mass. Among the other speakers at the conference were Dr. Schauffler, Arthur T. Pearson and Dr. Alex. McKenzie of Cambridge.

Mr. Murray said in part: "There were registered this year four hundred and eighty-seven under-graduates; seventy-seven of them coming from Yale. Aside from the students there were perhaps 1,500 visitors attending the conference. The Fourth of July is a celebration at Northfield the like of which one never sees elsewhere. An interesting feature of the conference was a delegation of Japanese whose expenses were met by a lady who had previously given $10,000 to one of the Young Men's Christian Associations, of China. The key note of the Conference was 'Purity of life essential to spiritual power.' John 3:16 was spoken in ten different languages either by a native or representative of the country. Each gave a few words about the need of work in their country, and then closed with the Macedonia cry in the tongue of their native land. One of the speakers was Chas. T. Studd, one of the seven of the eight 'oar' rowers of the Cambridge crew, who were converted under the ministry of Mr. Moody when in England. All seven went as foreign missionaries. Robert E. Spear spoke of the necessity of prayer. The morning watch which is the first half hour of each day spent in prayer and meditation, is still observed among the students of England."

The general Christian Workers' Conference meets at Northfield from July 30th to August 10th. Among the speakers secured for this conference are: Rev. F. B. Meyer, London; Rev. R. A. Torrey, Chicago; Rev. C. I. Scofield and D. L. Moody. Messrs. Sankey and Stebbins will have charge of the music.

$11.30 for Fresh Air Camps.

The lawn festival for benefit of Mountain Park Fresh Air Camp, held on the portico of H. J. Martin's home, Fairview avenue, one evening last week by the young people of the primary department of Trinity Reformed Church Sunday-school, was a great financial success, notwithstanding the rainy weather, and the young folks, headed by Clara and Hazel Martin and Master Clyde Slater, assisted by others, are to be congratulated upon the amount realized for the worthy object. The Press will hand the amount to the treasurer of the camp.

The Constitutionalist.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

The picturesque is not lacking in this campaign.

It is claimed that Senator Smith will support the Chicago nominees.

A McKinley and Hobart Democratic Club proposed! What's in a name?

The "silver tongued orator" phrase is particularly appropriate to Bryan.

The man who can talk politics and not have his temper ruffled is a rarity nowadays.

The New York Times this morning advocates a third ticket for the gold standard Democrates.

Plainfielders are still indignant to think that they are compelled to pay for a midnight lunch for the police.

Senator Gorman announces that he is for Bryan and Sewall, and shall urge all Democrats to vote the ticket.

Two Ohio ex-Senators have been sentenced to two years imprisonment for soliciting bribes while members of the Legislature.

S. W. Reese, of Westfield, is a delegate at-large from New Jersey to the Silverite Convention to be held in St. Louis, July 22nd.

"Variety is the spice of life," and that is why the open-air band concerts are so popular with Plainfielders. The second one in the series will be held this evening.

Ex-Congressman John T. Dunn comes out in the New York World this morning in a signed statement in which he says he will suppopt the Democratic nominees.

The Journal and The Daily News are the only two big New York papers that have declared openly and above-board that they will support Bryan. Both papers have large circulations among a class of people who are easily influenced.

The Republican State Convention for the nomination of Presidential electors will be held in Taylor's Opera House, Trenton, on August 27th. The Executive Committee of the State Committee will meet in Newark on July 27th.

It is announced that Candidate Bryan is particularly anxious to carry the silver side of the issue into the Eastern States at the earliest possible moment. There is but little doubt that Bryan will draw audiences even if he does not make votes.

Montana mines yielded $47,115,000 worth of minerals last year. The copper production of the State was about 65 per cent. of the whole product of the United States. The gold product amounted to $4,100,000; silver to 4,500,000 ounces; copper to 212,000 pounds, and lead 24,500,000 pounds. The gold output was 10 per cent. greater than in the previous year and 47 per cent greater than in 1893.

The campaign has started in with a vengeance at Morristown. Two citizens met and commenced discussing the currency question. One argued that gold was the only proper standard while his friend maintained that silver was just as good a medium. The argument grew warm and besides exchanging views they also exchanged blows, and now one is enjoying his liberty on bail awaiting the action of the grand jury on the charge of assault and battery.

Essex, Monmouth, Union, Somerset, Gloucester, Salem, Camden and Warren counties elect Senators this year. All but Warren are now represented by Republicans. Of the thirteen hold-over Senators, only two are Democrats—Daly and Kuhl—so that even if the Democrats elected the whole eight Senators next November, they would still be in a minority of one. At present the outlook is that two Democrats may be elected, thus making the Senate stand Republican by 17 to 4. In this year's body it was 18 to 3.—Tribune.

Though they cannot vote, the New Jersey Woman Suffragists do not intend to go grooping through the campaign with a hazy understanding of the issues on which a President is to be elected. Under the espionage of the New Jersey Woman's Suffrage Association, of which Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, of this city, is president, they are arranging a non partisan course of study on the subjects of protection and free trade and the gold standard and free silver. Mrs. Hall in a letter says: "The object of the National Association in arranging this course of study, is to educate our women as good citizens, and to make them reflect seriously on the duties of citizenship in our Great Republic."

The immigrants admitted to this country during the last year had an average capital of $71.63 each, which is said to be considerably above the general average. It is undoubtedly well above the average cash capital of American wage-earners even in favored localities, and it indicates that only the most thrifty class of European workers are now coming to the United States.

John C. Breckinridge was only 39 years of age when nominated for President of the United States by the Baltimore Convention in 1860. He was at that time Vice-President, having been elected four years previous. Under the Constitution of the United States a man is not eligible to the Presidency until he is 35 years of age, and presumably not eligible to the Vice-Presidency either, though the Constitution does not explicitly so state. Mr. Breckinridge was just 35 when elected Vice-President.

Politics is certainly a producer of odd combinations. Four years ago William C. Whitney and Don M. Dickinson were utilizing every method of political warfare to defeat Hill for the Presidential nomination, and now we find this trio working together in Chicago as though they had been one and the same for years. On the other hand it witnessed the spectacle of Senator Daniels permitting himself to be used as the instrument to relegate Hill to the rear, where four years ago he was one of the most active and ardent in pushing the latter to the front.

Now and then the columns of the News have been graced with bright sketches of local life. Many people imagined that these stories were written in the News office. But such has not always been the case. For instance, last Saturday the News contained an account of a fire-cracker joke that was alleged to have occurred in a South Second street home on the Fourth of July. As a matter of fact, the incident happened in a New York family and was reported in The World last Sunday. The World story was published by the News, with the change of the location of the affair to a local home, almost word for word. What piracy and deception.

Verily Plainfield must be the policeman's Paradise. There they are looked up to as little tin gods on wheels. The wheels are the bicycles which the force has been provided. Sometime ago there was talk of founding a course of gymnastic training for their benefit, the argument being that they did not get exercise enough to unlimber their joints. Just now the town is agog over the plan to provide the "cops" with midnight lunch (liquids excluded, of course.) In the future we expect to hear of pensions, steamship excursions, wine suppers and afternoon teas—all for the benefit of these happy police.—New Brunswick Home News.

The following table has been prepared at the National Democratic headquarters showing the States which they expect to carry, together with the number of electoral votes in each. Alabama, 11; Arkansas, 8; California, 8; Colorado, 4; Florida, 4; Georgia, 13; Idaho, 3; Kansas, 10; Kentucky, 13; Louisiana, 8; Maine, 6; Maryland, 8; Michigan, 14; Mississippi, 9; Missouri, 17; Montana, 3; Nebraska, 8; North Carolina, 9; Tennessee, 12; Texas, 15; Utah, 3; Virginia, 12; Washington, 4; West Virginia, 6; Wyoming, 3. Total, 228. As 294 electoral votes will decide the matter this combination would give Bryan a majority of five. The silverites place Illinois, Indiana, Minnesota, Ohio and South Dakota as doubtful. They have a total of 75 electoral votes.

Fifteen minutes after the nomination of William J. Bryan at the Democratic convention in Chicago yesterday afternoon, The Daily Press was on the streets with a half-column account of the nomination and the immediate proceedings leading up to that act. Such quick service has never before been accomplished in Plainfield journalism, and even great metropolitan papers did not make more rapid time in announcing the nomination in their papers. This rapid time was made possible, however, by the superb telegraphic service of the Postal Telegraph Company, who had a direct wire from Plainfield to the convention hall, where the proceedings were sent out as soon as they took place. Manager W. E. Martin and his staff of handling messenger boys were especially attentive to the duty of handling this convention matter for The Daily Press and it was largely through this fact that Plainfielders were treated to such excellent and up-to date accounts of the various sessions of the conventions.

Eli Hill, Lumber City, Pa., writes, "I have been suffering from piles for twenty-five years and thought my case incurable. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve was recommended to me as a pile cure, so I bought a box and it performed a permanent cure." This is only one of thousands of similar cases. Eczema, sores and skin diseases yield quickly when it is used. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street

Thomas H. Proctor, chairman of the Populist party in New Jersey, is in favor of indorsing Bryan.

While opposing the election of Bryan and Sewall the Trenton True American prints their names at the head of their editorial column every day.

The campaign opens in New Jersey on the Republican side today when the annual convention of the Republican League Clubs is being held at Asbury Park.

Plainfield, Bordentown and Lambertville are the only cities in the State without funded indebtedness. Elizabeth is the principal city without a floating debt.—New York Press.

MR. MARTINE'S ADVICE.

He Writes a Faltering Democrat to Take Courage.

In response to a letter from a prominent Democrat of Union county, Mr. Martine writes the following: (The name of the gentleman is not mentioned as we have no authority to publish same).

I am a Democrat, believing that parties are necessary to our form of Government, and under a Democratic form of government majorities must rule. By a large majority at the Chicago Convention, Hon. William J. Bryan was nominated for President. I was and am a warm friend and ardent admirer of William Collins Whitney, but this is of no moment now, nor does it matter to me whether the New Jersey delegation voted or not. I, as an American citizen and Democrat, will vote for Mr. Bryan. I believe him an honest man, whose whole life is as clear and clean as Alpine ice.

There are planks in the platform that I would wish were different, but the great House of Representatives will temper legislation on all lines.

The broad thoughts and principles of the Democratic party are safer for people than the doctrine of the Republican party.

To Democrats, I say don't let us reject the whole temple because some stone in its structure may be faulty.

On the money question, I say that all the evils of our system at present are the result of Republican legislation. And the people should hesitate well before they give another lease of power to a party whose teachings and methods have brought such disaster.

Let Democrats stand firm.

Very respectfully,

J. E. Martine.

An Expensive Dinner.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:

In The News of July 9th mention was made of a dinner of the Mountain Park Inn. Among the guests was the Township Committee of North Plainfield. What an exhilirating effect that twelve-course dinner had upon the hungry officials who partook of it, is apparent when in the issue of the same paper, July 10th, it was announced that they had promised to light by electricity Johnston's drive, from Somerset street to the Inn, at the expense of the township. I am a taxpayer and a sadly-fleeced one I can assure you, when that notorious thoroughfare, Johnston's drive, is concerned. I fondly hoped that I had paid my last for private enterprises at the expense of the public; but, lo! for poor taxpayers when temptation assails public officers in the form of twelve-course dinners. I also notice that the darkness is to be illuminated only while the Inn remains open, a positive proof of that it is solely for the benefit of that never-to-be-forgotten twelve course dinner. As I have said before, I am a taxpayer. I am also in favor of improvements and would like to have the road passing my property lighted by electricity, not to such an extent that I could see to pick up pins, but that I might be enabled to keep out of the holes, made by those whose business it is to keep our roads in order. But we do not all keep inns nor can we afford to give twelve-course dinners. In conclusion, I would like to ask the Township Committee to solve the following problem: If a twelve-course dinner lights Johnston's drive, from Somerset street to the Inn, of how many courses should a dinner be that would light all the roads in the township? Indignant Taxpayer.

W. J. BRYAN'S CAREER

The Youngest Man Ever Nominated for President.

ONLY THIRTY-SIX YEARS OF AGE

Jumped into Fame in One Night After a Speech in the House of Representatives—Now an Editor at Omaha, Nebraska.

Washington, July 11.—There is nothing in romantic literature that surpassed the meteoric career of William Jennings Bryan, who was nominated at Chicago for the highest office within the gift of the American people. The constitutional age of presidents is 35 years. Bryan is 36, and if elected in November he will be the youngest president that the White House has ever known. He is essentially a self-made man and a man of the people. His principal education was gained in the public schools of Salem, Ill., where his parents resided. During the succeeding six years he received an academic training. The bent of his mind was toward the law and it was in the office of Lyman Trumbull, himself a conspicuous figure during the war and the reconstruction period which followed, that he laid the foundations of his legal career. It was in congress, however, that Mr. Bryan made the reputation which has swept him into his present prominence. In 1890, when only 30 years of age, he was elected a member of the house from the First district of Nebraska, where he located immediately after his admission to the bar. During the consideration of the single tariff bills which were brought before the house during the first session of that congress, Mr. Bryan electrified his colleagues by the force and vigor of his utterances, his intimate knowledge of economic matters, the gracefulness of his oratory and his ability to sustain himself with credit against the ablest debaters upon the republican side of the chamber.

Sprang Into Fame in a Day.

His time on that occasion was repeatedly extended and he spoke in all several hours. He awoke the next morning to find himself famous. Nor was it ephemeral fame. He became from that day a conspicuous figure in a house which included such giants of debate as Breckinridge of Kentucky, Reed and Cockran, John A. Fellows of New York, Dingley and Reed of Maine, Springer of Illinois, Lodge of Massachusetts, Oats of Alabama and William L. Wilson of West Virginia, who now holds the office of postmaster-general. In this speech Mr. Bryan as a free trader he favored the lowest tariff consistent with the necessities of the government and he was placed by Speaker Crisp on the ways and means committee, an unusual honor for a new man. During the congress Mr. Bryan had also achieved a reputation as a staunch supporter of free silver, and when President Cleveland convened that congress in extraordinary session in the autumn of 1893 Mr. Bryan was Mr. Bland's efficient lieutenant in leading the opposition to the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act. He continued in that congress as a member of the ways and means committee. He was one of the sub-committee which had in charge the internal revenue schedule of what was subsequently known as the Wilson tariff bill and he shares with Mr. McMillin the honor of being the first to suggest the incorporation in that measure of an income tax.

Bryan's Personality.

Mr. Bryan added to his laurels as a brilliant and ready debater during the discussion of that measure in the house, and his influence was also exerted in favor of the income tax, which he regarded as one of its most essential features. With this congressional career ended, and he returned to Omaha to accept the editorship of the World-Herald of that city, although his home for many years has been at Lincoln, the state capital. Mr. Bryan is about the medium in height. His face is clearly shaven, and in appearance he resembles the great Democratic commoner, Samuel J. Randall, who, at Mr. Bryan's age, might readily have passed for the latter's twin brother. He is a strict church man, and on several occasions during his residence in this city addressed the Young Man's Christian association and other religious bodies. He is earnest and enthusiastic in whatever cause enlists his sympathies, and it is not doubted that his personality will largely influence the approaching campaign.

Mrs. Bryan Witnessed the Balloting.

Chicago, July 11.—Mrs. Bryan, wife of the nominee, who is a small, modest-looking woman, had a seat in the gallery to the left of the speaker's stand, yesterday afternoon. When it was positively known that Mr. Bryan had been named for the presidency she was surrounded by admiring friends and heartily congratulated. She thanked each one pleasantly and throughout maintained a quiet demeanor that impressed those about her. To a representative of the United Press, she said: "I think my husband will try to deserve the great honor these men have conferred upon him I appreciate it, I assure you." If his wife's act is of value in the endeavor to elect him, he will have all possible assistance from me."

Damage Verdict Awarded.

Bridgeport, Conn., July 11.—Judge Hall of the superior court has awarded Benjamin F. Squires and wife of Monroe, $1,700 and costs in their suit against the American Telegraph and Telephone company of New York. They sued for $20,000 for injuries received through the carelessness of an agent of the defendant.

SEWALL'S CAREER

Sketch of the Life of the Democratic Vice-Presidential Nominee.

A RECENT CONVERT TO FREE SILVER

Prominent Bath, Me., Shipbuilder, Railroad Man and Bank President—Descendant of an Old and Distinguished Family.

Portland, Me., July 13.—Arthur Sewall, who was nominated for vice-president at Chicago Saturday, was born in Bath Me., on Nov. 25, 1835, and was the third son of the late William D. Sewall. He was educated in the public schools of Bath, and after an apprenticeship under his father he formed in 1854 with his brother Edward the firm of E. & A. Sewall, shipbuilders and commission agents. The Bath Sewalls have been closely identified with Bath's chief industry, shipbuilding, since 1833, when William D. Sewall opened a small shipyard on the banks of the Kennebec, next to the family homestead. He was succeeded in 1850 by Clark & Sewall. These two earlier firms built twenty-nine wooden vessels between 1823 and 1854. The E. & A. Sewall firm dissolved in 1879 by the death of Edward Sewall. In 1879 Arthur Sewall, his son, Wm. D. Sewall, and Clinton Agnew, Samuel S. Sewall, formed the firm of Arthur Sewall & Co., which is still in existence. To meet the conditions of the present time, the firm began some years ago to equip their shipyard with a plant for making steel vessels. They built the first steel American clipper, Dirigo. Mr. Sewall was for many years prominent as a railroad man. He became a director of the Maine Central Railroad company in 1875, and in 1884 was elected president, serving in that capacity until the election of Mr. Wilson several years ago. During this time Mr. Sewall was also president of the Portland, Mount Desert and Machias Steamboat company. Mr. Sewall has been a director of some of the branch lines of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad, and a director of the Mexican Central railway in 1884, 1885 and 1886. He is also president of the Bath National bank.

Came Out for Free Silver in '95.

Mr. Sewall came out for free coinage of silver in June, 1895. He was the democratic candidate for United States senator at the session of the Maine legislature in 1893. Mr. Sewall has always made his home at Bath. He married Emma Crocker of Bath, a daughter of the late Charles Crocker, who also was long and actively engaged in shipbuilding at Bath, on the 19th of March, 1863, and has had three sons—Harold M., who achieved distinction in the diplomatic service in Samoa during the first administration of President Cleveland, and who has since joined the republican party; William D., a member of the firm of Arthur Sewall & Co., and Dummer, who died in infancy. The Sewalls are of an old and illustrious family on both sides of the water. The first American Sewall came here in 1634, and was born in Coventry, England, in 1614, so that he was a young man to come into the wilderness. His sons were Samuel, John, Stephen and Nicholas. Samuel was the judge of witchcraft fame, and was the direct ancestor of the Sewalls in Maine. Dummer Sewall, the grandfather of the first shipbuilder, came to Bath from York, which was also in the district of Maine, in 1783, and purchased a tract of land on which to this day stands the Sewall yard and the houses of the Sewall family.

Catholic Summer School Opened.

Plattsburgh, N. Y., July 13.—The fifth annual session of the Catholic Summer school of America was opened auspiciously yesterday by pontifical high mass at St. John's church. Rt. Rev. Bishop Gabriels of the diocese of Ogdensburg being the celebrant. The opening sermon was by Rev. F. Ryan, rector of St. Michael's cathedral, Toronto, one of Canada's most eloquent orators. He took for his subject the "Attributes of God."

Tests of Colt Gun Successful.

Washington, July 13.—Tests of the Colt automatic gun have been progressing at the navy yard in this city for several days. They are regarded as satisfactory and the indications are that the contracts with the department will be closed out. The arm is of a single barrel construction, and will fire 400 shots per minute.

Transfer of Naval Boilers.

Washington, July 13.—In consideration of a request from Admiral Belknap, the boiler of the U. S. S. Galena, which was wrecked off Montauk Point, will be taken to the Massachusetts training ship Enterprise at Boston. The transfer will be made under direction of the government at the Portsmouth, N. H., navy yard.

Cholera in Egypt.

Cairo, July 13.—The total number of new cases of cholera reported throughout Egypt yesterday was 362, and the deaths numbered 321. Among those who have died from the disease is Major Owen of the Soudan expedition, who commanded the outposts at Amlugol wells.

Appeal of Canal Carriers.

Buffalo, July 13.—The canal carriers have made an appeal to the New York Produce exchange for relief from grain elevator extortions and discriminations against the state grain traffic at Buffalo and New York.

General Merchandise Store Burned.

Port Jefferson, N. Y., July 13.—The store of F. F. Darling & Son, dealers in general merchandise, was burned yesterday. Loss, about $25,000.

TRAVELING WITHOUT TICKETS.

On Complaint of Railroad Officials Four Tramps Are Arrested.

For sometime the Jersey Central railroad officials have been on the lookout for the tramps that constantly take advantage of the numerous coal and freight trains. The police of this city are often called upon to arrest the offenders so it was nothing strange when a telegram was received Tuesday evening to meet a midnight coal train and remove some of these same characters.

Roundsman Frederickson and Patrolman Vanderweg responded to the summons and appeared at the North Avenue station in time to arrest four young men who were riding on the coaler.

They made no attempt to resist arrest and were locked up without trouble. They were brought before City Judge DeMeza this morning and one had a particularly sorrowful story to tell. His name, he said, was George Bolus, twenty-eight years of age. He was a moulder by trade and had been working at Ontario, Canada, where his wife and children are now living. Hard times threw him out of work, he and his family were starving and in a moment of desperation, started to work his way to Brooklyn where an old friend lived, who, he hoped, would be able to get him a job. After hearing Bolus' story, the Judge suspended sentence on him.

The other three prisoners were young fellows from Philadelphia, Louis Biorne, twenty-one years, Thomas Niles, seventeen years, and John Kennedy, seventeen years. They all gave their occupations as laborers, and were working their way to New York, looking for work, so they said. They were a rather rough looking set and the Judge sent them down to the Elizabeth jail for ten days in default of $3 fine.

PARK CLUB FLOURISHING.

So It Was Shown at a Meeting of the Board Last Night.

North Plainfield is a prosperous place and so is its club,the Park Club. The Board of Governors of the club held a meeting Tuesday and the reports of the different officers, especially that of the treasurer, showed the club to be in excellent condition. The Fourth of July committee, that arranged the very successful celebration of last Independence Day, made its report and the various financial matters in regard to it were arranged.

The membership of the Park Club has been full until several members have lately resigned. These vacancies were quickly filled from the awaiting list.

The board also decided to pay off two bonds of $100 each.

A Trolley Observation.

A citizen remark ed last evening that he thought it strange that no attempt had been made to extend the trolley from this city to Morristown. He thought it would develop a large and rich quantity of land. The present difficulty of reaching Morristown would seem to give the plan a big boom.

Surprised by His Friends.

A surprise party was tendered to Matthew Cashin, of St. Mary's church choir, at his home on West Fifth street, Tuesday night. The party was arranged by the members of the choir and St. Mary's Dramatic circle and it was a most enjoyable affair. Prof. O'Reilly furnished the music for dancing.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

SUIT OVER PLUMBING.

Miss Margaret DeMott Claims James Walsh Didn't Do the Work Right.

There was an important case that came before Justice Nash Monday afternoon. It was the case of James H. Walsh against Mrs. Margaret DeMott, on contract. The trouble was over a plumbing bill of $3 5, which Mrs. DeMott refused to pay claiming that Walsh had not done the plumbing work properly in her house. It came out at the trial that the Walsh and DeMott families had always been great friends and that Mrs. DeMott had known Walsh ever since he was born.

She had always put the most implicit trust in him, and now she claimed he had taken advantage of her. He claimed that the work had been done according to contract. The Judge reserved his decision for a week.

Walsh was represented by Assemblyman W. B. Codington, while Mrs. DeMott's lawyer was Winfield S. Angleman.

Good Idea.

It is likely that at an early date a special meeting of Alert Hose Company will be called for the purpose of considering the advisability of presenting to the Exempt Firemen's Association the silver hose carriage now owned by the former. The carriage has not been used for some time and a number of the members think it would be the proper thing to transfer it to such a worthy organization as the Exempts. The Daily Press would heartily endorse such action provided it is the wish of Alert's members.

New Commutation Ticket Scale.

The Central Railroad Company announces that beginning August 1st they will adopt new graduated rates for commutation tickets between New York and points on the main line. No change will be made in the total amount to be charged for the year; the monthly payments being more nearly equalized.

Plainfielders at Passaic.

Plainfield Artist's Work in Paris.

There is an interesting exhibition of sketches, pastels and drawings in Paris, among which are some landscape views by Miss Caroline M. Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David P. Hall, of this city. Miss Hall will sail for home on July 16th.

Just What's Needed

Exclaims thousands of people who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla at this season of the year, and who have noted the success of the medicine in giving them relief from that tired feeling, waning appetite and state of extreme exhaustion after the close confinement of a long winter season, the busy time attendant upon a large and pressing buisness during the spring months and the vacation time yet some weeks distant. It is then that the building up powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are fully appreciated. It seems perfectly adapted to overcome that prostration caused by change of season, climate or life, and while it tones and sustains the system, it purifies and vitalizes the blood.

Small in size, but great in results, De Witt's Little Early Risers act gently but thoroughly, curing indigestion, dyspepsia and constipation. Small pill, safe pill, best pill. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

Last summer one of our grand children was sick with a severe bowel trouble. Our doctor's remedies had failed, then we tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy which gave very speedy relief. We regard it as the best medicine ever put on the market for bowel complaints. Mrs. E. S. Gregory, Fredericktown, Mo. This certainly is the best medicine ever put on the market for dysentery, summer complaint, colic and cholera infantum in children. It never fails to give prompt relief when used in reasonable time and she plain printed directions are followed. Many mothers have expressed their sincere gratitude for the cures it has effects I. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

It would be hard to convince a man suffering from bilious colic that his agony is due to a microbe with an unpronounceable name. But one dose of De Witt's Colic and Cholera Cure will convince him of its power to afford instant relief. It kills pain. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

A DYING COWBOY'S WISH.

A Few Verses of Poetry Which Seem Applied to the Author's Case.

On August 29th, 1896, J. H. Bolsterli, who was killed by being thrown from a horse in Wyoming Territory several weeks ago, composed several verses on "The Dying Cowboy's Wish." As if by predestination they seem to be particularly appropriate to his unhappy fate. They are as follows:

Be kind to good old Billzard, boys, my trus and noble steed.
Who's carried me the darkest night through many a wild stampede.
The trail will be hard to travel, lads, when he's so far behind;
But I cannot take him with me there, so promise you'll be kind.

Just think how often he's pulled us through and the race he has won.
And also how he's helped us out in other things we've done;
And when we used to risk our life the result you always know.
I tried to ride him square, dear friends, he run to win his true.

I never used a quirt or spur to make him take the lead,
A kind word truly spoken, Jack, is the only whip you need.
You know how well I loved him, men, and what I always said.
He's mine while I'm living, boys. Jack gets him when I'm dead.

And now another word or so while I am lingering here,
I want you to send my outfit home to my wife and mother I love so dear;
And when you go to pack it up put in each rope and strap,
Also a little note to say I always thought of Pap.

Tell them to hang my spurs upstairs, in the room I used to sleep,
Also my gun over the old back door where I would often go to weep;
The bridle to go in father's room, my hat out my saddle in brother Johnny's room, with the lasso on the wall.

And don't forget my sisters dear, send them a lock of hair,
For I know that they will miss me when the others gather there.
Now Jack take care of Blizzard, please, my truest friend indeed.
Caress his dear old self for me, remember how I plead.

You have seen us on the round-up, and stayed by me through it all,
Tell her for me I forgive him, pard, he could not help that fall.
And now, dear friends, one more I say good bye,
I cannot stay much longer here, still I'm so I'm going, yes I'm going, we may never meet

Oh! boys, how hard to die it is so far out on the plain.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy cures colds, croup and whooping cough. It is pleasant, safe and reliable. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

Pass the good word along the line. Piles can be quickly cured without an operation by simply applying De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

Why is it,

if catarrh is a constitutional affection, as the claim is made by many who have to sell, that physicians, in extreme cases, frequently advise change of air and climate to those suffering from it? Catarrh is a climatic affection, and nothing but a local remedy or a change of climate will cure it. Ely's Cream Balm, in all cases of catarrh, is so efficient as to do away with the necessity of leaving home and friends, causing instant relief and a perfect cure after short continuance.

More

More Medicinal value in a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla than in any other preparation.

More skill is required, more care taken, more expense incurred in its manufacture. It costs the proprietor and the dealer more but it costs the consumer less, as he gets more doses for his money.

More curative power is secured by its peculiar combination, proportion and process, which make it peculiar to itself.

More people are employed and more space occupied in its laboratory than any other.

More wonderful cures effected and more testimonials received than by any other. sales and more More increase year by year; are reports, by druggists.

More people are taking Hood's Sarsaparilla today than any other, and more are taking today than ever before.

More and STILL MORE reasons might be given why you should take

Hood's Sarsaparilla

MUST PAY ANOTHER'S BILL.

One of the Proprietors of the Ill-Fated Hotel Netherwood in Trouble.

An action was brought in Justice Mosher's court Monday by John Heussey, the painter, against Joseph E. Davis and Rudolph Lerch, to recover $106 which was owing him by Greenleaf Crossman, one of the men interested in Hotel Netherwood. The later gave a check for $106 in payment for work performed by Mr. Hensey at the hotel. Davis and Lerch gave a bond for the payment of the check, and Mr. Hensey, through his lawyer, S. S. Swackhamer, brought action against Mr. Davis and Mr. Lerch to ascertain whether both men were residents of this State.

Lawyer Arthur Miller represented Mr. Lerch and offered evidence to the court that proved that Mr. Lerch was a resident of this county at the date of the order for the warrant. This evidence was accepted by the court and Mr. Lerch's bondsman, Charles Hyde, was released. Mr. Davis was not a resident and it was so proved. The court held the latter and issued an execution against the body as there was not sufficient goods and chattels to satisfy the judgment. Mr. Hensey was given judgment for the full amount and Mr. Davis will be obliged to settle.

"Wake up, Jacob, day is breaking!" so said De Witt's Little Early Risers to the man who had taken them to arouse his sluggish liver. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

Mrs. Rhodie Noah, of this place, was taken in hand with cramping pains and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but was getting worse. I sent him this same remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to the above remedy.—Mrs. Mary Sibley, Sidney, Mich. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Druggist.

We are anxious to do a little good in this world and can think of no pleasanter or better way to do it than by recommending One Minute Cough Cure as a preventive of pneumonia, consumption and other serious lung troubles that follow neglected colds. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

Somerset st., North Plainfield.

If you have not engaged your work I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work. We look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertise for my business, which will help to build up trade; and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you better work and more up stock any cheaper than I can.

A MORNING INVASION.

CHIEF GRANT VISITED THE HAUNT OF THE PLAINFELD YOUTH.

They Were in Swimming. But Fled at the Sight of the Officers, Leaving Their Clothes—Wore Tights—No Arrests.

It was warm Monday morning and everybody realized the fact. A little breeze rustled the leaves of the trees along the banks of Green brook and played a soft accompaniment to the splashing of the water. Early in the morning the small boys assembled by the banks and enjoyed the cooling shades, but they did more. They had come prepared and were soon paddling about Plainfield's single water course, clad only in trunks. The boys were quite small, but they enjoyed the water all the same, and soon made the neighbors aware of the fact. The pool that lies between Sandford and Westervelt avenues was especially attractive, as the large shade trees hang over the bank, and the scorching rays of the July sun is unable to reach the water at this point.

All was peaceful for a time and the silence was broken only by the chatter of the lads. A wagon containing two men was driven along the borough side when one of the lads looked up. An expression of terror overspread his face. Then came another look of determination. Out of the cooling waters he clambered with twenty more just like him close behind and then they fled. If you have ever seen prairie dogs run when their village is invaded then you have some idea of the way the boys scattered, for in the wagon they had recognized the familiar features of Chief Grant and Patrolman McCue.

The lads didn't stop to don their street attire, but left everything behind, and the residents were rather astonished to see a small army of bare-limbed boys come fleeing down the street.

Chief Grant had been telephoned that a crowd of boys were in swimming near Sandford avenue and were disturbing the neighborhood, hence his invasion. He came around by the borough side so as to drive the boys over on the city side, where they could be captured, but as they wore trunks no arrests were made.

The Chief also found another crowd of boys enjoying a swim in Hyde's pond, and they fled with equal rapidity. One poor lad was captured but his fear so overcame him that his tongue refused to move. He at last managed to give the names of some of his companions and was then allowed to go.

BRADLEY OUTWITTED.

Young Folk Ignore His Fence and Are Threatened With Arrest.

Some of the young people of Asbury Park are taking exceptions to the board fence erected by Founder Bradley last season, at the north end of the board walk. This fence was placed in position in order to keep young couples off the dark beach, north of the board walk after nightfall.

But the young people have found a way of getting around this. They come along the banks of Deal Lake and from there to the beach, until it has become a notorious fact lately that the fence is no longer a protection. It was only a few nights ago that Policeman Hurley, who is always on the lookout for breaches of propriety, discovered several couples making for this precinct. He stopped them unceremoniously, telling them that they would have to return or submit to arrest. After protesting in vain, they turned back—all but one young lady who fainted and fell into the policeman's arms.

He used such restoratives as were at hand and after she had recovered she promised faithfully never to do so again and hurried off the beach.

An Exciting Chase.

Samuel Harland left a pair of shoes in front of a Park-ave., shop Saturday morning before the shop was opened, intending that the cobbler should get them when he opened. But an unknown colored man came along and appropriated the shoes, exchanging them for a worthless pair he was wearing. Harland caught the man doing the trick and gave chase in company with James Donohue.

The thief ran down the alley next Jaquet's store and up along the brook. He finally circled around onto Somerset street, where he drew a knife and defied Harland who was pursuing him with two big cobblestones in his hands. After some argument he finally divested himself of the stolen property and went hobbling along in his bare feet. No arrest was made.

Picknicking at Boynton Beach.

There were a number of picnics at Boynton Beach Saturday but none of them were more enjoyable than the picnic of the Ladies' Aid Society of Monroe Avenue chapel. Hand's stage took twenty of the members and their families and the day was passed very delightfully.

—Michael Burke, of the West End, who has been at the hospital for some*time under treatment, was discharged* on Saturday, having fully recovered.

FELL IN WITH BAD MEN.

EXCITING EXPERIENCE OF A WAY-FARER WITH TRAMPS.

Walked Unconsciously Into a Trap Laid by the Hoboes Who Stole Nearly All His Belongings and Left Him a Sight.

Footsore and weary and robbed of all his money and spare clothing John Fisher entered this city about 5 o'clock Thursday morning with anything but a hopeful lookout before him, but about four hours later his faith in human nature had been greatly increased and he started out again on his journey with a heart full of thankfulness to the Plainfield police force in general and Patrolman Myers in particular. Fisher is an old soldier journeying from Williamsburgh to Pottsville, Pa., and he had the very unpleasant experience of being held up by the gang of tramps that frequent Graceland.

He is a German of fifty-seven years of age, and emigrated to this country in 1860. He enlisted for three months at the first call in the Fifty-seventh New York Volunteers, and afterwards for three years and received an honorable discharge in each case. Yesterday he left Williamsburgh, a suburb of Brooklyn, and started for Pottsville, Pa., to visit his sister and some old comrades of his regiment. He took the trolley car from Jersey City to Newark, and then walked to Elizabeth and then to this city on the track of the Jersey Central Railroad.

The sun had set and the twilight was fast fading into night when Fisher approached Graceland. Realizing that it was time to look for a night's lodging that would not make too heavy an inroad on his slender stock of finds, Fisher began to look about him.

'Say old man come over here" remarked a young red haired fellow who was standing on the other side of the track and, when Fisher went over there the young man plied him with questions and soon learned that he was a stranger in search of a cheap lodging place. Apparently, Fisher's new found acquaintance became very much interested in him and attempted to learn something about his financial condition. Fisher had heard of sharpers before and did not encourage the advances of the red haired stranger but, as the latter appeared to be alone and as he offered to show Fisher a place where he might lodge free of charge, he walked along with him until they reached the Graceland station where the young man told Fisher they could spend the night.

The fast growing shades of darkness told plainly that night was near at hand, and so Fisher overcame his suspicions and entered. He had expected to be alone but there were already two men in the station, lying on the heaps of leaves that showed the station to be a regular lodging place.

"Who's there?" grunted one of the men, who was reclining on his leafy bed.

"It's a stranger," was the reply of Fisher's guide, who was evidently well acquainted with the other two. The three pals, for such they appeared to be, held a long conference at one end of the little building, while Fisher watched them with fear. At last he removed his coat and shoes and prepared to take a little rest. His package, containing his best suit, several changes of underclothing and his precious discharge papers, he used for a pillow. Then he went to sleep.

The next thing he remembered was that some one had him by the throat and was resting his knee on Fisher's chest.

"You Dutch ——, if you hallos, I'll kill you," was hissed at him and he saw the cruel fat face of the stouter of the two young men, who had been in the station, close to his. Then one of the others removed the bundle from beneath his head and his coat and shoes, which lay beside him.

"Go through him good," said one of the party, as another removed Fisher's pocketbook containing $1.13, his spectacles and other articles from his pocket.

"You —— Dutch ——, if you leave before it is light we'll lay your —— old carcass out, for we'll be just across the track. Then they disappeared in the darkness and Fisher was left alone. For three hours he sat there trembling at every sound, and expecting the robbers to return and become murderers.

When the first grey streaks of dawn were to be seen in the east, Fisher crawled out of the station and hurried away down the track. The walk was a painful one as he had no shoes and the cinders cut his feet cruelly.

He reached Netherwood and there met Patrolman Myers. On broken sentences the story of the night was told and the loss of the beloved papers described.

"I cared more for those than I did for all the clothes," said Fisher.

Now Patrolman Myers is a brave man, and brave men usually have a sympathetic heart, so he took Fisher to his home, and gave him shoes, stockings and a coat. He went further and took Fisher down town and gave him a good square meal.

Fisher next told his story to Chief Grant and Detective Blackford, who took a description of the men. And, when Fisher left the Chief's office, the money stolen from him had been more than replaced from the pockets of his Plainfield friends, and he started again on his way, still mourning, however, over the loss of his precious discharges.

REPUBLICANS ENTHUSIASTIC.

U. S. Grant Club Prepare for an Active Campaign.

The U. S. Grant Republican Club of North Plainfield held a large and very enthusiastic meeting last Thursday in the borough Council rooms, at which time five delegates and five alternates were elected to attend the State meeting to be held at Asbury Park July 15th. President R. M. Fountain called the meeting to order and S. B. Joseph was chosen secretary pro tem. The delegates chosen were P. A. Emmons, Andrew Lutkins, W. C. Smith, J. G McLaughlin and D. Worth Bedding-ton. The alternates were Horace J. Martin, James D. Anderson, George N. Steward, Frank Kesselring and John VanHorn.

Charles S. Sminck offered a resolution which was adopted. The resolution condemned the course pursued at the Chicago convention and upheld the policy of the Republican party in advocating the principles of protection and sound money. The business being concluded a social time was enjoyed, during which there was lots of good music. Dory Vroom presided at the piano, Harry Spencer played the guitar and Wm. C. Force the banjo. There was singing by Captain Smith, Joe Martin, H. J. Martin, Frank Kesselring, Oscar Philpott, John Goodwin, and recitations by Frank Spillane. Speeches were made by the president, secretary, Capt. Smith and H. N. Spencer. The latter gave an outline of the work to be done at Asbury Park. After cigars had been passed and a good time enjoyed the meeting was adjourned to some date in the near future.

FOR A GOOD CAUSE.

Successful Festival for the Benefit of the Fresh Air Camp.

A successful festival was held Thursday afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Glaentzer, of New street, for the benefit of the local babies camp. It was held on the lawn and was arranged by Edith Glaentzer, Bertie Glaentzer, Mamie Mehl and Willie Mehl. Emil Scheidecker very kindly erected a canopy for the young folks, and the decoration consisting of flags, bunting, etc, were exceedingly pretty. There was a good attendance, and the fancy articles, cakes, lemonade and soda water on sale, was all disposed of with a net profit of $3, which was turned over to the proper authority. Those in charge had a beautiful doll, and everyone present took a chance of guessing the dolls name. Alice Mehl secured the prize as she guessed the right name which was Olive.

RODE ON THE ROOF.

A Tramp Tries to Work His Way on a Passenger Train.

The police received a telegram late last Thursday, that there was an unpleasant visitor on the midnight passenger train. Patrolman Vanderweg was at the North avenue station ready to receive him and found the visitor to be a tramp who had ensconsed himself on top of one of the passenger cars.

The officer told him to come off the the roof, and, when he did, he was locked up until this morning when he was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza.

The prisoner gave his name as John Gatehill and as he had not $10, he went to Elizabeth to serve out the thirty-day term given him by the Judge.

LOST TO MONTCLAIR.

Hillside Club Fail to Win at Golf With an Out-of-Town Club.

The golf players of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club had their first chance Saturday afternoon to show their skill against out-of-town cracks. A team of four from the Montclair Golf Club came over and won after a close and exciting match.

The Plainfield team made quite a creditable showing, however, and expect to make the Montclair players hustle at the next game of the series which is to be played at Montclair on August 15th.

Quite a number of the members of the club and their friends came to the links on wheels and in carriages and watched the game. The course was kept entirely clear for the two teams and the greens were in excellent condition. The players and their scores were as follows:

M. G. C.		H. T. AND G. C.
Reid, T. M.	0	Wall, H. D.	3
Shroeder, A.	8	Tracy, Evarts	0
Grant, W.	4	Arthur, S.	0
Freeman, J. D.	0	Walz, J. W.	3
Total	13	Total	6

Thus it was that Montclair won the game by seven poles.

There will be six men on a side in the return game. A match has been arranged with the New Brunswick Golf Club, and the first game will be played at New Brunswick, July 25th.

—J. T. Vail has sold to P. Traynor, of Westfield, the house and lot on West Seventh street, adjoining the residence of John H. French.

BOOTH-TUCKER TALKS.

SALVATION ARMY LEADER TELLS OF THEIR WORK.

He Explains the Practical Ways in Which They Labor and Draws an Ideal Picture of Their Results.

An unusual procedure marked the meeting at the Salvation Army hall Thursday last, very much unlike that which was used several weeks ago when Mrs. Booth-Tucker was present and addressed a large gathering. Last evening it was different in this particular that the appearance of Commander Booth-Tucker was not marked by any great ovation. When the Commander entered the hall, followed by the "Victory Boys," he gave a signal and all noise ceased. He was accompanied by several officers from headquarters, including Staff-Captain Dunham, Adjutant Damon and Dr. Nise. As soon as the Commander appeared on the platform, he was presented with a handsome bouquet by a young woman, which he accepted most gracefully.

Commander Booth-Tucker is tall and has a distinguished appearance. There is something very attractive in his manner and speech and in the latter he has a slight accent which is not unpleasant.

The hearty singing of "Down Where the Living Waters Flow," opened the service, after which Adjutant Damon offered a fervent earnest prayer. A violin solo by Dr. Nise followed. He was accompanied on the guitar by Adjutant Taylor. The selection concluded with a familiar hymn which was sung by the Salvationists.

Brigadier Evans then made a few excellent remarks in which he introduced Booth-Tucker. The later, in part, said:

"I want to read the fourth chapter of the book of Zachariah, for I believe that the Salvation Army was founded on that chapter. You will find men that are wide awake in business, at the stock markets and in every pur*suit making money, but in religion* they are asleep. You will find women the same way in their homes. The Lord awakened Zachariah out of his sleep and may we also be awakened. Outside of the church barracks, or prayer meeting, some people's light is never burning. The oil is so low that their lamps smoke, causing a bad odor, and finally people say blow out the light or turn it up. It would take a good pair of spectacles to read by the light of some Christians. We teach that not only must a person's circumstances be changed, but also the man must be changed, also that a man and woman can be holy. Some people are born with good tempers, but the devil comes along with an extinguisher and puts out that light. I would feel proud to die like a poor house and go to heaven that way, and have my clothes hung up in a museum where people could point to them and say there are the clothes of one who died in the Lord. There was a time when I loved money, the ball and the theatre, but God has changed my heart. In talking to two men in New York yesterday, I was asked what the social plan of the army was. *In the first place the man's circum*stances must be changed as well as the man himself. That is the root, source and secret of our work. We don't leave God out of our calculations. I had a wonderful tour with General Booth through all the principal cities in the old world and we met nearly all the prominent officials. We were convinced that there was great need of something being done. I am an American citizen and intend being a good one. I ought to be for I have good ones around me. I am unequal for the position I hold but my wife and I are going forward and we are going to be real Americans.

"The newspaper is more authority than the Gospel of St. Mark. It might be the Gospel according to St. Newspaper, but there is a fact that I have never heard a newspaper dispute and that is that one-tenth of the population of the world is on the border of starvation. There are 150,000,000 of people who never know what it is to be without hunger and a large portion have no place they can call home. These facts are enough to give one the night mare. The Salvation Army pulled off their coats, rolled up their sleeves and went to work while others were theorizing. I remember hearing a story of a telegraph operator in India, who, while working in the office of a railroad station, which was being demolished by tigers, wired the following message to headquarters: "Tigers eating station, Master; wire instructions." This reminds me of editors sitting in their chairs, people reclining in their homes wiring back and forth, "Tigers eating station. Master; wire instructions." According to Statistician Hunt there are 40,000 people who never know what it is to be without hunger. This is the subject to be grappled. The scheme "Darkest England" has been often criticised, the telescope, opera glasses, and papers have all looked at it, and there is one opinion and that is, it is the best *known plan. It is a cut-*and dried practical plan which has exceeded expectations. There must be a machine to carry out the plan. We have a wonderful machine, a sort of dredge. There are also agents to carry out the plan. We have people who are willing to spend and be spent in the work of saving souls. We have 12,000 skilled officers who are willing to go anywhere. They are not guaranteed a salary, but must raise their own money. There are 200,000 unpaid workers ready to go in the slums or anywhere to save souls. There are eighty-four rescue and slum officers, one of which gets $2 per week and the others $1 per week, including food. It's a true fact that if you want to get $1 down a man's throat you must spend $2 to do it. 10,000 people are sheltered every night by the Salvation Army.

"In London last year there were 5,000 sheltered and it cost $365,000 If the city had done this it would have cost them $500 000. In this country there are 300 social institutions well officered and doing a good work. We have a plan to reach every body, and for that purpose have organized a society called the 'Knights of Hope.' For the rescue work we have a society called the 'League of Love' composed of a band of girls who visit and hold midnight meetings and help fallen women. Then there is another society called the 'Naval and Military League' organized for doing a special work among veterans of the G. A. R., and people in the navy. It costs $500 to fit up a home and then we arrange for its maintenance. God is still blessing us, and the recent troubles have not hurt us one bit. Out of the officers, we lost sixty, and we now have 626 corps. We rely on your prayers and help. We ask for your continued assistance in our march on to victory."

Adjutant Taylor and Brigadier Evans then took charge and asked earnestly for a large collection. The former remarked that people don't like to pay for religion, whereupon the Commander replied that he thought the people didn't like to pay for perspiration. Adjutant Taylor made a strong appeal and received a fair collection. He announced that next Thursday evening Staff-Captain Edith Marshall would be present and give a talk on "France and Switzerland." After Commander Booth-Tucker offered a closing prayer the meeting adjourned.

There were 400 people present and a large number remained to shake hands with the Commander.

BRUSH WITH A BICYCLE COP.

A Passing Incident in the Life of the City Police Force.

The Newark Advertiser yesterday published a description of a bicycle trip which passed through this city and had the following in connection therewith:

A brush with a "bicycle cop" in Plainfield added a feature of novelty to our run to New Brunswick. We had turned the corner in the centre of the city and were spinning along the broad avenue in front of the Revere House, about as fast as our pedals would go around, when we heard a "Hi there!" My companion was inclined to go ahead. We could "do" the blue-coat who had shouted at us, he said, and it would be fun to lead him on and make him think he could "do" us.

Prudent Counsel prevailed, however and we slowed up.

"Want to race?" shouted my companion, as the fleet wheeled guardian of the law puffed up alongside of us like a small revenue cutter. "We thought we'd slow up and give you a chance. No law against fast riding here is there?"

"Yes there is," replies the exponent of civil authority, rather uncivilly, "and the place where you belong is in the lock-up." He was hot under the collar in more senses than one.

"O, no we don't" said my friend, in a tone of easy banter. "We belong in New Brunswick in less than an hour, and we've got to hasten to make it. Good bye, my friend. Sorry to leave you so unceremoniously, but we must. If there's any fine we will settle it on our return."

The "cop," who was after all a good natured specimen of the genus clubswinger, smiled good-humoredly and gave a parting salute as we pushed on at a guarded pace, which we gradually increased with the increasing distance between him and us.

A SILVER WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius Scherer Celebrate Their Wedding Anniversary.

The silver wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Scherer, of Terrill road, was held Sunday afternoon and evening. There were about 75 relatives and friends present from this city, New York, Brooklyn and Newark.

During the afternoon there was singing, speechmaking and bowling on a improvised alley in the yard. Carriages were in waiting to convey the guests about the city. There was also dancing during the afternoon and evening.

Several of the New York party missed the last train home so they returned to the house and made merry until daylight this morning. Included among the guests were five sons and four daughters.

WITH THE C. E. WORKERS.

INTERESTING NOTES ABOUT THE YOUNG CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS.

Provisional Programme of the Convention to be Issued Some Time This Month—Missionary Extension Campaign.

The following notes of interest to Christian Endeavorers are issued in the latest bulletin of the State Society:

The provisional programme of the State Convention will be issued during the latter part of this month. The committee of arrangements propose to request the delegates to bring credentials with them from their society president. This is an excellent departure, inasmuch as it will make it more difficult for those who are not Endeavorers and not in sympathy with the work, to foist themselves on the convention.

Miss Alice B. Spangenberg, the superintendent of the Missionary Department, is gathering information with reference to the missionary extension campaign next year.

The latest enlargement in Christian Endeavor is the Senior Society. It is composed of older Christians and graduates from the Young People's Society. The pledge of the Senior Society is made applicable to the mid-week prayer meeting. The society holds no meetings of its own, and its purpose is wholly to strengthen the mid-week church services, and to retain the interest of the older Christians in active church work.

The spirit in which the Christian Endeavor pledge is fulfilled is manifested by a striking incident reported by the pastor of the young woman concerned. She had been an active Christian Endeavorer for two years when she was stricken with fever and in a short time died. During the last days of her illness, when too weak to hold her Bible the young woman asked her mother to hold the book for her so that she could read a portion from it each day. "For," she said, "I wish to be faithful to my pledge to the very end of my life."

A Croquet Party.

A delightful croquet party was given to Miss Josephine Marsh, of Scotch Plains, Saturday afternoon, by her aunt, Mrs. John Johnson, of the same place. A number of young people from this city and Scotch Plains were present and passed an enjoyable afternoon. The first prizes for croquet were won by Miss Florence Bettman and West Phillips, while Miss May Marsh and Will Hollingsworth scored the booby prizes.

In a Cross-Country Hunt.

The names of Charles J. Fisk and his three sons, of West Seventh street, are given among the number who will take part in the cross-country hunting at Jefferson, in the White Mountains. Mr. J. J. Dwyer, of the Ocean County Hunt, of Lakewood, has taken with him to Jefferson a fine string of hunters and a pack of more than fifty hounds. The fields in that vicinity are admirably adapted to drag hunting.

—The 7:58 train has now the reputation of being the largest regular passenger train on the Jersey Central Railroad. This morning it consisted of twelve cars.

A MURDEROUS ASSAULT.

CONTRACTOR UHDAL STRUCK DOWN WITH A CLUB BY AN ITALIAN.

The Assailant Made a Demand for Money Which Was Not His Due and When Refused, Tried to Kill the Plainfield Man.

A demand for money not earned, a consequent refusal and a murderous assault is the story of an affair which took place Friday morning at Cranford, in which one of Plainfield's well-known business men was struck down by a club in the hands of a frenzied Italian. The assailant was an unknown man, and who, after the assault, ran back into the woods from whence he came and no one had a chance to get a close look at him.

Of late, Michael Uhdal, the contractor, who resides on South avenue, a short distance east of Leland avenue, has been working with a small force of men in Cranford.

Friday morning about 9 o'clock Mr. Uhdal noticed a strange Italian come out of a small patch of woods nearby and going where the men were working picked up some tools and began to work. Mr. Uhdal went up to him at once and told him that his services were not required, as there was an ample force of men at hand. The Italian gave Mr. Uhdal a look of hatred and in surly tones demanded pay for the work he had already done, which amount he fixed at 25 cents.

Mr. Uhdal refused to pay him anything as he had done no work and even if he had accomplished anything he had not been ordered to work. When the Italian had been refused the money he said nothing and slunk away in the bushes, and Mr. Uhdal supposed the matter was at an end.

Mr. Uhdal and the rest of his men were going on with their work and did not notice the Italian, who had been refused the money, stealthily creeping up behind Mr. Uhdal with a four-foot hickory club in his hand. The club descended and struck Mr. Uhdal a terrible blow about a half inch below the right temple, spending most of its force on the jawbone, and cutting a terrible gash across the side of his face. He sank to the ground unconscious, without uttering a sound. As soon as he fell, the murderous club was uplifted once more, and descended again with lightning-like rapidity, this time striking Mr. Uhdal in the ribs and partly across his back.

The men who were working for Mr. Uhdal had by this time had their attention attracted by the assault and blows and came running up to the scene of the assault. One of the men seized the club and struck the Italian a blow upon the head and he dropped to the ground, apparently unconscious. Mr. Uhdal's son John, who had been the first to go to his fathers aid, was struck at by the Italian, but the blow fell short.

They then turned their attention to Mr. Uhdal and while they were making him as comfortable as possible, the Italian made the assault and who had been apparently rendered unconscious, took to his heels and ran off into the woods, making good his escape.

After the assault, Mr. Uhdal was removed to his boarding house at Garwood where he was attended by a doctor from Cranford. He soon returned to consciousness and is rapidly recovering, although it will be some time before he can return to work. The doctor, who attended him, said that if he had been struck a half inch higher on his head it would have killed him.

As soon as possible after the assault officers in Cranford and Westfield were notified. Officer Todd, of the latter place, was informed that a strange Italian, with his head bandaged, had been seen at an Italian boarding house on South avenue, near Fanwood, and accompanied by a posse searched the premises, but he was not found, and from all accounts it is not likely that he will be.

OFFICER FLYNN TO THE RESCUE.

He Rescues Liberty Street Residents From the Dangers of Hydrophobia.

Liberty street was a lively place for a short time Saturday afternoon when a dog, attacked with the rabies, owned the street until Patrolman Flynn appeared on the scene.

The dog belonged to an Italian with an unpronounceable name whom they call John Wilson for short. Wilson lives in the neigborhood. After frighting the women and children on on the street, the dog cleaned out Chas. Kaeding's barber shop. There was a general scrambling in all directions and cries of "Mad dog" attracted Patrolman Flynn.

The dog next tried to raid a little shoe shop next door belonging to a Hebrew, but the policeman managed to lock the infuriated animal in the store and then shot it to the great relief of the community in general.

—Letters received Saturday from the Honeyman tourists state that fog prevailed for several days during the voyage, and that the heat the first two nights was almost unbearable. All of the party were well.

—Sunday weather.

The Youngest Man Ever Nominated for President.

ONLY THIRTY-SIX YEARS OF AGE

Jumped into Fame in One Night After a speech in the House of Representatives—Now an Editor at Omaha, Nebraska.

Washington, July 11.—There is nothing in romantic literature that surpassed the meteoric career of William Jennings Bryan, who was nominated at Chicago for the highest office within the gift of the American people. The constitutional age of presidents is 35 years. Mr. Bryan is 36, and if elected in November he will be the youngest president that the White House has ever known. He is essentially a self-made man and a man of the people. His principal education was gained in the public schools of Salem, Ill., where his parents resided. During the succeeding six years he received an academic training. The bent of his mind was toward the law and it was in the office of Lyman Trumbull, himself a conspicuous figure during the war and the reconstruction period which followed, that he laid the foundations of his legal career. It was in congress, however, that Mr. Bryan made the reputation which has swept him into his present prominence. In 1890, when only 30 years of age, he was elected a member of the house from the First district of Nebraska, where he located immediately after his admission to the bar. During the consideration of the single tariff bills, which were brought before the house during the first session of that congress, Mr. Bryan electrified his colleagues by the force and vigor of his utterances, his intimate knowledge of economic matters, the gracefulness of his oratory and his ability to sustain himself with credit against the ablest debaters upon the republican side of the chamber.

Sprang Into Fame in a Day.

His time on that occasion was repeatedly extended and he spoke in all several hours. He awoke the next morning to find himself famous. Nor was it ephemeral fame. He became from that day a conspicuous figure in a house which included such giants of debate as Breckinridge of Kentucky, Bourke Cockran and John R. Fellows, of New York, Dingley and Reed of Maine, Springer of Illinois, Lodge of Massachusetts, Oats of Alabama and William L. Wilson of West Virginia, whose leadership of ways and means he assumed. While Mr. Bryan was not a free trader he favored the lowest tariff consistent with the necessities of the government and he was placed by Speaker Crisp on the ways and means committee, a signal honor for a man of his years. When the 53d congress met, Mr. Bryan had also achieved a reputation as a staunch supporter of free silver, and when President Cleveland convened that congress in extraordinary session in the autumn of 1893 Mr. Bryan was Mr. Bland's efficient lieutenant in leading the opposition to the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman act. He continued in that congress as a member of the ways and means committee. He was one of the subcommittee which had in charge the internal revenue schedule of what was subsequently known as the Wilson tariff bill and he shared with Mr. McMillan of Tennessee in being the first to suggest the incorporation in that measure of an income tax.

Bryan's Personality.

Mr. Bryan added to his laurels as a brilliant and ready debater during the discussion of that measure in the house, and his influence was also exerted in favor of the income tax, which he regarded as one of its most essential features. With this congress Mr. Bryan's congressional career ended, and he returned to Omaha to accept the editorship of the World-Herald of that city, which is his home for many years has been at Lincoln, the state capital. Mr. Bryan is about the medium in height. His face is cleanly shaven, and in appearance he resembles the great Pennsylvania commoner, Thaddeus Stevens, who, as Mr. Bryan's age, might readily have passed for the latter's twin brother. He is a strict church man, and on several occasions during his residence in this city addressed the Young Men's Christian association and other religious bodies. He is earnest and enthusiastic in whatever cause enlists his sympathies, and it is not doubted that his personality will largely influence the approaching campaign.

Mrs. Bryan Witnessed the Balloting.

Chicago, July 11.—Mrs. Bryan, wife of the nominee, who is a small, modest-looking woman, had a seat in the gallery to the left of the speaker's stand, yesterday afternoon. When it was positively known that her husband had been named for the presidency she was surrounded by admiring friends and heartily congratulated. She thanked each one pleasantly and throughout maintained a quiet demeanor that impressed those about her. To a representative of the United Press, she said: "I think my husband will try to deserve the great honor these men have conferred upon him I appreciate it, I assure you. If his wife's aid is of any value in the endeavor to elect him, he will have all possible assistance from me."

Damage Verdict Awarded.

Bridgeport, Conn., July 11.—Judge Hall of the superior court has awarded Benjamin F. Squires and wife of Monroe, $1,700 and costs in their suit against the American Telegraph and Telephone company of New York. They sued for $20,000 for injuries received through the carelessness of an agent of the defendant.

TO PROTECT NATIVE BIRDS.

Efforts To Instruct School Children as to the Value of the Feathered Tribe.

Washington, July 13.—An earnest plea is made by the biological division of the agricultural department that a bird division to be devoted to instructing children in the value of our native birds and the best means of protecting them, may be added to the school curriculum. The idea originated with Prof. C. A. Babcock, the superintendent of schools in Oil City, Pa., where it has been in force with gratifying results for several years. The suggestion has received the cordial approval of Secretary Morton, who, in a letter to Prof. Babcock, pays high tribute to the beauty and utility of the feathered tribe. One extract from the secretary's letter, which is herewith given, is especially interesting. "Birds," says he, "are the farmer's friends, as mankind. Without their unremitting services our gardens and fields would be laid waste by the insect pests. But we owe them a greater debt even than this, for the study of birds tends to develop some of the best attributes and impulses of our natures. Among them we find examples of generosity, unselfish devotion, of the love of mother for offspring and other sensible qualities. Their industry, patience and ingenuity excite our admiration; their songs inspire us with a love of music and poetry; their beautiful plumages and graceful manners appeal to our aesthetic sense; their long migrations add to their attractiveness, their intimate knowledge of economic matters, the gracefulness of his oratory and his ability to sustain himself with credit against the ablest debaters upon the republican side of the chamber. study of birds tends to develop some of the best attributes and impulses of our natures. BURNING PLANTATIONS.

Even the Machinery on Sugar Estates Destroyed by Cuban Insurgents.

New York, July 13.—A special cable dispatch to the Herald from Havana says: The passengers by the coast steamer Mortera, which has arrived from sports in eastern Cuba, report that the insurgents are burning many plantations of importance around Puerto Padre and Manzabon. The inhabitants of the estates are taking refuge in the Spanish garrison towns on the coast for protection. The cane fields in the districts mentioned have all been burned, and the laborers' huts are reduced to ashes. Even the machinery and tools of the sugar estates have been destroyed. Several families left homeless arrived here by the Mortera. The commander of the transport Legespi reports that when anchored in Maria la Gorda harbor rebels fired upon her vessels from the shore. He immediately ordered his crew to clear for action and fire upon the insurgents hidden in the bushes. They dispersed after several shots. The stateroom of the commander on the upper deck was pierced by several shots. None of the crew was injured.

FOR OUR GOOD OFFICES.

A Letter of Gratitude from the Emperor of Japan Received by the President.

Washington, July 13.—Recent diplomatic correspondence of the state department contains a translation of a letter of thanks from Mutsuhito, the emperor of Japan, to President Cleveland on account of the good offices of this government toward Japanese subjects in China which the emperor says "Not only tended to mitigate the severities and hardships of war and finally to promote the successful issue of the negotiations for peace, but served to draw still closer the bonds of friendship and good neighborhood which happily unite our two countries."

Can Not Make Perfect Plates.

Washington, July 13.—At a meeting of the board of construction to consider the armor of the warships Kearsarge and Kentucky, complaints were received from the armor manufacturers that the plates are so large that they cannot make a perfect material with the ingots of which they are made unless they are constructed of about 300 tons weight and this will reduce the plates somewhat.

Waterlogged Schooner Picked Up at Sea.

Vineyard Haven, Mass., July 13.—Steamer Orient Boston, for Baltimore, has arrived here towing schooner Galatea of St. John, lumber-laden, which she picked up waterlogged, dismasted and abandoned off Pollock Rip Saturday afternoon. Nothing is known of the Galatea's crew or of the cause of the disaster, but it may have been in a collision.

Loaded Coal Barge Floated.

New York, July 13.—The New Jersey Central railroad barge No. 6 with a cargo of 1,000 tons of coal, which went ashore on Shinnecock beach, Long Island, July 4, was hauled off by the Chapman Wrecking company yesterday and towed by the Chapman to her destination, Providence.

London Socialist Congress.

Berlin, July 13.—The socialists have arranged to send thirty delegates to the coming international socialist congress in London, and the Polish socialists and anarchists will send special delegates with instructions to demand admission to the congress.

Hobart and Family at Hotel Champlain.

Plattsburgh, N. Y., July 13.—Garrett A. Hobart, republican candidate for vice-president, with his wife and son, Garrett, jr., are guests at the Hotel Champlain. It is Mr. Hobart's present intention to remain there for about six weeks.

TO CLOSE TO-DAY

End of the Christian Endeavor Convention at Washington.

SIGHTSEEING BY VISITORS TO-MORROW

Rev. B. Fay Mills of Fort Edward, N. Y., Creates a Sensation by a Pointed Reference to Candidate McKinley—Numerous Meetings.

Washington, July 13.—A list of thirty meetings arranged to be held in the tents and churches yesterday afternoon offered varying attractions to the 40,000 Christian Endeavor delegates in attendance here upon the fifteenth international convention. They were mostly denominational rallies and they drew crowds according to the numerical strength of each particular denomination. The Baptists, Presbyterians and Congregationalists occupied the three tents on the White lot. Speeches were made at these rallies by prominent members of the several denominations.

Created a Sensation.

Following these rallies Evangelist B. Fay Mills of Fort Edward, N. Y., addressed a large audience of citizens in tent No. 4 Washington. He created a mild sensation in the middle of his sermon by a pointed reference to Candidate McKinley. Speaking of the extension of the principles of socialism as set forth in the sermon on the Mount he showed that the sum of the present time of Christian leaders in American politics. "Our candidates for public office, from president down to constable, should be guided," said Dr. Mills, "by the spirit of the Lamb that was slain. They proceed to be it or they should not get our votes. If they came forward honestly and made known their real motives for running for office we would not support them. Suppose McKinley should step up before you and say: 'Fellow citizens, I wish to be your president, so that I might pay my debts' (sensation), or suppose Bryan should say 'I—I—I will be your president for my own good.' Why we would not choose either of them to take care of our stray dogs. What they should say is 'Fellow citizens, I am ready to be sacrificed upon the cross of public duty. I am ready to be president or constable, as my country calls me, and I am a Christian. That is the spirit of the Lamb that was slain."

The Closing Day.

A Sabbath observance meeting was held also in Central hall, William Shaw of Boston presiding. Speeches were made by Rev. Dr. Hall of Washington, Mrs. H. T. McEwen of New York, and others. At 7 o'clock last evening Christian Endeavor prayer meetings were held in all the churches of the city. Preaching services, both morning and evening, will in the city churches were well attended by citizens and Endeavorers. To-day is the closing day of the convention, to-morrow being given up entirely to sightseeing. To-day there is a long session to-day. In tents Williston and Shaw, Mrs. Ellen Stone, the missionary who was held for ransom by brigands in Turkey, and Miss Rebecca Kirkorian of Aintab, Turkey, and Miss Margaret E. Leitch of Kharpoot, Ceylon, were the speakers. Other meetings for the afternoon and evening have been arranged, at which speeches will be made by leading men of all denominations. To-morrow the convention will assemble informally at the tomb of Washington for a service of song and praise.

CIRCULATING THE SCRIPTURES.

Eightieth Annual Report of the American Bible Society.

New York, July 13.—According to the eightieth annual report of the American Bible society the total issues of the Scriptures by the society at home and abroad for the year ending March 31 last amounted to 1,750,283 copies. The issues of the society during the eighty years of its existence amount to 61,705,841 copies. These millions of volumes have been circulated in nearly one hundred different languages and dialects in all parts of the world. More than one-half of its issues in 1895 went into the hands of the Pagan, the Mohamedan and nominally Christian people outside of the United States; 383,000 were sold in China alone. The society expended during the year $503,500.53. Agents of the society report a successful year's work in all parts of the world.

An Independent Paper Now.

Detroit, July 13.—The Free Press, the leading democratic newspaper of Michigan, announces that it will not endorse the Chicago platform or candidate. The Free Press declares itself to be hereafter free from any party connection. The Detroit Tribune, republican, had previously severed its republican party and declared for free silver.

Stubborn Fate Fire.

Springfield, Mass., July 13.—There was a stubborn blaze at the Ludlow mills yesterday, the fire starting in a pile of jute. About 10,000 bales of jute were in the building. The fire burned slowly and did not blaze much, but it was ten hours after discovery before it was under control. Two streams were played on the fire all day.

Big Blaze at Guttenberg, N. J.

New York, July 13.—The Peter Cooper Glue company's works in Guttenberg, N. J., were totally destroyed by fire last night. The plant was owned by Cooper & Hewitt of New York. Loss, $50,000.

FRILLS OF FASHION.

Pearl, yellow and pink tan shades are the correct colors in gloves.

Vandyke collars of ecru and white batiste, trimmed with lace and insertion, are made to wear over thin summer gowns.

Tulle and chiffon, with a satin edge, are sold by the hundred yards for neck ruches and frillings on capes, parasols and gowns.

Old-fashioned silk brocade is used for waistcoats, revers and cuffs, and white moire silk appears in this guise on white alpaca gowns.

White gowns are to be worn more than ever this season for informal as well as dressy occasions, and these are accompanied by white hats, shoes and parasols.

Beautiful designs in Louis XVI. trimmings are broad bands of black lace, with irregular or straight edges, covered with natural tinted flowers, and renaissance lace scrolls in white.

Leather belts are embroidered with gold thread bands, and white kid belts, set with blue enamel traced with gold, are the latest fancy. Ordinary webbing is used as a foundation for elaborate embroidery and jeweled decoration.

The special feature of the summer fabrics is the transparent effect, and grenadine, gauze crepe de chine, etamine and canvas are all the vogue. Etamine was in fashion ten years ago, and quite as popular then as crepon last year.

THE STAGE.

Miss Sandmeyer, of New York, is spoken of as a rising actress by Parisian critics.

Henry Irving flatly denies the report that he would retire from the stage at the end of his present season. He says he hasn't even thought of such a thing.

Lois Fuller keeps all knowledge of her finances chiefly to herself, but she has bank accounts of hammock proportions, which she has gained by her own efforts.

"Der Wunderknabe" (The Prodigy), a new Viennese opera, which Sir Augustus Harris proposes to bring out in London, has for the motive of its plot the fraudulent representation that an 18-year-old girl violinist is a boy of eight.

Sir Henry Irving's son, Henry B. Irving, is said to resemble his illustrious father greatly, both in voice and manner, in his present London performance of the role of Hamlet. He has also appeared as Romeo and Jacques.

Antonio de Navarro, husband of Mary Anderson, has an interesting collection of photographs of his wife in a room in their home at Tunbridge Wells. They represent her in all the parts she has played, and Mr. de Navarro has arranged them to make a frieze around the entire room.

SOME ODDITIES.

Doctors affirm that sprints harden the tone of the voice.

In Bond street, London, there is a barber shop where dogs are shaved, washed and frizzed.

Lightning entered a house near Orange, Cal., while the family was at supper, and instantly killed a father and his two sons.

Ostrich races are frequently witnessed on the ostrich farms in Anaheim, Cal. The owner trains the birds to drive in single, double and tandem harness.

The affection of an Indiana woman for her husband caused her to fuse over him to such a degree that he wants to obtain a divorce from her.

The house of David Stohl, of Kingman county, Kan., was on fire. A neighbor, George Austin, was viewing the burning building, when the heat caused a dense explosion. The house to be discharged, and the contents entered Austin's head and body.

QUEER THINGS.

New York has an orchestra of one-handed fiddlers.

Dances are frequently given at a blind asylum in London.

Matches have not yet displaced the tinder box in certain rural districts of Spain and Italy.

There is said to be a "hell's half acre" in southern California, 40 miles square, in which every rod has a boiling spring or a spouting geyser.

Cattle must be very precious in Borneo, when a cow receives the honor of an obituary notice in the official journal. Thus a newspaper solemnly informs its readers that "an aged cow belonging to the government herd met its death on the 14th by falling into a ditch at a certain place, where it was unable to extricate itself."

NOTES OF SCIENCE.

Horseless sleighs, driven by electricity, are a St. Petersburg novelty.

Edison now claims that the X ray is a sound wave and its photographs are simply shadows of sound vibration.

The hair from the snout of the walrus are collected by the natives of Alaska, and after drying are exported in neat packages to China, where the wealthy prize them highly as toothpicks.

Interesting catacombs with well preserved mural paintings have been discovered at Kertch in the Crimea, the ancient Panticapaeum. Although the vaulting shows that they must have been built after the Christian era, the subjects of the paintings are pagan, representing Pluto, Demeter and Hermes.

CURIOUS FACTS.

Certain parts of the hippopotamus' hide attain a thickness of two inches.

The skin is the only part of the human body that is not famed by age.

Moles can swim with great dexterity, their broad forepaws acting as paddles.

It takes the moon exactly 42,524 minutes (29 days 12 hours and 44 minutes) to make its revolution around the earth.

SEWALL'S CAREER

Sketch of the Life of the Democratic Vice-Presidential Nominee.

A RECENT CONVERT TO FREE SILVER

Prominent Bath, Me., Shipbuilder, Railroad Man and Bank President—Descendant of an Old and Distinguished Family.

Portland, Me., July 13.—Arthur Sewall, who was nominated for vice-president at Chicago Saturday, was born in Bath Me., on Nov. 25, 1835, and was the third son of the late William D. Sewall. He was educated in the public schools of Bath, and after an apprenticeship under his father he formed a link with his brother Edward the firm of E. & A. Sewall, shipbuilders and commission agents. The Bath Sewalls have been closely identified with Bath's chief industry, shipbuilding, since 1833, when William D. Sewall formed a small shipyard on the banks of the Kennebec, next to the family homestead. He was succeeded in business by Clark & Sewall. These two earlier firms built twenty-nine wooden vessels between 1833 and 1856. The E. & A. Sewall firm dissolved in 1879 by the death of Edward Sewall. In 1879 Arthur Sewall, his son, Wm. D. Sewall, and his nephew, Samuel S. Sewall, formed the firm of Arthur Sewall & Co., with which he is still active. To meet the conditions of the present time, the firm began some years ago to equip their shipyard with a plant for making steel vessels. They built the first steel American clipper, Dirigo, in 1882, and until the last few years prominent as a railroad man. He became a director of the Maine Central Railroad company in 1875, and in 1884 was elected its president, serving in that capacity until the resignation of Mr. Wilson several years ago. During this time Mr. Sewall was also president of the Portland, Mount Desert and Machias Steamboat company. Mr. Sewall has been a director of one of the branches of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad, and a director of the Mexican Central railway in 1884, 1885 and 1886. He is also president of the Bath National bank.

Came Out for Free Silver in '95.

Mr. Sewall came out for free coinage of silver in June, 1895. He was the democratic candidate for United States senator at the session of the Maine legislature in 1893. Mr. Sewall has always made his home in Bath. He married Emma Crocker of Bath, a daughter of the late Charles Crocker, who also was long and actively engaged in shipbuilding at Bath, on the 70th of March, 1859, and has had three sons—Harold, who achieved distinction in the diplomatic service in Samoa during the first administration of President Cleveland, and who has since joined the republican party; William D., member of the firm of Arthur Sewall & Co., and Clarence, who died in infancy. The Sewalls are of an old and illustrious family on both sides of the water. The first American Sewall came here in 1634, and was a native of Coventry, England, in 1614, so that he was a young man to come into the wilderness. His sons were Samuel, John, Stephen and Nicholas. Samuel was the judge of witchcraft fame. John was the direct ancestor of the Sewalls in Maine. Thomer Sewall, the grandfather of the first shipbuilder, came to Bath from York, which was also in the district of Maine, in 1762, and purchased the tract of land on which to-day stands the Sewall yard and the houses of the Sewall family.

Catholic Summer School Opened.

Plattsburgh, N. Y., July 13.—The fifth annual session of the Catholic Summer school of America was opened auspiciously yesterday by pontifical mass at St. John's church, Rt. Rev. Bishop Gabriels of the diocese of Ogdensburg being the celebrant. The opening sermon was by Rev. F. Ryan, rector of St. Michael's cathedral, Toronto, one of Canada's most eloquent orators. He took for his subject the "Attributes of God."

Tests of Colt Gun Successful.

Washington, July 13.—Tests of the Colt automatic gun have been progressing at the navy yard in this city for several days. They are regarded as satisfactory and the indications are that the contracts with the department will be carried out. The arm is of a simple construction, and will fire 400 shots per minute.

Transfer of Naval Boilers.

Washington, July 13.—In consideration of a request from Admiral Belknap, the boiler of the U. S. S. Galena, which was wrecked off Montauk Point, will be place in the Massachusetts training ship Enterprise at Boston navy yard. This will be made under direction of the government at the Portsmouth, N. H., navy yard.

Cholera in Egypt.

Cairo, July 13.—The total number of new cases of cholera reported throughout Egypt yesterday was 362, and the deaths numbered 321. Among those who has died from the disease is Major Owen of the Soudan expedition, who commanded the outposts at Amiugol wells.

Appeal of Canal Carriers.

Buffalo, July 13.—The canal carriers have made an appeal to the New York Produce exchange for relief from grain elevator extortions and discriminations against the state grain traffic at Buffalo and New York.

General Merchandise Store Burned.

Port Jefferson, N. Y., July 13.—The store of F. F. Darling & Son, dealers in general merchandise, was burned yesterday. Loss, about $25,000.

THE GOLFE-JUAN POTTERIES.

Our Special Correspondent Describes a Visit to the Factories.

An Interview with Massier—Master and Men Form One Great Family—How the Wife Helps Her Husband—Lovely and Artistic Designs.

[COPYRIGHT, 1896.]

"How would you like a bit of really artistic pottery—something rich in oriental coloring, shining with an opalescent, metallic luster, and which can never by any possibility be duplicated?" asked a friend when I deplored the lack of originality in tourists' souvenirs.

Like any other woman, I answered promptly that the possession of such an article would be very gratifying to my soul, not only on account of the artistic value, but also for the envy with which it would be regarded by various feminine friends. Only I begged leave to doubt that any such piece of pottery could be secured.

"Yes," said my friend, "at Golfe Juan, near Cannes, they make what is called 'metallic luster pottery.' The action of the fire upon the metallic colorings is rather a mystery, even to the inventor himself. They never take an order for a duplicate, because no two pieces ever come out of the oven with the same play of colors."

"Then it will be too expensive for an ordinary mortal," I protested.

"Oh, yes; you could pay $3,000 for a plaque which they are about to exhibit in the Champs Elysees salon; but you can get a small vase, perfect in shape and coloring, for three or four dollars."

This friend has a cultivated taste, and I agreed to visit Golfe Juan and investigate the new discovery in pottery.

"Don't expect to see only the 'metallic luster' pottery," she said. "Clement Massier, the proprietor, is a thorough artist, and has several varieties of ware on exhibition. You remember those balustrades on the grand staircase at Monte Carlo, which are veined and polished like jasper?"

I remembered.

"And you know that curiously-gilded 'Defendu Degrade' ware that we were admiring on Quay Saint Jean the other day at Nice?"

"Yes."

"All from Golfe Juan, and all very interesting, though not so remarkable as the 'metallic luster.'"

BALLUSTRADE OF "ARCHITECTURAL" POTTERY AT MONTE CARLO.

The guide books mention Golfe Juan as the spot where Napoleon I. landed on his return from Elba in 1815. The potteries of Clement Massier now attract more tourists to the place than the historical episode. The pottery establishment has a beautiful site, and its factories are far from being a blot on the landscape.

The driveway to the "gallery," or showroom, winds about a beautiful garden, where may be seen some fine specimens of the "architectural" pottery so admired at Monte Carlo. The ground tints are always crimson or turquoise, though there is an infinite variety of tinting and veining. A curious conceit is a terrace of turquoise-blue tiles, where monstrous frogs and sea turtles spout jets of water at each other. I don't think anybody ever saw frogs or turtles of that color, but the modeling is so good that one might think the real animals had been transformed by some alchemy into pottery figures.

By the kind permission of M. Clement Massier we were allowed to visit the factory and saw the pottery in the process of making.

A French factory is apt to be more utilitarian than beautiful. I was therefore surprised to find Massier's pottery establishment a handsome two-story structure of white stucco, with the walls adorned by climbing roses. The factory is surrounded by a large flower garden, and resembles a villa more than a workshop. Clement Massier lives in the second story of this building, and his home is indeed that of an artist and a man of wealth. He is just whimsical enough to give his workmen the same daily surroundings that suffice for himself and his family.

There are about 100 workmen in the factory, not counting the staff of artists employed in designing. The workmen are highly skilled, and many are artists in their special lines of work. They are all very much devoted to Massier, and share in his desire to maintain a high artistic standard for the work. The whole establishment is more like a large family working together than an ordinary factory. Many of the artists were trained by Massier, and have never worked for any other employer; some even wear the medal of honor presented by the government for 30 years' faithful service under one employer.

Preparing the clay for modeling is not an especially interesting process, although it requires much care and skill. I liked to watch the "turner." A little machine run by foot power keeps the clay revolving before him. With quick, deft touches he models any desired shape, his only guide being a finished piece, standing on the bench.

"Are these 'turners' artists?" I asked.

"Perhaps not in the highest sense of the term; still they have an excellent perception of artistic forms, especially in their fingers. Our 'turners' began their training at the age of ten years." Thus replied Jules, one of the oldest workmen, who was explaining the different processes.

Passing through the large rooms where the "architectural" pottery is modeled and colored, I noticed that the rich coloring and peculiar veining of the finished material are due to an ingenious application of various colors in the white or terra cotta basis; but just how the result is accomplished is known only to Clement Massier and a few faithful workmen.

In the painting room we saw workmen decorating the "Defendu Degrade" ware. The gold is put on after the pottery has been fired three times, and already has a fine glaze. Two more firings are necessary to complete the decoration. The process and the effect is very similar to royal Worcester on china. To my mind the pottery is more beautiful. The clouded gold background combines with the rich tints of the pottery, making a gorgeous, yet tasteful, groundwork for the leaves and flowers in gilt relief.

The workmen in this department must have careful training both in drawing and painting, for they often copy a spray of flowers or a butterfly direct from nature.

"Where do you get your artists?" said my friend.

"We take any boy who evinces natural talent," answered Jules. "It seems to go by inheritance, for nearly all our pupils are sons of our workmen."

"But where does M. Massier keep his metallic lustre work?" I asked when I could no longer restrain my curiosity.

"You saw workmen laying the colors in the decorating room," answered the guide, with a spiritual smile.

"Do they know the secret?"

"No; that lies within Massier's brain. With the assistance of chemists he prepares and gives out the metallic paints. There are many technical points about the ware, but the real secret is in the composition of the paints."

"And the fire is the master," he added, as we stood before the ovens. "No matter how exact the process, it never turns out two pieces with the same lustre. It is all beautiful and all different." The workman did not seem to approve of this eccentricity, and my friend looked at me with an "I told you so" expression.

Though the ovens look quite simple and uninteresting, they are the scene of much anxiety. Large pieces of architectural ware are specially apt to crack in the firing, and come out beautiful—but valueless. The "Defendu Degrade" ware is prone to breakage in the fifth and last firing, which sets the gold. If this risk were eliminated the pottery would be much cheaper.

Returning to the showroom, we viewed the "metallic lustre" ware in all its glory. It is difficult to describe, because the beauty lies equally in the color and design.

M. Massier was just overseeing the packing of a large "lustre" vase to be presented by the citizens of Nice to Mme. Felix Faure on the occasion of President Faure's visit to southern France. The vase was considered the most artistic product of the Riviera, and was presented as a souvenir of the trip.

Massier himself is a very modest, reserved man, and speaks but little.

"How did you get all these graceful designs?" I asked.

"By careful study of ancient sculptures," he replied, tersely.

I asked if he intended to teach his secret to anyone before he died.

Massier smiled and said: "I have only successfully produced the "metallic luster" since 1889. I expect to learn many more things about it before I die." Then he pointed out that his talented and successful painter, L. Levy Dhurmer had furnished the highly artistic designs and assisted in the preliminary processes. He did not say, however, whether he intended to bequeath the secret to the clever young painter.

Mme. Massier remarked, as I selected a tiny "lustre" vase:

"Americans have better taste than other people. The English, for instance, care nothing for art. They think everything 'very dear.' In purchasing they always buy the largest and showiest pieces to be had for the money."

The compliment to American taste may have been merely a bit of flattery. Even so, it is the first kind remark I had heard of our people, since landing in France. While in the gallery, I saw one illustration of English taste. Lord X——— and his bride drove up in a handsome carriage. They looked over the pottery and selected the only two really commonplace designs in the exhibit.

PREPARING FOR THE CONVENTION.

Christian Endeavorers Hold the First of Their Union Meetings.

The first union Christian Endeavor service in preparation for the coming State Convention was held in the Sunday-school room of Trinity Reformed church last evening. Considering the very warm weather the attendance was large. Every society in the Plainfield Union was represented and a delegation from the Marconnier Society was also present.

Joseph Robinson, of the Congregational Society, conducted the service which was chiefly devoted to prayer. The leader made a few remarks in opening, after which the Endeavorers seemed to catch the Endeavor spirit, and their was no time lost. H. J. Martin had charge of the music, and Miss Krietling presided at the piano. The place and time for holding the next service will be announced later.

A Superbly Appointed Train.

Undoubtedly the handsomest train between Chicago and St. Paul, Minneadolis, the Superiors and Duluth is the "North-Western Limited," which leaves Chicago at 6:30 p. m. daily via the North-Western Line (Chicago & North-Western Railway). Its equipment, which is entirely new throughout, and embraces Compartment Sleeping Cars, Buffet, Smoking and Library Cars, standard Sleeping Cars, Dining Cars and ladies' coaches, has every luxury which imagination can conceive or mind invent for the comfort and convenience of passengers. All agents sell tickets via the Chicago & North-Western Railway. For full information apply to agents of connecting line, or address W. B. Kniskern, G. P. and T. A. Chicago, Ill. 6 2

Dined at the Inn.

The following party dined at Mountain Park Inn last Saturday: Miss Mable C. Goltra, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Goltra, Miss Blanche Goltra, Jacksonville, Ill.; Mrs. Catharine Randolph, H. A. Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. Bocap, C. C. Bocap, Mrs. Ransom, Mr. and Mrs. Manning, Miss Manning, Plainfield.

Stopped Sewering Into Green Brook.

The Borough Health Board notified the proprieters of the Pond Tool and Machine Works recently that they must cease running their sewage into Green brook through a drain which was laid across property belonging to Halstead Compton. The Company is now making connections with the regular sewage main.

For Cruelty to Animals.

Donardo Bunawando, charged with cruelty to animals, appeared before Justice Newcorn yesterday and plead guilty to the charge Sentence was suspended owing to the defendant being illiterate and not knowing the law. It will be remembered that the defendant was fined $15 in the city court recently for killing his horse.

Crop Report.

Weather Observer John Neagle has the following report on the condition of crops this week:

Recent heavy rains did great damage to grain out, but not housed; in low ground crops suffered from flooding; some grain sprouted; corn and oats were flattened; potatoes covered with white patches and commence to rot; some wheat and rye uncut has sent to ground and sprouted; some turned black; crops on high ground were more fortunate. Ave. temp., 78 degs.; rainfall, 1.29 inch.

Sustained Sundry Bruises.

While getting off an open trolley car on West Front street in front of Putnam & DeGraw's Tuesday night Evan Jones, of Kensington avenue, met with an accident. The car was just moving, and in his hurry to dismount he tripped and fell heavily on his shoulder. He escaped with sundry bruises.

ODDITIES OF POLITICS.

An Effort Being Made to Form a Democratic-Republican Club.

There has been lots of talk on the part of the Democrats of this city who are dissatisfied with the action of the Democratic convention, and now they promise to do something besides talk. A Press reporter was assured this morning by a prominet Democrat that a Democratic McKinley and Hobart campaign club would soon be organized. This club will support the regular Democratic State and county ticket, and McKinley and Hobart for President and Vice-President.

TWO LIVING TORCHES.

Horrible Fatality Enacted at a LaGrande Avenue Home.

WERE FILLING A GASOLENE STOVE.

The Volitile Fluid Became Ignited and Exploded, Setting Fire to the Wearing Apparel of Fifteen-Year-Old Alice Morcum and Mrs. Gertrude Peterson—The Former Burned to Death in a Few Minutes, But the Latter's Life Was Saved by the Prompt Action of a Boarder and a Neighbor, Though She Lives in a Precarious Condition in the Muhlenberg Hospital—Details of the Affair.

Death in one of its most terrible forms, by fire, came to fifteen-year-old Alice M. Morcom, early last Sunday morning, and the same explosion of gasolene, that ignited her clothing causing the fatal burns, also resulting in the probably fatal burning of Mrs. Gertrude Peterson, of 623 LaGrande avenue.

This frightful accident, that proved so fatal, happened at the home of Mrs. Peterson about seven o'clock in the morning. Alice Morcom was employed by Mrs. Peterson to assist her in the household duties, and together they were preparing the Sunday breakfast. The two kettles on the gasolene stove, which is kept in the little shed just outside the kitchen, were singing merrily, while Mrs. Peterson and her assistant were bustling about making the first preparations for the morning meal, little thinking of the awful disaster that was almost upon them. The little float in the reservoir of the stove signalled for more fuel. The gasolene can was always kept down cellar away from any fire, and a pail partially filled with the volatile fluid to reload the reservoir, was then brought up stairs. Mrs. Peterson put the pint tin pail of gasolene on the floor while preparing to turn out the flames before refilling it. The cap to the reservoir was unscrewed and the funnel placed therein so as not to lose any time so that the gasolene could be put into the reservoir as soon as the fire was turned off, as Mrs. Peterson never filled the stove when it was lighted. Mrs. Peterson went out into the hall for something, and when she returned she forgot, for the moment, that she had left the pail on the floor. She walked across the kitchen and accidentally struck the pail with her foot, upsetting it, while its liquid contents spread over the floor. Gasolene is very volatile, and the gas rose from it immediately. It ignited from the stove, and then there was bright flash and roar as the gasolene exploded, and the shed and kitchen were soon filled with flames, which shot out of the windows and doors. Both of the women were enveloped in flames in an instant.

"Help! Fire!" they screamed. Mrs. Peterson is a widow, and her three children live with her. Ella and Leon Peterson and Martha I. F. Merrill, for Mrs. Peterson has been married twice. There were also three boarders in the house whose rooms were on the second floor. They were Nathaniel E. Greenidge, J. J. Laughlin and George Eckhard. Greenidge is a cyclist, and Saturday afternoon and evening he went out for a ride with two friends. They went to Boynton Beach and on their return while near Rahway, an accident wrecked Greenidge's wheel. He took the train home and did not arrived here until quite late. It is no slight job to carry a disabled wheel and he was very tired, he threw himself on his bed just as he was in his bicycle suit, and in another moment he was fast asleep. He came down stairs a few minutes before the accident occurred, but had gone back and just entered Laughlin's room when he heard the screams of the frightened women. In an instant, he was out of the room and flying down the front stairs, four or five steps at a time. The sight that met his gaze when he reached the bottom was enough to unnerve anyone. There, in the hall, stood Mrs. Peterson enveloped in flames, apparently dazed by the suddenness of the explosion. It is supposed that she ran there there in her excitement. Greenidge took in the situation at a glance. The hall was too small for him to get at the flames, but the parlor door stood open and he rushed forward, trying to force her into the room. As he did so he called to his companions upstairs for blankets and quilts. While he was struggling with Mrs. Peterson, who, not knowing what she was about, resisted his efforts aided by the flames, the front door was burst open from without, and Eugene Heinerman, who lives next door, rushed in, clad only in his night robe, with his long flannel dressing gown in his hand.

Heinerman is an amateur photographer of considerable expertness, and it has been his custom to rise early in the morning to print some of his pictures. Sunday morning he was just preparing a plate for printing when he heard a muffled roar and saw flames issue from the windows of the kitchen and shed in the next house. Realizing that there was trouble he hurried to the scene of the disaster. As he ran across the intervening space between the two houses he heard screams of "fire," and so he removed the dressing-gown which he had put on to work in. He pushed open the door to find a woman whose clothing was all ablaze and a man trying to save her. Heinerman seized her by the arm, but the flesh had been burned and gave way in his grasp. Then, with Greenidge's aid, she was dragged outdoors, where Heinerman's dressing-gown and finally blankets were thrown over her. So the flames were extinguished, but Mrs. Peterson came out of her semi-unconscious state and began to feel the agonizing pains. Her screams were something dreadful to listen to and effectually roused the neighbors. She spoke very little, but her first question was for "Alice."

Eckhard had followed Greenidge down stairs as soon as he could pull on his trousers, and hurried into the kitchen to find Alice Morcum, who he knew must have been near the scene of the explosion. The kitchen and back shed were full of suffocating smoke and flames, for the curtains and part of the woodwork had caught fire. He could find nothing of the young girl, however, until the fire department arrived about ten minutes later, when he came to the dining room door and there on the floor lay a pitiful object. It was Alice Morcum, burned beyond recognition and dead, or nearly so, when he discovered her.

All her clothing had been burned off her body with the exception of a portion of one stocking and a shoe, and the flames were rapidly carbonizing the flesh. Eckhard was already nearly stifled by the smoke and flames but seizing a quilt that had been thrown down stairs by Leon Peterson, he tried to extinguish the flames but it was not until water was used that they were completely put out.

But it was of no use, the aid had come too late and the fatal flames had been drawn into her lungs while her body was horribly burned, almost to a crisp.

The cries of the two victims of the explosion were heard by many of the neighbors who hurried to the scene of the fatality. Gilbert S. Martin, who lives in the next house on the left, was one of the first to reach the place. The flames in the kitchen and back shed were extinguished by Laughlin and several of the neighbors. They found the gasolene stove burning brightly and the kettle still boiling. The cap to the reservoir had been removed and the funnel was still in the reservoir. Driver Feiring of the chemical engine threw it out doors. The pail in which the gasolene was brought up from the cellar was found on the floor laying on its side near the stove.

One of the neighbors tried to send in an alarm of fire from box 24 as soon as he saw the flames but as that is only to be blown in case of fire at the Scott's press works, he had to run to box 23 from which an alarm was sent. The fire apparatus arrived at Mrs. Peterson's house about ten minutes after the accident.

As soon as the flames that had enveloped Mrs. Peterson, had been put out, Heinerman hurried to Keely's stables on LaGrande avenue and asked that a doctor be called and the fire department notified. The central office was requested to call any one, but the calls were not answered and another attempt was made. At last Chief Doane drove to Dr. Hedges' house, roused Dr. Ben Hedges from his slumbers and hurried him back to the scene of the catastrophe. It was nearly half an hour after the accident that the doctor arrived and Mrs. Peterson was in dreadful agony. She had been carried to Heinerman's house where the latter, who knew something about medicine, tried to partially soothe the pain.

Both Elkhard and Greenidge were burned, the latter quite badly about the hands.

County Physician Westcott was sent for and came at about 9:30 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Morcum, parents of the unfortunate girl who live on New street, were notified and were present at the examination. Both were completely overcome at the news of the terrible death of their daughter. She has been employed by Mrs. Peterson for the last three months. The Morcum family are English but came to this country sometime ago and moved here last spring from Rahway. Mr. Morcom is a gardener. He recently joined the First M. E. church.

Mrs. Peterson and family have lived here for over a year.

Dr. Westcott gave the parents permission to remove the body to the home, which was done.

Mrs. Peterson was visited by her daughter, Martha Merrill, at the hospital yesterday afternoon and told the story of the accident and how it occurred in short, disjointed sentences as, in her present condition, she was unable to talk much. There are still hopes of her recovery and this afternoon her condition is about the same.

LEHIGH MAY TOUCH PLAINFIELD.

An Official of the Road Has Been Looking Over the Ground.

The Lehigh Valley railroad company have not given up all hope of getting into Plainfield. As a matter of fact, it is not at all unlikely that at a very early date they will make an effort to get the right of way and make a bid for a portion of Plainfield's valuable railroad traffic.

A few days ago, Shreve Ackley, who has charge of the suburban territory for the Lehigh, was in this city and made a general tour of inspection for the purpose of acquainting himself with the resources and possibilities of Plainfield in the line of growth. He was most favorably impressed with the outlook, and called at the Press editorial rooms and said that while the officials had not thoroughly considered the plan to build a branch from South Plainfield to this city and then tapping the main line again at Oak Tree, the thought was in their mind and that it would be taken up for disposition in a short time. Before he left town he said that he should endeavor to prevail upon the officials of the road to come here sometime this week and go over the proposed line.

HOW JOE BOLSTERLI WAS KILLED.

A Letter From the Far West Tells the Particulars of the Fatality.

The following letter was received last evening by Mrs. Jos. H. Bolsterli, of Chatham street, which gives some of the particulars regarding her husband's death, which occurred last Friday at Decker, Mont.:

Sheridan, Wyo., June 25th, '96.

Mrs. Mary Bolsterli, Plainfield, N. J.

Dear Madam:—Your husband, Joseph H. Bolsterli, was thrown from a horse yesterday morning and killed. He died in the evening unconscious from that moment, and when I left him was in a dying condition. He was in Decker, Mon., twenty-five miles from here. When I was called to attend to him last night I had no one down on the farm that I could, but could not rouse him. I saw him nine hours after the injury was done with him five hours. He will be cared for by the A. O. U. W. lodge of Sheridan. We have gone to telegraph the sad news to you. His injury is internal hemorrhage. Medical skill, as it is at the base of the brain, and nothing but nursing and care can be done for him. I will do all I can to restore him to conscious life. His property is in the hands of the lodge of Decker and the best of attention will be rendered.

Yours truly,
Dr. J. A. Wagner.

Mr. Bolsterli was a member of the International Order of Machinists and Conservator Council, No. 104, J. O. U. A. M., in addition to the A. O. U. W. and Red Men. It is expected that the body will arrive Friday on Saturday.

Only An Informal Report.

The members of the Board of Health met recently in the Mayors office and discussed in a general way the crematory method of disposing of garbage. No official report was made by President Rockfellow or L. W. Sherell, of their trip to Scranton. They stated, however, that the plan was a success at Scranton but even in so large a city, there was not enough material to keep the plant busy. Nothing definate was decided upon last evening but a written report will probably be presented at the next meeting in July by the president.

An Old North Plainfielder Injured.

Harry Barling, who formerly resided on Sycamore avenue, North Plainfield, but who has now made Boston his home, met with a serious accident recently. He was walking along when he made a misstep and fell breaking one rib and injuring several others. He did not discover the full extent of his injuries at the time, thinking it only a strain, and it was some time before he discovered that a rib was broken. A letter from him received in this city Plainfield friends tells that he is getting along very well, but it will be some time before he will fully recover.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

THOUSANDS HEAR MUSIC.

IMMENSE CROWD AT THE FIRST OPEN AIR BAND CONCERT.

The Squares and Avenues About the Crescent Avenue Church Packed With People to Enjoy the Free Melodies.

Tuesday was a delightful day, a trifle cool perhaps in the evening for an open air concert, but it is doubtful, even had it been warmer, if a larger crowd would have assembled to attend the first of the series of the open air concerts which promise to be such a pleasant feature this summer. Early in the evening the broad avenues leading to the square in front of the Crescent Avenue church, where the concert was to be held, were thronged with pleasure seekers.

It was a holiday crowd in appearance, at least, for everybody came in gala attire. White dresses were in abundance, while the stylish young man was resplendent in his white ducks, colored shirt and high collar, while he doffed his straw hat in the latest fashion, with a long swing. Most of the crowd came on foot, strolling along past the handsome residences in the neighborhood and just beginning to realize that Plainfield is a beautiful city even by night.

There was a large delegation of cyclists, who came to listen to the music, and their myriad lights resembled will-'o-the wisps as they flitted about the streets. Plainfield was not the only place represented. Some of the wheelmen and wheelwomen rode here from neighboring towns, which are not fortunate enough to have public-spirited men who will give open-air concerts.

At 7:30 the Plainfield Cornet Band started the evening's concert. Already the sidewalks were a mass of moving humanity, while the crowd had overflowed into the streets, leaving but a narrow path in the centre for vehicles and cyclists. The police were there and insisted on a passage-way being kept open. Conservative estimates place the number present at 6,000, one-third of the population of Greater Plainfield, while many think 10,000 people turned out.

Several of the residents strung Japanese lanterns about their lawns and on their piazzas, and the effect, as the lanterns rocked to and fro in the breeze, was delightful.

From 8:30 o'clock to nine the crowd was the greatest. The square itself was packed while all the streets leading to it were filled with visitors. Many kept moving around in a slow procession while others preferred to lean against some convenient fence or post or even sit along the curb. A few far seeing citizens provided themselves with campstools and were the envy of the less fortunate.

The concert was a great success in every way, the music was well rendered, the evening delightful and the crowd enormous. There was one man who was responsible for all this pleasure, the one who introduced the open air concert into Plainfield, and his name was not forgotten. Praises for Councilman Frost were heard on every side and all declared that his experiment has now proved to be a very popular feature with the summer life of Plainfield.

Slowly the crowd dispersed as time flew by, and divided into innumerable small parties that gladdened the hearts and pocketbooks of the proprietors of the various soda water fountains and ice cream parlors.

The programme was carried out as published in the Press and was a varied one. The band did excellently and all the selections were given in a way that highly pleased the large crowd that surrounded the musicians on all sides.

During the concert several residents illuminated the scene with colored fire. A bicycle club of about 30 was present and told Leader Guttman, of the band, that the club expected to come every Tuesday evening. The next concert will be held next Tuesday evening at the same place, the intersection of Watchung, LaGrande, Crescent avenues and East Seventh street.

Death of Mrs. Everett.

The death of Mrs. Jacob Everett, aged 40 years, occurred yesterday morning at 11:30 o'clock, after an illness lasting three years. She was living with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sheppard on Prospect place. A husband and two children, a boy and girl, survived her. She was a sister-in-law of Mrs. Joseph Bolsterli, who has just lost her husband by death. The funeral services will be private, and will be held Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the house.

It would be hard to convince a man suffering from bilious colic that his agony is due to a microbe with an unpronounceable name. But one dose of De Witt's Colic and Cholera Cure will convince him of its power to afford instant relief. It kills pain. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

SEWER TAX PROBLEM.

THE ASSESTMENT COMMISSIONERS HAVE A HARD QUESTION TO SOLVE.

The Law Will Not Permit Property Owners to Fix the Tax—Non-Taxpayers Therefore Constitute the Commission.

DeWitt C. Ivins, J. Parker Mason and George R. Cornwell, the commissioners recently appointed by Mayor Gilbert to make assessments in regard to Plainfield's system of sewerage, will meet in August probably and sit until their work is completed. There is no doubt but that more friction will be caused by the discussion growing out of these sessions, as the taxpayers are already beginning to discuss the matter. The composition of the commission has caused some talk, but according to law no real estate owner can be a member of this commission. Neither can he hold real estate in his wife's name, so the Mayor made these appointments of men prominent in business and social circles who are not owners of real estate.

One large property owner said to a Daily Press representative today: "The question of how the assessments shall be laid to pay for our sewer system will cause considerable talk. The amount to be laid on our property will probably be according to the present tax system. Owners of farming lands who do not receive any benefits from the sewer system will doubtless make a protest, but after the tax has once been laid no further tax can be made in future years when their land is cut up and sold for building lots. The sewer system has been economical. The whole indebtedness, however, when distributed, will be a small amount for each taxpayer to pay, and will probably not be over $10 or $12 for each 25-foot front lot."

SUNDAY CLOSING AT WESTFIELD.

Business Men Notified That They Must Shut Up on the Sabbath.

Notices were served Tuesday morning on the druggists, liverymen and milkmen, barbers and confectioners, newsdealers and bakers of Westfield that hereafter the Sunday Observance League intends to have the Sunday laws enforced to the letter, and that all persons who violate the law will be prosecuted.

Those who have received the notices to close their places of business on Sunday have determined to combat the efforts of the league and will meet to devise plans of action. Paul E. Oliver will probably be retained to advise them. The Sunday Observance League is composed of young men from the church societies of the town. The notices sent out yesterday morning were signed by Robert Johnston, secretary of the league.

FOR THE CHAPEL FUND.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Monroe Avenue Chapel Give an Entertainment.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Monroe Avenue chapel held an enjoyable dime sociable in the chapel last evening, for the benefit of the chapel fund. An enjoyable programme of a musical and literary nature was rendered and all present seemed to enjoy it thoroughly.

The programme in detail was as follows: Piano solo, Miss Aldrich; recitation, Miss Edith Burt; banjo solo, Charles Hayes; song, Mrs. E. Brown; dialogue, "The Flower of the Family, or Obediah Thompson's Moving," by members of the chapel; dialogue, "Coming Through the Rye;" tableau, "Gypsy Encampment;" tableau, "Ladies' Aid Society."

After the entertainment refreshments were served. The committee in charge consisted Mrs. E. Brown, chairman; Mrs. Pugh, Mrs. Hayes and Miss Brower.

PLEASURE PROVIDERS.

Guests of the Montezuma Club Trip the Light Fantastic Toe.

The Montezuma Social Club gave the first of its semi-monthly dances in T. A. B. Hall Tuesday night. There was a good attendance and all present seemed to thoroughly enjoy themselves. The music was furnished by O'Reilly.

The committee in charge consisted of Dan Galbraith and Con Guinee, floor committee; Thomas Carty and William Claassen, refreshments; and Hugh O'Donnell, John Keenan, Michael Mack, Charles Ward, James McCarthy and Patrick Casey.

Although the club was but recently organized, the fact that they are pleasure providers was proven by the enjoyable affair given last night. The officers of the club are: Michael Mack, president; William Claassen, vice-president; Con. Guinee, secretary; and Patrick Casey, treasurer.

"Wake up, Jacob, day is breaking!" so said De Witt's Little Early Risers to the man who had taken them to arouse his sluggish liver. L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

CRUSHED BY CAR WHEELS

JAMES NOLAN LOSES HIS LIFE ON THE CENTRAL AT DUNELLEN.

Was Crossing the Track at Prospect Avenue and Did Not See the Approaching Drill Engine and Freight Car.

A shocking fatality occurred Monday afternoon shortly after 4:30 at the Prospect avenue railroad crossing, Dunellen, when James Nolan was instantly killed. There was only one or two persons who saw the man struck, and the accounts of the sad affair are varied. The true story, however, seems to be that Nolan, who is employed by the Central railroad to look after a certain section of signal lights, had finished his work and was on his way to his home, which is about one hundred yards from the track on Prospect avenue. A short distance below the crossing on the extreme east-bound track was drill engine No. 115 in charge of Engineer Fred Wilcox. Attached to the engine in front was a freight car. As Nolan was crossing the track his attention was attracted to a Royal Blue Line train going west, and consequently he did not notice the drill engine and freight car which was rapidly moving towards him. Before he could regain his presence of mind the freight car struck him and he fell over. The car passed over him and the cow-catcher on the engine also struck him. Nolan did not know what struck him, for death resulted instantly. His body was horribly mangled especially about the stomach. His head was also crushed. The motion of the train threw the body into the switch, where it was discovered by those on the engine.

Undertaker Walter Runyon was sent for immediately and took charge of the body, placing it in his morgue at Dunellen. County Physician Brace was notified at once and arrived early in the evening when he gave a permit for burial. Almost as soon as the accident occurred Mrs. Nolan, wife of the dead man, learned what had happened and became frantic with grief. It was impossible for friends to pacify her. Mrs. Nolan has been seriously ill for sometime and it is feared that the shock may prove disastrously. Beside a wife, two children, a boy and a girl, survive him.

Nolan was thirty-five years of age and has been employed by the Central railroad for four years. He was well known in Dunellen and had a large number of friends who mourn his death. The men on the drill engine were completely prostrated by the accident and it was sometime before they regained their nerve and strength. The fact that the freight car preceded the engine gave the engineer no opportunity to see the man and reverse his engine until too late.

To Attend the Summer School.

At the meeting of the Primary *Teachers' Union held Monday after*noon, Mrs. Baker led the devotional exercises and Mrs. Batchelor taught the lesson on the subject "David, King of Judah." It was stated that the summer schools will be held as follows: Schooley's Mountains, July 6th to 13th; Asbury Park, July 13th to 18th; Ocean City, July 20th to 25th. The following members from this city will attend the schools: Miss Beeching, Miss Bainbridge, Mrs. Smalley, Miss Runyon, Mrs. Mosher, Mrs. Darby and a few others. They will start next Saturday for Schooley's Mountains.

Not Hurt Getting Off a Car.

Superintendent John Adleman, of the Street Railway Company, has been investigating the case of John McKanna, who claims to have sprained his foot while getting off a trolley car at Grove street. According to the report of the conductor and motorman of the car on which he was a passenger, McKanna was assisted on at Dunellen by several men who said they had found him in Dunellen limping along as though he had a sprained foot. The conductor stopped the car and Policeman Ward led McKanna off, from where he was sent to the hospital. It would seem from this that McKanna's foot was sprained before he got on a car.

—The grounds about St. Mary's church and rectory present a handsome appearance, all due to the excellent care taken of them by the sexton, Morris Higgins.

Last summer one of our grand children was sick with a severe bowel trouble. Our doctor's remedies had failed, then we tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which gave very speedy relief. We regard it as the best medicine ever put on the market for bowel complaints.—Mrs. E. G. Gregory, Fredericktown, Mo. This certainly is the best medicine ever put on the market for dysentery, summer complaint, colic and cholera infantum in children. It never fails to give prompt relief when used in reasonable time and the plain printed directions are followed. Many mothers have expressed their sincere gratitude for the cures it has effected. GOT THEIR DIPLOMAS.

GRADUATIMG EXERCISES OF THE PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL.

The Stage of Music Hall Filled With Bright Young People Who Are Ready for College or for the Battle of Business

The inspiring strains of the well-known "Handiecap March" and the applause of friends and relatives, marked the entering of the battle of life by the graduating class of the High School last evening, when the Commencement exercises were held at Music Hall. Their school days were over, and the future, full of uncertainties and doubt, lay before them. Four years of hard work has been passed in the High School. Many had fallen by the wayside and the ones very large class had been reduced in numbers. But perseverance had conquered the difficulties and the culminating point had been reached. Before some lays the higher education of the colleges, others were preparing to start a business career, while many of the young women returned to their homes to do their share of the domestic duties.

It was the twenty-sixth commencement and Music Hall was filled with the friends and relatives of the graduates. The storm kept many at home but the evening was a cool one, a pleasing contrast to last year's commencement. Shortly before eight o'clock Conde's orchestra struck up the overture "Rosamunde" by Schubert. The stage was arranged to represent a drawing room and from one side entered the graduating class, the young women in their charming gowns of white and the young men all clad in sober black cutaway coats. From the other entrance came Dr. J. B. Probasco, president of the Board of Education, Leander N. Lovell and Dr. Olin L. Jenkins, of the Board of Education, Henry M. Maxson, superintendent of schools, Ira W. Travell, principal of the High School, Prof. Bliss Perry, of Princeton University and Miss Julia E. Bulkley, who served so faithfully as superintendent of schools in this city, but now a professor at the University of Chicago.

After the invocation was pronounced by Rev. E. M. Rodman, there came another selection by the orchestra, "Gavotte—Violetta," by Herman. In a few words President Probasco introduced Fred C. Gaskill, the salutatorian, whose subject was, "Genius is Simply an Imme nse Capacity for Work."

He spoke clearly and distinctly and treated his subject in a splendid manner. He said:

Mr. President and Members of the Board of Education:—Tonight in behalf of the class of '96 I extend to you a hearty greeting. Among the friends whom we welcome to this hall and these exercises, we hold you in high regard, ever mindful of the attention and interest which you have shown in our educational advancement.

Citizens of Plainfield, I take pleasure in welcoming you to these commencement exercises of our Plainfield High School. You have beheld the classes of former years going forth to engage successfully in the duties of life—perhaps in number far up on the heights of Fame. May the class of '96—both individually and collectively—reflect honor upon our school and our city by lives of uprightness and usefulness.

"GENIUS IS SIMPLY AN IMMENSE CAPACITY FOR WORK."

Genius may be defined as the highest development and activity of one or more of the faculties,—such as the faculty for art, invention, poetry, or Statesmanship. The popular notion of a genius is one who learns without study, performs work without toil and is eloquent without preparation. We sometimes hear of such men, but never see them. A genius needs more than high mental endowment. He must be industrious, perservering, energetic and studious to develop his faculties. Genius unexerted, says Emerson, is no more genius than a bushel of acorns is a forest of oaks.

In observing the life and character of every man whose achievements have been attributed to genius, it will be seen that he was a ceaseless worker. Industry has been the road along which he has traveled to prosperity and success. The height attained is propostional to the labor spent. Energy and perseverance are also indispensable to genius. Men largely devoid of these qualities make but spasmodic and feeble efforts to overcome adverse circumstances and win lasting success, and rise therefore only to sink again into obscurity; the man of energetic and persevering nature, how ever, strives with dauntless courage against all opposing forces, and wins renown and the title of genius.

All men of true genius have been studious. The greatest of orators studied long and diligently the works of Thuhydides. The most famous poets have read zealously the books of other authors and have spent many years of study and toil on their own masterpieces. The foremost generals have been tireless workers. Brilliant victories have been the result of their carefully formed plans, swiftly and promptly executed. They have often rushed into the thickest of the battle to inspire their wavering troops by example as well as by precept. Yet during the busiest part of their busy lives these men have found time to read the ennobling works of some favorite author. The Macedonian general kept a copy of the Iliad constantly by him. Not infrequently have these generals left to us invaluable histories.

But by study is not always meant the acquiring of knowledge from books. It is the concentration of the mind upon subjects or ideas and strict attention to the problem under consideration. Attention is the very soul of genius. The poet must be very observing or else his imagination would fail to produce the beautiful and vivid pictures of man and nature. The true statesman will be attentive to the affairs of the State and ever on the alert to ward off dangers and promote its welfare. Such a man we usually term a far-sighted statesman.

Industry, perserverance and energy are the qualities which give men the ability to perform a great amount of labor. Then when learning and close application are united to these, a man becomes possessed of an immense capacity for work. All of these qualities Archimedes possessed in a state of high development. The little incident which revealed the laws of specific gravity shows how closely his attention was devoted to a subject, and how quickly his mind grasped even the slightest hint for the solution of a problem. The wizard has won success in his inventions and discoveries only by his great ability to work. We frequently read of his midnight researches and discoveries. One one occasion he told a friend that for seven months from eighteen to twenty hours a day he had labored to make the phonograph produce the aspriated sound and at length he had succeeded. We see the wonderful works of genius on every hand, but seldom realize the amount of work required in their execution. The genius of a man is simply an immense capacity for work.

"Men give me credit for genius," said Alexander Hamilton. "All the genius I have lies just in this: When I have a subject in hand I study it profoundly, day and night. It is a part of me; I explore it in all its bearings; my mind becomes pervaded with it. Then the effort which I make people are pleased to call the fruit of genius; it is the fruit of labor and thought." When the princely student asked Euclid if there was no easier path to geometry, the ready answer was, "There is no royal road to knowledge." The same is true of genius.

A selection from "Faust" by Gounod was rendered by the orchestra, and then Prof. Bliss Perry, of Princeton University, the speaker of the evening, was introduced. His address was excellent, short and appropriate to the occasion. He remarked on the one note that is never absent at commencement time, desire, and took for his theme "Power Through Obedience." He spoke of how people usually accomplish what they want, but how they have to give up other things that others would think indispensable, and he drew examples from history of how great men had risen from the lowest ranks, overcoming great difficulties by steady perseverance and obedience to the conditions they had to meet. He also referred to famous characters in history who had overcome great physical odds. "If," he said, "in the face of adverse circumstances as these, it is still possible to attain the goal, what is to be said these young people who graduate tonight? They have been taught that these tangible prizes are not the highest, but that the cultivation of the mind be their aim. The minds of people reflect their desires. What the boy wishes to be, he generally becomes. I have desired to remind them of what may be done by persistent effort. The salutatorian has told us that genius is merely an immense capacity for work. There is such a thing as luck, but it usually turns toward the skilled player. We explain the exactness of the expert scientist, lawyer or surgeon by calling it practice. He really only obeys the every condition. The great men of art and literature pride themselves on their workmanlike abilities rather than their genius. We must have the former before we can have the latter. In moral and mental questions, much stress is laid on obedience. The sweep of the law reaches far out beyond the individual. It is the same in the history of the nation. In city, State and nation, they have just the government they wanted; they have been punished just as they deserved. To obey conditiitions. How easy to select as a maxim, but how hard to put into practical life!"

He then addressed a few words of advice to the graduates in particular. He spoke about the necessity of encountering hard work and drudgery before the goal could be reached.

"You will meet this distaste to discipline everywhere," he said. "There is no royal road to learning, there are no stolen marches in modern life. The greatest masters knew that final mastery meant temporary servitude. Let us accept restriction, but only because beyond those restrictions lies liberty."

After the applause had died away "American Belles Waltz," by Voelker, was given by the orchestra, and then followed the presentation of rewards by Leander N. Lovell. They were as follows:

English Composition—The George H. Babcock prize, given by Mrs. George H. Babcock. First prize, Hudson's Shakespeare, 12 vols., Florence May Bowman; second prize, Irving's works, 9 vols., Florence May Beal. Honorable mention, Chas. Anthony Squires and Ruth Potter Maxson.

Mathematics—The Dr. C. H. Stillman, given by Mrs. C. H. Stillman. First prize, $15 in gold, Julia Francoise Bourgeois; second prize, $10 in gold, Charles Marvin Dolliver. Honorable mention, Fred Squires.

Languages—Given by E. R. Ackerman. Greek, Bryant's Iliad and Odyssey, 4 vols., Fred. Chester Gaskill. Honorable mention, Charles Anthony Squires. Latin, Longfellow's works, 11 vols., Lewis Squires. Honorable mention, Sarah Edwards Schuyler.

Spelling—Given by Leander N. Lovell. Prize, Webster's International Dictionary, Elizabeth D. Kepler. Honorable mention, Maud Hazeltine.

Penmanship—Given by Charles F. Abbott. Greatest improvement, 5 vols. of the poets, Frank R. Hazeltine. Honorable mention, Raymond Smith. Best writing, Stoddard's Glimpses of the World, Emily D. Runyon. Honorable mention, Alice L. Morgan.

United States History—Given by Olin L. Jenkins, M. D. Prize, Bryant's History of the United States, 4 vols., Edna Burr. Honorable mention, Pauline Denton.

After "Themes from Cavalleria Rusticana" by Mascagni, by the orchesta, Frank Wilbur Cornwell, the valedictorian, gave his essay on "The Power of the Invisible." He is a pleasant speaker and a fitting representative of the class. He said:

INVISIBLE POWERS.

Strength and power are elements which even today are often estimated by size and weight. The massive stones and great cables of the Brooklyn bridge produce an effect of enduring strength, yet the less visible details of arrangement of construction are perhaps more important than the material. Beneath and preceding all was the power of invisible thought of the designer's mind that evolved the plan, and carried it to a successful conclusion. All power, then, and the greatest power—that the created cannot be greater than the creator—may not be considered within the limits of a text book on physics.

One of the most powerful of physical factors which have contributed to the advancement of civilization in the past half century, is steam. The child thinks he sees steam issuing from the mouth of a tea kettle, and does not know that it is invisible. The bursting of the strongest boilers reveals the strength of the imprisoned giant. The ponderous engine is driven along at the rate of 60 miles an hour, carrying its precious freight of human lives. We hear the hiss and noise and see the great mass tremble and start as if it were alive, but the power which drives those great wheels remains hidden.

Although steam is invisible, its nature and laws are well understood; but what of gravity, that force which acts everywhere and through immeasurable distances? Here we are on a great globe with a surface rotary speed of seventeen miles a minute, and an onward movement of eighteen miles a second, yet we are held in perfect equilibrium. How are the planets as they speed along their course so swiftly, held to habits of regularity and order? They are attracted this way and that by other bodies, ever deviating from a regular path, but always controlled by the finely adjusted power of gravity, coming to their places year after year, without the error of a fraction of a second.

In connection with gravity we think of magnetism, that invisible force which holds sway over the magnetic needle, and of electricity, which bids to supplant steam as a motive power. Through its agency the continents are brought together, and the east knows the deeds of the west almost as soon as they happen. Not only is sound repeated, but its very characteristics are recognized. In the electric car we see no motive power, yet at the turning of a switch the wheels begin to revolve, and the car moves. Surely there is power in that which gives us light, heat, motion, communication, and even bestows life or death.

Is not the wind an unseen force, whose power is felt everywhere? A ship lies lazily on the water's surface. Soon the sails fill out, and there is motion and life in response to the freshening breeze. Or the wind increases and blows a gale, and the sails and masts are carried away, and the ship is numbered among the lost. Or again, with a rotary motion, the wind sweeps a path of death and destruction through city and country.

While all these forces are in themselves invisible, in their effects they are so common and so great, that no one among us is wholly ignorant of their laws. Less understood, and therefore, more mysterious are the subtle disease germs. So small are they that a thousand might pass abreast through the hole made by a needle's point, yet their action may be more destructive than a civil war. How can we compare a fire which may be seen fifty miles, and may perhaps destroy a million dollars worth of property with that invisible disease germ which for years paralyzed the silk-worm industry of all France, bringing disaster and ruin to thousands peasant families! The effects seem inversly proportional to the size. Surely that deadly germ which traveled from Russia across Europe to this country in two weeks time, is no mean foe!

But we may not here confine our attention to merely physical force, or think of disaster alone. What a power is music! Filled with joy or pathos, it makes one merry or sad. Vergil says that music to a wearied mind is like a dancing stream of cool water on a hot summer's day. It is capable of the greatest change, sometimes enlivening, sometimes saddening, or calming and soothing. Martial music has often inspired armies to fight with renewed force and valor. It is only a legend that Orpheus swayed the trees as he played upon his lyre, but it shows how greatly the ancients felt the power of music.

The lives of those whose blood was shed to create and preserve our nation are a potent influence which ever acts for the preservation of the nation's honor and integrity. Their example inspires us to defend our country and its rights when they are attacked, either from without or from within. The tale of bravery and sacrifice excites our blood and rouses our patriotism until our country and its honor stand first in every heart.

"Might makes right" is an unprincipled maxim which is often reversed. Two armies are drawn up for battle. The one is composed of men well uniformed and drilled; their arms are bright and their bayonets shine, for they are the hired soldiers of a great nation. Look at the other band, smaller in number and clad in homespun clothes—surely they must be defeated. Silent, scattered, determined, they wait the approach of their haughty foe. Volley after volley is fired from those advancing ranks. But see! at close quarters the patriots open fire, desperate, even careless of their own lives, and their defense is irresistible. The royal soldiers cannot withstand them. They fall back in disorder. What gives these men such invincible power? What is it but the thought of wrongs unrighted; of homes to be defended of a downtrodden country for which they would gladly die!

Unseen, invisible are all these forces? Yes, truly and therein lies their power. Terrible as they are as masters, how willing, how tireless as servants! The lightning harnessed, the steam guided, the germs cultivated and made harmless, all these but work the will of man. His superiority rests upon his power of thought, his ability to guide and control forces too powerful to crush. On such as Newton, Pasteur and Edison, depends his advance from age to age. Thus nearer and nearer he grows to that Invisible, all powerful Ruler who "Moves in a mysterious way

His wonders to perform."

VALEDICTORY.

Gentlemen of the Board of Education:—As we bring to a end our long-standing connection with the public schools of Plainfield, we wish to express to you our gratitude for the time and thought which you have so generously devoted to the cause of our education, and for the kindly interest which you have shown in our welfare. In many ways you have added much to the pleasure which our class has experienced during these years of school life—pleasures which now culminate in this commencement season.

To our teachers, with whom we have been so closely associated these past years, we owe more than words can express. Patiently, amid trials and discouragements, you have stimulated us to be faithful to our tasks from day to day. We have learned that knowledge alone was the less important result to be derived from our studies. Problems and facts may be forgotten, but the trained mind is always ours. We do not expect to meet again with the same problems which we have solved, but success in those solutions will help us to overcome more difficult ones.

Classmates:—If a man's life, as is said, consists of several ages, we dimly remember tonight as the first transition, when school life began; while vividly this second change confronts us when school days end. These past years have been a time of training for that part of our life which is about to commence. Those years of life which are best suited to the disciplining of the mental faculties and the acquirement of knowledge have now been spent, yet as we enter into fresh fields of effort to use those powers and apply that knowledge, let us not fail so wisely to use those abilities that they may be continually increased. Hitherto we have been pursuing almost the same course, but now the ways diverge. When we are parted may the memory of these pleasant school days be a bond to hold us always together. Let us remember our class colors, not only for their beauty but because of their significance. The white stands for integrity of purpose; the green, not for that quality of mind it might suggest, but for life and action. It bids us to keep alive and not become like the world; it reminds us that it is the live green tree that bears the fruit; it warns us that we have something to do and that we must not lose sight of it. And now we part, some to go to college, some to business, some to employ themselves at home. But wherever we go or whatever we do, let us forget neither our class nor our colors, nor our motto: "No excellence without great labor."

After the orchestra had rendered "Melodies from Robyn's Jacinta," Miss Bulkley, who arrived in this country yesterday morning, spoke a few words of encouragement and welcome to the class. It was the same Miss Bulkley that all had known four years ago and she was given a rousing welcome. Then followed the presentation of diplomas by President Probasco. The graduates in the different courses were:

The General Course—Julia Francoise Bourgeois, Clyde Barrington Burnet, Elizabeth Mott Cahoone, Annie La Rue Carle, Ada Hamilton Clarke, Frank Wilbur Cornwell, Charles Marvin Dolliver, Felix Layat, Mary Grace Steiner and Mildred Titsworth.

The Classical Course—Fred. Chester Gaskill, Charles Anthony Squires and Fred. Squires.

The English Course—Florence May Bowman, Raymond Barnes Carroll, James Hazelwood Craig, Henry Eggerding, Mary Scott Hull, Harriet Isabel King, Minnie Viola Mitchell, Grace Elting Overton, Alden Wagner, Marion Alice Maynard.

The honor pupils were as follows: First honor—Clyde Barrington Burnet. Frank Wilbur Cornwell and Fred. Chester Gaskill. Second honor—Julia Francoise Bourgeois, Florance May Bowman, Elizabeth Mott Cahoone, Charles Marvin Dolliver, Henry Eggerding, Fred. Squires, Mary Grace Steiner and Mildred Titsworth.

Then the orchestra started the inspiring "Handicap March" and Commencement was over. Congratulations was showered on the graduates and prize-winners and an impromptu reception was held on the stage.

During the intervals in the exercises, handsome bouquets and baskets of flowers were handed to the graduates by several lower class men, Arthur Lederer, Paul Kimball and Henry Brower.

HAPPY APPLICATION OF WIT.

James E. Martine Turns the Tables on a Jollying Republican.

By way of Uncle Sam's postal service, yesterday, Farmer James E. Martine received an envelope in which was enclosed a McKinley and Hobart campaign button. Now what use the Farmer Orator could have for a Republican campaign emblem would puzzle even Abe Slupsky, the St. Louis sage. Naturally, Mr. Martine concluded that some frolicsome G. O. Pite was indulging in a little jollying, but to turn the laugh on Farmer Jim is no easy matter. Unfortunately for the sender, the button possessed nothing by which it could be attached to the coat—it was just the mere shell containing the pictures of McKinley and Hobart, and thereby hangs the tale by which Mr. Martine turned the tables. Mr. Martine skirmished around among his friends and found that the address on the envelope very much resembled the chirography of Charles J. Fisk. Here is the letter that Mr. Martine indicted to Mr. Fisk this morning:

To the Hon. Charles J. Fisk.
My Dear Jim:—The enclosed button came to me in an anonymous letter. My friends say the handwriting is unmistakably yours. Please call me to return the same, as it is of no value to me. There is no base to the button, also its usually attached mechanism. It is but a shell—in this a 5¢ and true emblem of the doctrine you preached, which your party would teach. With sincerest sympathy for your misguided intellect, I am,
Very respectfully yours,
J. E. Martine.

Peter B. Wright Takes a Wife.

A number of Plainfield people were considerably surprised yesterday morning to receive announcements of the marriage of Peter B. Wright, formerly of this city, but now manager of the Hotel Netherlands, New York, and Mrs. Tillie C. Wightman. The happy event was solemnized Saturday in New York. Mr. Wright's many friends in this city extend their congratulations.

Honeyman Party on the Umbria.

The Honeyman European tourist party sailed on the steamer Umbria, which struck the wreck in Gedney's channel on Saturday morning. There was considerable apprehension among the party's friends in this city lest some harm should come to them. They breathed easier when it became known that the steamer had proceeded on her voyage none the worse for the temporary delay.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Cahoone and family, of Watchung avenue, will leave today for their summer home in Jamestown, R. I.

BRITISH HOSPITALITY

said to lie on the Decline The Restaurant Too Convenient.

Is the art of British hospitality on the decline? A writer in the London World believes that it is, and assigns as the cause the adoption for entertaining purposes of that practice of consuming which has been so largely borrowed of late years from the other side of the channel. The home banner party is disappearing, he mournfully adds, owing to the multiplication of gorgeous and palatial restaurants with all their alluring possibilities of vicarious hospitality. No one can seriously pretend that to entertain at a restaurant is the same thing as to entertain under one's own roof. It is a trouble-shirking method of discharging social obligations utterly devoid of the sentiment associated with home.

"Flat-life" is another "forgetfulness" incubation which is contributing to the downfall of the once cherished British institution. Home life and flat life are two totally distinct things, and so a large section unconsciously, Mr. Dewdrop says, are debarred from entertaining in any but the most restricted manner, and their only resource is the restaurant. Again, the art of conversation, on which the home dinner depended so much for its success, is on the decline, for to-day "so great" is the dread of mutual boredom that hosts and guests at restaurant dinner parties frequently take the precaution to arm themselves en masse with tickets for the play, and thereby escape from the necessity of entertaining each other for a moment longer than is absolutely necessary by adjourning to the theater immediately the repast is concluded."

IN THE ANDAMAN ISLANDS.

Rather Spicy Sport in the Fishing Line Reported.

An Englishman tells in the London Field of a painful experience he had at the Andaman Islands with a parrot fish. The parrot fish was of a dirty olive tint, with brown spots, and was possessed of a formidable beak, not unlike a man's, only the points met instead of overlapping, and it was composed of bone instead of horn. It was brought to the surface by some experimental torpedoes, and the Englishman picked it up and began poking his finger about in it, supposing it to be dead. All of a sudden the open beaks came together with a snap and the Englishman lost the top of his thumb. The chunk bitten off was given by the coxswain to a panther (leopard) club.

The same coxswain and a numbered jailor were drawing a seine for carnation carp, whose scales were the size of rupees and skin as tough as leather, when, as the seine closed up, a big fish, fetched the coxswain a blow in the abdomen that knocked him galley-west over the boat's rail and into the water. That upset the boat, but all hands were rescued, and the fish were taken out to be eaten.

The Andaman islands furnish considerable sport with guns as well as rods, snipe and wild pigs being abundant as proper seasons.

Listen for Angel Music.

The children at Bethlehem are told by their mothers that on Christmas eve a choir of angels sings above the place where Christ was born. Travelers say that on this evening scores, and sometimes hundreds, of children may be seen in the open air, looking up into the sky, waiting to hear the angels sing.

Ancient Makers of Shoes.

Shoemakers were at first called sandal-makers, and there is little doubt that sandals and rough buskins, or socks (covering the legs like gaiters), were the first specimen of shoes.

MADE MERRY AT THE INN

BRILLIANT RECEPTION HELD AT MT. PARK SATURDAY NIGHT.

Attended by a Large Number of Society People, Who Enjoyed a Most Pleasant Time—Those in Attendance.

The superb Mountain Park Inn was resplendent in all its beauty Saturday evening, when the first hop of the season and formal opening was given by the management. The evening was all that one could desire and not a thing happened to mar the event. The approach to the inn was brilliantly illuminated with a large number of electric lights. One could hardly realize that such a beautiful structure was located in this charming spot.

The guests were hospitably received by Manager George S. Moulton, whose genial manner has won for him a host of friends.

The spacious hall and parlor were beautifully decorated and the prevailing colors were green and pink. In the parlor Rogers and his orchestra were playing a choice programme and the sweet strains brought the merry dancers to the floor, where at frequent intervals the latest figures were danced by the young people and some of the older ones, too.

About 11 o'clock the dining room was thrown open and the guests were invited to partake of the supper provided.

The affair came to an end about 12 o'clock and it was with regrets that the guests left for home. All seem exceedingly complimentary in their remarks about the hotel and the management. It is quite likely that the hops will be given frequently and thus the season will be made a gay one at Mountain Park Inn.

The guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. Chandler W. Riker, Corporation Counsel and Mrs. Craig A. Marsh, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Church, Dr. and Mrs. C. B. Thiers, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Mills, Mr. and Mrs. John French, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. French, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Vail, Judge and Mrs. Depue, Mr. and Mrs. Sherrerd Depue, Miss Depue, Miss Frances Depue, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Bettman, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Runyon, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rocap, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Pope, Mrs. P. A. Pope, H. E. Bowen, Miss Bessie Bowen, Miss Ethel Bowen, Mrs. T. M. French, Miss French, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Death of Mrs. Everett.

The death of Mrs. Jacob J. Everett, aged 49 years, occurred yesterday morning at 11:30 o'clock, after an illness lasting three years. She was living with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sheppard on Prospect place. A husband and two children, a boy and girl, survive her. She was a sister-in-law of Mrs. Joseph Bolsterli, who has just lost her husband by death. The funeral services will be private, and will be held Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the house.

DEFEATED A CRACK TEAM

Y. M. C. A. BALL TOSSERS BEAT THE FLEMINGTON NINE 5 TO 2.

The Local Team Put Up an Errorless Game and Won by Bunching Hits at an Opportune Time—The Score in Detail.

There was civil war down at the baseball field of the Y. M. C. A. nine Saturday afternoon, at least it was brother against brother. The visitors were the crack players of the Flemington nine and they had for their pitcher Warren McLaughlin, of the borough. His brother, John McLaughlin, occupied the box for the local team. The game was a good one, indeed, it was excellent, and the Plainfield boys put up an errorless game. They batted well and although they did not make as many hits as their opponents, yet they bunched them and succeeded in rolling up a score of 5 to the 2 of the Flemingtons.

There was one thing that the visitors were far ahead in, however, and that was coaching. Dennis was the only one to do any for the local boys, but Rothfuss of the other side was a "peach" at it. His voice sounded something like the croak of a bullfrog and the roar of a bull. He danced about as if he had an epileptic fit and greatly pleased the cranks generally.

The Plainfield team took the lead at the start by one run, made on a two-bagger by Townley and an error by Freddie Jones, and by the way, it is the same old Freddie that used to be such a favorite on the Crescents; he has a mustache now and is a little stouter.

The sixth inning was the eventful one. Major struck out, and then Captain Mac knocked a beauty right over his brother's head. Sansom followed with another, good for two bases, while MacLaughlin went on to third. Francis came up next and the younger brother made a mistake and gave him his base on four bad balls.

"Hit it, Corey!" yelled the crowd as that worthy came up to bat, and he did, making a clean hit. Mac scored and Sansom and Francis followed as the third baseman apparently lost his nerve for he toyed with the ball, threw it wild, and couldn't catch it when it was thrown in his hands. Cory was finally caught at the plate and Schenck hit an easy fly to left.

The Flemingtons made a run in this inning on a single by Wyckoff, a double by Jones and a sacrifice by Volk. Plainfield came near scoring in the seventh when Dennis reached third with two men out.

"Your name is Dennis, if you don't come in!" shouted a facetious rooter, but Dennis didn't.

The other run was made by Sansom in the eighth innings. He took first on a hit, stole second, and finished the circuit on two passed balls.

Two single hits and two sacrifice hits sent "Warry" MacLaughlin round the bases for Flemington in the ninth inning. The score in detail was as follows:

MARCH OF PROGRESS.

Another Big Real Estate Improvement About to be Consummated.

The march of improvement still goes on in Plainfield, and now the Press is privileged to herald another movement which will open up another plot of desirable building lots for residential purposes, and add a thoroughfare that will be a credit to and enhance the beauty of the city. It is the plan to extend Sycamore avenue from its present termination at Myrtle avenue, mid way between Girard and Washington avenues, to a point on Front street near Plainfield avenue.

A syndicate of gentlemen who have watched the growth and progress of Plainfield is bound to continue the purchased the property near the Park club, and now used as a base ball field, owned by L. E. Hart and Mrs. Carman Parse. It is their intention to lay out the property in building lots and extend Sycamore avenue across the lower end. Before the avenue can be opened to Front street, however, it will be necessary for them to acquire the Phineas Randolph property on Front street, owned by Frank S. Runyon. They have already made an offer for the property, but it was not satisfactory to the owner. The deal will probably be consummated though, as it will be necessary to have the property before the improvement can be made.

Among those interested in the scheme are R. A. Hegeman, Charles A. Reed and William J. Boome.

AS A 4TH OF JULY ORATOR.

Major McKinley in Great Demand—Will Speak at Columbus.

Canton, O., June 26.—Major McKinley is in great demand as an 4th of July orator. Invitations have been received asking him to take part in celebrations. Last evening a very strong delegation from Columbus, O., headed by Mayor Allen, called on McKinley and urged him to visit Columbus on the 4th, not as a presidential candidate, but as an old friend among his own people. It is proposed to have an old-fashioned muster and 4th of July celebration and it is expected that a hundred thousand people will go to Columbus to participate in it. Major McKinley is strongly inclined to accept the invitation because it is from the capital of his own state, but he will not make a definite answer until Tuesday next. Preparations are being pushed forward on a vast scale for the entertainment of the Cleveland people, who are coming to participate in the ratification of McKinley's nomination to which end special excursions will be provided for and it will be the largest ratification meeting ever held in this part of the country. Among the callers at the McKinley residence yesterday was Mrs. Robert Love Fuller, of Cheyenne. She told Major McKinley that she would vote for him, and that he would receive the ballot of every woman voter in Wyoming. "The woman of the country like your quality of manhood," said Mrs. Fuller, "and so do we all. We believe in you, and you may be sure that the influence of the women of the United States will be exerted in your behalf." Col. Thomas Ochiltree came in to congratulate the major upon the last evening. Cotton Allen, the democratic mayor of Columbus, said last night that he would vote the republican ticket if the democrats adopted a free silver platform.

CITY OF PHILADELPHIA.

The Missing Ship Was Probably Lost in a Storm on March 22.

New York, June 26.—The mystery of the missing ship City of Philadelphia has been solved through the report of the British bark Loch Bredan, which arrived at Liverpool from Iquique. The City of Philadelphia sailed from New York on February 3 for San Francisco with a general cargo, and has never been reported since she was spoken on March 3, in latitude 14 deg. 56m. south, longitude 84 deg. 10m. west. Sixty guineas premium were paid this week on her insurance. Capt. Cory was in the Pendelton states on March 21, in latitude 36 south, longitude 40 west, he experienced a heavy gale from north northwest, with a mountainous cross sea, which swept decks, washing everything movable, including the long boat. From that date he sighted a full-rigged ship, distant two miles, under three lower topsails, rolling heavily. Next morning (Sunday) he sighted her again, the sea getting very dangerous and breaking on board of her. During the height of a terrific squall at midday the stranger was seen to lurch over and suddenly disappear, and although the captain of the Loch Bredan went to the spot where she had been again. He describes her as of about 1,400 tons, with a monkey poop. This description tallies with that of the City of Philadelphia, which was of 1,384 tons, and she would naturally be in just about that position at that time. The missing ship was built in Bath, Me., in 1875, and was principally owned by Walter F. Hagar of Philadelphia. She carried a crew of thirty men, all told.

NOT A TRUE TESTAMENT.

Decision of the Jury in the Famous Holt Will Contest.

Washington, June 26.—The Holt will case which has been on trial in this city for two weeks, was closed at a late hour yesterday afternoon and at 8 p. m. the jury returned a verdict in favor of the caveators, the effect of which is to set the alleged will aside, or in the words of the decision of the jury, that the alleged declaration that the paper presented for probate is not a true testament. This case has been one of the most interesting of its character that has engaged the attention of the courts for very long period. The application for probate has been earnestly urged and as stubbornly resisted as any similar case ever presented in the courts of this district, and able counsel on both sides have fought bitterly in the interest of their respective clients. The verdict has been looked for with more than usual interest in this community. The result leaves the case exactly where it was before the last anonymous presentation of the alleged testament reached the office of the register of wills several months ago, and the heirs, who have had a desperate legal fight on their hands, will be the recipients of the congratulations of their friends.

Not Guilty of Bribery.

Columbus, O., June 26.—Last evening the jury returned a verdict of not guilty in the case of the state against ex-state senator L. C. Ohl of Youngstown, charged with offering bribes to influence legislation. The jury was out seven hours.

Mine Boy Seriously Hit.

Bridgeport, Conn., June 26.—A cablegram received from Miss Carrie Leigh of this city announces that Miss Demetrius Calais Boy, former wife of P. T. Barnum, the great showman, is seriously ill in Paris.

Naval Transfer.

Washington, June 26.—Lieut. J. P. Crisap has been detached from the Norfolk navy yard and ordered to the Franklin.

Nearing the $100,000,000 Mark.

Washington, June 26.—The treasury gold reserve at the opening of business this morning stood at $101,940,339.
